One’s choice of “domicile” certainly has far-reaching legal consequences and ramifications, but our choice of domicile is not a legal matter to be decided by any court. No court whether it be a federal or state court, has jurisdiction over strictly political matters. Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court has to say on this very subject:

“But, fortunately for our freedom from political excitements in judicial duties, this court [the U.S. Supreme Court] can never with propriety be called on officially to be the umpire in questions merely political. The adjustment of questions relating to political privileges and rights, either in the State or general government, depends on the decision finally, We would possess the power to decide against, as well as for, them, and, under a prejudiced or arbitrary judiciary, the public liberties and popular privileges might thus be much perverted, if not entirely prostrated.”

[Another evil, alarming and little foreseen, involved in regarding these as questions for the final arbitration of judges would be that, in such an event, all political privileges and rights would, in a dispute among the people, depend on our decision finally. We would possess the power to decide against, as well as for, them, and, under a prejudiced or arbitrary judiciary, the public liberties and popular privileges might thus be much perverted, if not entirely prostrated.  But, allowing the people to make constitutions and unmake them, allowing their representatives to make laws and unmake them, and without our interference as to their principles or policy in doing it; yet, when constitutions and laws are made and put in force by others, then the courts, as empowered by the State or the Union, commence their functions and may decide on the rights which conflicting parties can legally set up under them, rather than about their formation itself. Our power begins after theirs [the Sovereign People] ends. Constitutions and laws precede the judiciary, and we act only under and after them, and as to disputed rights beneath them, rather than disputed points in making them. We speak what is the law, jus dicere, we speak or construe what is the constitution, after both are made, but we make, or revise, or control neither. The disputed rights beneath constitutions already made are to be governed by precedents, by sound legal principles, by positive legislation e.g. "positive law"], clear contracts, moral duties, and fixed rules; they are per se questions of law, and are well suited to the education and habits of the bench. But the other disputed points in making constitutions, depending often, as before shown, on policy, inclination, popular resolves and popular will and arising not in respect to private rights, not what is meum and tuum, but in relation to politics, they belong to politics, and they are settled by political tribunals, and are too dear to a people bred in the school of Sydney and Ruscel for them ever to intrust their final decision, when disputed, to a class of men who are so far removed from them as the judiciary, a class also who might decide them erroneously, as well as right, and if in the former way, the consequences might not be able to be averted except by a revolution, while a wrong decision by a political forum can often be peacefully corrected by new elections or instructions in a single month; and if the people, in the distribution of powers under the constitution, should ever think of making judges supreme arbiters in political controversies when not selected by nor, frequently, amenable to them nor at liberty to follow such various considerations in their judgments as [148 U.S. 53] belong to mere political questions, they will dethrone themselves and lose one of their own invaluable birthrights; building up in this way -- slowly, but surely -- a new sovereign power in the republic, in most respects irresponsible and unchangeable for life, and one more dangerous, in theory at least, than the worst elective oligarchy in the worst of times. Again, instead of controlling the people in political affairs, the judiciary in our system was designed rather to control individuals, on the one hand, when encroaching, or to defend them, on the other, under the Constitution and the laws, when they are encroached upon. And if the judiciary at times seems to fill the important station of a check in the government, it is rather a check on the legislature, who may attempt to pass laws contrary to the Constitution, or on the executive, who may violate both the laws and Constitution, than on the people themselves in their primary capacity as makers and amenders of constitutions." [Luther v. Borden, 48 U.S. 1 (1849)]

Consequently, no court of law can interfere with your choice of legal domicile, which is a strictly political matter. To do otherwise would constitute compelled association in violation of the First Amendment as well as direct interference in the affairs of a political party, which is YOU. You are your own independent political party and a sovereignty separate and distinct from the federal or state sovereignties. A court of law is certainly not the proper forum, for instance, in which to question or politically ridicule one's choice of domicile, whether it be in front of a jury or a judge.

"Petitioners contend that immunity from suit in federal court suffices to preserve the dignity of the States. Private suits against nonconsenting States, however, present "the indignity of subjecting a State to the coercive process of judicial tribunals at the instance of private parties," In re Ayers, supra, at 505; accord, Seminole Tribe, 517 U.S., at 58 , regardless of the forum. Not only must a State defend or default but also it must face the prospect of being thrust, by federal fiat and against its will, into the disfavored status of a debtor, subject to the power of private citizens to levy on its treasury or perhaps even government buildings or property which the State administers on the public's behalf:"

[...]"Underlying constitutional form are considerations of great substance Private suits against nonconsenting States—especially suits for money damages—may threaten the financial integrity of the States. It is indisputable that, at the time of the founding, many of the States could have been forced into insolvency but for their immunity from private suits for money damages. Even today, an unlimited congressional power to authorize suits in state court to levy upon the treasuries of the States for compensatory damages, attorney's fees, and even punitive damages could create staggering burdens, giving Congress a power and a leverage over the States that is not contemplated by our constitutional design. The potential national power would pose a severe and notorious danger to the States and their resources." [Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999)]

The Supreme Court said that the sovereignty of We The People is every bit as sacred as that of the states, so why should they not merit the same level of sovereign immunity from suit and dignity, especially in their choice of domicile, as that of the States? To wit:
“The rights of individuals and the justice due to them, are as dear and precious as those of states. Indeed the latter are founded upon the former; and the great end and object of them must be to secure and support the rights of individuals, or else vain is government.”

“We The People” certainly cannot be “Sovereign” in any sense of the word if legal process can be maliciously and habitually abused by the government at great financial injury and inconvenience to them in the process of questioning or ridiculing their choice of domicile. In spite of this fact, this very evil happens daily in state and federal courts in the context of tax trials. We cannot restore the sovereignty of the people unless and until this chronic malicious abuse of legal and judicial process is ended immediately.

5.4.8.4 You can only have one Domicile and that place and government becomes your main source of protection

The reason why government forms will ask what a person’s domicile is are explained as follows:

1. A person can only have “allegiance” towards one and only one “sovereign”. The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this when it said:

[Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795); From the syllabus but not the opinion; SOURCE: http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/search/display.html?terms=choice%20or%20conflict%20and%20law&url=/s upct/html/historics/USSC_CR_0003_0133_ZS.html]

This is also consistent with the Bible, which says on this subject:

2. Choosing a “domicile” in a place is what makes a person a “citizen” under the laws of that place. Because you can only have a “domicile” in one place at a time, then you can only be a “citizen” in one place at a time. Becoming a statutory “citizen” is what makes you “subject” to the civil laws in that place and is the origin of your authority and privilege to vote, serve on jury duty, and pay income taxes in that place. For instance, Mexicans visiting the United States for temporary and who have not changed their “domicile” to the United States are called “Mexican Nationals” while they are here. When they return to the place of their domicile, they are called “Mexican citizens”.

3. A legal means needs to be established to pay for the protection afforded by the sovereign to whom we claim allegiance. “Taxes” are the legal vehicle by which “protection” is paid for. In earlier times, in fact, “taxes” were called “tribute”. When we pay “tribute”, we are expressing “allegiance” to our personal “sovereign” by offering it our time and money. Below is a very revealing quote from a famous Bible dictionary which explains the meaning of the word “tribute” in a Biblical context:

“TRIBUTE. Tribute in the sense of an impost paid by one state to another, as a mark of subjugation, is a common feature of international relationships in the biblical world. The tributary could be either a hostile state or an ally. Like deportation, its purpose was to weaken a hostile state or an ally. Like deportation, its purpose was to weaken a hostile state or an ally. Like deportation, its purpose was to weaken a hostile state. Deportation aimed at depleting the man-power. The aim of tribute was probably twofold: to impoverish the subjugated state and at the same time to increase the conqueror’s own revenues and to acquire commodities in short supply in his own country. As an instrument of administration it was one of the simplest ever devised: the subjugated country could be made responsible for the payment of a yearly tribute. Its non-arrival would be taken as a sign of rebellion, and an expedition would then be sent to deal with the recalcitrant. This was probably the reason for the attack recorded in Gn. 14.

Therefore, establishing a “domicile” or “residence” also establishes a voluntary “tax home” as well. There are several problems with the above worldly approach that conflict with Christianity:

1. Luke 16:13 above implies that those who demonstrate allegiance become “servants” of those they demonstrate “allegiance” towards. We have a saying for this:

2. God said we can serve only Him, and therefore we cannot have “allegiance” to anything but Him.

“Away with you, Satan! For it is written, ‘You shall worship the Lord your God, and Him ONLY [NOT the government or its vain laws] you shall serve.’”

[Math. 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

3. Serving anyone but God amounts to idolatry in violation of the first four commandments found in the Ten Commandments. Idolatry is the worst of all sins documented in the Bible. In the Old Testament book of Ezekiel, God killed people and destroyed whole cities whose inhabitants committed idolatry.

4. The government cannot compel us to consent to anything or to demonstrate “allegiance” toward it. Allegiance must always be completely voluntary.

Therefore, Christians cannot be expected or required to either accept, consent to, or pay for protection that God says comes ONLY from Him. They cannot allow government to assume an authority equal or superior to God in their lives, including in the area of protection. The only purpose for government is “protection”.

Any government form that asks us what our “domicile” is indirectly is asking us to whom we have exclusive “allegiance”. Any government that passes a law compelling “allegiance” or requiring us to consent to laws or a government or protection that we don’t want is:

2. Making themselves into an organized crime syndicate that earns its revenues from “protection”. This is called a “protection racket” and it is a federal crime under 18 U.S.C. §1951.
3. Violating the antitrust laws at 15 U.S.C. §2, by making themselves into a monopoly that is the only source of “protection”.

The Bible describes such an organized crime syndicate as “the Beast”, which Rev. 19:19 defines as “the kings of the earth”. In modern times, this would be our political rulers.

5.4.8.5 Domicile and taxation

Both state and federal income taxation is based almost entirely upon what is called “domicile”. Domicile is a choice we make that requires our consent and participation, and because it requires our consent, then becoming a “taxpayer” who owes a tax requires our consent. We will explain this shortly. An examination of the Internal Revenue Code and implementing regulations confirms that there are only two proper legal “persons” who are the subject of the I.R.C., and that these two “persons” have a “domicile” in the “United States”. By “United States” as used in this document, we mean the government of the “United States” and not the “United States” in the geographical sense as used in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d):

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Options 1 and 2 above have a civil “domicile” within the statutory but not constitutional “United States”, meaning federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union, as a prerequisite. People born in and domiciled within states of the Union fall under status 3. If “nationals” (who are not statutory “citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401) domiciled in states have no earnings from the “United States” government or federal territory, then even if they choose to volunteer, they cannot be “liable” to pay any of their earnings to the IRS. Note also that the “aliens” mentioned in option 4 above, even if they live in the “United States” (federal territory), are not even mentioned in the I.R.C. They only become subject to the code by either becoming involved in a "trade or business", which is a public office and a voluntary activity involving federal contracts and employment, or by declaring the “United States” (federal territory) to be their legal “domicile”. Making the “United States” (federal territory) into their “domicile” or engaging in a "trade or business" (which is defined as a public office) are the only two activities that can transform “aliens” into “residents” subject to the Internal Revenue Code. “Aliens” or “nonresident aliens” may voluntarily elect (choose) to treat the “United States” (government or federal territory) as their domicile and thereby become “residents” in accordance with the following authorities:

1. 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h).
3. 26 CFR §1.871-1(a).
4. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2), which says that those who conduct “commerce” within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States (in the federal zone) surrender their sovereign immunity.

We also caution that a “nonresident alien” can also unwittingly become a “U.S. person” with an effective domicile in the “United States” (federal territory) by incorrectly declaring his or her citizenship status on a government form as that of either a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a statutory “resident alien” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), instead of a “national” but not a citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452. This results in a surrender of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3), which says that “U.S. citizens” and “residents” may not be treated as “foreign states”. This is by far the most frequent mechanism that your unscrupulous government uses to maliciously destroy the sovereignty of persons in states of the Union and undermine the Separation of Powers Doctrine: Using ambiguous terms on government forms and creating and exploiting legal ignorance of the people. This process by public servants of systematically and illegally destroying the separation of powers is thoroughly documented below:
5.4.8.6 The three sources of government civil jurisdiction

Even for civil laws that are enacted with the consent of the majority of the governed as the Declaration of Independence requires, we must still explicitly and individually consent to be subject to them before they can be enforced against us.

"When a change of government takes place, from a monarchial to a republican government, the old form is dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse their allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they had not entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to adopt. That the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It is not a rule upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those prescribed by nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent" [Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

This requirement for the consent to the protection afforded by government is the foundation of our system of government, according to the Declaration of Independence: consent of the governed. The U.S. Supreme Court admitted this when it said:

"The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other does not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one whole, and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all their rights at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions for one and the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the process of the courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the sovereignity of the United States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the assault. So, too, if one passes counterfeit coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against the United States and the State: the United States, because it discredit the coin; and the State, because of the fraud upon him to whom it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments possess powers in common, or bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both.

The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction." [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) [emphasis added]

How, then, did you “voluntarily submit” yourself to such a form of government and thereby contract with that government for “protection”? If people fully understood how they did this, many of them would probably immediately withdraw their consent and completely drop out of the corrupted, inefficient, and usurious system of government we have, now wouldn’t they? We have spent six long years researching this question, and our research shows that it wasn’t your citizenship as a “national” but not statutory “citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452 that made you subject to their civil laws. Well then, what was it?

"It was your voluntary choice of domicile!"

In fact, the “citizen” the Supreme Administrative Court is talking about above is a statutory “citizen” and not a constitutional “citizen”, and the only way you can become subject to statutory civil law is to have a domicile within the jurisdiction of the sovereign. Below is a legal definition of “domicile”:

"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are indistinguishable.”

[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice the phrase “civil laws” above and the term “claim to be protected”. What they are describing is a contract to procure the protection of the government, from which a “claim” arises. Those who are not party to the domicile/protection contract have no such claim and are immune from the civil jurisdiction of the government. In fact, there are only three ways to become subject to the civil jurisdiction of a specific government. These ways are:

1. Choosing domicile within a specific jurisdiction.
2. Representing an entity that has a domicile within a specific jurisdiction even though not domiciled oneself in said jurisdiction. For instance, representing a federal corporation as a public officer of said corporation, even though domiciled outside the federal zone. The authority for this type of jurisdiction is, for instance, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
3. Engaging in commerce within the civil legislative jurisdiction of a specific government and thereby waiving sovereign immunity under:
   3.3. The Longarm Statutes of the state jurisdiction where you are physically situated at the time. For a list of such state statutes, see:

   SEDM Jurisdictions Database, Litigation Tool #09.008
   http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

We allege that if the above rules are violated then the following consequences are inevitable:

1. A crime has been committed. That crime is identity theft against a nonresident party and it involves using a person’s legal identity as a “person” for the commercial benefit of someone else without their express consent. Identity theft is a crime in every jurisdiction within the USA. The SEDM Jurisdictions Database, Litigation Tool #09.008 indicated above lists identity theft statutes for every jurisdiction in the USA.
2. If the entity disregarding the above rules claims to be a “government” then it is acting instead as a private corporation and must waive sovereign immunity and approach the other party to the dispute in EQUITY rather than law, and do so in OTHER than a franchise court. Franchise courts include U.S. District Court, U.S. Circuit Court, Tax Court, Traffic Court, and Family Court. Equity is impossible in a franchise court.

See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 (“Wherever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle, a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant”).

United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, “[w]here [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action”). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party.
[United States v. Winstar Corp. 518 U.S. 839 (1996)]

Lastly, those who have not chosen a domicile within a specific jurisdiction and therefore chosen NOT to become the following in relation to ONLY that jurisdiction:

1. Among those “governed” by the civil laws.
2. Statutory “citizens” or “residents”.
3. A “member” of the body politic. We call the “body politic” by the affectionate term “the club”.

...are called “exclusively private”. Such parties have been acknowledged by the U.S. Supreme Court to beyond the civil control of the government. Notice they only recognize the right to “regulate” activity of “citizens” and NOT “ALL PERSONS”:

When one becomes a member of society, he necessarily parts with some rights or privileges which, as an individual not affected by his relations to others, he might retain. “A body politic,” as aptly defined in the preamble of the Constitution of Massachusetts, “is a social compact by which the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common good.” This does not confer power upon the whole people to control rights which are purely and exclusively private, Thorpe v. R. & B. Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 145; but it does authorize the establishment of laws requiring each citizen to so conduct himself, and so use his own property, as not unnecessarily to injure another. This is the essence of government, and 125*125 has found expression in the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. From this source come the police powers, which, as was said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney in the License Cases, 5 How. 583, “are nothing more or less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereignty, . . . that is to say, . . . the power to govern men and things.” Under these powers the government regulates the conduct of its citizens one towards another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property, when such regulation becomes necessary for the public good. In their exercise it has been customary in England from time immemorial, and in this country from its first colonization, to regulate ferries, common carriers, hackmen, bakers, millers, wharfingers, innkeepers, &c., and in so doing to fix a maximum of charge to be made for services rendered, accommodations furnished, and articles sold. To this day, statutes are to be found in many of the States upon some or all of these subjects; and we think it has never yet been successfully contended that such legislation came within any of the constitutional prohibitions against interference with private property. With the Fifth Amendment in force, Congress, in 1820, conferred power upon the city of Washington "to regulate . . . the rates of wharfage at private wharves, . . . the sweeping of chimneys, and to fix the rates of fees therefor, . . . and the weight and quality of bread," 3 Stat. 587, sect. 7; and, in 1848, "to make all necessary regulations respecting hackney carriages and the rates of fare of the same, and the rates of hauling by carmen, wagoners, carmen, and draymen, and the rates of commission of auctioneers,"

5.4.8.7 The Social Contract/Compact

The end of the previous section referred to what the U.S. Supreme Court called "the social compact". What most judges won’t tell you about the above requirement for establishing jurisdiction is that the “social compact” is one means of satisfying the need for a “contract” in order to establish civil jurisdiction over you. In law, the words “compact” and “contract” are equivalent:

"Compact n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties, which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties, in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forbore. See also Compact clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty.”

All civil societies are based on “compact” and therefore “contract”. Here is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes this compact and therefore contract.

"Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things. Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact [CONTRACT]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is constitutional; allegiance is personal. Citizenship is freedom; allegiance is servitude. Citizenship is communicable; allegiance is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship: which it can neither serve to controul, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the inherent rights of man…. The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign…

Note the sentence: “Citizenship is the effect of compact [CONTRACT]!”. By calling yourself a “citizen”, you:

1. Identify yourself as a consenting party to the social compact/contract.
2. Make yourself subject to the civil laws that implement the contract.
3. Consent to be governed by the sovereignty executing that social contract.

Even the author of the Law Of Nations, which is the document upon which the USA Constitution was based by the founding fathers, acknowledged that all civilizations are based upon compact and contract, called this contract the "social compact", and said that when the government fails to be accountable for the protection sought, those being protected have a right to leave said society. Notice that the author, Vattel, refers to the parties to the social compact as "contracting parties".

§ 223. Cases in which a citizen has a right to quit his country.

There are cases in which a citizen has an absolute right to renounce his country, and abandon it entirely — a right founded on reasons derived from the very nature of the social compact.

1. If the citizen cannot procure subsistence in his own country, it is undoubtedly lawful for him to seek it elsewhere. For, political or civil society being entered into only with a view of facilitating to each of its members the means of supporting himself, and of living in happiness and safety, it would be absurd to pretend that a member, whom it cannot furnish with such things as are most necessary, has not a right to leave it.

2. If the body of the society, or he who represents it, absolutely fail to discharge their obligations [of protection] towards a citizen, the latter may withdraw himself. For, if one of the contracting parties does not observe his engagements, the other is no longer bound to fulfil his; as the contract is reciprocal between the society and its members. It is on the same principle, also, that the society may expel a member who violates its laws.

3. If the major part of the nation, or the sovereign who represents it, attempt to enact laws relative to matters in which the social compact cannot oblige every citizen to submission, those who are averse to these laws have a right to quit the society, and go settle elsewhere. For instance, if the sovereign, or the greater part of the nation, will allow but one religion in the state, those who believe and profess another religion have a right to withdraw, and take with them their families and effects. For, they cannot be supposed to have subjected themselves to the authority of men, in affairs of conscience, and if the society suffers and is weakened by their departure, the blame must be imputed to the intolerant party; for it is they who fail in their observance of the social compact — it is they who violate it, and force the others to a separation. We have elsewhere touched upon some other instances of this third case, — that of a popular state wishing to have a sovereign (§ 33), and that of an independent nation taking the resolution to submit to a foreign power (§ 195).

The terms of the “social compact” at the heart of every civilized society are exhaustively described in the following classic book by Rousseau written just before the U.S. Constitution was written:

The Social Contract or Principles of Political Right, Jean Jacques Rousseau, 1762

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Rousseau is also widely regarded as the father of socialism. In chapter 8 of the above book he even describes all governments as what he calls a “civil religion”. Here is the way Rousseau describes the “social compact” that forms the foundation of all societies:

> There is but one law which, from its nature, needs unanimous consent. This is the social compact; for civil association is the most voluntary of all acts. Every man being born free and his own master, no one, under any pretext whatsoever, can make any man subject without his consent. To decide that the son of a slave is born a slave is to decide that he is not born a man.

> If then there are opponents when the social compact is made, their opposition does not invalidate the contract, but merely prevents them from being included in it. They are foreigners among citizens. When the State is instituted, residence constitutes consent; to dwell within its territory is to submit to the Sovereign.\(^44\)

Apart from this primitive contract, the vote of the majority always binds all the rest. This follows from the contract itself. But it is asked how a man can be both free and forced to conform to wills that are not his own. How are the opponents at once free and subject to laws they have not agreed to?

I retort that the question is wrongly put. The citizen gives his consent to all the laws, including those which are passed in spite of his opposition, and even those which punish him when he dares to break any of them.

The constant will of all the members of the State is the general will; by virtue of it they are citizens and free\(^45\). When in the popular assembly a law is proposed, what the people is asked is not exactly whether it approves or rejects the proposal, but whether it is in conformity with the general will, which is their will. Each man, in giving his vote, states his opinion on that point; and the general will is found by counting votes. When therefore the opinion that is contrary to my own prevails, this proves neither more nor less than that I was mistaken, and that what I thought to be the general will was not so. If my particular opinion had carried the day I should have achieved the opposite of what was my will, and it is in that case that I should not have been free.

This presupposes, indeed, that all the qualities of the general will still reside in the majority: when they cease to do so, whatever side a man may take, liberty is no longer possible.

In my earlier demonstration of how particular wills are substituted for the general will in public deliberation, I have adequately pointed out the practicable methods of avoiding this abuse; and I shall have more to say of them later on. I have also given the principles for determining the proportional number of votes for declaring that will. A difference of one vote destroys equality; a single opponent destroys unanimity; but between equality and unanimity, there are several grades of unequal division, at each of which this proportion may be fixed in accordance with the condition and the needs of the body politic.

There are two general rules that may serve to regulate this relation. First, the more grave and important the questions discussed, the nearer should the opinion that is to prevail approach unanimity. Secondly, the more the matter in hand calls for speed, the smaller the prescribed difference in the numbers of votes may be allowed to become: where an instant decision has to be reached, a majority of one vote should be enough. The first of these two rules seems more in harmony with the laws, and the second with practical affairs. In any case, it is the combination of them that gives the best proportions for determining the majority necessary.\(^46\)

Note how Rousseau describes those who are not party to the social contract as “foreigners”: “If then there are opponents when the social compact is made, their opposition does not invalidate the contract, but merely prevents them from being included in it. They are foreigners among citizens. When the State is instituted, residence constitutes consent; to dwell within its territory is to submit to the Sovereign.”

We also clarify the following about Rousseau’s comments above:

1. Those who are parties to the social compact are called “citizens” if they were born in the country and “residents” if they were born in a foreign country, who together are called “inhabitants” or “domiciliaries”.
2. The “foreigner” he is talking about is a statutory “alien” and a “nonresident”.
3. When Rousseau says “Apart from this primitive contract, the vote of the majority always binds all the rest.”, what he means by “the rest” is “the rest of the inhabitants, citizens, or residents”, but NOT “nonresidents” or “transient \(^{44}\) This should of course be understood as applying to a free State; for elsewhere family, goods, lack of a refuge, necessity, or violence may detain a man in a country against his will; and then his dwelling there no longer by itself implies his consent to the contract or to its violation.

\(^{45}\) At Genoa, the word Liberty may be read over the front of the prisons and on the chains of the galley-slaves. This application of the device is good and just. It is indeed only malefactors of all estates who prevent the citizen from being free. In the country in which all such men were in the galleys, the most perfect liberty would be enjoyed.

foreigners”. This is implied by his other statement: “If then there are opponents when the social compact is made, their opposition does not invalidate the contract, but merely prevents them from being included in it. They are foreigners among citizens.”

4. Rousseau says that: “When the State is instituted, residence constitutes consent; to dwell within its territory is to submit to the Sovereign.” Here are some key points about this statement:

4.1. What he means by “residence” is a political and voluntary act of association and consent, and NOT physical presence in a specific place.

4.2. Those who have made this choice of “residence” and thereby politically associated with and joined with a specific political “state” acquire the status under the social contract called “resident” or “citizens”. Those who have not associated are called “transient foreigners”, “strangers”, or “in transitu”.

4.3. The choice of “residence” is protected by the First Amendment right of association and freedom from compelled association.

4.4. All rights under the social contract attach to the statuses under the contract called “citizen”, “resident”, “inhabitant”, or “domiciliary”. In that sense, the contract behaves as a franchise or what we call a “protection franchise”. You are not protected by the franchise unless you procure a status under the franchise called “citizen” or “resident.”

5. In a legal sense, to say that one is “in the state” or “dwelling in the state” really means that a person has consented to the social contract and thereby become a “government contractor.” Your corrupt politicians have written this social contract in such a way that consenting to it makes you a public officer within the government, even though such a corruption of the de jure system is clearly beyond its legislative intent. See:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7. It is a violation of due process of law, theft, slavery, and even identity theft to:

7.1. PRESUME that by virtue of physically occupying a specific place, that a person has consented to take up “residence” there and thereby consented to the social contract and the civil laws that implement it.

7.2. Interfere with one’s choice of political association and consent to the social compact by refusing to accept any piece of paper that declares one a “nonresident”.

7.3. Impose the status of “citizen” or “resident” against those who do not consent to the social contract.

7.4. Enforce any provision of the social contract against a non-consenting party.

7.5. Connect the status of “citizen” or “resident” with a public office in the government or use that unlawfully created office as method to impose any duty upon said party. Why? Because the Thirteenth Amendment forbids “involuntary servitude”.

If you are injured and take the party who injured you into a civil court, the judge, in fact, is really acting as a trustee of the social contract/compact in enforcing that contract between you and the other party. All governments in the USA, in fact, are “trustees”:

“Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property:

And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions, are mutually obligatory.”

Both parties to the lawsuit must be parties to the social contract and therefore “citizens” or “residents” within the jurisdiction you are civilly suing. If the defendant you are suing is NOT party to the social contract, they are called a “nonresident” who is therefore protected from being civilly sued by:

2. The “Minimum Contacts Doctrine” elucidated by the U.S. Supreme Court in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945). This doctrine states that it is a violation of due process to bring a nonresident into a foreign court to be sued unless certain well defined standards are met. Here is how the federal courts describe this doctrine:

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.' " Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)).

Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant’s forum contacts and the plaintiff’s claim.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

1. The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof, or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;

2. the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant’s forum-related activities; and

3. the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the “purposeful availment” prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

[Yahoo! Inc. v. La Ligue Contre Le Racisme Et L’Antisemitisme, 433 F.3d. 1199 (9th Cir. 01/12/2006)].

Why does all this matter? Because what if you are a nonresident and the U.S. government wants to sue you for a tax liability? They can’t take a nonresident (in relation to federal territory) and a “nontaxpayer” into a Federal District Court and must instead sue you in a state court under the above requirements. Even their own Internal Revenue Manual says so:

Internal Revenue Manual
9.13.1.5 (09-17-2002)
Witnesses In Foreign Countries

1. Nonresident aliens physically present in a foreign country cannot be compelled to appear as witnesses in a United States District Court since they are beyond jurisdiction of United States officials. Since the Constitution requires confrontation of adverse witnesses in criminal prosecutions, the testimony of such aliens may not be admissible until the witness appears at trial. However, certain testimony for the admissibility of documents may be obtained under 18 USC §3491 et seq. without a “personnel” appearance in the United States. Additionally, 28 USC §1783 et seq. provides limited powers to induce the appearance of United States citizens physically present in a foreign country.

The other great thing about being a nonresident, is that the statute of limitations under civil law DO NOT apply to you and do not limit your rights or the protection of those rights.

1. If you invoke the common law rather than statutory law, you have an unlimited amount of time to sue a federal actor for a tort. All such statutes of limitations are franchises to which BOTH parties to the suit must be contractors under the social contract/compact in order to enforce.

2. If only one party is a “citizen” or a “resident” protected by the social contract, and the other party is protected by the Constitution but not the civil law implementing the social contract, then the Constitution trumps the civil law and becomes self-executing. Remedies which are "self-executing" need no statute as a basis to sue and cannot be LIMITED by statute.

The design of the Fourteenth Amendment has proved significant also in maintaining the traditional separation of powers 524*524 between Congress and the Judiciary. The first eight Amendments to the Constitution set forth self-executing prohibitions on governmental action, and this Court has had primary authority to interpret those prohibitions. The Bingham draft, some thought, departed from that tradition by vesting in Congress primary power to interpret and elaborate on the meaning of the new Amendment through legislation. Under it, "Congress, and not the courts, was to judge whether or not any of the privileges or immunities were not secured to citizens in the several States." Flack, supra, at 64. While this separation-of-powers aspect did not occasion the widespread resistance which was caused by the proposal's threat to the federal balance, it nonetheless attracted the attention of various Members. See Cong. Globe, 39th Cong., 1st Sess., at 1064 (statement of Rep. Hale) (noting that Bill of Rights, unlike the Bingham proposal, "provide[s] safeguards to be enforced by the courts, and not to be exercised by the Legislature"). id., at App. 133 (statement of Rep.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Why do we say these things? Because what you think of as civil law, in most cases, is really only a private law franchise for government officers and statutory “employees”, as exhaustively proven in the following document:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Under the concepts in the above document, a “statute of limitations” is an example of an “privilege and immunity” afforded to ONLY government officers and statutory “employees” when the OTHER party they injure is also a government officer or employee in some capacity. If the injured party is not party to the social compact and franchise but is protected by the Constitution, then the statutes of limitations cannot be invoked under the franchise.

In the United States (the country), there are, in fact TWO “social contracts” or “social compacts”, and each protects a different subset of the overall population.

"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"

You can only be a party to ONE of these two social contracts/compacts at a time, because you can only have a domicile in ONE jurisdiction at a time. These two jurisdictions that Congress legislates for are:

1. The states of the Union under the requirements of the Constitution of the United States. In this capacity, it is called the “federal/general government”.
2. The U.S. government, the District of Columbia, U.S. possessions and territories, and enclaves within the states. In this capacity, it is called the “national government”. The authority for this jurisdiction derives from Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the United States Constitution. All laws passed essentially amount to municipal laws for federal property, and in that capacity, Congress is not restrained by either the Constitution or the Bill of Rights. We call the collection of all federal territories, possessions, and enclaves within the states “the federal zone” throughout this document. The “separation of powers doctrine” is what created these two separate and distinct social compacts and jurisdictions. Each has its own courts, unique types of “citizens”, and laws. That doctrine is described in:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The U.S. Supreme Court has identified the maintenance of separation between these two distinct jurisdictions as THE MOST IMPORTANT FUNCTION OF ANY COURT. Are the courts satisfying their most important function, or have they bowed to political expediency by abusing deception and words of art to entrap and enslave you in what amounts to a criminal conspiracy against your constitutional rights? Have the courts become what amounts to a modern day Judas, who sold the truth for the twenty pieces of silver they could STEAL from you through illegal tax enforcement by abusing word games?

"The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous [SATANIC] change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism. It will be an evil [SATANIC] day for American liberty if the theory of a government WHICH of the two social compacts are you party to? Your choice of domicile determines that. It CAN'T legally be both because you can only have a domicile in ONE place at a time. Furthermore, if you have been deceived by corrupt politicians and "words of art" into becoming a party to BOTH social compacts, you are serving TWO masters, which is forbidden by the Holy Bible:

"No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]: for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."

[Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

We might also add that franchises and the right to contract that they are based upon cannot lawfully be used to destroy the separation between these two distinct jurisdictions. Preserving that separation is, in fact, the heart and soul of the United States Constitution. That is why the U.S. Supreme Court held the following:

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coating licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize [e.g. LICENSE as part of a franchise] a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize [e.g. LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

Notice the language "Congress cannot authorize [e.g. LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

All licensed activities are, in fact, franchises and excise taxes are what implement them and pay for them. The income tax itself, in fact, is such a franchise. See the following for exhaustive proof:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

On the subject of whether Christians can be party to or consent to what the courts call "the social compact" and contract, God Himself says the following:

"You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you."

[Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

Why did God warn Christians in this way? Because Rev. 19:19 identifies political rulers as "The Beast", and contracting with them MAKES you an officer of and one of them. And as their officer or public officer participating in their franchises, you can't avoid "serving them", and hence, violating the First Commandment NOT to serve other pagan gods, among which are included civil rulers or governments.

Now let's discuss how the courts treat the issue of the social compact to confirm what we have said in this section. The first federal corporation established outside of federal territory was the original Bank of the United States commissioned by Congress. That bank invaded the state of Ohio and began operating there. The state sought to penalize and tax it out of existence and the bank refused to pay the state penalties and taxes. When the state seized assets of the bank for nonpayment of taxes, the case went before the U.S. Supreme Court. The court held that the bank:

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. Was a federal but not state corporation and therefore NOT a constitutional “person” or “citizen” under the judiciary clauses of the Constitution.
2. Was an office within the national government.
3. Was exempt from state taxes and penalties.

The case also held that the ONLY way that federal law can be enforced within a state of the Union was if EITHER a public office was involved (which is federal government property), OR if the bank had a contract with the government (which is ALSO federal government property).

“All the powers of the government [including ALL of its civil enforcement powers against the public] must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with [private] individuals.”

The above holding brings up some crucial points about civil jurisdiction in courts of justice:

1. The government can only regulate and control its own agents.
2. Contracts with the government create agency on behalf of the government.
3. Public offices are also evidence of agency on behalf of the government.
4. If you are not a public officer and have no contracts with the government, they can’t civilly regulate or control you because you are PRIVATE and they have no jurisdiction over EXCLUSIVELY private conduct.
5. If a government takes you into civil court seeking to enforce an obligation they claim you have to the government, then they as the moving party MUST satisfy the burden of proving ONE of the following two things in order to establish their jurisdiction:
   5.1. That you are lawfully occupying a public office OR…
   5.2. You have a contract with them and therefore are acting as their agent.

5.4.8.8 “Domicile” = “allegiance” and “protection”

The U.S. Supreme Court describes the relationship of domicile to taxation as follows:

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The first thing to notice about the above ruling is that the essence of being a “citizen” is one’s domicile, not just their place of birth or naturalization. “Domicile” establishes your LEGAL status within a municipal government while “nationality” (being a “national”) establishes your POLITICAL status and association with a specific nation under the law of nations.

The U.S. Supreme Court admitted that an alien with a domicile in a place is treated as a native or naturalized “citizen” in nearly every respect. Note that they use the phrase “This right to protect persons having a domicile”, meaning they DON’T have a right to protect people who choose NOT to have a domicile and therefore are UNABLE to render protection because they can ONLY “govern” people who consent to be governed by choosing a domicile within their protection.

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Note also the key role of the word “intention” within the meaning of domicile. A person can have many “abodes”, which are the place they temporarily “inhabit”, but only one legal “domicile”. You cannot have a legal “domicile” in a place without also having an intention (also called “consent”) to live there “permanently”, which implies allegiance to the people and the laws of that place.

“Allegiance and protection [by the government from harm] are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”

What the U.S. supreme Court essentially is describing above is a contract to procure the civil protection of a specific government, and it is giving that contract a name called “domicile”. What makes the contract binding is the fact that each party to the contract both gives and receives specific and measurable “consideration”. You manifest your consent to the contract by voluntarily calling yourself a “subject”, “inhabitant”, “citizen”, or “resident”, all of which have in common a domicile within the jurisdiction that those terms relate to. You give “allegiance” and the support (e.g. “taxes”) that go with that allegiance, and in return, the government has an implied legal duty to protect and serve you. All contracts require both mutual consent and mutual consideration. Without both demonstrated elements, the contract is unenforceable. The contract is therefore only enforceable if both parties incur reciprocal duties that are enforceable in court as “rights”. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court again describes this “protection contract”:

The reason why States are “bodies politic and corporate”: is simple: just as a corporation is an entity that can act only through its agents, “[t]he State is a political corporate body, can act only through agents, and can command only by laws.” Poindexter v. Greenhow, supra, 114 U.S. at 288, 5 S.Ct. at 912-913. See also Black’s Law Dictionary 159 (5th ed. 1979) (“[B]ody politic or corporate”: “A social compact by which the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common good”). As a “body politic and corporate,” a State falls squarely within the Dictionary Act’s definition of a “person.”

Now let’s look at the domicile “protection contract” or “protection franchise” a little closer. Does it meet all the requisite legal elements of a legally enforceable contract? In fact, after you declare your exclusive allegiance to the “state” by declaring a “domicile” within that state so that you can procure “protection”, ironically, the courts continue to forcefully insist that your public SERVANTS STILL have NO LEGAL OBLIGATION to protect you! This is what Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the traitor, calls “The New Deal”, and what we call “The RAW Deal”. Below is the AMAZING truth right from the horse’s mouth, the courts, proving that police officers cannot be sued if they fail to come to your aid after you call them when you have a legitimate need for their protection:

Do You Have a Right to Police Protection?
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Crime/Articles/PoliceProtection.htm

Consequently, the “protection contract” is unenforceable as a duty upon you because it imposes no reciprocal duty upon the government. On the one hand, the government throws people in jail for failing to pay for protection in the form of “taxes”, while on the other hand, it refuses to prosecute police officers for failing to provide the protection that was paid for, even though their willful or negligent refusal to protect us could have far more injurious and immediate effects than simply failing to pay for protection. This is a violation of the equal protection of the laws. If it is a crime to not pay for protection, then it ought to equally be a crime to not provide it! Who would want to live in a country or be part of a “state” that would condone such hypocrisy? That is why we advocate “divorcing the state”. It is precisely this type of hypocrisy that explains why prominent authorities will tell you that taxes are not “contractual”: because the courts treat it like a contract and a criminal matter to not pay taxes for “taxpayers”, but refuse to hold public servants equally liable for their half of the bargain, which is protection:

“A tax is not regarded as a debt in the ordinary sense of that term, for the reason that a tax does not depend upon the consent of the taxpayer and there is no express or implied contract to pay taxes. Taxes are not contracts between party and party, either express or implied; but they are the positive acts of the government, through its various agents, binding upon the inhabitants, and to the making and enforcing of which their personal consent individually is not required.”

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax 5-417

The above is a deception at best and a LIE at worst. A “taxpayer” is legally defined as a person liable, and it is true that for such a person, taxes are not consensual and in no way “voluntary”. HOWEVER, the choice about whether one wishes to BECOME a “taxpayer” as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) is based on domicile and the excise taxable activities one voluntarily engages in, both of which in fact ARE voluntary actions and choices. By their careful choice of words, they have misrepresented the truth so they could get into your pocket. What else would you expect of greedy LIARS, I mean “lawyers”? We would also like to take this opportunity to clarify for whom taxes are “voluntary” in order to further clarify the title of this section:

1. Income taxes under I.R.C. Subtitle A are not voluntary for "taxpayers".
2. Income taxes under I.R.C. Subtitle A are not voluntary for everyone, because some subset of everyone are "taxpayers".
3. Income taxes under I.R.C. Subtitle A are voluntary for those who are "nontaxpayers", who we define here as those persons who are NOT the "taxpayer" defined in 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(14) and 1313.

"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, instrumentalities, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them [non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws.”

[Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

Some other points to consider about this “Raw Deal” scam:

1. You can’t be a “citizen” or a “resident” without having a legally enforceable right to protection.
2. Since the government won’t enforce the rendering of the ONLY consideration required to make you a “citizen” or a “resident”, then the protection contract is unenforceable and technically, you can’t lawfully therefore call yourself a “citizen”.
3. Since you can’t be a member of a “state” without being a “citizen”, then technically, there is no de jure “state”, no de jure government that serves this “state”, and no “United States”. It’s just “US”, friends, cause there ain’t no “U.S.”!
4. The implication is that your government has legally abandoned you and you are an orphan, because they didn’t complete their half of the protection contract bargain. Without a government, God is back in charge. The Bible says He owns the earth anyway, which leaves us as “nonresidents” and “transient foreigners” in respect to any jurisdiction that claims to be a “government” because we know they’re lying.
5. The Bible says of this “Raw Deal” the following: You’ve been HAD, folks!

For thus says the LORD: “You have sold yourselves for nothing, And you shall be redeemed without money.”

[Isaiah 52:3, Bible, NKJV]

The U.S. Supreme Court has also held that “allegiance” is completely incompatible with any system of “citizenship” in a republican form of government, and that it is “repulsive”. Consequently, we must conclude that allegiance to anything but God is therefore to be avoided at all costs.

“Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things.

Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact [CONTRACT!]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is constitutional; allegiance is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither serve to controul, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the inherent rights of man…. The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign….

Notice that they say that citizenship is the effect of “compact”, which is a type of contract. If “domicile” is the basis of citizenship, and citizenship is the effect of “compact”, then “domicile” amounts to the equivalent of a “contract”. This leads us right back to the conclusion that the voluntary choice of one’s “domicile” is a “contract”:

The Bible is consistent with the Supreme Court above in its disdain for “allegiance”. It has a name for those expressing "allegiance": It is called an "oath". When a person becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States, he must by law (see 8 U.S.C. §1448) take an “oath” of "allegiance" and be "sworn in". When a person signs an income tax return, he must swear a perjury oath. Jesus, on the other hand, commanded believers not to take "oaths" to anything but God, and especially not to earthly Kings, and said that doing otherwise was essentially Satanic:

"Again you have heard that it was said to those of old, "You shall not swear falsely, but shall perform your oaths to the Lord." But I say to you, do not swear at all: neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; nor by the earth, for it is His footstool; nor by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King; Nor shall you swear by your head, because you cannot make one hair white or black. But let your "Yes' be "Yes,' and your "No,' "No.' For whatever is more than these is from the evil one [Satan]."

[Matt. 5:33-37, Bible, NKJV]

God also commanded us to take oaths ONLY in His name and no others:

"You shall fear the LORD your God and serve [only] Him, and shall take oaths in His name."

[Deut. 6:13, Bible, NKJV]

"If a man makes a vow to the LORD, or swears an oath to bind himself by some agreement, he shall not break his word; he shall do according to all that proceeds out of his mouth."

[Numbers 30:2, Bible, NKJV]

Israel’s first King, Saul, in fact, distressed the people because one of his first official acts was to try to put the people under oath to him instead of God.

"And the men of Israel were distressed that day, for Saul had placed the people under oath to him instead of God.

[1 Sam. 14:24, Bible, NKJV]

God’s response to the Israelites electing a King/protector to whom they would owe "allegiance", in fact, was to say that they sinned:

Then all the elders of Israel gathered together and came to Samuel at Ramah, and said to him, "Look, you are old, and your sons do not walk in your ways. Now make us a king to judge us like all the nations [and be OVER them]."

But the thing displeased Samuel when they said, "Give us a king to judge us." So Samuel prayed to the Lord. And the Lord said to Samuel, "Hear the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have rejected Me [God], that I should not reign over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day— with which they have forsaken Me and served other gods [Kings, in this case]—so they are doing to you also [government becoming idolatry]. Now therefore, heed their voice. However, you shall solemnly forewarn them, and show them the behavior of the king who will reign over them."

So Samuel told all the words of the LORD to the people who asked him for a king. And he said, "This will be the behavior of the king who will reign over you: He will take [STEAL] your daughters to be perfumers, cooks, and bakers. And he will take [STEAL] the best of your fields, your vineyards, and your olive groves, and give them to his servants. He will take [STEAL] a tenth of your grain and your vintage, and give it to his officers and servants. And he will take [STEAL] your male servants, your female servants, your fine young men, and your donkeys, and put them to his work [as SLAVES]. He will take [STEAL] a tenth

The law and government that a person voluntarily consents or "intends" to be subject to determines where their "legal home" is under this concept. This choice must be completely voluntary and not subject to coercion or intimidation because all just powers of any free government derive from the "consent of the governed", as the Declaration of Independence indicates. This form of consent is called "allegiance" in the legal field. A voluntary choice of allegiance to a place amounts to a choice to join or associate with a group of people called a "state" and to respect, be subject to, and obey all positive laws passed by the citizens who dwell there. The First Amendment guarantees us a right of free association, and therefore, only we can choose the group of people we wish to associate with and be protected by as a result of choosing a "domicile". The First Amendment also guarantees us a right of freedom from "compelled association", which is the act of forcing a person to join or be part of any group, including a "state".

Just as there is freedom to speak, to associate, and to believe, so also there is freedom not to speak, associate, or believe "The right to speak and the right to refrain from speaking [on a government tax return, and in violation of the Fifth Amendment when coerced, for instance] are complementary components of the broader concept of 'individual freedom of mind." Wooley v. Maynard [430 U.S. 703] (1977). Freedom of conscience dictates that no individual may be forced to espouse ideological causes with which he disagrees:

"[A]t the heart of the First Amendment is the notion that the individual should be free to believe as he will, and that in a free society one's beliefs should be shaped by his mind and by his conscience rather than coerced by the State [through illegal enforcement of the revenue laws]." Abbo v. Detroit Board of Education [431 U.S. 290] (1977)

Freedom from compelled association is a vital component of freedom of expression. Indeed, freedom from compelled association illustrates the significance of the liberty or personal autonomy model of the First Amendment. As a general constitutional principle, it is for the individual and not for the state to choose one's associations and to define the persona which he holds out to the world.

Therefore, no government has lawful authority to compel us to choose a "domicile" that is within its legislative jurisdiction or to have allegiance towards it, because that would be compelled association. The right to choose which political group or country we wish to join and have allegiance to and protection from also implies that we can reject all the earthly options and simply elect to join God's followers and be subject ONLY to His laws. This type of government would be called a "theocracy". This, in fact, is the goal of this entire publication: Establishing an ecclesiastical state separate from the corrupted governments that plague our land. It is a stark reality that what you define as protection might amount to its opposite for someone else. Therefore, each person is free to:

1. Define what "protection" means to them.
2. Choose to join a political group or country that agrees most with their definition of "protection". This makes them into "nationals" of that country who profess "allegiance" to the "state" and thereby merit its protection.
3. Choose a "domicile" within that country or group, and thereby become subject to its laws and a benefactor of its protection.

The notion of freedom to choose one's allegiances is a natural consequence of the fact that a "state" can consist of any number of people, from one person to millions or even billions of people. The political landscape constantly changes precisely because people are constantly exercising their right to change their political associations. A single person is free to create his own "state" and pass his own laws, and to choose a domicile within that created state. The boundaries of that created "state" might include only himself, only his immediate family, or encompass an entire city, county, or district. He might do this because he regards the society in which he lives to be so corrupt that it's laws, morality, and norms are injurious rather than protective. Such a motive, in fact, is behind an effort called the "Free State Project", in which people are trying to get together to create a new and different type of state within the borders of our country. The U.S. Supreme Court, in fact, has ruled that when the laws of a society become more injurious than protective to us personally, then we cease to have any obligation to obey them and may lawfully choose other allegiances and domiciles that afford better protection. To wit:

"By the surrender, the inhabitants passed under a temporary allegiance to the British government and were bound by such laws and such only as it chose to recognize and impose. From the nature of the case, no other laws could be obligatory upon them, for where there is no protection or allegiance or sovereignty, there can be no claim to obedience."

If a person decides that the laws and the people of the area in which he lives are injurious of his life, liberty, and property, then he is perfectly entitled to withhold his allegiance and shift his domicile to a place where better protection is afforded. When a person has allegiance and domicile to a place or society other than where he lives, then he is considered "foreign" in that society and all people comprising that society become "foreigners" relative to him in such a case. He becomes a "transient foreigner" and the only laws that are obligatory upon him are the criminal laws and no other. Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court said about the right of people to choose to disassociate with such "foreigners" who can do them harm. Note that they say the United States government has the right to exclude foreigners who are injurious. This authority, it says, comes from the Constitution, which in turn was delegated by the Sovereign People. The People cannot delegate an authority they do not have, therefore they must individually ALSO have this authority within their own private lives of excluding injurious peoples from their legal and political life by changing their domicile and citizenship. This act of excluding such foreigners becomes what we call a “political divorce” and the result accomplishes the equivalent of “disconnecting from the government matrix”:

"The government, possessing the powers which are to be exercised for protection and security, is clothed with authority to determine the occasion on which the powers shall be called forth; and its determinations, so far as the subjects affected are concerned, are necessarily conclusive upon all its departments and officers. If, therefore, the government of the United States, through its legislative department, considers the presence of foreigners of a different race in this country, who will not assimilate with us, to be dangerous to its peace and security, their exclusion is not to be stayed because at the time there are no actual hostilities with the nation of which the foreigners are subjects. The existence of war would render the necessity of the proceeding only more obvious and pressing. The same necessity, in a less pressing degree, may arise when war does not exist, and the same authority which adjudges the necessity in one case must also determine it in the other. In both cases its determination is conclusive upon the judiciary. If the government of the country of which the foreigners excluded are subjects is dissatisfied with this action, it can make complaint to the executive head of our government, or resort to any other measure which, in its judgment, its interests or dignity may demand; and there lies its only remedy.

The power of the government to exclude foreigners from the country whenever, in its judgment, the public interests require such exclusion, has been asserted in repeated instances, and never denied by the executive or legislative departments.

Notice above the phrase:

"If the government of the country of which the foreigners excluded are subjects is dissatisfied with this action, it can make complaint to the executive head of our government, or resort to any other measure which, in its judgment, its interests or dignity may demand; and there lies its only remedy."

The court is tacitly admitting that there is NO legal remedy in the case where a foreigner is expelled because the party expelling him has an absolute right to do so. This inalienable right to expel harmful foreigners is just as true of what happens on a person’s private property as it is to what they want to do with their ENTIRE LIFE, property, and liberty. This same argument applies to us divorcing ourselves from the state where we live. There is absolutely no legal remedy in any court and no judge has any discretion to interfere with your absolute authority to divorce not only the state, but HIM! This is BIG, folks! You don't have to prove that a society is injurious in order to disassociate from it because your right to do so is absolute, but if you want or need a few very good reasons why our present political system is injurious that you can show to a judge or a court, read through chapter 2 of this book.

Lastly, we emphasize that there is no method OTHER than domicile available in which to consent to the civil laws of a specific place. None of the following conditions, for instance, may form a basis for a prima facie presumption that a specific human being consented to be civilly governed by a specific municipal government:

1. Simply being born and thereby becoming a statutory “national” (per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)) of a specific country is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
2. Simply living in a physical place WITHOUT choosing a domicile there is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
3. Simply having a permit, license, or other written or verbal agreement to be in a place for any duration is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
4. Being in a place to receive and transact business for any duration is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
5. Simply residing in a place with the intent to return at a later date is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
6. Simply having a property or residence in a place is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.

5.4.8.10 It is idolatry for a Christian to have an earthly domicile

Note also the use of the word “permanent home” in the definition of “domicile”. According to the Bible, "earth" is NOT permanent, but instead is only temporary, and will eventually be destroyed and rebuilt as a new and different earth:

"But the heavens and the earth which are now preserved by the same word, are reserved for fire until the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."

[2 Peter 3:7, Bible NKJV]

The legal definition of "permanent" also demonstrates that it can mean any length of time one wants it to mean:

8 U.S.C. §1101

(a)(31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

We believe what they are really describing above is the equivalent of a “protection contract” between you and the government, because the way it functions is that it is terminated when either you or the government insist, which means that while it is in force, your consent is inferred and legally “presumed”. Below is how another author describes it, and note that the real meaning of “indefinitely” is “as long as he consents to a protector”:

"One resides in one’s domicile indefinitely, that is, with no definite end planned for the stay. While we hear permanently mentioned, the better word is ‘indefinitely’. This is best seen in the context of a change of domicile.”

Christians define "permanent" the same way God does. God is eternal so His concept of "permanent" means "eternal". Therefore, no place on earth can be "permanent" in the context of a Christian:

"Do not love [be a permanent inhabitant or resident of] the world or the things in the world. If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world--the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life--is not of the Father but is of the world. And the world is passing away [not permanent], and the lust of it; but he who does the will of God abides forever."

[1 John 2:15, Bible, NKJV]
Christians are only allowed to be governed by God and His laws found in the Bible. Man's laws are simply a vain substitute, but God's laws are our only true and permanent source of protection, and the only type of protection we can consent to or intend to be subject to without violating our covenant and contract with God found in the Holy Bible.

"Away with you, Satan! For it is written, 'You shall worship the Lord your God, and Him ONLY [NOT the government or man's vain laws or an atheistic democratic socialist "state"] you shall serve.'" [Matt. 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

The main allegiance of Christians is exclusively to Him, and not to any man or earthly law or government. We are citizens of Heaven, and not earth. The most we can be while on earth is "nationals", because "nationals" are not subject to man's laws and only "citizens" are. See: http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/CitizensVNationals.htm

Therefore, Heaven can be our only "legal home" or "domicile" or "residence".

"For our citizenship is [not WAS or WILL BE, but PRESENTLY IS] in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." [Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

"These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them, embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." [Hebrews 11:13, Bible, NKJV]

"Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims (temporarily occupying the world) abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul..." [1 Peter 2:11, Bible, NKJV]

"Do you not know that friendship [and citizenship] with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend [or "resident"] of the world makes himself an enemy of God." [James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]

"And do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." [Romans 12:2, Bible, NKJV]

The above scriptures say we are "sojourners and pilgrims", meaning we are perpetual travelers while temporarily here as God's ambassadors. Legal treatises on domicile also confirm that while a person is "in transitu", meaning travelling and sojourning temporarily, he cannot choose a domicile and that his domicile reverts to his "domicile of origin".

§ 114. Id. Domicil of origin clings and adheres to the subject of it until another domicile is acquired. This is a logical deduction from the postulate that "every person must have a domicile somewhere." For as a new domicile cannot be acquired except by actual residence cum animo manendi, it follows that the domicil of origin adheres while the subject of it is in transitu, or, if he has not yet determined upon a new place of abode, while he is in search of one.—"quarens quo se conferat atque ubi constituet." Although this is a departure from the Roman law doctrine, yet it is held with entire unanimity by the British and American cases. It was first announced, though somewhat confusedly, by Lord Alvanley in Somerville v. Somerville: "The third rule I shall extract is that the original domicil...or the domicil of origin is to prevail until the party has not only acquired another, but has manifested and carried into execution an intention of abandoning his former domicil and taking another as his sole domicil." The same idea has been expressed by Lord Wensleydale in somewhat different phrase in Aikman v. Aikman: "Every man's domicil of origin must be presumed to continue until he has acquired another sole domicil by actual residence with the intention of abandoning his domicil of origin. This change must be animo et facto, and the burden of proof unquestionably lies upon him who asserts the change." Lord Cranworth observed in the same case: "It is a clear principle of law that the domicil of origin continues until another is acquired; i.e., until the person has made a new home for himself in lieu of the home of his birth." In America similar language has been used.

Even the U.S. Supreme Court has held that while a person temporarily occupies a place and is "in transitu" or "in itinere", he or she is not subject to the civil laws of that place.

"It is generally agreed by writers upon international law, and the rule has been judicially applied in a great number of cases, that wherever any question may arise concerning the status of a person, it must be determined according to that law which has next previously rightfully operated on and fixed that status. And, further, that the laws of a country do not rightfully operate upon and fix the status of persons who are within its limits in itinere, or who are abiding there for definite temporary purposes, as for health, curiosity, or occasional business; that these laws, known to writers on public and private international law as personal statutes, operate only on the inhabitants of the country. Not that it is or can be denied that each independent nation may, if it thinks fit, apply them to all persons within their limits. But when this is done, not in conformity with the principles of international law, other States are not understood to be willing to recognize or allow effect to such applications of personal statutes." [Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. (19 How.) 393,595 (1856)]

To “consent” or “choose” to be governed by anything but God and His sacred Law is idolatry in violation of the first four Commandments of the Ten Commandments.

"It is better to trust the Lord Than to put confidence in man. It is better to trust in the Lord Than to put confidence in princes [or government, or the 'state'].” [Psalm 118:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

If you can’t put confidence in “princes”, which we interpret to mean political rulers or governments, then we certainly can’t have allegiance to them or put that allegiance above our allegiance to God. We can therefore have no "legal home" or "domicile" or “residence” anywhere other than exclusively within the Kingdom of Heaven and not within the jurisdiction of any corrupted earthly government. Our only law is God's law and Common law, which is based on God's law. Below is an example of how the early Jews adopted this very attitude towards government from the Bible.

"Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, “There is a certain people [the Jews, who today are the equivalent of Christians] scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are different from all other people’s [because they are God's laws], and they do not keep the king's [unjust] laws. Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it into the king's treasuries.” [Esther 3:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

"Those people who are not governed [ONLY] by GOD and His laws will be ruled by tyrants.” [William Penn (after whom Pennsylvania was named)]

"A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature [God and His laws], and not as the gift of their chief magistrate [or any government law].” [Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

Our acronym for the word BIBLE confirms the above conclusions:

B - Basic
I - Instructions
B - Before
L - Leaving
E - Earth

We are only temporarily here and Heaven is where we intend to return and live permanently. Legal domicile is based only on intent, not on physical presence, and it is only "domicile" which establishes one's legal and tax "home". No one but us can establish our "intent" and this is the express intent. Neither can we as Christians permit our “domicile” to be subject to change under any circumstances, even when coerced. To admit that there is a "permanent home" or "place of abode" anywhere on earth is to admit that there is no afterlife, no God, and that this earth is as good as it gets, which is a depressing prospect indeed that conflicts with our religious beliefs. The Bible says that while we are here, Satan is in control, so this is definitely not a place we would want to call a permanent home or a domicile:
"We know that we are of God, and the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one."
[1 John 5:19, Bible, NKJV]

"Again, the devil took Him [Jesus] up on an exceedingly high mountain, and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world and their glory. And he said to Him, "All these things I will give You if You will fall down and worship me. [Satan]"

Then Jesus said to him, "Away with you, Satan! For it is written, 'You shall worship the LORD your God, and Him only you shall serve.'"
"Then the devil left Him, and behold, angels came and ministered to Him."
[Matt. 4:8-11, Bible, NKJV]

"I [Jesus] will no longer talk much with you, for the ruler of this world [Satan] is coming, and he has nothing in Me. But that the world may know that I love the Father, and as the Father gave Me commandment, so I do. Arise, let us go from here."
[Jesus in John 14:30-31, Bible, NKJV]

Satan could not have offered the kingdoms of the world to Jesus and tempted Him with them unless he controlled them to begin with. Satan is in control while we are here. Only a fool or an atheist would intend to make a wicked earth controlled by Satan into a "permanent place of abode".

"He who loves his life will lose it, and he who hates his life in this world [on earth] will keep it for eternal life."
[John 12:25, Bible, NKJV]

Only a person who hates this life and the earth as they are and who doesn't want to make it a "permanent place of abode" or "domicile" can inherit eternal life.

"If you were of the world [had a permanent home here], the world would love its own. Yet because you [Christians] are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hates you [who are a "stranger" and a "foreigner"]."
[John 15:19, Bible, NKJV.

QUESTION: How can you be "chosen out of the world" as Jesus says and yet still have a domicile here?

"Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their trouble, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world [and the governm ents, laws, taxes, entanglements, and sin in the world]."
[James 1:27, Bible, NKJV]

"So we are always confident, knowing that while we are at home in the body [the physical body] we are absent from the Lord. For we walk by faith, not by sight. We are confident, yes, well pleased rather to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord [in the Kingdom of Heaven]."
[2 Cor. 5:6-8, Bible, NKJV]

Even Jesus Himself admitted that earth was not his "domicile" when He said:

"Then a certain scribe came and said to Him, "Teacher, I will follow You wherever You go." And Jesus said to him, "Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head."
[Matt. 8:19-20, Bible, NKJV]

When we become believers, we, like Jesus Himself, become God's "ambassadors" on a foreign mission from the Kingdom of Heaven according to 2 Cor. 5:20. Our house is a foreign embassy:

"Now then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God were pleading through us: we implore you on Christ’s behalf, be reconciled to God."
[2 Cor. 5:20, Bible, NKJV]

The Corpus Juris Secundum Legal Encyclopedia says that ambassadors have the domicile of those who they represent, which in the case of Christians is the Kingdom of Heaven.

PARTICULAR PERSONS
4. Public Officials and Employees; Members of the Armed Services
§33 Public Officials and Employees
Ambassadors, consuls, and other public officials residing abroad in governmental service do not generally acquire a domicile in the country where their official duties are performed, but retain their original domicile,” although such officials may acquire a domicile at their official residence, if they engage in business or commerce inconsistent with, or extraneous to, their public or diplomatic character.

Another interesting aspect of domicile explains why the Bible symbolically refers to believers as the "children of God". Below are examples:

"But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become children of God, to those who believe in His name"
[John 1:2, Bible, NKJV]

"The Spirit Himself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God" [Romans 8:16, Bible, NKJV]

"That is, those who are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God, but the children of the promise are counted as the seed."
[Romans 9:8, Bible, NKJV]

"Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed on us, that we should be called children of God!"
[1 John 3:1, Bible, NKJV]

"In this the children of God and the children of the devil are manifest: Whoever does not practice righteousness is not of God, nor is he who does not love his brother."
[1 John 3:10, Bible, NKJV]

"By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep His commandments."
[1 John 5:2, Bible, NKJV]

The Corpus Juris Secundum Legal Encyclopedia says that those who are children, dependents, minors, or of unsound mind assume the domicile of the sovereign who is their "caretaker". As long as we are called "children of God" and are dependent exclusively on Him, we assume His domicile, which is the Kingdom of God:

PARTICULAR PERSONS Infants
§20 In General

An infant, being non sui juris, cannot fix or change his domicile unless emancipated. A legitimate child's domicile usually follows that of the father. In case of separation or divorce of parents, the child has the domicile of the parent who has been awarded custody of the child.

The Bible treats the government as God's steward for truth and justice under God's laws. The passage below proves this, and it is not referring to ALL governments, but only those that are righteous, which are God's stewards, and who act in a way that is completely consistent and not in conflict with God's holy laws.

Submit to [Righteous] Government [and rebel against Unrighteous Government]

"Let every soul be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and the authorities that exist are appointed by God. Therefore whoever resists the authority resists the ordinance of God, and those who resist will bring judgment on themselves. For [righteous] rulers are not a terror to good works, but to evil. [However, unrighteous rulers ARE a terror to good works] Do you want to be unfraid of the [righteous] authority? Do what is good, and you will have praise from the same. For he [ONLY the righteous, not the unrighteous ruler] is God’s minister to you for good. But if you do evil, be afraid; for he does not bear the sword in vain; for he is God’s minister, an avenger to execute wrath on him who practices evil. Therefore you must be subject, not only because of wrath but also for conscience’ sake. For because of this you also pay taxes, for they [the righteous, and not unrighteous rulers] are God’s ministers attending continually to this very thing. Render therefore to all [those who are righteous and NOT unrighteous] their due: taxes to whom taxes are due, customs to whom customs, fear to whom fear, honor to whom honor."
[Rom. 13:1-7, Bible, NKJV]
The term "governing authorities" is synonymous with "God's ministers". The Bible says that the government is on Jesus' shoulders, and therefore God's shoulders, not any man:

"For God is the King of all the earth; Sing praises with understanding."
[Psalm 47:7, Bible, NKJV]

"For the LORD is our Judge, the LORD is our Lawgiver, the LORD is our King: He will save [and protect] us."
[Isaiah 33:22, Bible, NKJV]

For unto us a Child is born,
Unto us a Son is given;
And the government will be upon His shoulder.
And His name will be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace.
[Isaiah 9:6, Bible, NKJV]

The Lord cannot be King where Satan is allowed to rule, even temporarily. Those who are not God's ministers are NOT "governing authorities" but usurpers and representatives of Satan, not God. They are "children of Satan", not God.

"They have corrupted themselves;
They are not His children,
Because of their blemish:
A perverse and crooked generation."
[Deut. 32:5, Bible, NKJV]

When government ceases to be a "minister of God's justice" and rather becomes a competitor for pagan idol worship and obedience of the people, then God abandons the government and the result is the equivalent of a legal divorce. This is revealed in the following scripture, which describes those who pursue pagan gods and pagan governments that act like god as "playing the harlot". The phrase "invites you to eat of his sacrifice", in modern day terms, refers to those who receive socialist welfare in any form, most of which is PLUNDER STOLEN from people who became a human sacrifice to the pagan government:

The Covenant Renewed

And He said: "Behold, I make a covenant. Before all your people I will do marvels such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation; and all the people among whom you are shall see the work of the LORD. For it is an awesome thing that I will do with you. Observe what I command you this day. Behold, I am driving out from before you the Amorite and the Canaanite and the Hittite and the Perizzite and the Hivite and the Jebusite.

Take heed to yourself, lest you make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land where you are going, lest it be a snare in your midst. But you shall destroy their altars, break their sacred pillars, and cut down their wooden images (for you shall worship no other god, for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God), lest you make a covenant [engage in a franchise, contract, or agreement] with the inhabitants of the land, and they play the harlot with their gods and make sacrifice to their gods, and one of them invites you and you eat of his sacrifice, and you take of his daughters for your sons, and his daughters play the harlot with their gods and make your sons play the harlot with their gods.
[Exodus 34:10-16, Bible, NKJV]

"No outsider [person who has not taken the Mark of the Beast] shall eat the holy offering [revenues collected from involuntary human sacrifices to the pagan cult by the IRS or the SSA]: one who dwells with the priest [judges are the priests of the civil religion], or a hired servant [licensed attorneys, who are the deacons of the church appointed by the chief priests at the Supreme Court], shall not eat the holy thing. But if the priest [the judge] buys a person with his money [his court order to induct a new cult member by compelling participation in excise taxable activities such as a “trade or business”], he may eat it; and one who is born in his [court] house [or is a fellow “public officer” of the government engaged in a “trade or business”] may eat his food." [Lev. 22:10-11, Bible, NKJV]

"He who sacrifices to any god, except to the LORD only, he shall be utterly destroyed."
[Exodus 22:20, Bible, NKJV]

"They shall no more offer their sacrifices to demons, after whom they have played the harlot. This shall be a statute forever for them throughout their generations."
[Lev. 17:7, Bible, NKJV]
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The result of the divorce of a righteous God from a Pagan government that has become a child of Satan and His competitor for the worship of the people is that God "hides his face", as the Bible says:

"And I will surely hide My face in that day because of all the evil which they have done, in that they have turned to other gods.”
[Deut. 31:18, Bible, NKJV]

"I will hide My face from them, I will see what their end will be, For they are a perverse generation, Children in whom is no faith."
[Deut. 32:20, Bible, NKJV]

"Then My anger shall be aroused against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will hide My face from them, and they shall bedevoured. And many evils and troubles shall befall them, so that they will say in that day, 'Have not these evils come upon us because our God is not among us?'"
[Deut. 31:17, Bible, NKJV]

Those who follow pagan governments rather than God after the "divorce" become the children of Satan, not God and are practicing idolatry. These people have misread Romans 13 and made government into a pagan substitute for God's protection and adopt the government as their new caretaker, and thereby shift their effective domicile to the government as its dependents and "children". This is especially true when the government becomes socialist, abuses its power to tax as a means of wealth transfer, and pays any type of social welfare to the people. At that point, the people become "dependents" and assume the domicile of their caretaker. One insightful congressman said the following of this dilemma during the debates over the original Social Security Act:

"Mr. Logan: "...Natural laws can not be created, repealed, or modified by legislation. Congress should know there are many things which it can not do..."

"It is now proposed to make the Federal Government the guardian of its citizens. If that should be done, the Nation soon must perish. There can only be a free nation when the people themselves are free and administer the government which they have set up to protect their rights. Where the general government must provide work, and incidentally food and clothing for its citizens, freedom and individuality will be destroyed and eventually the citizens will become serfs to the general government..."

Any attempt to think about citizenship, domicile, and residence any way other than the way it is described here amounts to a devious and deceptive attempt by the Pharisees [lawyers] to use the "traditions of men" to entrap Christians and churches and put them under government laws, control, taxes, and regulation, thereby violating the separation of powers doctrine. The Separation of Powers Doctrine as well as the Bible itself both require churches and Christians to be totally separate from government, man's laws, and control, taxation, and regulation by government. See sections 4.3.5 and 4.3.12 of this book for further details on the competition between "church" and "state" for the love and affections and allegiances of the people, and why separation of these two powers is absolutely essential.

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage [to the government or the income tax or the IRS or federal statutes that are not "positive law" and do not have jurisdiction over us]."

5.4.8.11 Domicile and civil jurisdiction

5.4.8.11.1 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 establishes that civil law is a voluntary franchise

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 establishes the basis for litigating in all CIVIL courts under ONLY the STATUTORY law.

W. PARTIES > Rule 17
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant: Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:
Conspicuously absent from the above federal civil rule are the two MOST important sources of law:

1. The USA Constitution.
2. The common law. The common law includes natural rights.

Why are these two sources of law NOT explicitly or expressly mentioned in the above civil rule as a source of jurisdiction or standing to sue in a federal CIVIL statutory court? Because these sources of law come from the constitution and are NOT “granted” or “created” by the government. Anything not CREATED by the government cannot be limited, regulated, or taxed. PRIVATE rights and PRIVATE property, for instance, are NOT “created” by government and instead are created and endowed by God, according to the Declaration of Independence:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. “

“Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, ‘life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;’ and to ‘secure,’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit [e.g. SOCIAL SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public “benefit”]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”

The Constitution or the common law therefore may be cited by ANYONE, including those not domiciled within the civil statutory jurisdiction of the civil court, so long as they were physically present on land protected by the Constitution within the district served by the court at the time they received an injury. Recall that the Constitution attaches to LAND, and not to your status as a statutory “citizen” or “resident”:

[Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

5.4.8.11.2 Two contexts for legal terms: CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY

[Confucius (551 BCE - 479 BCE) Chinese thinker and social philosopher]

It is absolutely crucial to understand that there are TWO contexts in which all legal statuses such as “citizen”, “resident”, and “alien” can be used:

1. Constitutional.
   1.1. Relates to one’s POLITICAL status.
   1.2. Relates to NATIONALITY and NOT DOMICILE.
   1.3. A CONSTITUTIONAL status is established ONLY by being either born or naturalized within the jurisdiction of the specific NATIONAL government that wrote the statute.

2. Statutory.
   2.1. Relates to one’s CIVIL or LEGAL status.
   2.2. Relates to DOMICILE and NOT NATIONALITY.
2.3. A STATUTORY status is established ONLY by voluntarily choosing a domicile within the jurisdiction of the specific government that wrote the statute.

It is CRUCIAL in EVERY interaction with any government to establish WHICH of these two contexts that every term they are using relates to, and ESPECIALLY on government forms. A failure to understand the status can literally mean the difference between SLAVERY and FREEDOM.

One can, for instance, be a “citizen” under CONSTITUTION and yet be an “alien” under STATUTORY law in relation to the federal government. This is the status of those who are born anywhere in America but who are domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union.

The purpose of providing a statutory definition of a legal "term" is to supersede and not enlarge the ordinary, common law, constitutional, or common meaning of a term. Geographical words of art include:

1. "State"
2. "United States"
3. "alien"
4. "citizen"
5. "resident"
6. "U.S. person"

The terms "State" and "United States" within the Constitution implies the constitutional states of the Union and excludes federal territory, statutory "States" (federal territories), or the statutory "United States" (the collection of all federal territory). This is an outcome of the separation of powers doctrine. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The U.S. Constitution creates a public trust which is the delegation of authority order that the U.S. Government uses to manage federal territory and property. That property includes franchises, such as the "trade or business" franchise. All statutory civil law it creates can and does regulate only THAT property and not the constitutional States, which are foreign, sovereign, and statutory "aliens" for the purposes of federal legislative jurisdiction.

It is very important to realize the consequences of this constitutional separation of powers between the states and national government. Some of these consequences include the following:

1. Statutory "States" as indicated in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and "States" in nearly all federal statutes are in fact federal territories and the definition does NOT include constitutional states of the Union.
2. The statutory "United States" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) includes federal territory and excludes any land within the exclusive jurisdiction of a constitutional state of the Union.
3. Terms on government forms assume the statutory context and NOT the constitutional context.
4. Domicile is the origin of civil legislative jurisdiction over human beings. This jurisdiction is called "in personam jurisdiction".
5. Since the separation of powers doctrine creates two separate jurisdictions that are legislatively "foreign" in relation to each other, then there are TWO types of political communities, two types of "citizens", and two types of jurisdictions exercised by the national government.

"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"

6. A human being domiciled in a state and born or naturalized anywhere in the Union is a statutory "alien" in relation to the national government and a non-citizen national pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452.
7. You can be a statutory "alien" pursuant to 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) and a constitutional or Fourteenth Amendment "Citizen" AT THE SAME TIME. Why? Because the Supreme Court ruled in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 653 (1945), that there are THREE different and mutually exclusive "United States", and therefore THREE types of "citizens of the United States". Here is an example:

“The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the [] except as he was a citizen of one of the states comprising the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories [STATUTORY citizens], though within the United States[], were not [CONSTITUTIONAL] citizens.

The "citizen of the United States" mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment is a constitutional "citizen of the United States", and the term "United States" in that context includes states of the Union and excludes federal territory. Hence, you would NOT be a "citizen of the United States" within any federal statute, because all such statutes define "United States" to mean federal territory and EXCLUDE states of the Union. For more details, see: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

8. Your job, if you say you are a "citizen of the United States" or "U.S. citizen" on a government form (a VERY DANGEROUS undertaking!) is to understand that all government forms presume the statutory and not constitutional context, and to ensure that you define precisely WHICH one of the three "United States" you are a "citizen" of, and do so in a way that excludes you from the civil jurisdiction of the national government because domiciled in a "foreign state". Both foreign countries and states of the Union are legislatively "foreign" and therefore "foreign states" in relation to the national government of the United States. The following form does that very carefully:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

9. Even the IRS says you CANNOT trust or rely on ANYTHING on any of their forms and publications. We cover this in our Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007. Hence, if you are compelled to fill out a government form, you have an OBLIGATION to ensure that you define all "words of art" used on the form in such a way that there is no room for presumption, no judicial or government discretion to "interpret" the form to their benefit, and no injury to your rights or status by filling out the government form. This includes attaching the following forms to all tax forms you submit:

9.1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

9.2. Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The following cite from U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark helps clarify distinction between the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts by admitting that there are TWO components that determine one’s “citizenship” status: NATIONALITY and DOMICILE.

In Udny v. Udny (1869) L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, the point decided was one of inheritance, depending upon the question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a British subject. Lord Chancellor Batherley said: "The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct from that of domicile." Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States, began by saying: "The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status." And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy—must depend,' he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural allegiance, may depend on different laws in different countries.' Pages 437, 460. He evidently used the word 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects.

So:
1. The Constitution is a POLITICAL and not a LEGAL document. It therefore determines your POLITICAL status rather than your LEGAL/STATUTORY status.

2. Nationality determines your POLITICAL STATUS and whether you are a "subject" of the country.

3. DOMICILE determines your CIVIL and LEGAL and STATUTORY status. It DOES NOT determine your POLITICAL status or nationality.

4. Being a constitutional "citizen" per the Fourteenth Amendment is associated with nationality, not domicile.

5. Allegiance is associated with nationality, not domicile. Allegiance is what makes one a "subject" of a country.

6. Your personal and municipal rights, meaning CONSTITUTIONAL rights, associate with your choice of legal domicile, not your nationality or what country you are a subject of or have allegiance to.

7. Being a statutory "citizen" is associated with domicile, not nationality, because it is associated with being an inhabitant RATHER than a "subject".

8. A statutory "alien" under most acts of Congress is a person with a foreign DOMICILE, not a foreign NATIONALITY. By "foreign", we mean:

   8.2. Domicile context: OUTSIDE of federal territory and the exclusive federal jurisdiction, and NOT outside the Constitutional United States (states of the Union).

Understanding the distinction between nationality and domicile, in turn is absolutely critical.

3. Nationality:

   3.1. Is a political status.

   3.2. Is defined by the Constitution, which is a political document.

   3.3. Is synonymous with being a “national” within statutory law.

   3.4. Is associated with a specific COUNTRY.

4. Domicile:

   4.1. Is a civil status.

   4.2. Is not even addressed in the constitution.

   4.3. Is defined by civil statutory law RATHER than the constitution.

   4.4. Is in NO WAY connected with one’s nationality.

   4.5. Is usually connected with the word “person”, “citizen”, “resident”, or “inhabitant” in statutory law.

   4.6. Is associated with a specific COUNTY and a STATE rather than a COUNTRY.

   4.7. Implies one is a “SUBJECT” of a SPECIFIC MUNICIPAL but not NATIONAL government.

Nationality and domicile, TOGETHER determine the POLITICAL AND CIVIL/LEGAL status of a human being respectively. These important distinctions are recognized in Black’s Law Dictionary:

   Nationality determines the political status of the individual, especially with reference to allegiance; while domicile determines his civil [statutory] status. Nationality arises either by birth or by naturalization.”

The U.S. Supreme Court also confirmed the above when they held the following. Note the key phrase “political jurisdiction”, which is NOT the same as legislative/statutory jurisdiction. One can have a political status of “citizen” under the constitution while NOT being a “citizen” under federal statutory law because not domiciled on federal territory. To have the status of “citizen” under federal statutory law, one must have a domicile on federal territory:

“This section [Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1] contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only—birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their natural, not singular, meaning states of the Union political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired."

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power..."
The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizen pays for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are indistinguishable.”

[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice in the last quote above that they referred to a foreign national born in another country as a “citizen”. THIS is the REAL “citizen” that judges and even tax withholding documents are really talking about, rather than the “national” described in the constitution. And also notice that they say in relation to DOMICILE/STATUTORY status the following "He owes the same obedience to the CIVIL laws", thus establishing that CIVIL law does not apply to those WITHOUT a DOMICILE.

Domicile and NOT nationality is what imputes a status under the tax code and a liability for tax. Tax liability is a civil liability that attaches to civil statutory law, which in turn attaches to the person through their choice of domicile. When you CHOOSE a domicile, you elect or nominate a protector, which in turn gives rise to an obligation to pay for the civil protection demanded. The method of providing that protection is the civil laws of the municipal (as in COUNTY) jurisdiction that you chose a domicile within.

Later versions of Black’s Law Dictionary attempt to cloud this important distinction between nationality and domicile in order to unlawfully and unconstitutionally expand federal power into the states of the Union and to give federal judges unnecessary and unwarranted discretion to kidnap people into their jurisdiction using false presumptions. They do this by trying to make you believe that domicile and nationality are equivalent, when they are EMPHATICALLY NOT. Here is an example:

“nationality – The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. This term is often used synonymously with citizenship.”

[Black’s Law Dictionary (8th ed. 2004)]

Federal courts regard the term “citizenship” as equivalent to domicile, meaning domicile on federal territory.

“The words “citizen” and citizenship,” however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L.&W.R.Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557.”

Hence:

4. The term “citizenship” is being stealthily used by government officials as a magic word that allows them to hide their presumptions about your status. Sometimes they use it to mean NATIONALITY, and sometimes they use it to mean DOMICILE.

5. The use of the word “citizenship” should therefore be AVOIDED when dealing with the government because its meaning is unclear and leaves too much discretion to judges and prosecutors.

6. When someone from any government uses the word “citizenship”, you should:
   6.1. Tell them NOT to use the word, and instead to use “nationality” or “domicile”.
   6.2. Ask them whether they mean “nationality” or “domicile”.
   6.3. Ask them WHICH political subdivision they imply a domicile within: federal territory or a constitutional state of the Union.

WARNING: A failure to either understand or correctly apply the above concepts can literally mean the difference between being a government pet in a legal cage called a franchise, and being a free and sovereign man or woman.

5.4.8.11.3 The TWO types of “residents”: FOREIGN NATIONAL under the common law or GOVERNMENT CONTRACTOR/PUBLIC OFFICER under a franchise

5.4.8.11.3.1 Introduction

As we pointed out earlier in section Error! Reference source not found., CONTEXT is extremely important in the legal field.

1. CONTEXT is extremely important in the legal field.
2. There are TWO main contexts in which legal terms can be used:
   2.1. CONSTITUTIONAL or common law: This law protects exclusively PRIVATE rights.
   2.2. STATUTORY: This law protects primarily PUBLIC rights and franchises.

CONTEXT therefore has a HUGE impact upon the meaning of the legal term “resident”. Because there are two main contexts in which “resident” can be used, then there are TWO possible meanings for the term.

1. CONSTITUTIONAL or COMMON LAW meaning: A foreign national domiciled within the jurisdiction of the municipal government to which the term “resident” relates. One can be a “resident” under constitutional state law and a “nonresident” in relation to the national government because their civil domicile is FOREIGN in relation to that government. This is a product of the separation of powers doctrine.
2. STATUTORY meaning: Means a man or woman who consented to a voluntary government civil franchise and by virtue of volunteering, REPRESENTS a public office exercised within and on behalf of the franchise. While on official duty on behalf of the government grantor of the franchise, they assume the effective domicile of the public office they are representing, which is the domicile of the government grantor, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). For instance, the effective domicile of a state franchisee is within the granting state and the domicile of a federal franchisee is within federal territory.

Most of the civil law passed by state and federal governments are civil franchises, such as Medicare, Social Security, driver licensing, marriage licensing, professional licensing, etc. All such franchises are actually administered as FEDERAL franchises, even by the state governments. Men and women domiciled within a constitutional state have a legislatively foreign domicile outside of federal territory and they are therefore treated as statutory but not constitutional “aliens” in relation to the national government. Once they volunteer for a franchise, they consent to represent a public officer within that civil franchisee and their civil statutory status changes from being an “alien” to being a “resident” in relation to federal territory and the national government.

The legal definition of “resident” within Black’s Law Dictionary tries to hint at the above complexities with the following deliberately confusing language:

Resident “Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State, together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant, one who resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App2d 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240.

Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. [Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F2d 1267, 1271]

Note the following critical statement in the above, admitting that sleight of hand is involved:

“Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. [Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F2d 1267, 1271]”

Within the above definition, the term “the State” can mean one of TWO things:

1. A PHYSICAL or GEOGRAPHICAL place. This is the meaning that ignorant people with no legal training would naturally PRESUME that it means.
2. A LEGAL place, meaning a LEGAL PRESENCE as a “person” within a legal fiction called a corporation. For instance, an OFFICER of a federal corporation becomes a “RESIDENT” within the corporation at the moment he or she volunteers for the position and thereby REPRESENTS the corporation. Once they volunteer, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says they become “residents” of the government grantor of the corporation, but only while REPRESENTING said corporation:

IV. PARTIES

Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant. Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
(2) for a corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and
(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and
(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

All federal corporations are “created” and “organized” under federal law and therefore are considered “residents” and “domestic” in relation to the national government.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(4) Domestic

The term “domestic” when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized in the United States or under the law of the United States or of any State unless, in the case of a partnership, the Secretary provides otherwise by regulations.

It is also important to emphasize that ALL governments are corporations as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

"Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."

Consequently, when one volunteers to become a public officer within a government corporation, then they acquire a "LEGAL PRESENCE" in the LEGAL AND NOT PHYSICAL PLACE called “United States” as an officer of the corporation. In effect, they are “assimilated” into the corporation as a legal “person” as a its representative.

Earlier versions of the Treasury Regulations reveal the operation of the SECOND method for creating “residents”, which is that of converting statutory aliens into statutory resident using government franchises:

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership.

The key statement in the above is that the status of “resident” does NOT derive from either nationality or domicile, but rather from whether one is engaged in the FRANCHISE ACTIVITY called a “trade or business”:

Incidentally, we were the first people we know of who discovered the above mechanisms and as soon as we exposed them on this website, the above regulation was quickly replaced with a temporary regulation to hide the truth. Scum bags!

The deliberately confusing and evasive definition of “resident” in Black’s Law Dictionary is trying to obfuscate or cover up the above process by inventing new terms called “the State”, which they then refuse to define because if they did, they would probably start the second American revolution and destroy the profitability of the government franchise scam that subsidizes the authors within the legal profession! They are like Judas: Selling the truth for 20 pieces of silver.

Finally, if you would like to know more about how VOLUNTARY participation in government franchises makes one a “resident”, see:

5.4.8.11.3.2 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 1: Opening a bank account

Let us give you a practical business example of this phenomenon in action whereby a person becomes a “resident” from a legal perspective by exercising their right to contract. You want to open a checking account at a bank. You go to the bank to open the account. The clerk presents you with an agreement that you must sign before you open the account. If you won’t sign the agreement, then the clerk will tell you that they can’t open an account for you. Before you sign the account agreement, the bank doesn’t know anything about you and you don’t have an account there, so you are the equivalent of an “alien”. An “alien” is someone the bank will not recognize or interact with or help. They can only lawfully help “customers”, not “aliens”. After you exercise your right to contract by signing the bank account agreement, then you now become a “resident” of the bank. You are a “resident” because:

1. You are a “thing” that they can now “identify” in their computer system and their records because you have an “account” there. They now know your name and “account number” and will recognize you when you walk in the door to ask for help.
2. You are the “person” described in their account agreement. Before you signed it, you were a “foreigner” not subject to it.
3. They issued you an ATM card and a PIN so you can control and manage your “account”. These things that they issued you are the “privileges” associated with being party to the account agreement. No one who is not party to such an agreement can avail themselves of such “privileges”.
4. The account agreement gives you the “privilege” to demand “services” from the bank of one kind or another. The legal requirement for the bank to perform these “services” creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on their part in doing what you want them to do. In effect, you have “hired” them to perform a “service” that you want and need.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
5. The account agreement gives the bank the legal right to demand certain behaviors out of you of one kind or another. For instance, you must pay all account fees and not overdraw your account and maintain a certain minimum balance. The legal requirement to perform these behaviors creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on your part in respect to the bank.

6. The legal obligations created by the account agreement give the two parties to it legal jurisdiction over each other defined by the agreement or contract itself. The contract fixes the legal relations between the parties. If either party violates the agreement, then the other party has legal recourse to sue for exceeding the bounds of the “contractual agency” created by the agreement. Any litigation that results must be undertaken consistent with what the agreement authorizes and in a mode or “forum” (e.g. court) that the agreement specifies.

5.4.8.11.3.3 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 2: Creation of the “resident” under a government civil franchise

When two parties execute a franchise agreement or contract between them, they are engaging in “commerce”. The practical consequences of the franchise agreement are the following:

1. The main source of jurisdiction for the government is over commerce.
2. The mutual consideration passing between the parties provides the nexus for government jurisdiction over the transaction.
3. If the exchange involves a government franchise offered by the national government:
   3.1. An “alienation” of private rights has occurred. This alienation:
      3.1.1. Turns formerly private rights into public rights.
      3.1.2. Accomplishes the equivalent of a “donation” of private property to a public use, public purpose, and public office in order to procure the “benefits” of the franchise by the former owner of the property.
   3.2. Parties to the franchise agreement cannot engage in a franchise without implicitly surrendering governance over disputes to the government granting the franchise. In that sense, their effective domicile shifts to the location of the seat of the government granting the franchise.
   3.3. The parties to the franchise agreement mutually and implicitly surrender their sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2), which says that commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States” constitutes constructive consent to be sued in the courts of the United States. This is discussed in more detail in the previous section.

Another surprising result of engaging in franchises and public “benefits” that most people overlook is that the commerce it represents, in fact, can have the practical effect of making an “alien” or “nonresident” party into a “resident” for the purposes of statutory jurisdiction. Here is the proof:

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.'" Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)).

Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim. The parties agree that only specific jurisdiction is at issue in this case.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

(1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws.
(2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant’s forum-related activities; and
(3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

We have typically treated "purposeful availment" somewhat differently in tort and contract cases. In tort cases, we typically inquire whether a defendant "purposefully directed[s] his activities" at the forum state, applying an "effects" test that focuses on the forum in which the defendant's actions were felt, whether or not the actions

Legal treatises on domicile also confirm that those who are “wards” or “dependents” of the state or the government assume the same domicile or “residence” as their care giver. The practical effect of this is that by participating in government franchises, we become “wards” of the government in receipt of welfare payments such as Social Security, Medicare, etc. As “wards” under “guardianship” of the government, we assume the same domicile as the government who is paying U.S. the “benefits”, which means the District of Columbia. Our domicile is whatever the government, meaning the “court” wants it to be for their convenience:

PARTICULAR PERSONS
§ 24. Wards

While it appears that an infant ward’s domicile or residence ordinarily follows that of the guardian, it does not necessarily do so, as so a guardian has been held to have no power to control an infant’s domicile as against her mother. Where a guardian is permitted to remove the child to a new location, the child will not be held to have acquired a new domicile if the guardian’s authority does not extend to fixing the child’s domicile.

Domicile of a child who is a ward of the court is the location of the court.

Since a ward is not sui juris, he cannot change his domicile by removal, nor does the removal of the ward to another state or county by relatives or friends, affect his domicile. Absent an express indication by the court, the authority of one having temporary control of a child to fix the child’s domicile is ascertained by interpreting the court’s orders.

This change in domicile of those who participate in government franchises and thereby become “wards” of the government is also consistent with the U.S. Supreme Court’s view of the government’s relationship to those who participate in government franchises. It calls the government a “parens patriae” in relation to them:

“The proposition is that the United States, as the grantor of the franchises of the company i.e., corporation, in this case, the author of its charter, and the donor of lands, rights, and privileges of immense value, and as parens patriae, is a trustee, invested with power to enforce the proper use of the property and franchises granted for the benefit of the public.”

[U.S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 98 U.S. 569 (1878)]

PARENS PATRIAE. Father of his country; parent of the country. In England, the king. In the United States, the state, as a sovereign—referring to the sovereign power of guardianship over persons under disability. In re Turner, 94 Kan. 115. 145 P. 871, 872, Ann.Cas.1918E, 1022; such as minors, and insane and incompetent persons; McIntosh v. Dill, 86 Okl. 1, 205 P. 917, 925.

One Congressman during the debates over the proposal of the Social Security Act in 1933 criticized the very adverse affects of the franchise upon people’s rights, including that upon the domicile of those who participate, when he said:

Mr. Logan: “...Natural laws cannot be created, repealed, or modified by legislation. Congress should know there are many things which it cannot do...”

"It is now proposed to make the Federal Government the guardian of its citizens. If that should be done, the Nation soon must perish. There can only be a free nation when the people themselves are free and administer the government which they have set up to protect their rights. Where the general government must provide work, and incidentally food and clothing for its citizens, freedom and individuality will be destroyed and eventually the citizens will become serfs to the general government."

The Internal Revenue Code franchise agreement itself contains provisions which recognize this change in effective domicile to the District of Columbia within 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39).

(39) Persons residing outside United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing ["domiciled"] in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or
(B) enforcement of summons.

$d$ Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Since your Constitutional right to contract is unlimited, then you can have as many temporary and transient “residences” as you like, but you can have only one legal “domicile”, because your allegiance must be undivided or you will have a conflict of interest and allegiance.

"No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon."

Now do you understand the reasoning behind the following maxim of law? You become a “subject” and a “resident” under the jurisdiction of a government’s civil law by demanding its protection! If you want to “fire” the government as your “protector”, you MUST quit demanding anything from it by filling out government forms or participating in its franchises:

Protectio trahit subjectionem, subjectio projectionem.
Protection draws to it subjection, subjection, protection. Co. Litt. 65.
[Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856; SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

Remember, “resident” is a combination of two word roots: “res”, which is legally defined as a “thing”, and “ident”, which stands for “identified”.

Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By “res,” according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to "persona," which is regarded as a subject of rights. "Res," therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.

Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re Riggle’s Will, 11 A.D.2d. 51 205 N.Y.S.2d. 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-mater, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is "the res"; and proceedings of this class are said to be in rem. (See In personam, In Rem.) "Res" may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, it entitled "In re ______".

The "object, subject matter, or status" they are talking about above is the ALL CAPS incarnation of your legal birth name and the government-issued number, usually an SSN, that is associated with it. Those two things constitute the "straw man" or "trust" or "res" which you implicitly agree to represent at the time you sign up for any franchise, benefit, or "public right". When the government attacks someone for a tax liability or a debt, they don't attack you as a private person, but rather the collection of rights that attach to the ALL CAPS trust name and associated Social Security Number trust. They start by placing a lien on the number, which actually is THEIR number and not YOURS. That number associates PRIVATE property with PUBLIC TRUST property. Merriam-Webster's Dictionary definition 5(b) for "Trust" is "office":

"Trust: 5 a (1) : a charge or duty imposed in faith or confidence or as a condition of some relationship
(2) : something committed or entrusted to one to be used or cared for in the interest of another b : responsible charge or office e : CARE, CUSTODY <the child committed to her trust."
[Merriam-Webster's 11th Collegiate Dictionary]

20 CFR §422.103(d) says the number is THEIR property. They can lien their property, which is public property in your temporary use and custody as a "trustee" of the "public trust". Everything that number is connected to acts as private property donated temporarily to a public use to procure the "benefits" of the franchise. It is otherwise illegal to mix public property, such as the Social Security Number, with private property, because that would constitute illegal and criminal

"Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, 'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness'; and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property for income which a man has honestly acquired it retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.
[Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the practical effect of creating the trust and placing its “residence” or “domicile” within the jurisdiction the specific government or "state" granting the franchise:

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties [e.g., CONTRACTUAL DUTIES!!] of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The implication is that you cannot be sovereign if either you or the entities you voluntarily represent have a “domicile” or “residence” in any man-made government or in any place other than Heaven or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. If you choose a “domicile” or “residence” any place on earth, then you become a “subject” in relation to that place and voluntarily forfeit your sovereignty. This IS NOT the status you want to have! A “resident” by definition MUST be within the legislative jurisdiction of the government, because the government cannot lawfully write laws that will allow them to recognize or act upon anything that is NOT within their legislative jurisdiction.

All law is prima facie territorial in nature, and can act only upon the territory under the exclusive control of the government or upon its franchises, contracts, and real and chattel property, which are “property” under its management and control pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. The only lawful way that governmental laws can reach beyond the territory of the sovereign who controls them is through explicit, informed, mutual consent of the individual parties involved, and this field of law is called “private law”.

"Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasoning on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory; secondly, "that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural born subjects or others." The learned judge then adds: "From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and policy, and upon its own express or tacit consent." Story on Conflict of Laws §23."

5.4.8.11.4  “Domicile” and “residence” compared

Black’s Law Dictionary helps define the distinctions between residence and domicile:

RESIDENCE. A factual place of abode. Living in a particular locality. Reese v. Reese, 179 Misc. 665, 40 N.Y.S.2d. 468, 472; Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 175 Or. 585, 155 P.2d. 293, 295. It requires only bodily presence as an inhabitant of a place. In re Campbell's Guardianship, 216 Minn. 113, 11 N.W.2d. 786, 789.

As "domicile" and "residence" are usually in the same place, they are frequently used as if they had the same meaning, but they are not identical terms, for a person may have two places of residence, as in the city and country, but only one domicile. Residence means living in a particular locality, but domicile means living in that locality with intent to make it a fixed and permanent home. Residence simply requires bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place, while domicile requires bodily presence In that place and also an intention to make it one's domicile. In re Riley's Will, 266 N.Y.S. 209, 148 Misc. 585.

The above definition deliberately clouds the issue of:

1. Whether residence has consent as a prerequisite or not. We know based on previous analysis that domicile does.
2. What citizenship, domicile, and nationality status are associated with “residence” in each context.

When we look up the definitions for "abode" and “inhabitant” as used in the definition of “residence”, they all connect back to domicile and therefore also have consent as a prerequisite.

1. Definition “inhabitant”:

“Inhabitant. One who resides actually and permanently in a given place, and has his domicile there. Ex parte Shaw, 145 U.S. 444, 12 S.Ct. 935, 36 L.Ed. 768. The words "inhabitant," "citizen," and "resident," as employed in different constitutions to define the qualifications of electors, means substantially the same thing; and, in general, one is an inhabitant, resident, or citizen at the place where he has his domicile or home. But the terms "resident" and "inhabitant" have also been held not synonymous, the latter implying a more fixed and permanent abode than the former, and importing privileges and duties to which a mere resident would not be subject. A corporation can be an inhabitant only in the state of its incorporation. Sperry Products v. Association of American Railroads, C.C.A.N.Y., 132 F.2d. 408, 411. See also Domicile; Residence.”

2. Definition of “abode”:

See Domicile; Residence. General abode. See Residence.”

So to say that a “residence” is “A factual place of abode” in the definition of “residence” means one’s CHOSEN place of domicile. And to say that “It requires only bodily presence as an inhabitant of a place” in the definition of “residence” ALSO implies domicile and therefore requires consent, because an “inhabitant” is someone who is “domiciled” in a place.

The following authorities clarify that “residence”, and especially in taxing statutes, is usually associated with CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY alienage or “alien” status and excludes those who are nationals of the country and therefore. Those who are STATUTORY non-citizen nationals of a country by virtue of a domicile OUTSIDE the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government are STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL aliens in relation to that national government:

The reasons for not allowing to other aliens exemption from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found were stated as follows: When private individuals of one nation states of the Unions are “nations” under the law of nations spread themselves through another as business or caprice may direct, mingling indiscriminately with the inhabitants of that other, or when merchant vessels enter for the purposes of trade, it would be obviously inconvenient and dangerous to society, and would subject the laws to continual infrack, and the government to degradation, if such individuals or merchants did not owe temporary and local allegiance, and were not amenable to the jurisdiction of the country. Nor can the foreign sovereign have any motive for wishing such exemption. His subjects thus passing into foreign countries are not employed by him, nor are they engaged in national pursuits. Consequently, there are powerful motives for not exempting persons of this description from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found, and no one motive for requiring it. The implied license, therefore, under which they enter, can never be construed to grant such exemption.7 Cranch, 144.

In short, the judgment in the case of The Exchange declared, as incontrovertible principles, that the jurisdiction of every nation within its own territory is exclusive and absolute, and is susceptible of no limitation not imposed by the nation itself; that all exceptions to its full and absolute territorial jurisdiction must be traced up to its own consent, express or implied; that upon its consent to cede, or to waive the exercise of, a part of its territorial jurisdiction, rest the exemptions from that jurisdiction of foreign sovereigns or their armies entering its territory with its permission, and of their foreign ministers and public ships of war; and that the implied license, under which private individuals of another nation enter the territory and mingle indiscriminately with its inhabitants, for purposes of business or pleasure, can never be construed to grant them an exemption from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found. See, also, Carlisle v. U.S. (1872) 16 Wall. 147, 155; Radich v. Hutchins (1877) 95 U.S. 210; Wildenhus Case (1887) 120 U.S. 1, 7 Sup.Ct. 385; Chae Chan Ping v. U.S. (1889) 130 U.S. 581, 603, 604, 9 Sup.Ct. 623; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898).

Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.7 The Law of Nations, Vattel, Book 1, Chapter 19, Section 213, p. 87]

We wish to clarify that those who are domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY “State” relative to federal law and who were born somewhere within the country where the “State” is located are all the following in relation to the national government. This status, by the way, is the status of the AVERAGE American:

1. “Domiciled” but not “resident” within federal STATUTORY law.
2. Have no “residence” under federal STATUTORY law.
4. STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL “aliens”. You must be born in a foreign country to be a CONSTITUTIONAL “alien”.
5. Domestic “nationals”.

It therefore appears to us that the only occasion where “domicile” or “residence” are NOT equivalent is in the case of those who are constitutional but not statutory aliens of the place they are in. Otherwise, they are equivalent. The implication is that constitutional aliens do not need to consent to the civil laws of the place they are in because they are “privileged”, where as nationals born there do. This appears to violate the notion of equal protection, which may explain why the legal dictionary was so terse in their definition of residence: because they don’t want to admit that courts routinely treat people unequally and in violation of the requirement for equal protection.

Below is the ONLY definition of “residence” found anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code. This definition is entirely consistent with the above. The definition does not begin with qualifying language such as “for the purposes of this section” or “for the purposes of this chapter”. Therefore, it is a universal definition that applies throughout the Internal Revenue Code and Treasury Regulations. Note also that the definition is provided ONLY in the context of an “alien”. Therefore, “citizens” or “nationals” cannot have a “residence”. This is VERY important and is completely consistent with the fact that the only kind of “resident” defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A)) is an "alien":

The California Election Code, section 349 further clarifies the distinctions between “domicile” and “residence” as follow:
349. (a) "Residence" for voting purposes means a person's domicile.

(b) The domicile of a person is that place in which his or her habitation is fixed, wherein the person has the intention of remaining, and to which, whenever he or she is absent, the person has the intention of returning. At a given time, a person may have only one domicile.

(c) The residence of a person is that place in which the person's habitation is fixed for some period of time, but wherein he or she does not have the intention of remaining. At a given time, a person may have more than one residence.

The above definition is consistent with the analysis earlier in this section, but don't make the false assumption that the above definitions apply within income tax codes, because they DON'T. Only statutory "citizens" who have a domicile within the forum can be the subject of the above statute relating to voting and elections, while the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A applies exclusively to privileged aliens who have a domicile or tax home on federal territory: two COMPLETELY different audiences of people, for which the terms are NOT interchangeable. A "residence" in the I.R.C. is the temporary abode of a privileged alien, while a "residence" in the election code is the temporary abode of a non-privileged Sovereign American National. The worst mistake that you can make as a person born in your country is to believe or think that laws written only for "aliens" or "resident aliens" apply to you. The only types of persons the federal government can write laws for in a state of the Union, in fact, are aliens and not those born there:

In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 609 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "plenary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden." Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over" the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909).

[James Madison, The Federalist, No. 46.]

If you are born in a state of the Union and have a domicile there and not on federal territory, federal laws CANNOT and DO NOT apply to you. The only exception is if you contract away your rights and sovereignty by pursuing a federal government benefit, such as Social Security, Medicare, federal employment, etc. Otherwise, We the People are Sovereign over their public servants:

"The ultimate authority ... resides in the people alone."

[James Madison, The Federalist, No. 46.]

"Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property.

"And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions, are mutually obligatory."

[Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]

"While sovereign powers are delegated to ... the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people..."

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

"There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States .... In this country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."

[Juliiard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

"In the United States, sovereignty resides in the people who act through the organs established by the Constitution. [cites omitted]. The Congress as the instrumentality of sovereignty is endowed with certain powers to be exerted on behalf of the people in the manner and with the effect the Constitution ordains. The Congress cannot invoke the sovereign power of the people to override their will as thus declared."

5.4.8.11.5 Legal presumptions about domicile

It is important also to recognize that state and federal law often establishes certain rebuttable “presumptions” about one’s “residence” as an “alien”/“resident”. Below is an example from the Arizona Revised Statutes:

Arizona Revised Statutes
Title 43: Taxation of Income
Section 43-104 Definitions

19. “Resident” includes:

(a) Every individual who is in this state for other than a temporary or transitory purpose.

(b) Every individual who is domiciled in this state and who is outside the state for a temporary or transitory purpose. Any individual who is a resident of this state continues to be a resident even though temporarily absent from the state.

(c) Every individual who spends in the aggregate more than nine months of the taxable year within this state shall be presumed to be a resident. The presumption may be overcome by competent evidence that the individual is in the state for a temporary or transitory purpose.

The above presumption is rebuttable, and the way to rebut it is to make our intentions known: “This right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration.”

[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

How do we make our “intentions” known to the protector we are nominating?:

1. By sending the following form according to the instructions:

   Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001

   [http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm]

2. By sending the state a written notification of domicile, or a Department of Motor Vehicles change of address form. Most change of address forms have a block for indicating one’s “residence”. Line out the word “residence” and replace it with “domicile” or else you will establish yourself as a privileged alien.

3. Whenever we write a physical address on any especially government or financial institution form, next to the address we should write "This is NOT my domicile." This is a VERY important habit to get into that will avoid all false presumptions about your legal domicile.

4. By revoking our voter registration.

We can also encourage other false presumptions by the government relating to our legal domicile based on the words we use to describe ourself. For instance, if we describe ourself as either a “citizen” or a “resident” or “inhabitant” on any government form, then we are declaring ourself to be a “domiciliary” in respect to the government who is accepting the form. Otherwise, we would be a “transient foreigner” outside of the jurisdiction of that government. This is further explained in the following two articles:

1. You’re not a “citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code:

   [http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/NotACitizenUnderIRC.htm]

2. You’re not a “resident” under the Internal Revenue Code:

   [http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/Resident.htm]

Within federal law, persons who are “citizens”, “residents”, or “inhabitants” are described as:

   [5 U.S.C. §552(a)(2) Records maintained on individuals]
The term "individual" means a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence ["resident"]:

The term "United States person" means -
(A) a citizen or resident of the United States,
(B) a domestic partnership,
(C) a domestic corporation,
(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and
(E) any trust if-
(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and
(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

• "domestic". Both "domicile" and "domestic" have the root "dom" as their source. Both imply the same thing. Within the Internal Revenue Code, "domestic" is defined as follows:

The term "domestic" when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized in the United States or under the law of the United States or of any State unless, in the case of a partnership, the Secretary provides otherwise by regulations.

Therefore, "domestic" means "subject to the laws of the United States". Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 17(b), you cannot be "subject" to the laws without having a domicile in the territory where those laws apply.

Those who are "nonresident aliens", "nontaxpayers" and "transient foreigners" therefore cannot declare themselves as being either "citizens", "residents", "inhabitants", "U.S. persons", "individuals", or "domestic" on any federal government form, or they forfeit their status and become "taxpayers", "domiciliaries", and "subjects" and tenants living on the king's land. For an important example of how the above concept applies, examine the IRS Form W-8BEN:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormW8ben.pdf

Block 3 is used by the applicant to declare both the entity type AND their legal domicile as well. The declaration of "domicile" is "hidden" in the word "individual". Notice there is no block on the form for either "human being" or "transient foreigner". The only block a human being can fill out is "individual". 5 U.S.C. §552(a)(2) identifies an "individual" as either a "citizen" or a "resident", and a person who is a nonresident alien cannot be either. Therefore, the form essentially coerces the applicant into committing perjury by not providing an option to accurately describe themselves, such as a box for "transient foreigner" or "human being". This defect is remedied in the amended version of the form available below, which adds to Block 3 an option called "transient foreigner":

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormW8BENAmendeds.pdf

The regulations relating to "aliens" also establish the following presumptions:

1. All "aliens" are presumed to be "nonresident aliens" but this may be overcome upon presentation of proof:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART I—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.871-4

(a) Rules of evidence. The following rules of evidence shall govern in determining whether or not an alien within the United States has acquired residence therein for purposes of the income tax.

(b) Nonresidence presumed. An alien by reason of his alienage, is presumed to be a nonresident alien.

(c) Presumption rebutted—

(1) Departing alien. In the case of an alien who presents himself for determination of tax liability before departure from the United States, the presumption as to the alien’s nonresidence may be overcome by proof—

2. An “alien” who has acquired permanent residence retains that residence until he physically departs from the “United States”, which is defined as federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and is not expressly expanded anywhere else in the I.R.C. to include any other place. The purpose for this presumption is to perpetuate the jurisdiction to tax aliens:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART I—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.871-5 - Loss of residence by an alien.

An alien who has acquired residence in the United States retains his status as a resident until he abandons the same and actually departs from the United States. An intention to change his residence does not change his status as a resident alien to that of a nonresident alien. Thus, an alien who has acquired a residence in the United States is taxable as a resident for the remainder of his stay in the United States.

If you are a “national” but not “citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1452, don’t let the above concern you, because you are not an “alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), but rather an “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).

5.4.8.11.6  Effect of domicile on citizenship and synonyms for domicile

Now let’s summarize what we have just learned so far to show graphically the effect that one’s choice of domicile has on their citizenship status. Below are some authorities upon which we will base our summary and analysis.

"The term ‘citizen’, as used in the Judiciary Act with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, is substantially synonymous with the term ‘domicile’. Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 2 Cir., 250 F. 554, 557."

We will now present a table based on the above consistent with the entire content of the document which you can use for all future reference. The term “Domestic National” in the table below refers to a person born in any state of the Union, or in a territory or possession of the United States:

NOTES:

1. “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 7701(a)(39), and 7408(d), and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). It does not include any portion of a Constituational state of the Union.
2. The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.
3. American nationals who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). See sections 4.11.2 earlier for details.
4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.
6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All “taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )(3), 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory “U.S. citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals” unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax treaty.

Based on the above table, we can see that when a person within any government identifies you as a “citizen”, they presuppose that you maintain a “domicile” within their jurisdiction. The same thing goes for the term “inhabitant”, which also describes a person with a domicile within the jurisdiction of the local government where he lives. Note the use of the phrase “reside actually and permanently in a given place and has a domicile there” in the definition of inhabitant.

"Inhabitant. One who reside actually and permanently in a given place, and has his domicile there. Ex parte Shaw, 145 U.S. 444, 12 S.Ct. 935, 36 L.Ed. 786.

The words "inhabitant," "citizen," and "resident," as employed in different constitutions to define the qualifications of electors, means substantially the same thing; and, in general, one is an inhabitant, resident, or citizen at the place where he has his domicile or home. But the terms "resident" and "inhabitant" have also been held not synonymous, the latter implying a more fixed and permanent abode than the former, and importing privileges and duties to which a mere resident would not be subject. A corporation can be an inhabitant only in the state of its incorporation. Sperry Products v. Association of American Railroads, C.C.A.N.Y., 132 F.2d. 408, 411. See also Domicile; Residence."

The legal dictionary is careful to disguise the requirement for “domicile” in their definition of “resident”. To admit that domicile was a prerequisite for being a “resident”, they would open the door for a mass exodus of the tax system by most people, so they beat around the bush. For instance, here is the definition of “resident” from Black’s Law Dictionary:

"Resident. "Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240 Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

The Law of Nations, which is mentioned in Article 1, Section 8 of our Constitution and was used by the Founding Fathers to write the Constitution, is much more clear in its definition of “resident”, and does essentially admit a requirement for “domicile” in order for an “alien” to be classified as a “resident”:

"Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status, for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children."

You can read the above yourself at:

Since the only definition of "resident" found anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code or the Treasury Regulations is that of a "resident alien", found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), then we:

1. Are not "residents" because we are not “aliens” and do not have a “domicile” in the “United States” (federal territory). Therefore, we do not have a “residence”.
2. Do not have a "residence", because only "aliens" can have a "residence" under 26 CFR §1.871-2(a).
3. Are "nonresident aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)
5. Are "transient foreigners":

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."

If you want to read more about this “resident” scam, consult section 4.10 of this book earlier.

5.4.8.11.7 Effect of domicile on CIVIL STATUTORY “status”
We have already established that civil law attaches to one’s VOLUNTARY choice of civil domicile. Civil law, in turn, enforces and thereby delivers certain “privileges” against those who are subject to it. In that sense, the civil law acts as a voluntary franchise or “protection franchise” that is only enforceable against those who voluntarily consent to avail themselves of its “benefits” or “protections”. Those who voluntarily and consensually avail themselves of such “benefits” and who are therefore SUBJECT to the “protection franchise” called domicile, in turn, are treated as public officers within the government under federal law, as is exhaustively established in the following memorandum:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The key thing to understand about all franchises is that the Congressionally created privileges or “public rights” they enforce attach to specific STATUSES under them. An example of such statuses include:

1. “Person” or “individual”.
2. “Driver” under the vehicle code of your state.
3. “Spouse” under the family code of your state.
5. “Citizen”; “resident”, or “inhabitant” under the civil laws of your state.

The above statuses are the very SAME “statuses” you find on ALL government forms and applications, such as voter registrations, drivers’ license applications, marriage license applications, etc. The purpose of filling out all such applications is to CONTRACT to PROCURE the status indicated on the form and have it RECOGNIZED by the government grantor who created the privileges you are pursuing under the civil law franchises that implement the form or application. The ONLY way to AVOID contracting into the franchise if you are FORCED to fill out such forms is to:

1. Define all terms on the form in a MANDATORY attachment so as to EXCLUDE those found in any government law. Write above your signature the following:

   "Not valid, false, fraudulent, and perjurious unless accompanied by the SIGNED attachment entitled ________, consisting of ___ pages."

2. Indicate "All rights reserved, UCC-1-308" near the signature line on the application.
3. Indicate "Non assumpsit" on the application, or scribble it as your signature.
4. Indicate "duress" on the form.
5. Resubmit the form after the fact either in person or by mail fixing the application to indicate duress and withdraw your consent.
6. Ask the government accepting the application to indicate that you are not qualified because you do not consent and consent is mandatory. Then show that denial to the person who is trying to FORCE you to apply.
7. Submit a criminal complaint against the party instituting the duress to get you to apply.
8. Notify the person instituting the unlawful duress that they are violating your rights and demand that they retract their demand for you to apply for something.

Below is an authority proving this phenomenon as explained by the U.S. Supreme Court:

In Udny v. Udny (1869) L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, the point decided was one of inheritance, depending upon the question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: ‘The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct from that of domicile.’ Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States, began by saying: ‘The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status.’ And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy—must depend,' he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural allegiance,—may depend on different laws in different countries.'

Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects.

The protections of the Constitution and the common law, on the other hand, attach NOT to your STATUTORY status, but to the LAND you stand on at the time you receive an injury from either the GOVERNMENT or a PRIVATE human being, respectively:

"It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure, and not the status of the people who live in it."

[Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

The thing that we wish to emphasize about this important subject are the following VERY IMPORTANT facts:

1. Your STATUS under the civil STATUTORY law is exclusively determined by the exercise of your PRIVATE, UNALIENABLE right to both contract and associate, which are protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.
2. The highest exercise of your right to sovereignty is the right to determine and enforce the STATUS you have CONSENSUALLY and VOLUNTARILY acquired under the civil laws of the community you are in.
3. Anyone who tries to associate a CIVIL statutory status with you absent your DEMONSTRATED, EXPRESS, WRITTEN consent is:
   3.1. Violating due process of law.
   3.2. STEALING property or rights to property from you. The “rights” or “public rights” that attach to the status are the measure of WHAT is being “stolen”.
   3.3. Exercising eminent domain without compensation against otherwise PRIVATE property in violation of the state constitution. The property subject to the eminent domain are all the rights that attach to the status they are FORCING upon you. YOU and ONLY YOU have the right to determine the compensation you are willing to accept in exchange for your private rights and private property.
   3.4. Compelling you to contract with the government that created the franchise status, because all franchises are contracts.
   3.5. Kidnapping your legal identity and moving it to a foreign state, if the STATUS they impute to you arises under the laws of a foreign state. This, in turn is an act of INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §2331(1)(B)(iii).
4. All de jure government civil law is TERRITORIAL in nature and attaches ONLY to the territory upon which they have EXCLUSIVE or GENERAL jurisdiction. It does NOT attach and CANNOT attach to places where they have only SUBJECT matter jurisdiction, such as in states of the Union.

"It is a well established principle of law that all federal regulation applies only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States unless a contrary intent appears."

[Foley Brothers, Inc. v. Filardo, 336 U.S. 281 (1949)]

"The laws of Congress in respect to those matters [outside of Constitutionally delegated powers] do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government."

[Caha v. U.S., 152 U.S. 211 (1894)]

"There is a canon of legislative construction which teaches Congress that, unless a contrary intent appears [legislation] is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States."

[U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222.]

5. The prerequisite to having ANY statutory STATUS under the civil law of any de jure government is a DOMICILE within the EXCLUSIVE jurisdiction of the that specific government that enacted the statute.
6. You CANNOT lawfully acquire a statutory STATUS under the CIVIL laws of a foreign jurisdiction if you have either:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

6.1. Never physically been present within the exclusive jurisdiction of the foreign jurisdiction.
6.2. Never EXPRESSLY consented to be treated as a “citizen”, “resident”, or “inhabitant” within that jurisdiction, even IF physically present there.
6.3. NOT been physically present in the foreign jurisdiction LONG ENOUGH to satisfy the residency requirements of that jurisdiction.

7. Any government that tries to REMOVE the domicile prerequisite from any of the franchises it offers by any of the following means is acting in a purely private, commercial capacity using PRIVATE and not PUBLIC LAW and the statutes then devolve essentially into an act of PRIVATE contracting. Methods of acting in such a capacity include, but are not limited to the following devious methods by dishonest and criminal and treasonous public servants:

7.1. Treating EVERYONE as “persons” or “individuals” under the franchise statutes, INCLUDING those outside of their territory.
7.2. Saying that EVERYONE is eligible for the franchise, no matter where they PHYSICALLY are, including in places OUTSIDE of their exclusive or general jurisdiction.
7.3. Waiving the domicile prerequisite as a matter of policy, even though the statutes describing it require that those who participate must be “citizens”, “Residents”, or “inhabitants” in order to participate. The Social Security does this by unconstitutional FIAT, in order to illegally recruit more “taxpayers”.

8. When any so-called “government” waives the domicile prerequisite by the means described in the previous step, the following consequences are inevitable and MANDATORY:

8.1. The statutes they seek to enforce are “PRIVATE LAW”.
8.2. It is FRAUD to call the statutes “PUBLIC LAW” that applies equally to EVERYONE.

“...Municipal law, thus understood, is properly defined to be “a rule of civil conduct prescribed by the supreme power in a state, commanding what is right and prohibiting what is wrong.”

It is also called a rule to distinguish it from a compact or agreement; for a compact is a promise proceeding from us, law is a command directed to us. The language of a compact is, “I will, or will not, do this”; that of a law is, “thou shalt, or shalt not, do it.” It is true there is an obligation which a compact carries with it, equal in point of conscience to that of a law; but then the original of the obligation is different. In compacts we ourselves determine and promise what shall be done, before we are obliged to do it; in laws, we are obliged to act without ourselves determining or promising anything at all. Upon these accounts law is defined to be “a rule...”

8.3. They agree to be treated on an equal footing with every other PRIVATE business.
8.4. Their franchises are on an EQUAL footing to every other type of private franchise such as McDonalds franchise agreements.
8.5. They implicitly waive sovereign immunity and agree to be sued in the courts within the extraterritorial jurisdiction they are illegally operating under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97. Sovereign immunity is ONLY available as a defense against DE JURE government activity in the PUBLIC interest that applies EQUALLY to any and every citizen.
8.6. They may not enforce federal civil law against the party in the foreign jurisdiction that they are illegally offering the franchise in.
8.7. If the foreign jurisdiction they are illegally enforcing the franchise within is subject to the constraint that the members of said community MUST be treated equally under the requirements of their constitution, then the franchise cannot make them UNEQUAL in ANY respect. This would be discrimination and violate the fundamental law.

Consistent with the above, below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes attempts to enforce income taxes against NONRESIDENT parties domiciled in a legislatively foreign state, such as either a state of the Union or a foreign country:

“The power of taxation, indispensable to the existence of every civilized government, is exercised upon the assumption of an equivalent rendered to the taxpayer in the protection of his person and property, in addition to the value of such property, or in the creation and maintenance of public conveniences in which he shares — such, for instance, as roads, bridges, sidewalks, pavements, and schools for the education of his children. If the taxing power be in no position to render these services, or otherwise to benefit the person or property taxed, and such property be wholly within the taxing power of another state, to which it may be said to owe an allegiance, and to which it looks for protection, the taxation of such property within the domicile of the owner partakes rather of the nature of an extortion than a tax, and has been repeatedly held by this Court to be beyond the power of the legislature, and a taking of property without due process of law. Railroad Company..."
An example of how the government cannot assign the statutory status of "taxpayer" upon you per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) is found in 28 U.S.C. §2201(a), which reads:

United States Code
TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS

Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy

(a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, EXCEPT with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

Consistent with the federal Declaratory Judgments Act, federal courts who have been petitioned to declare a litigant to be a "taxpayer" have declined to do so and have cited the above act as authority:

Specifically, Rowen seeks a declaratory judgment against the United States of America with respect to "whether or not the plaintiff is a taxpayer pursuant to, and/or under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14)." (See Compl. at 2.) This Court lacks jurisdiction to issue a declaratory judgment "with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986," a code section that is not at issue in the instant action. See 28 U.S.C. §2201; see also Hughes v. United States, 953 F.2d. 531, 536-537 (9th Cir. 1991) (affirming dismissal of claim for declaratory relief under § 2201 where claim concerned question of tax liability). Accordingly, defendant's motion to dismiss is hereby GRANTED, and the instant action is hereby DISMISSED.

The implications of the above are that:

1. The federal courts have no lawful delegated authority to determine or declare whether you are a "taxpayer".
2. If federal courts cannot directly declare you a "taxpayer", then they also cannot do it indirectly by, for instance:
   a. Presuming that you are a "taxpayer". This is a violation of due process of law that renders a void judgment. Presumptions are not evidence and may not serve as a SUBSTITUTE for evidence.
   b. Calling you a "taxpayer" before you have called yourself one.
   c. Arguing with or penalizing you if you rebut others from calling you a "taxpayer".
   d. Quoting case law as authority relating to "taxpayers" against a "nontaxpayer". That's FRAUD and it also violates Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
   e. Quoting case law from a franchise court in the Executive rather than Legislative branch such as the U.S. Tax Court against those who are not franchisees called "taxpayers".
   f. Treating you as a "taxpayer" if you provide evidence to the contrary by enforcing any provision of the I.R.C. Subtitle A "taxpayer" franchise agreement against you as a "nontaxpayer".

"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [instrumentalities, officers, employees, and elected officials of the national Government] and not to non-taxpayers [non-citizen nationals domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union and not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the national Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."

5.4.8.12 People with either no domicile or a domicile outside the government at the place they live

5.4.8.12.1 Divorcing the “state”: Persons with no domicile, who create their own “state”, or a domicile in the Kingdom of Heaven

If we divorce the society where we were born, do not abandon our nationality and allegiance to the state of our birth, but then choose a domicile in a place other than where we physically live and which is outside of any government that might have jurisdiction in the place where we live, then we become "transient foreigners" and "de facto stateless persons" in relation to the government of the place we occupy.

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."

A "de facto stateless person" is anyone who is not entitled to claim the protection or aid of the government in the place where they live:

A. DEFINITIONS

DE FACTO—Persons who have left the country of which they were nationals and no longer enjoy its protection and assistance. They are usually political refugees. They are legally citizens of a country because its laws do not permit denaturalization or only permit it with the country’s approval.

2. De Facto Status

Assume an individual is de facto stateless if he/she:

a. says he/she is stateless but cannot establish he/she is de jure stateless; and

b. establishes that:

- he/she has taken up residence [chosen a legal domicile] outside the country of his/her nationality;
- there has been an event which is hostile to him/her, such as a sudden or radical change in the government, in the country of nationality; and

NOTE: In determining whether an event was hostile to the individual, it is sufficient to show the individual had reason to believe it would be hostile to him/her.

- he/she renounces, in a sworn statement, the protection and assistance of the government of the country of which he/she is a national and declares he/she is stateless. The statement must be sworn to before an individual legally authorized to administer oaths and the original statement must be submitted to SSA.

De facto [stateless] status stays in effect only as long as the conditions in b. continue to exist. If, for example, the individual returns [changes their domicile back] to his/her country of nationality, de facto statelessness ends.

Notice the key attribute of a "de facto stateless person" is that they have abandoned the protection of their government because they believe it is hostile to him or her and is not only not protective, but is even injurious. Below is how the Supreme Court describes such persons:

The writers upon the law of nations distinguish between a temporary residence in a foreign country for a special purpose and a residence accompanied with an intention to make it a permanent place of abode. The latter is styled by Vattel [in his book The Law of Nations as] "domicile," which he defines to be "a habitation fixed in any place, with an intention of always staying there." Such a person, says this author, becomes a member of the new society at least as a permanent inhabitant, and is a kind of citizen of the inferior order from the native citizens, but is, nevertheless, united and subject to the society, without participating in all its advantages. This right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration. Vatt. Law Nat. pp. 92, 93. Grotius nowhere uses the word "domicile," but he also distinguishes between those who stay in a foreign country by the necessity of their affairs, or from any other temporary cause, and those who reside there from a permanent cause. The former he denominates "strangers," and the latter, "subjects." The rule is thus laid down by Sir Robert Phillimore:

There is a class of persons which cannot be, strictly speaking, included in either of these denominations of naturalized or native citizens, namely, the class of those who have ceased to reside [maintain a domicile] in their native country, and have taken up a permanent abode in another. These are domiciled inhabitants. They have not put on a new citizenship through some formal mode enjoined by the law or the new country. They are de facto, though not de jure, citizens of the country of their [new chosen] domicile.

[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

We must remember that in America, the People, and not our public servants, are the Sovereigns. We The People, who are the Sovereigns, choose our associations and govern ourselves through our elected representatives.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

"The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty."

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

When those representatives cease to have our best interests or protection in mind, then we have not only a moral right, but a duty, according to our Declaration of Independence, 1776, to alter our form of self-government by whatever means necessary to guarantee our future security.

"But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce themunder absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security."

The lawful and most peaceful means of altering that form of government is simply to do one of the following:

1. Form our own self-government based on the de jure constitution and change our domicile to it. See: Self Government Federation: Articles of Confederation, Form #13.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. Choose an existing government or country that is already available elsewhere on the planet as our protector.
3. Choose a domicile in a place that doesn’t have a government. For instance, choose a domicile somewhere you have been in the past that doesn’t have a government. For example, if you have legal evidence that you took a cruise, then choose your domicile in the middle of the ocean somewhere where the ship went.
4. Use God's laws as the basis for your own self-government and protection, as suggested in this book.

By doing one of the above, we are “firing” our local servants in government because they are not doing their job of protection adequately, and when we do this, we cease to have any obligation to pay for their services through taxation and they cease to have any obligation to provide any services. If we choose God and His laws as our form of government, then we choose Heaven as our domicile and our place of primary allegiance and protection. We then become:

1. “citizens of Heaven”.
2. “nationals but not citizens” of the country in which we live.
3. Transient foreigners.
4. Ambassadors and ministers of a foreign state called Heaven.

Below is how one early state court described the absolute right to "divorce the state" by choosing a domicile in a place other than where we physically are at the time:

"When a change of government takes place, from a monarchial to a republican government, the old form is dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse their allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they had not entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to adopt. That the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It is not a rule upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those prescribed by nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent"

[Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

How do we officially and formally notify the “state” that we have made a conscious decision to legally divorce it by moving our domicile outside its jurisdiction? That process is documented in the references below:

2. Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005, Section 2.5.3.13. Same as the above item. Available free at: http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/SovFormsInstr/SovFormsInstr.htm
3. By sending in the Legal Notice of Change in Citizenship/Domicile Records and Divorce from the United States. See:
4. After accomplishing either of the above items, which are the same, making sure that all future government forms we fill out properly and accurately describe both our domicile and our citizenship status, in accordance with section 5.4.8.13.1 later.

5. By making sure that at all times, we use the proper words to describe our status so that we don’t create false presumptions that might cause the government to believe we are “residents” with a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory):

5.1. Do not describe ourselves with the following words:

5.1.1. “individual” as defined in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) and 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3).

5.1.5. “alien”

5.2. Describe ourselves with the following words and phrases:

5.2.1. “nontaxpayer” not subject to the Internal Revenue Code. See:

5.2.1.1. “Taxpayer” v. “Nontaxpayer”, Which One Are You?:
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/TaxpayerVNontaxpayer.htm

5.2.1.2. Your Rights as a “nontaxpayer”, item 5.8
http://sedm.org/LibertyU/LibertyU.htm

5.2.3. The type of “nonresident alien” defined in 26 CFR §1.871-1(b)(1)(i) but who is NOT an “individual” within that regulation.

5.2.5. Not engaged in a “trade or business” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

5.2.6. Have not made any “elections” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B), 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h), or 26 CFR §1.871-1(a).

“...In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]”

We emphasize that it isn’t one’s citizenship but one’s choice of legal “domicile” that makes one sovereign and a “nontaxpayer”. The way we describe our citizenship status is affected by and a result of our choice of legal “domicile”, but changing one’s citizenship status is not the nexus for becoming either a “sovereign” or a “nontaxpayer”.

The only legal requirement for changing our domicile is that we must reside on the territory of the sovereign to whom we claim allegiance, and must intend to make membership in the community established by the sovereign permanent. In this context, the Bible reminds us that the Earth was created by and owned by our Sovereign, who is God, and that those vain politicians who claim to “own” or control it are simply “stewards” over what actually belongs to God alone. To wit:

The heavens are Yours [God’s], the earth also is Yours;
The world and all its fullness, You have founded them.
The north and the south, You have created them;
Tabor and Hermon rejoice in Your name.
You have a mighty arm;
Strong is Your hand, and high is Your right hand.”
[Psalm 89:11-13, Bible, NKJV]
And all their host I have commanded.”
[Isaiah 45:12, Bible, NKJV]

“Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the Lord your God, also the earth with all that is in it.”
[Deuteronomy 10:14, Bible, NKJV]

Some misguided Christians will try to quote Jesus, when He said of taxes the following in relation to “domicile”:

"Render therefore to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's."
[Matt. 22:15-22, Bible, NKJV]

However, based on the scriptures above, which identify God as the owner of the Earth and the Heavens, we must ask ourselves:

“What is left that belongs to Caesar if EVERYTHING belongs to God?”

The answer is NOTHING, except that which he STEALS from the Sovereign people and which they don’t force him to return. Jesus knew this, but he gave a very indirect answer to keep Himself out of trouble when asked about taxes in the passage above. Therefore, when we elect or consent to change our domicile to the Kingdom of Heaven, we are acknowledging the Truth and the Authority of the Scripture and Holy Law above and the sovereignty of the Lord in the practical affairs of our daily lives. We are acknowledging our stewardship over what ultimately and permanently belongs ONLY to Him, and not to any man. Governments and civilizations come and go, but God’s immutable laws are eternal. To NOT do this as a Christian amounts to mutiny against God. Either we honor the first four commandments of the Ten Commandments by doing this, or we will be dethroned as His Sovereigns and Stewards on earth.

"Because you [Solomon, the wisest man who ever lived] have done this, and have not kept My covenant and My statutes [violated God's laws], which I have commanded you, I will surely tear the kingdom [and all your sovereignty] away from you and give it to your [public] servant."
[1 Kings 11:9-13, Bible, NKJV]

By legally divorcing the “state” in changing our domicile to the Kingdom of Heaven or to someplace on earth where there is not man-made government, we must consent to be governed exclusively by God’s laws and express our unfailing allegiance to Him as the source of everything we have and everything that we are. In doing so, we escape the constraints of earthly law and achieve the nirvana described by the Apostle Paul when he very insightfully said of this process of submission to God the following:

“But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law [man’s law].”
[Gal. 5:18, Bible, NKJV]

The tendency of early Christians to do the above was precisely the reason why the Romans persecuted the Christians when Christianity was in its infancy: It lead to anarchy because Christians, like the Israelites, refused to be governed by anything but God’s laws:

"Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, "There is a certain people [the Jews, who today are the equivalent of Christians] scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are different from all other people’s [because they are God's laws], and they do not keep the king's [unjust] laws. Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it into the king's treasuries."
[Esther 3:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

Christians who are doing and following the will of God are “anarchists”. An anarchist is simply anyone who refuses to have an earthly ruler and who instead insists on either self-government or a Theocracy in which God, whichever God you believe in, is our only King, Ruler, Lawgiver and Judge:

Main Entry: anarchy
Function: noun

Etymology: Medieval Latin anarchia, from Greek, from anarchos having no [earthly] ruler.

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

“For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Lawgiver, The Lord is our King; He will save us.”

[Isaiah 33:22, Bible, NKJV]

Jesus Is an Anarchist

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Spirituality/ChurchvState/JesusAnarchist.htm

Christians who are doing the will of God by changing their domicile to Heaven and divorcing the “state” are likely to be persecuted by the government and privileged 501(c ) (3) corporate churches just as Jesus was because of their anarchistic tendencies because they render organized government irrelevant and unnecessary:

“If the world hates you, you know that it hated Me before it hated you. If you were of the world, the world would love its own. Yet because you are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hates you. Remember the word that I said to you, ‘A servant is not greater than his master.’ If they persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. If they kept My word, they will keep yours also. But all these things they will do to you for My name’s sake, because they do not know Him who sent Me. If I had not done among them the works which no one else did, they would have no sin; but now they have no excuse for their sin. He who hates me hated My father also. If I had not done among them the works which no one else did, they would have no sin; but now they have seen and also hated both Me and My Father. But this happened that the word might be fulfilled which is written in their law, ‘They hated Me without a cause.’”

[John 15:18-25, Bible, NKJV]

Being “chosen out of the world” simply means, in legal terms, that we do not have a domicile here and are “transient foreigners”.

Those who do choose God as their sole source of law and civil (not criminal) government:

1. Become a “foreign government” in respect to the United States government and all other governments.
2. Are committing themselves to the ultimate First Amendment protected religious practice, which is that of adopting God and His sovereign laws as their only form of self-government.
3. Are taking the ultimate step in personal responsibility, by assuming responsibility for every aspect of their lives by divorcing the state and abandoning all government franchises:

   Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Effectively become their own self-government and fire the government where they live in the context of all civil matters.
6. Are protected by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine and therefore exempt from the jurisdiction of federal and state courts except as they satisfy the provisions of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act or the “Longarm Statute” passed by the state where they temporarily inhabit.
8. Are on an equal footing with any other nation and may therefore assert sovereign immunity in any proceeding against the government. This implies that:
8.1. Any attempt to drag you into court by a government must be accompanied by proof that you consented in writing to the jurisdiction of the government attempting to sue you. Such consent becomes the basis for satisfying the criteria within the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Part IV, Chapt. 97.
8.2. You may use the same defense as the government in proving a valid contractual obligation, by showing the government the delegation of authority order constraining your delegated authority as God’s “public officer”. Anything another government alleges you consented in writing to must be consistent with the delegation of authority order or else none of the rights accrued to them are defensible in court. In this sense, you are using the same lame excuse they use for getting out of any obligations that you consented to, but were not authorized to engage in by the Holy Bible. This is explained in the document below:

   Delegation of Authority Order from God to Christians, Form #13.007
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

10. May not simultaneously act as “public officers” for any other foreign government, which would represent a conflict of interest.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax

3. If another government attempts to interfere with the affairs of your own foreign self-government, then they:

3.1. Are violating your First Amendment right to practice your religion by living under the laws of your God. This tort is cognizable under the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. Chapter 21B and constitutes a tort against the foreign invader.

3.2. Are hypocrites, because they are depriving others equal right to the same authority that they themselves have. No legitimate government can claim to be operating lawfully which interferes with the equal right of others to self-government.

3.3. Are in a sense attempting to outlaw the ultimate form of personal responsibility, which is entirely governing your own life and supporting yourself. The outlawing of personal responsibility and replacing or displacing it with repressive law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior statute whenever the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children’s Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court’s opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549, 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97 A.L.R. 947. [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

The determination of the Framers Convention and the ratifying conventions to preserve complete and unimpaired state self-government in all matters not committed to the general government is one of the plainest facts which emerges from the history of their deliberations. And adherence to that determination is incumbent equally upon the federal government and the states. State powers can neither be appropriated on the one hand nor abdicated on the other. As this court said in Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, ‘The preservation of the States, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National government.

The Constitution, in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible States. Every journey to a forbidden end begins with the first step; and the danger of such a step by the federal government in the direction of taking over the powers of the states is that the end of the journey may find the states so despoiled of their powers, or—what may amount to the same thing—so relieved of the responsibilities which possession of the powers necessarily enjoins, as to reduce them to little more than geographical subdivisions of the national domain. It is safe to say that if, when the Constitution was under consideration, it had been thought that any such danger lurked behind its plain words, it would never have been ratified.

And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law—the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible. ‘We the People of the United States,’ it says, ‘do ordain and establish this Constitution.’ Ordain and establish! These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but provided explicitly—’This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof . . . shall be the supreme Law of the Land.’ (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior statute. [298 U.S. 238, 297] but whenever the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children’s Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court’s opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549, 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97 A.L.R. 947. [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

3.1. Are violates your First Amendment right to practice your religion by living under the laws of your God. This tort is cognizable under the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. Chapter 21B and constitutes a tort against the foreign invader.

3.2. Are hypocrites, because they are depriving others equal right to the same authority that they themselves have. No legitimate government can claim to be operating lawfully which interferes with the equal right of others to self-government.

3.3. Are in a sense attempting to outlaw the ultimate form of personal responsibility, which is entirely governing your own life and supporting yourself. The outlawing of personal responsibility and replacing or displacing it with... collective responsibility of the “state” can never be in the public interest, especially considering how badly our present government mismanages and bankrupts nearly everything it puts its hands on.

5.4.8.12.2 How do “transient foreigners” and “nonresidents” protect themselves in state court?

Now that we understand the differences between those who have contracted to be protected, called “citizens”, “residents”, and “inhabitants”, and those who have not, called “transient foreigners” or “nonresidents”, the next issue we must deal with is to determine how those who are “nonresidents” or “transient foreigners” in relation to a specific state government can achieve a remedy for the protection of their rights in state court. It will interest the reader to learn that “transient foreigners” have the same constitutional protections for their rights as citizens or residents. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said on this subject. Those who are transient foreigners are STATUTORY but not necessarily CONSTITUTIONAL “aliens” in respect to the governments identified in the cite below:

“There are literally millions of aliens within the jurisdiction of the United States. The Fifth Amendment, as well as the Fourteenth Amendment, protects every one of these persons from deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 35, 48-51, 70 S.Ct. 445, 453-455, 94 L.Ed. 616, 627-629; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U.S. 228, 238, 16 S.Ct. 977, 981, 41 L.Ed. 140, 143; see Russian Fleet v. United States, 282 U.S. 481, 489, 51 S.Ct. 229, 231, 75 L.Ed. 473, 476. Even one whose presence in this country is unlawful, involuntary, or transitory is entitled to that constitutional protection. Wong Yang Sung, supra; Wong Wing, supra.

The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. For a host of constitutional and statutory provisions rest on the premise that a legitimate distinction between citizens and aliens may justify attributes and benefits for one class not accorded to the other; 12 and the class of aliens is itself a heterogeneous multitude of persons with a wide-ranging variety of ties to this country.13”

In order to get to the point where we can identify how remedies for constitutional rights violations are achieved, we must first describe the TWO types of jurisdictions that the state courts exercise, because it is mainly state courts where such rights violations would be vindicated. We don’t have space here to cover all the nuances of this subject, but we will summarize these differences and point you to more information if you want to look into it. There are two types of jurisdictions within each state government:

1. The de jure republic under the Articles of Confederation called the “Republic of______”. This jurisdiction controls everything that happens on land protected by the Constitution. It protects EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE property using ONLY the Common law and NOT civil law.
2. The federal corporation under the United States Constitution called the “State of______”. This jurisdiction handles everything that deals with government agency, office, employment, "benefits", "public rights", and territory and it's legislation is limited to those domiciled on federal territory or contracting with either the state or federal governments. Collectively, the subject of legislation aimed at this jurisdiction is the "public domain" or what the courts call "publici juris".

The differences between the two jurisdictions above are exhaustively described in the following fascinating document:

Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In the above document, a table is provided comparing the two types of jurisdictions which we repeat here, extracted from section 14.7. Understanding this table is important in determining how we achieve a remedy in a state court for an injury to our constitutional PRIVATE rights.

When we say that we are a “transient foreigner” or “nonresident” within a court pleading or within this document, we must be careful to define WHICH of the TWO jurisdictions above that status relates to in order to avoid ambiguity and avoid being called “frivolous” by the courts. Within this document and elsewhere, the term “transient foreigner” or “nonresident” relates to the jurisdiction in the right column above but NOT to the column on the left. You can be a “nonresident” of the Corporate state on the right and yet at the same time ALSO be a “citizen” or “resident” of the Republic/De Jure State on the left above. This distinction is critical. If you are at all confused by this distinction, we strongly suggest reading the Corporatization and Privatization of the Government document referenced above so that the distinctions are clear.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The Corporate state on the right above enacts statutes that can and do only relate to those who are public entities (called “publici juris”) that are government instrumentalities, employees, officers, and franchisees of the government called “corporations”, all of whom are consensually associated with the government by virtue of exercising their right to contract with the government. Technically speaking, all such statutes are franchises implemented using the civil law. This is explained further in the following:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate private conduct is repugnant to the Constitution. Consequently, the government cannot enact statutes or law of any kind that would regulate the conduct of private parties. Therefore, nearly all civil statutes passed by any state or municipal government, and especially those relating to licensed activities, can and do only relate to public and not private parties that are all officers of the government and not human beings. This is exhaustively analyzed and proven in the following:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We will now spend the rest of this section applying these concepts to how one might pursue a remedy for an injury to so-called “right” within a state court by invoking the jurisdiction of the Republic/De Jure state on the left and avoiding the jurisdiction of the Corporate state on the right.

Civil law attaches to one's voluntary choice of domicile/residence. Criminal law does not. De jure criminal law depends only on physical presence on the territory of the sovereign and the commission of an injurious act against a fellow sovereign on that territory. Laws like the vehicle code do have criminal provisions, but they are not de jure criminal law, but rather civil law that attaches to the domicile/residence of the party within a franchise agreement, which is the "driver license" and all the rights it confers to the government to regulate your actions as a "driver" domiciled in the Corporate state.

Within the forms and publications on this website there are two possible statuses that one may declare as a sovereign:

1. You are a transient foreigner and a citizen of ONLY the Kingdom of Heaven on earth. "My state" in this context means the Holy Bible.
2. You are a state national with a domicile in the Republic/De Jure state but not the Corporate state. "My state" in this context means the de jure state and excludes just about everything passed by the corporate state government, including all franchises such as marriage licenses, income taxes, etc. Franchises cannot lawfully be implemented in the De Jure State but can only occur in the Corporate State.

Both of the above statuses have in common that those who declare themselves to be either cannot invoke the statutory law of the Corporate State, but must invoke only the common law and the Constitution in their defense. There is tons of reference material on the common law in the following:

Sovereignty and Freedom: Section 8, Self Government
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom.htm

The following book even has sample pleadings for the main common law actions:

Handbook of Common Law Pleading
http://books.google.com/books?id=7gk-AAAAIAAJ&printsec=titlepage

Transient foreigners may not have a domicile or be subject to the civil laws in relation only to the place they have that status, but they don't need the civil laws to be protected. The Constitution attaches to the land, and not the status of the persons on that land.

"It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure, and not the status of the people who live in it."
[Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]
The Constitution and the common law are the only thing one needs to protect oneself as a PRIVATE and not PUBLIC entity. That is why we place so much emphasis on the common law on this website. John Harris explains why in the following video:

http://tpuc.org/node/558

Those who are believers AND transient foreigners but not “citizens”, “residents” or “inhabitants” of either the Republic/De Jure State or the Corporate State DO in fact STILL have a state, which is the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. That state has all the elements necessary to be legitimate: territory, people, and laws. The territory is the Earth, which the Bible says belongs to the Lord and not Caesar. It has people, which are your fellow believers. The laws are itemized in the Holy Bible and enumerated below:

Laws of the Bible, Form #13.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In conclusion, those who are “transient foreigners” or “Nonresidents” in relation to the Corporate state can use the state court for protection, but they must:

1. Be careful to define which of the two possible jurisdictions they are operating within using the documents referenced in this section.
2. Avoid federal court. All federal circuit and district courts are Article IV territorial courts in the executive and not judicial branch of the government that may only officiate over franchises. They are not Article III constitutional courts that may deal with rights protected by the constitution. This is exhaustively proven with thousands of pages of evidence in:

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/WhatHappJustice/WhatHappJustice.htm

3. Properly declare their status consistent with this document in their complaint. See the following forms as an example how to do this:
   - Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
     http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
   - Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002

   - Rules of Presumption and Statutory Interpretation, Litigation Tool #01.006

4. Respond to discovery relating to their status and standing with the following:

   Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. Invoke the common law and not statutory law to be protected.
6. Be careful to educate the judge and the jury to prevent common injurious presumptions that would undermine their status. See:

   Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7. Follow the rules of pleading and practice for the common law.
8. Ensure that those who sit on the jury have the same status as them by ensuring that those who are statutory “U.S. citizens” or franchise participants are excluded as having a financial conflict of interest.

5.4.8.12.3 Serving civil legal process on nonresidents is the crime of “simulating legal process”

Some freedom lovers try to form their own private courts or grand juries to try or indict offenses against their rights by actors within the de facto government. Such private courts are sometimes called:

2. Ecclesiastical courts in the case of churches.
3. Franchise courts for the regulation of specific activities such as “driving”. This would include family courts, traffic courts, and social security administrative courts.
Those who convene such courts must be careful how they describe their activities to those outside the group, or the participants could be indicted for simulating legal process. Legal process served by these groups can be called by a number of different names, such as the following:

1. Non-statutory abatement.
2. Private Administrative Process (PAP).

Below is a definition of “simulating legal process”:

“A person commits the offense of simulating legal process if he or she “recklessly causes to be delivered to another any document that simulates a summons, complaint, judgment, or other court process with the intent to .... cause another to submit to the putative authority of the document; or take any action or refrain from taking any action in response to the document, in compliance with the document, or on the basis of the document.”

Therefore, those forming common law courts or ecclesiastical courts may not use the words “complaint”, “judgment”, “summons” when issuing documents to parties OUTSIDE the group of people who expressly consented to their jurisdiction. In other words, those who are not in the group or who are not “citizens” within whatever community they have formed, may not receive documents that are connected with any existing state or municipal court or which could be confused with such courts.

Below is one ruling by a Texas court relating to a “simulating legal process” charge against an ecclesiastical court:

Free Exercise of Religion

Government action may burden the free exercise of religion, in violation of the First Amendment, in two quite different ways: by interfering with a believer’s ability to observe the commands or practices of his faith and by encroaching on the ability of a church to manage its internal affairs. Westbrook v. Penley, 231 S.W.3d. 389, 395 (Tex. 2007). In appellant’s pro se motions, he refers to the “exercise of one’s faith.” More specifically, he raised the issue of ecclesiastical abstention in the trial court and cites to cases concerning this doctrine on appeal. His arguments are directed at the trial court’s jurisdiction over this matter, not the constitutionality of section 32.48. So, it appears the judiciary’s exercise of jurisdiction over the matter, rather than the Legislature’s enactment of section 32.48, is the target of his challenge. We, then, will address that aspect of the constitutional issue he now presents on appeal; we will determine whether the trial court’s exercise of jurisdiction violated appellant’s right to free exercise of religion by encroaching on the ability of his church to manage its internal affairs.

The Constitution forbids the government from interfering with the right of hierarchical religious bodies to establish their own internal rules and regulations and to create tribunals for adjudicating disputes over religious matters. See Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708–09, 724–25, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d. 151 (1976). Based on this constitutionally-mandated abstention, secular courts may not intrude into the church’s governance of “religious” or “ecclesiastical” matters, such as theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of members to standards of morality. See In re Godwin, 293 S.W.3d. 742, 748 (Tex.App.—San Antonio 2009, orig. proceeding).

The record shows that Coleman, to whom the “Abatement” was delivered, was not a member of appellant’s church. That being so, the church’s position on the custody matter is not a purely ecclesiastical matter over which the trial court should have abstained from exercising its jurisdiction. This is not an internal affairs issue because the record conclusively establishes that the recipient is not a member of the church. The ecclesiastical abstention doctrine does not operate to prevent the trial court from exercising its jurisdiction over this matter. We overrule appellant’s final issue.

Therefore, if you form a common law or ecclesiastical court you should be careful to:

1. Draft a good membership or citizenship agreement.
2. Require all members to sign the membership or citizenship agreement.
3. Keep careful records that are safe from tampering.
4. NOT serve “legal process” of any kind against those who are NOT consenting members or citizens.

We take the same position in protecting OUR members from secular courts as the secular courts take toward private courts. The First Amendment requires that you have a right to either NOT associate or to associate with any group you choose INCLUDING, but not limited to the “state” having general jurisdiction where you live. That means you have a RIGHT to NOT be:

1. A “citizen” or “resident” in the area where you physically are.
2. A “driver” under the vehicle code.
3. A “spouse” under the family code.
4. A “taxpayer” under the tax code.

The dividing line between who are “members” and who are NOT members is who has a domicile in that specific jurisdiction. The subject of domicile is extensively covered in the following insightful document:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form 05.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We allege that secular franchise courts such as tax court, traffic court, family court, social security administrative court, and even civil court in your area are equally culpable for the SAME crime of “simulating legal process” if they serve legal process upon anyone who is NOT a “member” of their “state” and who has notified them of that fact. As such, any at least CIVIL process served upon them by secular courts of the de facto government is ALSO a criminal simulation of legal process because instituted against non-consenting parties who are non-residents and “non-members”, just as in the above case. Membership has to be consensual.

The record shows that Coleman, to whom the “Abatement” was delivered, was not a member of appellant’s church. That being so, the church’s position on the custody matter is not a purely ecclesiastical matter over which the trial court should have abstained from exercising its jurisdiction. This is not an internal affairs issue because the record conclusively establishes that the recipient is not a member of the church. The ecclesiastical abstention doctrine does not operate to prevent the trial court from exercising its jurisdiction over this matter. We overrule appellant’s final issue.

We also argue that just like the above ruling, the secular government in fact and in deed is ALSO a church, as described in the following exhaustive proof of that fact:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In support of the above, Black’s Law Dictionary defines “franchise courts” such as traffic court and family court as PRIVATE courts:

“franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant [privilege], with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. - Also termed courts of the franchise.

Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants ... But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949).”

As a BARE minimum, we think that if you get summoned into any franchise court for violations of the franchise, such as tax court, traffic court, and family court, then the government as moving party who summoned you should at LEAST have the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED in writing to become a “member” of the group that created the court, such as “taxpayer”, “driver”, “spouse”, etc. and that if they CANNOT satisfy that burden of proof, then:

1. All charges should be dismissed.
2. The franchise judge and government prosecutor should BOTH be indicted and civilly sued for simulating legal process under the common law and not statutory civil law.

5.4.8.13 How the corrupt government kidnaps your identity and your domicile and moves it to the federal zone or interferes with your choice of domicile

Based on the foregoing discussion, it ought to be obvious that the government doesn't want you to know any of the following facts:

1. That all civil jurisdiction originates from your choice of domicile.
2. That all income taxation is a civil liability that originates from your choice of domicile.
3. That domicile requires your consent and is the equivalent of your consent to be civilly governed as required by the Declaration of Independence.
4. That because they need your consent to choose a domicile, they can't tax or even govern you civilly without your consent.
5. That domicile is based on the coincidence of physical presence and intent/consent to permanently remain in a place.
6. That unless you choose a domicile within the jurisdiction of the government that has general jurisdiction where you live, they have no authority to institute income taxation upon you.
7. That no one can determine your domicile except you.
8. That if you don't want the protection of government, you can fire them and handle your own protection, by changing your domicile to a different place or group or government or choosing no domicile at all. This then relieves you of an obligation to pay income taxes to support the protection that you no longer want or need.

Therefore, governments have a vested interest in hiding the relationship of “domicile” to income taxation by removing it or at least obfuscating it in their “codes”. A number of irreconcilable conflicts of law are created by COMPELLING EVERYONE to have either a specific domicile or an earthly domicile. For instance:

1. If the First Amendment gives us a right to freely associate and also implies a right to DISASSOCIATE, how can we be compelled to associate with a “state” or the people in the locality where we live without violating the First Amendment? It may not be presumed that we moved to a place because we wanted to associate with the people there.
2. Domicile creates a duty of allegiance, according to the cite above. All allegiance MUST be voluntary. How can the state compel allegiance by compelling a person to have or to choose an earthly domicile? What gives them the right to insist that the only legitimate type of domicile is associated with a government? Why can’t it be a church, a religious group, or simply an association of people who want to have their own police force or protection service separated from the state? Since the only product that government delivers is “protection”, why can’t people have the right to fire the government and provide their own protection with the tax money they would have paid the government?
3. When one chooses a domicile, they create a legal or contractual obligation to support a specific government, based on the above. By compelling everyone to choose an earthly domicile whose object is a specific government or state, isn’t the state interfering with our right to contract by compelling us to contract with a specific government for our protection? The Constitution, Article 1, Section 10 says no state shall make any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Implicit in this right to contract is the right NOT to contract. Every right implies the opposite right.
Therefore, how can everyone be compelled to have a domicile without violating their right to contract?
4. The U.S. Supreme Court also said that income taxation based on domicile is “quasi-contractual” in nature.

“Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265, 292, et seq.
8 S.Ct. 1370, compare Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U.S. 230, 28 S.Ct. 641, still the obligation to pay taxes is not penal. It is a statutory liability, quasi contractual in nature, enforceable, if there is no exclusive statutory remedy, in the civil courts by the common-law action

The “quasi-contract” they are referring to above is your voluntary choice of “domicile”, no doubt. How can they compel such a contract if the person who is the object of the compulsion refuses to “do business” with the state and also refuses to avail themselves of any of the benefits of membership in said state? Wouldn’t that amount to slavery, involuntary servitude, and violate the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude?

Do you see how subtle this domicile thing is? It's a very sneaky way to draw you into the world system and force you to adopt and comply with earthly laws and a government that are hostile towards and foreign to God’s laws. All of the above deceptions and ruses are designed to keep you enslaved and entrapped to support a government that does nothing for you and which you may even want to abandon or disassociate with.

5.4.8.13.1  Domicile on government forms

You should view every opportunity to complete a government form or any form that indicates a “domicile”, “residence”, or “permanent address” as:

2. A change in status from “foreign” to “domestic” in relation to the government that created the form.
3. An agreement to become a “customer” of government protection called a “citizen”, “resident”, and/or “inhabitant” within a specific jurisdiction.
4. The conveyance of “consent to be governed” as the Declaration of Independence indicates.
5. An attempt to nominate a protector and delegate to them the authority to supervise and even penalize your activities under the authority of the civil law.
6. An agreement to pay for the protection of the specific government you have nominated to protect you.
7. A voluntary attempt on your part to surrender rights recognized in the Constitution in exchange for privileges and “benefits” under a franchise agreement and to change your status from a “transient foreigner” to a “person” subject to federal statutes. The most privileged status you can be in is to be a resident alien participating in federal franchises. The Declaration of Independence says that rights protected by the Constitution are “unalienable”, meaning that they CAN’T be sold, transferred, or bargained away in relation to any government by any commercial process, including a government franchise or application. Therefore, you are recognizing that the grantor of the benefit is not a government, but a private corporation.
8. An attempt to destroy equal protection mandated by the Constitution and make a specific government your “parens patriae”, or government parent.

In short, anyone who asks you to fill out a government form or indicate a “domicile”, “residence”, or “permanent address” on their own private form is asking you the following question:

“Who’s your daddy and where does he live? We want to notify him that you have selected him as your protector and agreed to become liable to subsidize his protection racket and his supervision of your otherwise private affairs. We don’t trust you so we want you to agree to sign this protection contract, nominate a protector, and agree to become his privileged employee or officer so he will ensure you won’t become a burden, bother, or injury to us.”

There are several ways that you are often deceived into inadvertently declaring a domicile on federal territory on government forms.

1. By declaring that you maintain a domicile or live in the “United States”, which is defined as federal territory and excludes states of the Union pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). This is done by filling out anything in the block labeled “permanent address” or “residence” and indicating anything in that block other than the de jure republic you were born within or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]
Sec. 7701 - Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(9) United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

(10) State

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

People born and domiciled within the de jure states of the Union are domiciled in the "United States of America" or in the name of their state. For instance, under "country" put "California Republic" instead of "United States".

2. By filling out a government form and indicating that you are a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 or "resident" or "permanent resident" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B). All such persons have a legal domicile on federal territory. Collectively, these people are called "U.S. persons" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).

3. By filling out a form that presumes you are a "U.S. person", such as IRS Form 1040. That form is ONLY for use by "U.S. persons" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) who have a legal domicile on federal territory. If you are not domiciled on federal territory, the only correct form to use is the IRS Form 1040NR. Even the 1040NR is a statutory "taxpayer" form and therefore needs either modification or an attachment to clarify that it is being submitted by a NONTAXPAYER.

4. By requesting or using a Social Security Number on any government form. Social Security Numbers can only lawfully be issued to persons with a legal domicile on federal territory. 20 CFR §422.104 says the number can only be issued to statutory "U.S. citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 or statutory "permanent residents", both of whom have in common a domicile on federal territory.

(1) General rule—

(i) Social security number.

A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

Subpart B General Procedures
Sec. 422.104 Who can be assigned a social security number.

(a) Persons eligible for SSN assignment.
5. By requesting or using a Taxpayer Identification Number on any government form, which makes you into a statutory “resident alien” as described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) domiciled on federal territory. The only people who need them are “taxpayers” who are engaged in a “trade or business”/”public office” in the District of Columbia and therefore partaking of federal franchises. All such persons have an effective domicile in the District of Columbia because they are representing a federal corporation, the “United States” pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) and are officers of that corporation. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39), 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), and Fed.R.Civ.Proc. 17(b) all place their effective domicile in the District of Columbia and not within the place they physically occupy by virtue of the fact that they are acting in a representative capacity as a “public officer”.

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

We can assign you a social security number if you meet the evidence requirements in Sec. 422.107 and you are:
1. A United States citizen; or
2. An alien lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence or under other authority of law permitting you to work in the United States (Sec. 422.105 describes how we determine if a nonimmigrant alien is permitted to work in the United States); or

26 CFR §301.6109-1(d)(3): Identifying Numbers

(3) IRS individual taxpayer identification number –

(i) Definition.

The term IRS individual taxpayer identification number means a taxpayer identifying number issued to an alien individual by the Internal Revenue Service, upon application, for use in connection with filing requirements under this title. The term IRS individual taxpayer identification number does not refer to a social security number or an account number for use in employment for wages. For purposes of this section, the term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or national of the United States.

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership.

We will now spend the rest of the section talking about how to avoid the problem described in item 1 above. There are many occasions on government forms, and especially tax forms, where we will be asked if we are “residents” and what our “residence” is and we must be very careful what we put on these forms. If a "residence" must be established on a government form for any reason, the safest way to handle this situation as a Christian is as follows:

1. Line out the word “residence" and replace it with “domicile”.
2. In the block declaring “residence” or “permanent address”, put one of the following: 2.1. “Kingdom of Heaven on Earth (not within any man made government)”. 2.2. A geographical place that has no owner and no government, such as the middle of the ocean.
3. At the end of the address line put in parenthesis: “Not a domicile or residence.”
4. If they ask you if you are a “resident”, simply say “NO”.
5. Put a note at the bottom saying:

"See and rebut the following web address for details, if you disagree: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/ChangeOfAddressAttachment.htm"

A person who does all the above is what we call “civilly dead”. The status of being “civilly dead” is the only proper status for a devout Christian, and it is thoroughly described in:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Any location of "residence" other than “Kingdom of Heaven on Earth” or a place not within the jurisdiction of any man-made government, however, will prejudice your rights, violate the Bible, and result in idolatry towards man/government. In fact, we believe the word "residence" and “resident” were invented by the legal profession as a way to separate intent from the word "domicile" so that people would no longer have a choice of their legal home. Christians should be very wary of this devious legal trap and avoid it as indicated above.

[Eph. 5:11, Bible]

There are also BIG advantages to declaring our domicile as being outside of federal jurisdiction in either the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth or a state of the Union, which is legislatively but not Constitutionally “foreign” with respect to the federal government. For instance, one’s domicile determines the rules of decision of every court in which a person is sued. Below is an excerpt from the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 17(b) which proves this:

IV. PARTIES

RULE 17. PARTIES PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT; CAPACITY

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual’s domicile;

(2) for a corporation [the "United States", in this case, or its officers on official duty representing the corporation], by the law under which it was organized; and

(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state’s law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and

(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

The above may not seem like a big deal, until you consider that if a person declares “heaven” as their domicile, then the court has to use God's laws in the Holy Bible as the only rules of decision! They cannot quote ANY federal statute or even court ruling as authority for what they are doing. The only thing they can apply is God’s law and the rulings of ecclesiastical courts on the subject. We would LOVE to see this in a tax trial. The government would get CREAMED! This tactic is what we affectionately call “courtroom evangelism”. In the case of Christians, the Common Law is the nearest equivalent of God’s law and that is the ONLY thing we can allow ourselves to be protected by as a devout Christian. Statutory law, on the other hand, is only law for GOVERNMENT actors and not private persons:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Below is an example of how to fill this out for the state of California to remove any presumptions about “residence”. If you don’t do this, the state will essentially legally “presume” that you are an “alien”, a “resident”, and a “taxpayer”, and this will grossly prejudice your Constitutional rights:

[http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/ChangeOfAddressAttachment.htm]

A number of legal factors are used in determining one’s domicile. The following facts and circumstances, although not necessarily conclusive, have probative value to support a claim of domicile within a particular state:

1. Continuous presence in the state.
2. Payment of ad valorem (property) taxes.
3. Payment of personal income taxes.
4. Reliance upon state sources for financial support.
5. Domicile in the state of family, or other relatives, or persons legally responsible for the person.
6. Former domicile in the state and maintenance of significant connections therein while absent.
7. Ownership of a home or real property.
8. Admission to a licensed practicing profession in the state.
9. Long term military commitments in the state.
10. Commitments to further education in the state indicating an intent to stay here permanently.
11. Acceptance of an offer of permanent employment in the state.
12. Location of spouse's employment, if any.
13. Address of student listed on selective service (draft or reserves) registration.

Other factors indicating an intent to make a state one's domicile may be considered. Normally, the following circumstances do not constitute evidence of domicile sufficient to effect classification as a domiciliary:

1. Voting or registration for voting.
2. The lease of living quarters.
3. A statement of intention to acquire a domicile in state.
4. Automobile registration; address on driver's license; payment of automobile taxes.
5. Location of bank or saving accounts.

To conclude this section, you may wish to look at a few of the government's forms that effectively ask you what your "domicile" is, so you can see what we are talking about in this section. Before we do, we must emphasize that in some cases, the version of a form we choose to file, even if it says nothing on the form about domicile, may determine our "residence"! This is VERY important. For instance, if we file a 1040NR form, we are claiming that we are not a "resident alien" and that we do not maintain a domicile in the "United States" (federal territory). Whereas, if we file a 1040 form, we are claiming that we are either a "resident" with a domicile in the "United States" (federal territory), or are a “U.S. citizen” who is described as a “alien” coming under a tax treaty with the United States if we attach a form 2555 to the 1040 form. Also keep in mind that only a “resident” can have a “residence”, and that all “residents” are aliens under the tax code, as far as we understand it. This is confirmed by our quote of 26 CFR §1.871-2 earlier in this section, which you may want to go back and read. With these important considerations, below are a few of the forms that determine our “domicile”:

Items 4 and 5 above are noteworthy, because they mention the phrase "Permanent address”. Why do they use the phrase "permanent"? Because they want to DECEIVE you into thinking that you can’t revoke or withdraw your request to be protected and are therefore FORCED to keep subsidizing them to protect you without your continuing consent. That way, they are the only ones who can unilaterally terminate the CONTRACTUAL protection arrangement. SCAM!

When you fill out government forms to reflect a domicile that is in Heaven, some ignorant or wicked or atheist clerks may decide to argue with you. Below are the three most popular arguments you will hear, which are each accompanied by tactics that are useful in opposing them:

1. If you submit the government form to a private company or organization, they may say that they as have an unofficial "policy" of not accepting such forms. In response to such tactics, find another company that will accept it. If all companies won't accept it, then sue the companies for discrimination and violation of First Amendment rights.

2. They may say that "domicile" is based on a physical place and that Heaven is not a physical place. In response to this, we must remember that the First Amendment prevents the government from "establishing a religion”. Because of this prohibition, the government can't even "define" what a religion is:

A problem common to both religion clauses of the First Amendment is the dilemma of defining religion. To define religion is in a sense to establish it—those beliefs that are included enjoy a preferred constitutional status. For those left out of the definition, the definition may prove coercive. Indeed, it is in this latter context, which roughly approximates the area covered by the free exercise clause, where the cases and discussion of the meaning of religion have primarily centered. Professor Kent Greenwald challenges the effort, and all efforts, to define religion: "No specification of essential conditions will capture all and only the benefits, practices, and organizations that are regarded as religious in modern culture and should be treated as such under the Constitution."

To even define what "Heaven" is or to say that it doesn't physically exist is effectively to establish a religion. In order to determine that "Heaven" is not a physical place, they would be violating the separation of church and state and infringing upon your First Amendment right to practice your religion.

3. They may say that no place can qualify as a domicile that you didn't occupy at one point or another. When they do this, the proper response is to say that they are interfering with your First Amendment religious rights and then to quote them the following scriptures, which suggest that we had an existence in Heaven before we ever came to earth and before time began:

"But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses, marked us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), and raised us up together, and made us sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus,"

5-474

"Before I formed you in the womb I knew you;
Before you were born I sanctified you;
I ordained you a prophet to the nations."
[Jeremiah 1:5, Bible, NKJV]

"Therefore do not be ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me His prisoner, but share with me in the sufferings for the gospel according to the power of God, who has saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus before earthly time began."
[2 Tim. 1:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

"For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that we should walk in them."
[Eph. 2:10, Bible, NKJV]

I will praise You, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made;
Marvelous are Your works,
And that my soul knows very well.
My frame was not hidden from You,
When I was made in secret,
And skillfully wrought in the lowest parts of the earth.
Your eyes saw my substance, being yet unformed,
And in Your book they all were written,
The [earthly] days fashioned for me,
When as yet there were none of them.
How precious also are Your thoughts to me, O God!
How great is the sum of them!
[Psalm 139:14-17, Bible, NKJV]

Another approach that is useful against this tactic is to point out that the federal courts have ruled that:

"Similarly, when a person is prevented from leaving his domicile by circumstances not of his doing and beyond his control, he may be relieved of the consequences attendant on domicile at that place. In Roboz (USDC D.C. 1963) [Roboz v. Kennedy, 219 F.Supp. 892 (D.D.C. 1963), p. 24], a federal statute was involved which precluded the return of an alien's property if he was found to be domiciled in Hungary prior to a certain date. It was found that Hungary was Nazi-controlled at the time in question and that the persons involved would have left Hungary (and lost domicile there) had they been able to. Since they had been precluded from leaving because of the political privations imposed by the very government they wanted to escape (the father was in prison there), the court would not hold them to have lost their property based on a domicile that circumstances beyond their control forced them to retain."
[Conflicts in a Nutshell, David D. Siegel and Patrick J. Borchers, West Publishing, p. 24]

We should always remember that we never chose to come here to earth, and our presence is involuntary. Therefore, everything we do while here is a matter of compulsion rather than true choice. This subject is covered more thoroughly earlier in sections 4.11.6 through 4.11.6.4 if you wish to investigate. Therefore, we can be relieved of the consequences attendant to domicile if we do not wish to have one here.

If all the above arguments are ineffective or when the government refuses to recognize your choice of Heaven as a domicile, remember also that the First Amendment STILL prevents them from compelling you to associate with any group, evening a state, and that they can't compel you to belong to or consent to any earthly government or civil law, to accept or pay for protection you don't want and don't need, and which you can even prove is harmful to you. In effect, they cannot violate the very reason for their establishment, which is protecting you the way YOU, not THEM want to be protected.

5.4.8.13.2 How the tax code compels choice of domicile

The government has compelled domicile or interfered with receiving the benefits of your choice by any of the following means:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. Nowhere in Internal Revenue Code is the word “domicile” admitted to be the source of the government’s jurisdiction to impose an income tax, even though the U.S. Supreme Court admitted this in Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954). The word “domicile”, in fact, is only used in two sections of the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code, Title 26. This is no accident, but a very devious way for the government to avoid getting into arguments with persons who it is accusing of being “taxpayers”. It avoids these arguments by avoiding showing Americans the easiest way to challenge federal jurisdiction, which is demanding proof from the government required by 5 U.S.C. §556(d), who is the moving party, that you maintain a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory). The two sections below are the only places where domicile is mentioned:

1.2. 26 U.S.C. §6091: Defines where returns shall be submitted in the case of deceased “taxpayers”, which is the “domicile” of the decedent when he died.

2. They renamed the word “domicile” on government tax forms. They did this so that income taxation “appears” to be based entirely on physical presence, when in fact is also requires voluntary consent as well. If you knew that the government needed your consent to become a “taxpayer”, then probably everyone would “un-volunteer” and the government would be left scraping for pennies. Below are some examples of other names they gave to “domicile”:

2.1. “permanent address”
2.2. “permanent residence”
2.3. “residence”: defined above, and only applying to nonresident aliens. There is no definition of “residence” anywhere in the I.R.C. in the case of a “citizen”. Below is how Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) legal encyclopedia, Domicile, describes the distinction between “residence” and “domicile”:

Corpus Juris Secundum
§4 Domicile and Residence Distinguished

b. Use of Terms in Statutes

The terms “domicile” and “residence,” as used in statutes, are commonly, although not necessarily, construed as synonymous. Whether the term “residence,” as used in a statute, will be construed as having the meaning of “domicile,” or the term “domicile” construed as “residence,” depends on the purpose of the statute and the nature of the subject matter, as well as the context in which the term is used. It has been declared that the terms “residence” and “domicile” are almost universally used interchangeably in statute, and that since domicile and legal residence are synonymous, the statutory rules for determining the place of residence are the rules for determining domicile. However, it has been held that “residence,” when used in statutes, is generally interpreted by the courts as meaning “domicile,” but with important exception.

Accordingly, whenever the terms “residence” and “domicile” are used in connection with subjects of domestic policy, the terms are equivalent, as they also are, generally, where a statute prescribes residence as a qualification for the enjoyment of a privilege or the exercise of a franchise. “Residence” as used in various particular statutes has been considered synonymous with “domicile.” However, the terms are not necessarily synonymous.

3. By telling you that you MUST have a “domicile”. For instance, the Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) section on “Domicile” says the following on this subject:

Corpus Juris Secundum
§3 Necessity and Number

“It is a settled principle that every person must have a domicile somewhere. The law permits no individual to be without a domicile and an individual is never without a domicile somewhere. Domicile is a continuing thing, and from the moment a person is born he must, at all times, have a domicile.”

Corpus Juris Secundum
§9 Domicile by Operation of Law

“Whenever a person does not fix a domicile for himself, the law will fix one for him in accordance with the facts and circumstances of the case; and an infant's domicile will be fixed by operation of law where it cannot be determined from that of the parents.”

The above requirement can and does apply ONLY to civil statutory “persons” and the choice to become such a “person” is voluntary or else it would violate the First Amendment right of freedom from compelled association. Also note that such “persons” are all public officers. Indirectly, what they are also suggesting in the above by FORCING you to have a domicile is that:

3.1. You cannot choose God as your sole CIVIL Protector, but MUST have an earthly protector who cannot be yourself.

3.2. Although the First Amendment gives you the right to freely associate, it does not give you the right to CIVILLY disassociate with ALL governments. This is an absurdity.

3.3. Government has a monopoly on CIVIL protection and that individuals are not allowed to fire the government and provide their own protection, either individually or collectively.

4. By inventing new words that allow them to avoid mentioning “domicile” in their vague “codes” while giving you the impression that an obligation exists that actually is consensual. For instance, in 26 U.S.C. §911 is the section of the I.R.C. entitled “Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad”. This section identifies the income tax liabilities of persons domiciled in the “United States” (federal zone) who are living temporarily abroad. We showed earlier that if they have a domicile abroad, then they cannot be either “citizens” or “residents” under the I.R.C., because domicile is a prerequisite for being either. In that section, they very deceptively:

4.1. Use the word “abode” in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3) to describe one’s domicile so as to remove the requirement for “intent” and “consent” from consideration of the subject, even though they have no authority to ignore this requirement for consent in the case of anything but an “alien”.

4.2. Don’t even use the word “domicile” at all, and refuse to acknowledge that what “citizens” or “residents” both have in common is a “domicile” within the United States. They did this to preserve the illusion that even after one changes their domicile to a foreign country while abroad, the federal tax liability continues, when in fact, it legally is not required to. After domicile is changed, those Americans who changed it while abroad then are no longer called “citizens” under federal law, but rather “nationals” and “nonresident aliens”.

4.3. They invented a new word called a “tax home”, as if it were a substitute for “domicile”, when in fact it is not. A “tax home” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §911 as a place where a person who has a temporary presence abroad treats himself or herself as a privileged “resident” in the foreign country but still also maintains a privileged “resident” and “domicile” status in the “United States”.

The only way the government can maintain your status as a “taxpayer” is to perpetuate you in a “privileged” state, so they simply don’t offer any options to leave the privileged state by refusing to admit to you that the terms “citizen” and “resident” presume you made a voluntary choice of domicile within their jurisdiction. I.R.C. section 162 mentioned above is the section for privileged deductions, and the only persons who can take deductions are those engaged in the privileged “trade or business” excise taxable franchise. Therefore, the only person who would derive any benefit from deductions is a person with a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory) and who has earnings from that place which are connected with a “trade or business”, which means U.S. government (corporation) source income as a “public officer”.

5.4.8.13.3 How the Legal Encyclopedia compels choice of domicile

Even the legal encyclopedia tries to hide the nature of domicile. For instance, Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) at:

which we quoted in the previous section does not even mention the requirement for “allegiance” as part of domicile or the fact that allegiance must be voluntary and not compelled, even though the U.S. Supreme Court said this was an essential part of it:
"Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter."

[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The legal encyclopedia in the above deliberately and maliciously omits mention of any of the following key concepts, even though the U.S. Supreme Court has acknowledged elements of them as we have shown:

1. That allegiance that is the foundation of domicile must be voluntary and cannot be coerced.
2. That external factors such as the withdrawal of one’s right to conduct commerce for failure to give allegiance causes domicile choice to no longer be voluntary.
3. That a choice of domicile constitutes an exercise of your First Amendment right of freedom of association and that a failure to associate with a specific government is an exercise of your right of freedom from compelled association.
4. That you retain all your constitutional rights even WITHOUT choosing a domicile within a specific government because rights attach to the land you are standing on and not the civil status you choose by exercising your right to associate and becoming a member of a “state” or municipality.

The result of maliciously refusing to acknowledge the above concepts is a failure to acknowledge the foundation of all just authority of every government on earth, which is the consent of the governed mentioned in our Declaration of Independence.

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. --That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.”

[Declaration of Independence]

A failure to acknowledge that requirement results in a complete destruction of the sovereignty of the people, because the basis of all your sovereignty is that no one can do anything to you without your consent, unless you injured the equal rights of others. This concept is exhaustively described in the following document:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003

5.4.8.13.4 How governments compel choice of domicile: Government ID

In order to do business within any jurisdiction, and especially with the government and financial institutions, one usually needs identification documents. Such documents include:

1. State driver’s license. Issued by the Dept. of Motor Vehicles in your state.
2. State ID card. Issued by the Dept. of Motor Vehicles in your state.
3. Permanent resident green card.
5. U.S. Citizen Card. Issued by the Dept. of State. These are typically used at border crossings.

All ID issued by the state governments, and especially the driver’s license, requires that the applicant be a “resident” of the “State of ____”. If you look up the definition of “resident” and “State of” or “State” or “in this State” within the state tax code, these terms are defined to mean a privileged alien with a domicile on federal territory not protected by the Constitution.

USA passports also require that you provide a domicile. The Dept. of State DS-11 Form in Block 17 requires you to specify a “Permanent Address”, which means domicile. See:

Domicile within the country is not necessary in order to be issued a national passport. All you need is proof of birth within that country. If you would like tips on how to obtain a national passport without a domicile within a state and without government issued identifying numbers that connect you to franchises, see:

Getting a USA Passport As a “non-citizen national”.
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

State ID, however, always requires domicile within the state in order to be issued either a state driver’s license or a state ID. Consequently, there is no way to avoid becoming privileged if you want state ID. This situation would seem at first to be a liability until you also consider that they can’t lawfully issue a driver’s license to non-residents. Imagine going down to the DMV and telling them that you are physically on state land but do not choose a domicile here and that you can’t be compelled to and that you would like for them to certify that you came in to request a license and that you were refused and don’t qualify. Then you can show that piece of paper called a “Letter of Disqualification” to the next police officer who stops you and asks you for a license. Imagine having the following dialog with the police officer when you get stopped:

Officer: May I see your license and registration please?

You: I’m sorry, officer, but I went down to the DMV to request a license and they told me that I don’t qualify because I am a non-resident of this state. I have a Letter of Disqualification they gave me while I was there stating that I made application and that they could not lawfully issue me a license. Here it is, officer.

Officer: Well, then do you have a license from another state?

You: My domicile is in a place that has no government. Therefore, there is no one who can issue licenses there. Can you show me a DMV office in the middle of the ocean, which is where my domicile is and where my will says my ashes will be PERMANENTLY taken to when I die. My understanding is that domicile or residence requires an intention to permanently remain at a place and I am not here permanently and don’t intend to remain here. I am a perpetual traveler, a transient foreigner, and a vagrant until I am buried.

Officer: Don’t get cute with me. If you don’t produce a license, then I’m going to cite you for driving without a license.

You: Driving is a commercial activity and I am not presently engaged in a commercial activity. Do you have any evidence to the contrary? Furthermore, I’d love to see you explain to the judge how you can punish me for refusing to have that which the government says they can’t even lawfully issue me. That ought to be a good laugh. I’m going to make sure the whole family is there for that one. It’ll be better than Saturday Night Live!

We allege that the purpose of the vehicle code in your state is NOT the promotion of public safety, but to manufacture “residents” and “taxpayers”. The main vehicle by which states of the Union, in fact, manufacture “residents”, who are privileged “public officers” that are “taxpayers” and aliens with respect to the government is essentially by compelling everyone to obtain and use state driver’s licenses. This devious trap operates as follows:

1. You cannot obtain a state driver’s license without being a “resident”. If you go into any DMV office and tell them you are not a “resident”, then they are not allowed to issue you a license. You can ask from them what is called a “Letter of Disqualification”, which states that you are not eligible for a driver’s license. You can keep that letter and show it to any police officer who stops you and wants your “license”. He cannot then cite you for “driving without a license” that the state refuses to issue you, nor can he impound your car for driving without a license!

California Vehicle Code

“14607.6. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as provided in this section, a motor vehicle is subject to forfeiture as a nuisance if it is driven on a highway in this state by a driver with a suspended or revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver, who is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment and has a previous misdemeanor conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of Section 12500 or Section 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5.

(b) A peace officer shall not stop a vehicle for the sole reason of determining whether the driver is properly licensed.

(c) (1) If a driver is unable to produce a valid driver's license on the demand of a peace officer enforcing the provisions of this code, as required by subdivision (b) of Section 12951, the vehicle shall be impounded regardless of ownership, unless the peace officer is reasonably able, by other means, to verify that the driver..."
is properly licensed. Prior to impounding a vehicle, a peace officer shall attempt to verify the license status of a driver who claims to be properly licensed but is unable to produce the license on demand of the peace officer.

(2) A peace officer shall not impound a vehicle pursuant to this subdivision if the license of the driver expired within the preceding 30 days and the driver would otherwise have been properly licensed.

(3) A peace officer may exercise discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is an employee driving a vehicle registered to the employer in the course of employment. A peace officer may also exercise discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is the employee of a bona fide business establishment or is a person otherwise controlled by such an establishment and it reasonably appears that an owner of the vehicle, or an agent of the owner, relinquished possession of the vehicle to the business establishment solely for servicing or parking of the vehicle or other reasonably similar situations, and where the vehicle was not to be driven except as directly necessary to accomplish that business purpose. In this event, if the vehicle can be returned to or be retrieved by the business establishment or registered owner, the peace officer may release and not impound the vehicle.

(4) A registered or legal owner of record at the time of impoundment may request a hearing to determine the validity of the impoundment pursuant to subdivision (n).

(5) If the driver of a vehicle impounded pursuant to this subdivision was not a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment, or if the driver of the vehicle was a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment but the driver does not have a previous conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of Section 12500 or Section 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5, the vehicle shall be released pursuant to this code and is not subject to forfeiture.

(d) (1) This subdivision applies only if the driver of the vehicle is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment. Except as provided in paragraph (5) of subdivision (c), if the driver of a vehicle impounded pursuant to subdivision (c) was a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment, the impounding agency shall authorize release of the vehicle if, within three days of impoundment, the driver of the vehicle at the time of impoundment presents his or her valid driver’s license, including a valid temporary California driver’s license or permit, to the impounding agency. The vehicle shall then be released to a registered owner of record at the time of impoundment, or an agent of that owner authorized in writing, upon payment of towing and storage charges related to the impoundment, and any administrative charges authorized by Section 22850.5, providing that the person claiming the vehicle is properly licensed and the vehicle is properly registered. A vehicle impounded pursuant to the circumstances described in paragraph (3) of subdivision (c) shall be released to a registered owner whether or not the driver of the vehicle at the time of impoundment presents a valid driver’s license.

(2) If there is a community property interest in the vehicle impounded pursuant to subdivision (c), owned at the time of impoundment by a person other than the driver, and the vehicle is the only vehicle available to the driver’s immediate family that may be operated with a class C driver’s license, the vehicle shall be released to a registered owner or to the community property interest owner upon compliance with all of the following requirements:

(A) The registered owner or the community property interest owner requests release of the vehicle and the owner of the community property interest submits proof of that interest.

(B) The registered owner or the community property interest owner submits proof that he or she, or an authorized driver, is properly licensed and that the impounded vehicle is properly registered pursuant to this code.

(C) All towing and storage charges related to the impoundment and any administrative charges authorized pursuant to Section 22830.5 are paid.

(D) The registered owner or the community property interest owner signs a stipulated vehicle release agreement, as described in paragraph (3), in consideration for the nonforfeiture of the vehicle. This requirement applies only if the driver requests release of the vehicle.

(3) A stipulated vehicle release agreement shall provide for the consent of the signator to the automatic future forfeiture and transfer of title to the state of any vehicle registered to that person, if the vehicle is driven by a driver with a suspended or revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver. The agreement shall be in effect for only as long as it is noted on a driving record maintained by the department pursuant to Section 1806.1.

(4) The stipulated vehicle release agreement described in paragraph (3) shall be reported by the impounding agency to the department not later than 10 days after the day the agreement is signed.

(5) No vehicle shall be released pursuant to paragraph (2) if the driving record of a registered owner indicates that a prior stipulated vehicle release agreement was signed by that person.

(2) The impounding agency, within two days of impoundment, shall send a notice by certified mail, return receipt requested, to all legal and registered owners of the vehicle, at the addresses obtained from the department, informing them that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture and will be sold or otherwise disposed of pursuant to this section. The notice shall also include instructions for filing a claim with the district attorney, and the time limits for filing a claim. The notice shall also inform any legal owner of its right to conduct the sale pursuant to subdivision (g). If a registered owner was personally served at the time of impoundment with a notice containing all the information required to be provided by this paragraph, no further notice is required to be sent to a registered owner. However, a notice shall still be sent to the legal owners of the vehicle, if any. If notice was not sent to the legal owner within two working days, the impounding agency shall not charge the legal owner for more than 15-days’ impoundment when the legal owner redeems the impounded vehicle.

(3) No processing charges shall be imposed on a legal owner who redeems an impounded vehicle within 15 days of the impoundment of that vehicle. If no claims are filed and served within 15 days after the mailing of the notice in paragraph (2), or if no claims are filed and served within five days of personal service of the notice specified in paragraph (2), when no other mailed notice is required pursuant to paragraph (2), the district attorney shall prepare a written declaration of forfeiture of the vehicle to the state. A written declaration of forfeiture signed by the district attorney under this subdivision shall be deemed to provide good and sufficient title to the forfeited vehicle. A copy of the declaration shall be provided on request to any person informed of the pending forfeiture pursuant to paragraph (2). A claim that is filed and is later withdrawn by the claimant shall be deemed not to have been filed.

(4) If a claim is timely filed and served, then the district attorney shall file a petition of forfeiture with the appropriate juvenile, municipal, or superior court within 10 days of the receipt of the claim. The district attorney shall establish an expedited hearing date in accordance with instructions from the court, and the court shall hear the matter without delay. The court filing fee, not to exceed fifty dollars ($50), shall be paid by the claimant, but shall be reimbursed by the impounding agency if the claimant prevails. To the extent practicable, the civil and criminal cases shall be heard at the same time in an expedited, consolidated proceeding. A proceeding in the civil case is a limited civil case.”

Below is evidence showing how one person obtained a “Letter of Disqualification” that resulted in being able to drive perpetually without having a state-issued driver's license.

2. Most state vehicle codes define “resident” as a person with a domicile in the “State”. Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

California Vehicle Code

516. “Resident” means any person who manifests an intent to live or be located in this state on more than a temporary or transient basis. Presence in the state for six months or more in any 12-month period gives rise to a rebuttable presumption of residency.

The following are evidence of residency for purposes of vehicle registration:

(a) Address where registered to vote.
(b) Location of employment or place of business.
(c) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.
(d) Attendance of dependents at a primary or secondary school.
(e) Filing a homeowner's property tax exemption.
(f) Renting or leasing a home for use as a residence.
(g) Declaration of residency to obtain a license or any other privilege or benefit not ordinarily extended to a nonresident.
(h) Possession of a California driver's license.
(i) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

California Vehicle Code

12505. (a) (1) For purposes of this division only and notwithstanding Section 516, residency shall be determined as a person’s state of domicile. “State of domicile” means the state where a person has his or her true, fixed, and permanent home and principal residence and to which he or she has manifested the intention of returning whenever he or she is absent.

Prima facie evidence of residency for driver's licensing purposes includes, but is not limited to, the following:

(A) Address where registered to vote.

(B) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.

(C) Filing a homeowner’s property tax exemption.

(D) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

(2) California residency is required of a person in order to be issued a commercial driver's license under this code.

(b) The presumption of residency in this state may be rebutted by satisfactory evidence that the licensee’s primary residence is in another state.

(c) Any person entitled to an exemption under Section 12502, 12503, or 12504 may operate a motor vehicle in this state for not to exceed 10 days from the date he or she establishes residence in this state, except that he or she shall obtain a license from the department upon becoming a resident before being employed for compensation by another for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle on the highways.

(i) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

3. The term “State” is then defined in the revenue codes to mean the federal areas within the exterior limits of the state. Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

California Revenue and Taxation Code

17017. “United States,” when used in a geographical sense, includes the states, the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.

17018. “State” includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.

4. You must surrender all other state driver’s licenses in order to obtain one from most states. This is consistent with the fact that you can only have a domicile in ONE place at a time. Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:
12805. The department shall not issue a driver's license to, or renew a driver's license of, any person:

(f) Who holds a valid driver's license issued by a foreign jurisdiction unless the license has been surrendered to the department, or is lost or destroyed.

12511. No person shall have in his or her possession or otherwise under his or her control more than one driver's license.

Consequently, the vehicle code in most states, in the case of individuals not involved in “commercial activity”, applies mainly to “public officers” who are effectively “residents” of the federal zone with an effective “domicile” or “residence” there:

26 U.S.C. §7701

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(39) Persons residing outside United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or

(B) enforcement of summons.

These persons are “taxpayers”. They are Americans who have contracted away their Constitutional rights in exchange for government “privileges” and they are the only “persons” who inhabit or maintain a “domicile” or “residence” in the “State” as defined above. Only people with a domicile in such “State” can be required to obtain a “license” to drive on the “highways”. While they are exercising “agency” on behalf of or representing the government corporation, they are “citizens” of that corporation and “residents”, because the corporation itself is a “citizen” and therefore a person with a domicile in the place where the corporation was formed, which for the “United States” is the District of Columbia:

“Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes ‘all persons,’ ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. ‘No man shall be taken,’ ‘no man shall be disseised,’ without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution.”

[Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886]

Federal Rules of Civil Procedure
IV. PARTIES
Rule 17.
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant, Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.
Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

1. for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual’s domicile;
2. for a corporation or one representing a public corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and
3. for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
   (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state’s law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and
   (B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

If you don’t want to be a “public officer” who has an effective “domicile” or “residence” in the District of Columbia, then you have to divorce the state, create your own “state”, and change your domicile to that new “state”. For instance, you can form an association of people and choose a domicile within that association. This association would be referred to as a “foreign jurisdiction” within the vehicle code in most states. The association can become the “government” for that group, and issue its own driver’s licenses and conduct its own “courts”. In effect, it becomes a competitor to the corporate state for the affections, allegiance, and obedience of the people. This is capitalism at its finest, folks!

California Vehicle Code

12502. (a) The following persons may operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a driver's license under this code:

(1) A nonresident over the age of 18 years having in his or her immediate possession a valid driver's license issued by a foreign jurisdiction of which he or she is a resident, except as provided in Section 12505.

As long as the driver’s licenses issued by the government you form meet the same standard as those for the state you are in, then it doesn’t matter who issued it.

California Vehicle Code

12505. (a) (1) For purposes of this division only and notwithstanding Section 516, residency shall be determined as a person's state of domicile. “State of domicile” means the state where a person has his or her true, fixed, and permanent home and principal residence and to which he or she has manifested the intention of returning whenever he or she is absent.

(e) Subject to Section 12504, a person over the age of 16 years who is a resident of a foreign jurisdiction other than a state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or Canada, having a valid driver's license issued to him or her by any other foreign jurisdiction having licensing standards deemed by the Department of Motor Vehicles equivalent to those of this state, may operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a license from the department, except that he or she shall obtain a license before being employed for compensation by another for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle on the highways.

As long as you take and pass the same written and driver’s tests as the state uses, even your church could issue it! As a matter of fact, below is an example of a church that issues “Heaven Driver’s Licenses” called “Embassy of Heaven”:

You can’t be compelled by law to grant to your public “servants” a monopoly that compels you into servitude to them as a “public officer”. In the United States, WE THE PEOPLE are the government, and not their representatives and “servants” who work for them implementing the laws that they pass. Consequently, you and your friends or church, as a “self-governing body” can make your own driver’s license and in fact and in law, those licenses will by definition be “government-issued”. To wit:

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

“From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens.”

Anyone who won’t accept such a driver’s license should be asked to contradict the U.S. Supreme Court and to prove that you AREN’T part of the government as a person who governs his own life and the lives of other members of the group you have created. The following article also emphasizes that “We The People” are the government, and that our servants have been trying to deceive us into believing otherwise:

Chances are good that you as a reader at one time or another procured government ID without knowing all the legal consequences described in this document. The existence of that ID and the evidence documenting your request for it can and probably will be used by the government against you as evidence that you are subject to their civil laws and a customer of their "protection racket". The best technique for rebutting such evidence is that appearing in the following document. The submission of this document is a MANDATORY part of becoming a Member of this fellowship, and hopefully you now understand why it is mandatory:

In particular, see the following sections in the above document:

2. Section 10.8: Criminal Complaint Against Those Engaged in the Government ID Scam

5.4.8.13.5 How employers and financial institutions compel choice of domicile

Whenever you open a financial account or start a new job these days, most employers, banks, or investment companies will require you to produce “government ID”. Their favorite form of ID is the state issued ID. Unfortunately, unless you are an alien domiciled on federal territory within the exterior limits of the state who is not protected by the Constitution, you don’t qualify for state ID or even a state driver’s license. By asking for “government ID”, employers and financial institutions indirectly are forcing you to do the following as a precondition of doing business with them:

1. Surrender the benefits and protections of being a Constitutional “citizen” in exchange for being a privileged statutory alien, and to do so WITHOUT consideration and without recourse.
2. Become a statutory “resident alien” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) domiciled on federal territory and subject to federal jurisdiction, who is a public officer within the federal government engaged in the “trade or business” franchise. See:

_The “Trade or Business” Scam_, Form #05.001
3. Become a privileged statutory “resident alien” franchisee who is compelled to participate in what essentially amounts to a “protection racket”.

“Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.”

4. Serving two masters and being subject simultaneously to state and federal jurisdiction. The federal government has jurisdiction over Constitutional aliens, including those within a state.

“No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government].”

[Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

One thing you can show financial institutions as an alternative to state ID or a state driver’s license that doesn’t connect you to the “protection franchise” and a domicile on federal territory is a USA passport procured without an SSN or TIN as a non-citizen national. What they do to deal with “difficult” people like that is say that they need TWO forms of government ID in order to open the account. Here is an example of what you might hear on this subject:

“I’m sorry, but the Patriot Act [or some other obscure regulation] requires you to produce TWO forms of government issued ID to open an account with us.”

Most people falsely presume that the above statement means that they ALSO need state ID in addition to the passport but this isn’t true. It is a maxim of law that the law cannot require an impossibility. If they are going to impose a duty upon you under the color of law by saying that you need TWO forms of ID, they must provide a way to comply without:

1. Compelling you to politically associate with a specific government in violation of the First Amendment.
2. Compelling you to participate in government franchises by providing an identifying number.
3. Misrepresenting your status as a privileged statutory “resident alien”.
4. Violating your religious beliefs by nominating an Earthly protector and thereby firing God as your only protector.

There are lots of ways around this trap. For instance, the U.S. Supreme Court said WE are the government and that we govern ourselves through our elected representatives.

“The words ‘people of the United States’ and ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

So what does “government id” really mean? A notary public is also a public officer and therefore part of the government.
If you hand the financial institution any of the following, you have satisfied their requirement for secondary ID without violating the law or being compelled to associate with or contract with the government:

1. Notarized piece of paper with your picture and your birth certificate on it. The notary is a government officer and therefore it is government ID.
2. Certified copy of your birth certificate by itself. The certification is from the government so it’s government ID.
3. ID issued by a government you formed and signed by the “Secretary of State” of that government. The people are the government according to the Supreme Court, so you can issue your own ID.

You have to be creative at times to avoid their attempts to compel you to sign up for government franchises, but it is still doable.

Another thing that nearly all financial institutions and private employers habitually do is PRESUME, usually wrongfully, that:

1. You are a “citizen” or a “resident” of the place you live or work. What citizens and residents have in common is a domicile within a jurisdiction. Otherwise, you would be called “nonresidents” or “transient foreigners”.
2. Whatever residence or mailing address you give them is your domicile or residence address.

By making such a false presumption, employers and financial institutions in effect are causing you to make an “invisible election” to become a citizen or resident or domiciliary and to provide your tacit consent to be CIVILLY governed without even realizing it.

If you want to prevent becoming a victim of the false presumption that you are a statutory “citizen”, “resident”, and therefore domiciliary of the place you live or work, you must take special precautions to notify all of your business associates by providing a special form to them describing you as a “nonresident” of some kind. At the federal level, that form is the IRS Form W-8BEN or a suitable substitute, which identifies the holder as a “nonresident alien”. IRS does not make a form for “nonresidents” who are not “aliens”, unfortunately, so you must therefore modify their form or make your own form. For an article on how to fill out tax forms to ensure that you are not PRESUMED, usually prejudicially and falsely, to be a resident or citizen or domiciliary, see the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Sometimes, those receiving your declaration of nonresident status may try to interfere with that choice. For such cases, the following pamphlet proves that the only one who can lawfully declare or establish your civil status, including your “nonresident” status, is you. If anyone tries to coerce you to declare a civil status for yourself that you don’t want to accept and don’t consent to, you should provide an affidavit indicating that you were under duress and that they threatened to financially penalize you or not contract with you if you don’t LIE on government forms and declare a status you don’t want. The following pamphlet is also useful in proving that they have no authority to coerce you to declare any civil status you don’t want:

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We should always keep in mind that whenever a financial institution or employer asks for a tax form, they are doing so under the color of law as a “withholding agent” (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16)) who is a public officer of the government. Because they are a public officer of the government in their capacity as a statutory “withholding agent”, they still have a legal duty not to violate your rights, even if they otherwise are a private company. The Constitution applies to all officers and agents of the government, including statutory “withholding agents” while acting in that capacity. Financial institutions especially are aware of this fact, which is why if you ask them to give you their criteria for what ID they will accept in writing, they will say that it is a confidential internal document that they can't share with the public. They know they are discriminating unlawfully as a public officer by rejecting your ID and they want to limit the legal liability that results from this by preventing you from having evidence to prove that they are officially discriminating. They keep such policies on their computer, protected by a password, and they will tell you that the computer doesn't let them print it out or that there isn't a field in their system for them to accept the type of ID that you have. THIS is a SCAM! Take a picture of the screen with your cellphone, page by page, in response to such a SCAM.
How corrupt courts, judges, and government attorneys try to CHANGE your domicile

It is very important to understand that there are THREE separate and distinct CONTEXTS in which the term "United States" can be used, and each has a mutually exclusive and different meaning. These three definitions of “United States” were described by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945):

Table 39: Geographical terms used throughout this page

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Term</th>
<th># in diagrams</th>
<th>Meaning</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>United States*</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>The country “United States” in the family of nations throughout the world.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>United States</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>The “federal zone”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>United States</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>Collective states of the Union mentioned throughout the Constitution.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In addition to the above GEOGRAPHICAL context, there is also a legal, non-geographical context in which the term "United States" can be used, which is the GOVERNMENT as a legal entity. Throughout this page and this website, we identify THIS context as "United States*" or "United States 4". The only types of "persons" within THIS context are public offices within in the national and not state government. It is THIS context in which "sources within the United States" is used for the purposes of "income" and "gross income" within the Internal Revenue Code, as proven by:

Nonresident Alien Position, Form #05.020, Sections 6 and 7
DIRECT LINK: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/NonresidentAlienPosition.pdf
FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The reason these contexts are not expressly distinguished in the statutes by the Legislative Branch or on government forms crafted by the Executive Branch is that they are the KEY mechanism by which:

6. Federal jurisdiction is unlawfully enlarged by abusing presumption, which is a violation of due process of law. See:

   Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
   DIRECT LINK: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Presumption.pdf
   FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7. The separation of powers between the states and the national government is destroyed, in violation of the legislative intent of the Constitution. See:

   FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

8. A "society of law" is transformed into a "society of men" in violation of Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803):

   "The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve this high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right."
   (Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 163 (1803))

9. Exclusively PRIVATE rights are transformed into public rights in a process we call "invisible eminent domain using presumption and words of art".
10. Judges are unconstitutionally delegated undue discretion and "arbitrary power" to unlawfully enlarge federal jurisdiction. See:

    Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018
    DIRECT LINK: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/FederalJurisdiction.pdf
    FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The way a corrupted Executive Branch or judge accomplish the above is to unconstitutionally:

10. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.
11. PRESUME that CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens are EQUIVALENT under federal law. They are NOT. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen is a "non-citizen national" under federal law and NOT a "citizen of the United States".
12. PRESUME that "nationality" and "domicile" are equivalent. They are NOT. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

13. Use the word "citizenship" in place of "nationality" OR "domicile", and refuse to disclose WHICH of the two they mean in EVERY context.

14. Confuse the POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL meaning of words with the civil STATUTORY context. For instance, asking on government forms whether you are a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizen and then FALSELY PRESUMING that you are a STATUTORY citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

15. Confuse the words "domicile" and "residence" or impute either to you without satisfying the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to it and thereby illegally kidnap your civil legal identity against your will. One can have only one "domicile" but many "residences" and BOTH require your consent. See:

FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

16. Add things or classes of things to the meaning of statutory terms that do not EXPRESSLY appear in their definitions, in violation of the rules of statutory construction. See:

Meaning of the Words “includes” and “including”, Form #05.014

DIRECT LINK: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Includes.pdf

17. Refuse to allow the jury to read the definitions in the law and then give them a definition that is in conflict with the statutory definition. This substitutes the JUDGES will for what the law expressly says and thereby substitutes PUBLIC POLICY for the written law.

18. Publish deceptive government publications that are in deliberate conflict with what the statutes define "United States" as and then tell the public that they CANNOT rely on the publication. The IRS does this with ALL of their publications and it is FRAUD. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007

DIRECT LINK: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/ReasonableBelief.pdf

This kind of arbitrary discretion is PROHIBITED by the Constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

> "When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power."
> [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 369, 6 S.Sup.Ct. 1064, 1071]

Thomas Jefferson, our most revered founding father, precisely predicted the above abuses when he said:

> "It has long been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression, that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal Judiciary—an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scare-crow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief over the field of jurisdiction until all shall be usurped from the States and the government be consolidated into one. To this I am opposed."
> [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:331]

> "Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them, to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate."
> [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 15:121]

> "The judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground to undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric. They are construing our Constitution from a co-ordination of a general and special government to a general and supreme one alone. This will lay all things at their feet, and they are too well versed in English law to forget the maxim, 'bonsi judicis est ampliare juridicenem.'"
> [Thomas Jefferson to Thomas Ritchie, 1820. ME 15:297]
Summary of rules relating to domicile

Based on the foregoing analysis and legally admissible evidence, we can safely conclude the following:

1. Think of the “state” as a club:
   1.1. The “state” is the collection of all the sovereigns that occupy a specific territorial land mass.
   1.2. The “government” are the people contracted and under oath to service the needs of the “state” and execute the business of the “state”. They are “protection contractors”. The “government” and the “state” are two separate and distinct groups that are NOT synonymous or the same. The “state” is the sovereign, while the “government” is the SERVANT of the sovereign.
   1.3. Those who are members of the club are called “citizens” if they were born somewhere within the country and “residents” if they were born in a different country.
   1.4. Those who are not members of the club are called “nonresidents” or “transient foreigners”.
   1.5. Whether you are a “member” or a “nonmember” is determined by how you describe your “residence”, “permanent address”, or “domicile” on usually government and financial forms. No one but you can decide or control what you put on these forms.
   1.6. Taxes are your “club membership dues”.
   1.7. In return for membership, you are entitled to demand “services” or “benefits” from the government that serves the “state”.
   1.8. No one can force you to join the club. The First Amendment protects your right to NOT join the club by prohibiting “compelled association”. That is why the First Amendment is the first amendment: Because the first and most important thing you must do when forming any “state” is to give everyone the right to NOT join!
   1.9. Since no one can force you to join the club, no one can compel you to accept the liabilities associated with membership in the club and they must prove that you voluntarily consented to join the club before they can legally enforce those liabilities against you. Such liabilities include the duty to pay income taxes, to vote, and to serve as a jurist when summoned.
   1.10. Membership in the club confers civil jurisdiction of the courts in order to protect your civil rights.
   1.11. You do not need to be a member of the club in order for the government to enforce the criminal laws of the state against you. All that must be proven in order to enforce the criminal laws is that you were physically situated on the territory associated with the “state” and that you committed a criminal or harmful act that injured a specific other fellow sovereign.
   1.12. There are TWO levels of club membership: Premium and Unleaded. The “Unleaded” version is basic domicile in the republic and not the “State” and this level buys you basic criminal protection and nothing more. The “Premium” level of membership requires you to become a “public officer” of the government so they can lawfully pay you bribes called “benefits” with money they stole from your neighbor. Because there are two levels of membership, then the “Premium” level violates the Constitution because it confers a “Title of Nobility”. The only other way to view this level and still be consistent with the Constitution is to view all those who participate as employees of a PRIVATE corporation that is NOT a de jure government. See:

   Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Domicile is legally defined as the coincidence of physical presence in a place now or in the past, and the intention to return to and permanently inhabit that place. The Bible says that no place on earth is permanent and that the present earth will be destroyed, and therefore it is against God’s law to declare a domicile within any man-made political group on earth.

3. The place where a person “lives” and their legal “domicile” can be and often are two completely different places. Many people incorrectly confuse these two terms, and in so doing, unknowingly forfeit their right to choose whether they want to be subject to the civil laws where they are located.

4. Domicile is ordinarily associated with “citizens”, while “residence” is associated with privileged “aliens”. You can have only one “domicile” but as many “residences” as you want. Residence, in turn, is a product of your right to
A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

5. Those who have chosen a legal domicile outside of the place or state that they occupy at any given time are called “transient foreigners”. When you go on vacation temporarily to a place, you are a “transient foreigner” with respect to the government of that place. It is perfectly lawful to ALSO choose to be a transient foreigner in the place of your birth and the place where you live or to choose a domicile within a political group of your own making, such as a church, family, or political group. Those who do so have made a protected First Amendment choice to disassociate with what oftentimes is a corrupted government or state that is more harmful than protective of their personal interests.

6. The purpose of selecting a domicile is to nominate a king or ruler to provide a substitute for God’s protection. A choice of domicile amounts essentially to a contract to procure “protection” from a king or ruler to whom those protected owe “tribute” and “allegiance”. Serving anyone but God is idolatry and idolatry is condemned as the most serious sin a believer can commit in the Bible.

7. You can only have a legal domicile in ONE PLACE at a time, because you can only owe undivided allegiance to one ruler at a time. As a consequence:

7.1. You can only be a “citizen” in ONE PLACE at a time.

7.2. If you are physically present in a place outside of your legal domicile, you are a “transient foreigner” and a “national” but not “citizen” in that place. For instance, Mexicans visiting the United States for temporary and who have not changed their “domicile” to the United States are called “Mexican Nationals” while they are here. When they return to the place of their domicile, they are called “Mexican citizens”.

7.3. You cannot be a “citizen” under federal statutory law without having a domicile on federal territory. States of the Union are NOT federal territory.

7.4. You can only owe income taxes to one government at a time. This is consistent with the fact that you must have a federal tax liability before you can have a state liability. It is also consistent with the conclusion that the states, when they collect state income taxes, are doing so in the capacity as federal territories and instrumentalities and not sovereign or independent governments. This type of abuse is facilitated by the unconstitutionally administered Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §106, and its implementation found in 5 U.S.C. §5517. No state or federal constitution authorizes any state of the Union to act as a federal corporation, agency, territory, or instrumentality as described in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and any attempt to do so is a violation of the separation of powers doctrine and an act of TREASON punishable by death under 18 U.S.C. §2381.

8. Domicile constitutes your voluntary choice of the civil law system and the government you choose to live under. The purpose of law is to protect people by preventing harm but not mandating good. The purpose of government is to enforce and implement the law. Therefore, the purpose of government is to protect. You cannot be held responsible for obeying any civil law unless you voluntarily choose a legal domicile where it applies. This includes the civil code and the family code in your state.

9. Domicile is a First Amendment voluntary choice of political affiliation. The government cannot change your domicile without your consent. What the law dictionary calls “intent” really amounts to consent, and they are trying to hide the voluntary nature of the transaction by choosing different words to describe it. For instance:

9.1. Only adults who have reached the age of majority can lawfully choose a legal domicile.

9.2. Insane or incompetent persons cannot have a chosen domicile and take on the domicile of their caretakers.
9.3. Children assume the domicile of their parents.
9.4. Every government tax form in one way or another causes you to choose a domicile, and since the choice of form or the way you fill it out is your choice, then the domicile is also your choice. For instance, IRS Form 1040 causes you to choose a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory). IRS Form 1040NR is filled out by persons who do not have a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory).

10. No court of law or government official may lawfully interfere with your choice of domicile because:
10.1. Courts of justice may not lawfully involve themselves in “political questions”.
10.2. Public servants in the political branches of the government, including the Executive and Legislative branches, may not interfere with your First Amendment right to freely associate or disassociate.

12. Because choice of domicile is voluntary, income taxes based on it are also entirely voluntary and avoidable. The government does NOT want you to know that you can avoid income taxes, and so they will avoid discussing this and persecute all those who reveal it to the public.

13. Your domicile is whatever you say it is on a government form. Other evidentiary methods of determining legal domicile are ordinarily only employed where evidence of your direct declaration of domicile on a government form is not available. On government forms, “domicile” is synonymous with the terms “permanent address”.

14. Within the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A and all state revenue codes, a “resident” is an alien with a domicile, presence, or existence on federal territory. A person who is not physically present on federal territory can become a “resident” there by engaging in “commerce” within the legislative jurisdiction of that forum. This, in fact, is the main method by which the federal government manufactures “taxpayers” out of sovereign Americans domiciled in states of the Union. The Social Security system causes them to conduct commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States and thereby surrender sovereign immunity and become “resident aliens” pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2). Those engaging in such commerce are called “public officers” who are “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”. All those engaged in a “trade or business” are “resident aliens” of the United States. Older versions of the Treasury Regulations show this scam below:

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

15. Driver’s licenses issued by state governments are the method of choice for compelling persons to declare a legal domicile within a state. Because the government cannot compel you to choose a domicile, they also cannot compel you to obtain or use a state driver’s license.

16. Domicile is an abstract term that is difficult to legally prove. Because it is difficult to prove, the government will avoid discussions of the term. That is why the term only appears twice in the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code. They will also avoid discussing the term because they don’t want to acknowledge that they need your consent to both enforce the law against you and collect taxes from you.

17. Those who want to divorce the state which controls the place where they live may do so by declaring a domicile outside of their place of abode. Such persons are called:
17.1. “Transient foreigners”.
17.2. “Stateless persons” (in relation to the place they physically live).

18. Those who do not want to assume the liabilities of “domicile” within a jurisdiction cannot:
18.1. Register to vote within that jurisdiction.
18.2. Obtain a state driver’s license within that jurisdiction.
18.3. Serve as a jurist within that jurisdiction.
18.4. Indicate a “permanent address” on any government form that is within the jurisdiction of that government.
18.5. Apply for any government benefit, including Social Security, Medicare, etc.
18.6. Submit any form that implies a domicile there, such as the IRS Form 1040, which is only for use by “U.S. persons” with a legal domicile in the “United States” (federal territory). Instead, the 1040NR is the only proper form for “stateless persons” and “transient foreigners” to use in the context of federal taxation.

19. The only laws that may be enforced against “transient foreigners” are criminal laws. Civil laws require a legal domicile within the jurisdiction where the law applies. This is a result of the fact that the Declaration of Independence says that all just powers in a free government derive from the “consent of the governed” and that the only legitimate reason for the state to proceed against a person without his consent is when he is criminally injuring someone.

20. The Bible commands believers to be separate and sanctified, and to come out of the corrupted government that has become Satan's whore, which the Bible calls “Babylon the Great Harlot”. In effect, God commands us to DISASSOCIATE. We can do this legally and peacefully only by changing our domicile.

After these things I saw another angel coming down from heaven, having great authority, and the earth was illuminated with his glory.

And he cried mightily with a loud voice saying, ‘Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and has become a dwelling place of demons, a prison for every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hated bird!’

“For all the nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, the kings [politicians, who load us with debt] of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have become rich through the abundance of her luxury.”

And I heard another voice from heaven saying, ‘Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive her plagues.

“For her sins have reached to heaven, and God has remembered her iniquities.

“Render to her just as she rendered to you, and repay her double according to her works; in the cup which she has mixed, mix double for her.

“In the measure that she glorified herself and lived luxuriously, in the same measure give her torment and sorrow; for she says in her heart, ‘I sit as queen, and am no widow, and will not see sorrow.’

“Therefore her plagues [economic or stock market collapses] will come in one day—death and mourning and famine. And she will be utterly burned with fire [looting from all the greedy people who mortgaged themselves to the hilt and put their children into debt slavery to pay for their luxuries], for strong is the Lord God who judges her.”

[Rev. 18:1-8, Bible, NKJV]

21. If you want to divorce the state and become a "transient foreigner" wherever you go, we suggest the following resource:

| Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001 |
| http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm |

22. The government is just like any other corporation. The only product it delivers is “protection”. Government does not have a monopoly on “protection”. A government that compels you to procure or pay for its protection against your will is engaged in racketeering and organized crime. If the cost of government protection exceeds its benefits, any person or group are free to divorce the state by abandoning their domicile, and to provide their own more cost effective protection. Anyone may compete directly with the government in “the protection business” or elect to fire all protectors and instigate “front door justice”. This is a direct result of the fact that the U.S. Supreme Court said the essential purpose of the Constitution was to confer upon We the People the right to be LEFT ALONE by the government.

“The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a part of the pain, pleasure and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred, as against the Government, the right to be let alone - the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men.”

23. All income taxes are based on legal “domicile”. Income taxes support the police powers of the state, and the police powers of the state implement and enforce the law. If you don’t have a domicile in a place, then you can’t be liable for income taxes in that place because you are not being personally protected by the laws of that place.

24. Persons with a legal domicile on federal territory, which is called the “United States” in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. § 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. § 110(d), are called “U.S. persons”. Persons with a domicile in a place are also called “inhabitants”. Under the Internal Revenue Code Sections 7701(a)(39) and 7408(d), persons who declare a domicile in the “United States” are treated as virtual residents of the District of Columbia and “taxpayers” there regardless of where they physically live. “U.S. persons” include statutory “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. § 1401 and “residents” as defined in 26 U.S.C. § 7701(b)(1)(A).

25. Both “citizens” and “residents” have in common a “domicile” in a place and collectively are called “inhabitants”. Those without a domicile are called “transient foreigners”. IRS does NOT like people claiming they are “transient foreigners” because it destroys their ability to tax. They therefore omit this as an option on ALL their tax forms so you can’t property declare your status as a “nontaxpayer”. The only time that either “citizens” or “resident” can have a tax liability under I.R.C. Subtitle A is when they are temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. § 911. The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed in Cook v. Tait that taxation of “U.S. persons” abroad was permissible in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924). We have been able to identify NO provision of law that makes any statutory “citizen” or “resident” responsible for an income tax who is NOT temporarily abroad. Even then, they must be voluntarily engaged in a “trade or business”, which is a “public office”, in most cases to have any tax liability at all.

26. An “alien” or a “nonresident alien” with a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory) is called a “resident” in the Internal Revenue Code. You cannot lawfully be a “resident” and a “citizen” within the same jurisdiction at the same time.

5.4.9 The IRS IS NOT authorized to perform enforcement actions

By consulting Treasury Directive 27-03, Organization and Functions of the Office of the Assistant Secretary (Enforcement), we find that the Internal Revenue Service isn’t included in the list of Department of the Treasury enforcement agencies. You can view this order yourself on the Treasury website at:

http://www.ustreas.gov/regs/id27-03.htm

We also find that 26 CFR § 1.274-5T(k)(6)(ii) says that Internal Revenue Service special agents are specifically excluded from designation of law enforcement officers. If we then examine the Department of the Treasury organization chart, page 339 of the 2002-04 U.S. Government Manual available at:

we find that the Internal Revenue Service is not under authority of the Assistant Secretary (Enforcement), like all other enforcement arms of the Treasury. Therefore, the IRS is not an enforcement agency and has no lawful authority whatsoever to adversely affect the people or the rights of persons within states of the Union.

5.4.10 I.R.C. Subtitle A is voluntary for those with NO domicile in the federal zone and who are not a federal instrumentality

This section will show that Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, in the context of natural persons, is entirely voluntary for people domiciled within a state of the Union and who have not engaged in any contracts or employment with the federal government. Another way of saying this is that the explicit consent of all natural persons is required in some form before they can be called “taxpayers” by the IRS. Black’s Law Dictionary says under the definition of the term “excise tax”:

“excise tax: In current usage the term has been extended to include various license fees and practically every internal revenue tax EXCEPT THE INCOME TAX.”

What they are implying is that income taxes are really voluntary donations, but because the authors of the dictionary (who were lawyers) don’t want to undermine “voluntary compliance” with the Internal Revenue Code, they can’t be honest and just come out and say it, so they define what it isn’t and leave it up to you to figure out what it is! We even tried looking up the term “income tax” in that same Black’s Law dictionary and they don’t classify it as either a “direct tax” or an “indirect excise” there either. Sneaky, huh? That’s the way lawyers and the legal profession work, and it is precisely this kind of treacherous deceit that is behind why we recommend defending yourself primarily and only relying on lawyers as legal “coaches” when you get tripped up. See section 6.10 for more evidence of scandalous games like this by the legal profession. The preceding discussion helps to explain some of the following statements:

“Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint”.
[Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960)]

“Our tax system is based on individual self-assessment and voluntary compliance”.
[Mortimer Caplin, Internal Revenue Audit Manual (1975)]

[Dwight E. Avis, former head of the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division of the IRS, testifying before a House Ways and Means subcommittee in 1953]

“The purpose of the IRS is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax laws and regulations...”.

This raises a lot of questions indeed! Let’s try to answer a few. Here is the definition of the word “tax” from Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457:

“A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the public.

For clarity, we’d like to add to the end of the above definition: “...exact pursuant to positive law consistent with the U.S. constitution.” We say this because if the legislative authority to tax within states of the Union does not ultimately derive from the Constitution, then it is null and void because all powers not delegated to the government by the Sovereign People are reserved to the people (per the Tenth Amendment and Article VI, Clause 2 of the Constitution), which is the case with income taxes on Natural Born Persons.

Notice that you can’t call it a “tax” if it is “voluntary”! You have to call it a “donatio” and “donation”:

“Donatio: A gift. A transfer of the title of property to one who receives it without paying for it. The act by which the owner of a thing voluntarily transfers the title and possession of the same from himself to another person, without any consideration.”

“Voluntary: Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influences; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts.”

See the Tenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which says: “The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.” See also U.S. Constitution, Article VI, Clause 2, which says: “This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.”
We then have to go back to Table 5-1 at the beginning of this chapter and ask ourselves:

“What kind of Constitutional tax is described by Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code in relation to states of the Union?”

As you read through most of the federal appellate and district court cases dealing with income tax, they take great pains NOT to identify which of the five constitutional taxes the income tax is from Table 5-1. This is because:

1. They don’t want you to know which of the two legislative jurisdictions they are operating within: The federal zone or the states of the Union. If they said anything more than the above, they would generate a flurry of questions and inquiry that would destroy the tax system as we know it.
2. They don’t want you to know that the tax is on income derived from a taxable activity, because if you knew what the activity was, you would avoid it and thereby avoid the tax.
3. They know that the I.R.C. Subtitle A operates primarily within the District of Columbia and attaches to the person through private law or contract, instead of through positive and public law. Because it attaches through private voluntary contract in the form of an SS-5, W-4, or 1040 form, all of which must be signed and submitted by the party, then public or positive law is not required to enforce it. If they revealed how it attaches to the individual, then they would undermine its operation and deprive the government of revenues. Lawyers who are licensed by the government are not about to bite the hands that feed them.
4. They don’t want to admit that Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code only applies to legal “persons” domiciled within the federal zone on land under exclusive federal jurisdiction. If they did, few people would pay it and few CPA’s, attorneys, or even payroll people would be left with anything to do. The whole economy would have to shift to more honest endeavors.

The I.R.C. Subtitle A income tax, in the context of states of the Union, is therefore an indirect excise tax on other than natural persons when it is mandatory or involuntary. That means the proper subject of it is corporations and partnerships, and trusts and not biological people. The corporations and other artificial entities to which it applies must be engaged in one of the following corporate, excise taxable activities before they can have any taxable “sources” of income:

1. Employment and/or agency with the federal government called a “trade or business” within the District of Columbia. Signing or submitting either the W-4, the 1040, or the SSA Form SS-5 all create a presumption that the submitter maintains a legal domicile in the District of Columbia, or that he is acting as a federal “employee” or trustee on behalf of a corporation defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) called the “United States”. This corporation has a legal domicile in the District of Columbia, and therefore, when he is acting in that capacity, he too has a legal domicile there. See section 5.6.12 and following for further details.
2. “foreign commerce” coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution.

Excise taxes are taxes on government privileges. The average American is NOT in receipt of taxable privileges relating to the subjects above. However, because most Americans have been deceived by a lying IRS using their deceptive publications into misrepresenting their status on government forms, they have created a false presumption that they are “taxpayers”. American “nationals” everywhere, however, who know the law and the nature of this deception are free to earn as much money or goods as they please from outside of the District of Columbia without payment of any income tax under Subtitle A, so long as they don’t:

1. Forget to promptly correct all erroneous reports of receipt of excise taxable “income” received on forms 1099 or W-2.
2. Use a Social Security Number on any government form or in response to any tax collection notice. They must vociferously argue with anyone who tries to use such a number to refer to them. This is because anyone who has a Social Security Number is a federal “employee”. 26 CFR §422.104 falls under Title 20, which is entitled “Employee Benefits”, and it describes the only authority for issuing SSNs. These numbers can only be issued to federal “employees” and can only be used in conjunction with their official duties. See the following article for details: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/AboutSSNsAndTINs.pdf
3. Describe themselves as “taxpayers”
4. Describe their earnings as being associated with an excise taxable activity such as a “trade or business” or with “foreign commerce” coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution.
5. Claim that their earnings originate from the “United States”, which is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

6. File an IRS Form W-4 or an SSA Form SS-5. The regulations at 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1 and elsewhere say that both of these forms are contracts. You can’t keep your sovereignty if you contract it away to the federal government.

7. File the form 1040, which is the wrong form for most Americans. The 1040 can only be used by those with a domicile in the District of Columbia. IRS Document 7130 says it is only for use by “citizens” and “residents” of the “United States”, which is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

8. Maintain a legal domicile anywhere in the District of Columbia or “United States”. Instead, you must agree to govern, support, and protect yourself instead of nominating a government to be your protector.

A person who has done all the above is under no duty to account for their earnings or report them to anyone. It is easier for states to enact excises because they have the police power. The privileged excise activity is what establishes the legal duty to account for income produced as the result of the exercise of an excise. Income is the measure of the excise. An occupation tax is an excise measured by the amount of income the person in the occupation produces and that occupation must be licensed or privileged in some way to be the object of an income tax. A fuel tax is an excise tax on foreign commerce disguised as a consumption tax. The dollar amount of the fuel tax is a factor or percentage of the total amount of fuel sold or delivered. No matter how it is expressed, the excise is a tax on gross income. The only difference between a tax on gross income and net income is the certainty of the tax. In either case, there is an absolute requirement of sufficient police power to require the necessary record keeping to calculate either the gross or net income. The “national government” of the District of Columbia does not possess the general police power and without police power in the 50 Union states and outside of the federal zone. The federal government therefore has not authority to attempt to collect the equivalent of unapportioned direct taxes within states of the Union.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If I.R.C. Subtitles A and C income taxes are NOT indirect excise taxes upon foreign commerce or a “trade or business”, then why are the ONLY activities and persons upon which the tax “imposed” in receipt of privileges or associated mainly with foreign commerce and federal employment? Here are just a few examples of those privileges an entity or person must be in receipt of in order to be the subject of the income tax, and we’d like to emphasize that if your situation isn’t in this list, then you aren’t under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code!:

1. They must be a public official of the U.S. government in receipt of the privileges of public office and residing in the District of Columbia:
   - 26 CFR §301.6671-1 Rules for application of assessable penalties: “(b) Person defined. For purposes of subchapter B of chapter 68, the term "person" includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.”
   - 26 CFR §31.3401(c ) Employee: ". . . the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation.”
   - 26 U.S.C. §3401(c ) Employee: For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.
   - 8 Federal Register, Tuesday, September 7, 1943, §404.104, pg. 12267: Employee: “The term employee specifically includes officers and employees whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a state, territory, or political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing.”
   - Office (Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 1082): A right, and correspondent duty, to exercise a public trust. A public charge or employment. An employment on behalf of the government in any station or public trust, not merely transient, occasional, or incidental. The most frequent occasions to use the word arise with reference to a duty and power conferred on an individual by the government; and, when this is the connection, "public office" is a usual and more discriminating expression. But a power and duty may exist without immediate grant from government, and may be properly called an "office," as the office of executor. Here the individual acts towards legatees in performance of a duty, and in exercise of a power not derived from their consent, but devolved on him by an authority which quoad hoc is superior....
   - Appointment (Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 99): The designation of a person, by the person or persons having authority therefor, to discharge the duties of some office or trust. In re Nicholson's Estate, 104

1.7. Public Office, pursuant to Black’s Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, p. 1230 means:

   “Essential characteristics of a ‘public office’ are:
   (1) Authority conferred by law,
   (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
   (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
   (4) Key element of such test is that ‘officer is carrying out a sovereign function’.
   (5) Essential elements to establish public position as ‘public office’ are:
      (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
      (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
      (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
      (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
      (e) Position must have some permanency.”

   Section 6331 Levy and Distrain.

   Section 6331(a) Authority of Secretary. - If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334 (9)) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer of such officer, employee or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

   You will note that the above describes the ONLY persons upon which a levy or garnishment may be executed, and this activity applies ONLY to Title 27 Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms and NOT to Subtitle A income taxes, as there are no implementing regulations written by the Secretary of the Treasury that would apply the above section to Subtitle A Income Taxes.

2. Taxable sources: All taxable sources identified in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1) are either privileged sources or involved with foreign commerce (see the Constitution, Art. 1, Section 8, Clause 3, which authorizes regulating foreign trade). The I.R.C. Subtitle A income tax is a tax on the source as measured by income, NOT a tax on income. The taxable sources identified in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1) of the treasury regulations apply to ALL income, both from within the United States (federal zone) and without and include:

   2.1. Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC) taxable income. Corporations are fictitious entities created by the government and therefore in receipt of government privileges.
   2.2. Foreign Sales Corporation (FSC) taxable income. Corporations are fictitious entities created by the government and therefore in receipt of government privileges.
   2.3. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in a trade or business within the United States.

   26 U.S.C. §7701 (a)(26)

   The term "trade or business" includes the performance of the functions of a public office.

   You will note that holding of a public office is a privilege associated with government service.

2.4. Foreign base company income. These companies operate on U.S. territory/property abroad and are therefore in... receipt of government privileges and must pay taxes on that privilege.

2.5. Other operative sections relating to foreign income, including:

(vi) Other operative sections. The rules provided in this section also apply in determining--
(A) The amount of foreign source items...
(B) The amount of foreign mineral income...
(C) [Reserved]
(D) The amount of foreign oil and gas extraction income...
(E) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
(F) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
(G) (deals with Virgin Islands tax credits)
(H) The income derived from Guam by an individual...
(I) (deals with China Trade Act corporations)
(J) (deals with foreign corporations)
(K) (deals with insurance income of foreign corporations)
(L) (deals with countries subject to international boycott)
(M) (deals with the Merchant Marine Act of 1936) [26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)]

Now do you understand? With this remarkable realization in mind, is it any wonder why the IRS won’t give you a good straight definition of “voluntary compliance” on its website and tries to intimidate ignorant people into paying income taxes they aren’t liable for? They operate on bluff and our own ignorance is how they can continue to victimize us. As one Senator put it:

“In a recent conversation with an official at the Internal Revenue Service, I was amazed when he told me that 'If the taxpayers of this country ever discover that the IRS operates on 90% bluff the entire system will collapse'”.
[Henry Bellmon, Senator (1969)]

It is precisely the above situation that is the reason why we wrote this book: to eliminate the ignorance of Americans everywhere.

One question we get often from our readers about the I.R.C. along these lines is the following:

“I am making my way through your book, The Great IRS Hoax. Anyway it is gigantic, but extremely interesting. I am only a few hundred pages into it. I am confused on one issue though. From what I have read, a natural born citizen of the United States of America is not required by law to pay income tax, but foreigners, DC residents, corporations, etc do. What about if you are an American National who works for a corporation, are you required to pay taxes then?”

Good question! When we work for a corporation (e.g. a corporation registered in the District of Columbia only), the corporation’s income is taxable by the government that granted the privilege of its existence but not by other governments. For instance, in order to be liable for federal corporate income taxes, a corporation must have been incorporated and have a physical presence in the District of Columbia, a federal territory, or other part of the federal zone. If the corporation is a state only corporation, then it is liable to pay income taxes on its earnings to the state that granted its charter to exist, but not to the federal government.

But what about people who work for a state-chartered corporation that is not registered or incorporated under federal law? As we say later in this chapter, in section 5.6.7, the only people who can earn “wages” are federal “employees” working within exclusive federal legislative jurisdiction and who consent or volunteer under the provisions of 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 to participate in federal withholding. Therefore, it doesn’t matter who we work for as long as it isn’t the U.S. government and as long as we never consent to participate in payroll withholding by submitting a W-4. If we use the right payroll withholding forms, which is the W-8 and not the W-4, and maintain the correct citizenship status, which is that of a “national”, then we would be nonresident aliens who are not the proper subject of nearly all federal revenue “schemes” described by Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. This is confirmed by examining 26 U.S.C. §871(a) , which describes all taxable subjects for those domiciled in states of the Union who are “nationals” and “nonresident aliens”. Note that the list DOES NOT include “wages”, “salaries” and only includes earnings from within the “United States”, which is the District of Columbia. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i) confirms that nonresident aliens who are working for nonresident aliens and whose earnings are not connected with a political office, which is nearly everyone in states of the Union, do not need to include earnings from labor in their “gross income”.

The people working for a state corporation are therefore not liable for extortion to either the state or federal government, because federal liability is universally a prerequisite to state income tax liability. The corporation in this case is the direct recipient of state (but not federal) government privileges, but the employees of the corporation are indirect recipients of these privileges through the earnings they receive from their labor. If the company is employee owned and the employees get stock options and there is appreciation on either their stock or the options, then the employees have a realized gain or profit that is “unearned income” from the appreciation on the corporate stock. This profit or appreciation is a direct result of their labor but is “unearned income” NOT considered part of their earnings from labor. If they were a corporation in receipt of these earnings, then they could be liable for income tax on such profit, but once again, they can only be taxed as a sovereign American National if the VOLUNTEER, because the constitution prohibits unapportioned DIRECT TAXES upon individuals. Only STATES can be taxed directly, and not the individuals in them, under Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4, and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution.

What about licenses to pursue certain occupations? What kinds of licenses can be taxed? The only licenses subject to federal income taxes are those coming under 27 U.S.C., which is for Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms and which only apply within the federal zone. Receipt of any other occupational license or government privilege, so far as we know, does not make one liable for the payment of 26 U.S.C. Subtitles A and C personal income taxes. Here is what one Oregon court said about privileges as they pertain to natural born persons:

To summarize this section then, what you should have learned is that the notion of calling the income tax described in Subtitles A through C of the Internal Revenue Code a “tax” in reality constitutes fraud on the part of the federal government. The other part of the fraud is not clarifying what is meant in the statutes by “tax” (either a tax OR a donation), “United States” (the federal United States) or “employee” (a public official of the U.S. government), “trade or business” (the holding of public office), or “indirect excise tax” in IRS publications and the Internal Revenue Code. “The big lie” therefore begins with the distortions of our language by the government that deprives us of our liberties as described below.

[Confucius, circa 500 B.C.]

5.4.11 The money you send to the IRS is a Gift to the U.S. government

31 U.S.C. §321(d)

(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may accept, hold, administer, and use gifts and bequests of property, both real and personal, for the purpose of aiding or facilitating the work of the Department of the Treasury. Gifts and bequests of money and the proceeds from sales of other property received as gifts or bequests shall be deposited in the Treasury in a separate fund and shall be disbursed on order of the Secretary of the Treasury. Property accepted under this paragraph, and the proceeds thereof, shall be used as nearly as possible in accordance with the terms of the gift or bequest.

(2): “For the purposes of the Federal income, estate, and gift taxes, property accepted under paragraph (1) shall be considered as a gift or bequest to or for the use of the United States.”

Now let’s look at the surprising definition of the word “gift” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 688:

Gift: A voluntary transfer of property to another made gratuitously and without consideration. Bradley v. Bradley, Tex.Civ.App., 540 S.W.2d. 504, 511. Essential requisites of “gift” are capacity of donor, intention of donor to make gift, completed delivery to or for donee, and acceptance of gift by donee.

In tax law, a payment is a gift if it is made without conditions, from detached and disinterested generosity, out of affection, respect, charity or like impulses, and not from the constraining force of any moral or legal duty or from the incentive of anticipated benefits of an economic nature.

And finally, lets look up the word “voluntary” from Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575:

“Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice.
without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed."

The above considerations might explain why the Congress created 31 U.S.C. §321(d)(2), which says that income taxes, estate taxes, and gift taxes are "gifts" to the U.S. government. Therefore, because "gifts" and "bequests" are never mandatory and must always be a product of choice and not compulsion, then they aren't "taxes" in a legal sense and Subtitles A and C actually describe a voluntary donation program for the municipal government of the District of Columbia! There can be no other rational conclusion you can reach after reading this section. You can read this amazing statute for yourself at:

http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/31/321.html

Because the monies paid the government and IRS under the guise of a lawful income tax are actually gifts, then the Supreme Court has said that such gifts are non-refundable if voluntarily paid, even if they are mistakenly paid. The only way to maintain the ability to get these gifts back is to pay them "under protest":

"If the duties demanded of Nicholl & Co. had been paid under protest, their payment, in the sense of the law, would have been compulsory, but as they were paid without protest it was a voluntary payment, doubtless made and received in mutual mistake of the law; but in such a case, as was decided in Elliott v. Swartwout, no action will lie to recover back the money."

Besides, if there had been a regulation of the department on the subject, it could not affect the rights of the appellants, for such a regulation cannot change a law of Congress.

How do we pay something under protest? Well, simply put, we indicate the words “under protest” near our signature or somewhere on the tax return or letter attached to it. Once we have done this, we have reserved our right to recover the coerced “gift” in a court of law.

Getting back to our friends at the Department of Plunder, the IRS depends not only upon its highly publicized actions but upon its perceived power in order to instill fear into honest Americans and, according to the agency itself, to: "Maintain a sense of presence."

Quoting from a book called IRS In Action by Santo Presti, we read:

"Fear is the key element for the IRS in achieving its mission. Without fear, the IRS would have a difficult time maintaining our so-called system of voluntary compliance...".

And what exactly does "voluntary compliance" really mean?

In 1953, Mr. Dwight E. Avis, head of the Alcohol and Tobacco Division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, made the following remarkable statement to a subcommittee of the Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Representatives:

"Let me point this out now: Your income tax is 100 percent voluntary tax, and your liquor tax is 100 percent enforced tax. Now, the situation is as different as day and night."

In 1971, the following quote was found in the IRS instruction booklet for Form 1040:

"Each year American taxpayers voluntarily file their tax returns and make a special effort to pay the taxes they owe."

In 1974, Donald C. Alexander, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, published the following statement in the March 29 issue of The Federal Register:

"The mission of the Service is to encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance with the tax laws and regulations..."
One year later, in 1975, his successor, Mortimer Caplin authored the following statement in the Internal Revenue Audit Manual:

"Our system is based on individual self-assessment and voluntary compliance."

In 1980, yet another IRS commissioner, Jerome Kurtz (their turnover is high) issues a similar statement in their Internal Revenue Annual Report:

"The IRS's primary task is to collect taxes under a voluntary compliance system."

Even the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the system of federal income taxation is voluntary, starting in Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960):

"...the government can collect the tax from a district court suitor by exercising its power of distraint...but we cannot believe that compelling resort to this extraordinary procedure is either wise or in accord with congressional intent. Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint. If the government is forced to use these remedies (distraint) on a large scale, it will affect adversely the taxpayers willingness to perform under our VOLUNTARY assessment system."

The dictionary defines "distraint" to mean the act or action of distrainting, that is, seizing property to distress or taking by force. One way to determine for whom the income tax is mandatory is to look at the section of the code that talks about the types of levy and distraint that are authorized and how they may be instituted. The only section of the entire Internal Revenue Code that talks about levy and distraint is 26 U.S.C. Section. 6331, and it plainly states that only the Secretary of the Treasury (not the IRS) may institute levy and distraint and that he has the authority to do so ONLY on instrumentalities of the federal government, such as officers or elected officials of the United States situated in the federal zone. The Secretary of the Treasury may NOT therefore effect levy or distraint outside of the federal zone or in nonfederal areas in the 50 Union states on other than its own officers. Here is that section of the Internal Revenue Code:

(a) Authority of Secretary

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

The IRS' definition of "employee" is also consistent with the above conclusions on the limitations on liability for paying the federal income tax:

26 CFR §31.3401(c) Employee: "...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed of the United States, a federal State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."

26 U.S.C. Sec. 3401(c) Employee

For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes its limited to an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.
26 CFR §31.3401(c)-1

Generally, physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, subcontractors, public stenographers, auctioneers, and others who follow an independent trade, business, or profession, in which they offer their services to the public, are not employees.

IRS Publication 21 is widely distributed to high schools. It acknowledges that compliance with a Law that requires the filing of returns is voluntary. Get to those young minds early, and it's easier to wash their brains later on in life.

At the same time, Publication 21 suggests that the filing of a return is mandatory, as follows:

"Two aspects of the Federal income tax system--voluntary compliance with the Law and self-assessment of tax--make it important for you to understand your rights and responsibilities as a taxpayer. Voluntary compliance places on the taxpayer the responsibility for filing an income tax return. You must decide whether the Law requires you to file a return. If it does, you must file your return by the date it is due."

Perhaps one of the most famous quotes on this question of the voluntary nature of income taxes came from Roger M. Olsen, Assistant Attorney General, Tax Division, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C., on Saturday, May 9, 1987, when Olsen told an assemblage of tax lawyers:

"We encourage voluntary compliance by scaring the heck out of you!"

Meaning, "Assess yourself and volunteer to comply or we'll seize your property and you may go to jail" (exercise "distraint", that is, which the Supreme Court said in Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960) was NOT to be used as part of our tax system!)

What is the difference between the voluntary filing of a tax return and the voluntary paying of income tax on taxable income? A world of difference. Millions of people don't file income tax returns. For instance, below is a clip from a GAO report on nonfilers published in 1996 (see http://www.devvy.com/abra_19991021.html):

"In 1993, IRS received about 114 million individual income tax returns. Almost all of those returns were for tax year 1992. For that same tax year, IRS identified 59.6 million potential individual nonfilers. Of the 59.6 million, IRS took no enforcement action on 54.1 million (91 percent), primarily because IRS subsequently determined that the individual or business had no legal requirement to file."

So as we can see, LOTS of people don't file returns and no enforcement action is taken against them. Why, as we see above, would the IRS not want to institute enforcement action? Because:

5.4.12 Taxes Paid on One’s Own Labor are Slavery

"You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men [and government is made up of men]."

Slavery, we are reminded incessantly these days, was a terrible thing. In today’s politically correct society, some blacks are demanding reparations for slavery because their remote ancestors were slaves. Slavery is routinely used to bash the South, although the slave trade began in the North, and slavery was once practiced in every state in the Union. Today’s historians assure us that the War for Southern Independence was fought primarily if not exclusively over slavery, and that by winning that war, the North put an end to the peculiar institution once and for all.

Whoa! Time out! Shouldn’t we back up and ask: what is slavery? It has been a while since those ranting on the subject have offered us a working definition of it. They will all claim that we know good and well what it is; why play games with the word? But given the adage that those who can control language can control policy, it surely can’t hurt to revisit the definition of slavery. There are good reasons to suspect the motives of those who won’t allow their basic terms to be defined or scrutinized. Here is a definition, one that will make sense of the instincts telling us that slavery is indeed an abomination:

Slavery is non-ownership of one’s Person and Labor.

Slavery is the opposite of “liberty” or the absence of liberty. We have an excellent animation on our website that very clearly and simply defines what liberty is, which helps us understand what slavery is at the address below:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Articles/PhilosophyOfLiberty-english.swf

Slavery, therefore, is involuntary servitude. When a slave is working to pay off a debt, he is called a “peon”. A slave must work under a whip, real or figurative, wielded by other persons, his owners, with no say in how (or even if) his labors are compensated. His is a one-way contract he cannot opt out of. A slave is tied to his master (and to the land where he labors), He cannot simply quit if he doesn’t like it. Moreover, a slave can be bought and sold like any other commodity. Justice Brewer of the U.S. Supreme Court helped us to understand exactly what slavery is in the case of Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905):

“The constitutionality and scope of sections 1990 and 5526 present the first questions for our consideration. They prohibit peonage. What is peonage? It may be defined as a state or condition of compulsory service, based upon the indebtedness of thepeon to the master. The basal fact is indebtedness. As said by Judge Benedict, delivering the opinion in Jaremillo v. Romero, 1 N.Mex. 190, 194: ‘One fact existed universally; all were indebted to their masters. This was the cord by which they seemed bound to their masters’ service.’

Upon this is based a condition of compulsory service. Peonage is sometimes classified as voluntary or involuntary, but this implies simply a difference in the mode of origin, but not in the character of the servitude. The one exists where the debtor voluntarily contracts to enter the service of his creditor. The other is forced upon the debtor by some provision of law. But peonage, however created, is compulsory service, involuntary servitude. Thepeon can release himself therefrom, it is true, by the payment of the debt, but otherwise the service is enforced. A clear distinction exists between peonage and the voluntary performance of labor or rendering of services in payment of a debt. In the latter case the debtor, though contracting to pay his indebtedness by labor or service, and subject like any other contractor to an action for damages for breach of that contract, can elect at any time to break it, and no law or force compels performance or continuance of the service.”

Here’s another example of what slavery means, again from the U.S. Supreme Court in Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537, 542 (1896):

“That it does not conflict with the Thirteenth Amendment, which abolished slavery and involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, is too clear for argument. Slavery implies involuntary servitude—a state of bondage; the ownership of mankind as a chattel, or at least the control of the labor and services of one man for the benefit of another, and the absence of a legal right to the disposal of his own person, property, and services [in their entirety]. This amendment was said in the Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall, 36, to have been intended primarily to abolish slavery, as it had been previously known in this country, and that it equally forbade Mexican peonage or the Chinese coolie trade, when they amounted to slavery or involuntary servitude.
and that the use of the word ‘servitude’ was intended to prohibit the use of all forms of involuntary slavery, of whatever class or name.”

When the IRS fabricates a bogus tax liability without the authority of enacted positive law creating a “liability”, if they lie to you about what the tax Code says, or if they try to enforce an excise tax against activities that that you aren’t involved in and which you have informed them under penalty of perjury that you aren’t involved in, and then they effectively are recruiting or returning you into debt slavery and “peonage” and their activities are a federal offense in violation of 42 U.S.C. §1994 and 18 U.S.C. §1581. These two statutes, incidentally, unlike most other federal legislation and statutes, DO apply within states of the union according to the U.S. Supreme Court in the above mentioned case. 18 U.S.C. §1593 also mandates restitution for all those persons who have been recruited into slavery or involuntary servitude by their slave masters, which means that we must be compensated fairly for the labor of ours that was in effect stolen from us. Why hasn’t the Supreme Court attempted to prevent the unconstitutional implementation of an otherwise constitutional tax law that only operates (as written) within the District of Columbia and other federal territories? Because they are bought and paid for with money they are STEALING from you! By acquiescing to the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code, which is otherwise constitutional, you are bribing them to maintain the status quo, friends!

In the case of the way the corrupt IRS and an even more corrupted federal judiciary mis-enforces our laws or pretends that there is a positive law federal taxing statute when in fact there isn’t one, the very real slavery that results is at odds with libertarian social ethics, in which all human beings have a natural right to ownership of Person and Labor. According to libertarian social ethics, contracts should be voluntary and not coerced. This is sufficient for us to oppose slavery with all our might. However, notice that this clear definition of slavery is a double-edged sword. There is no reference to race in the above definition. That whites enslaved blacks early in our history is an historical accident; there is nothing inherently racial about slavery. Many peoples have been enslaved in the past, including whites. The South, too, has no intrinsic connection with slavery, given how we already noted that it was practiced in the North as well. No slaves were brought into the Confederacy during its brief, five-year existence, and it is very likely that the practice would have died out in a generation or two had the Confederacy won the war. The Emancipation Proclamation, in fact, freed all the slaves over which Lincoln had NOT JURISDICTION.

It is instructive at this point to compare the status of being a “negro slave” to that of being a “taxpayer” to show you just how similar they are, in fact. We have prepared a table comparing each of these two statuses to show you that they are indeed synonymous:

Finally, it is clear that when most people talk about slavery, they are referring to chattel slavery, the overt practice of buying, selling and owning people like farm animals or beasts of burden. Are there other forms of slavery besides chattel slavery?

Before answering, let’s review our definition above and contrast slavery with sovereignty, in the sense of sovereignty over one’s life. Slavery, we said, is non-ownership of Person and Labor. In that case, sovereignty is ownership of Person and Labor. The basic contrast, then, is between slavery and sovereignty, and the issue is ownership. And there are two basic things one can own: one’s Person (one’s life), and one’s Labor (the fruits of one’s labors, including personal wealth resulting from productive labors).

Let us quantify the situation. A plantation slave owned neither himself nor the fruits of his labors. That is, he owned 0% of Person and 0% of Labor. In an ideal libertarian order, ownership of Person and Labor would be just the opposite: 100% of both. In this case, we have a method allowing us to describe other forms of slavery by ascribing different percentages of ownership to Person and Labor. For example, we might say that a prison inmate owns 5% of Person and 50% of Labor. Inmates are highly confined in person yet they are allowed to own wealth both inside the prison and outside. Some, moreover, are allowed to work at jobs for which they are paid. When slavery was abolished, ownership of Person and Labor was transferred to the slave, and he became mostly free. So let us define the following categories in terms of individual percentage ownership:

With this in mind, here is an intriguing question for our readers:

How much ownership do you have in your person and your labor?

Are you really free? Or are you a partial slave or peon? We are not, of course, talking about arrangements that cede a portion of ownership of Person and Labor to others through voluntary contract.

We submit that forcible taxation on your personal income makes you a partial slave and makes the government a socialist government. For if you are legally bound to hand a certain percentage of your income (the fruits of your labors) over to federal, state and local governments, then from the legal standpoint you only have "some % ownership" of your person and labor. The pivotal point is whether or not ownership is ceded through voluntary contract. Have you any recollection of any deals you signed with the IRS promising them payment of part of your income? If not, then if 30% of your income is paid in income taxes, then you have only 70% ownership of Labor. You are a slave from January through April – a very conservative estimate at best, today!

If one wants to stand on the U.S. Constitution as one’s foundation, then the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution can be used as an ironclad argument against a forcible direct tax on the labor of a human being. The 13th Amendment says:

"Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for a crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction. Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The 13th Amendment makes it very clear that we cannot legally or Constitutionally be forced into involuntary servitude. It doesn’t make any distinction between whether the slavery is physical or financial, but says that any kind of involuntary servitude is prohibited.

As such, we maintain that a human being has an inalienable right to own 100% of Person and 100% of Labor, including control over how the fruits of his actions are dispensed. A human being has an inalienable right to control the compensation for his labor while in the act of any service in the marketplace – e.g., digging ditches, flipping burgers, word-processing documents for a company, programming computers, preparing court cases, performing surgery, preaching sermons, or writing novels.

A forcible direct tax on the labor of a human being is in violation of this right as stated in the 13th Amendment. If we work 40 hours a week, and another entity forcibly conscripts 25% of our compensation, then we argue that we have been forced into involuntary servitude – slavery – for 10 of those 40 hours, and we were free for the other 30. If we could freely choose to work just the 30 hours and decline to work the 10 hours, then our wills would not be violated and the 13th Amendment would be honored.

However, Congress and the IRS claim that their Internal Revenue Code (IRC) lay direct claim to those ten hours (or some stated percentage) without our consent.

In other words, in a free and just society, a society in which there is no slavery of any form:

- Human beings are not forced to work for free, in whole or in part.
- Human beings are not slaves to anything or anyone.
- Anyone who attempts to force us to work for free, without compensation, has violated our rights under the 13th Amendment.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

This, of course, is not the state of affairs in the United States of America at the turn of the millennium, in which:

- We labor involuntarily for at least four months out of every year for the government.
- We are, therefore, slaves for that period of time.
- The government, having forced us to work for free, without compensation, has violated the 13th Amendment.

Of course, what follows from all this discussion is that there is an issue about slavery. But it is not the issue politically correct historians and activists are raising. As for reparations, we suspect many of us might be willing to let bygones be bygones if we never had to pay out another dime to the IRS. We often read about how great the economy is supposedly doing. Just imagine how it would flourish if human beings owned 100% of Person and Labor, and could voluntarily invest the capital we currently pay to the government in our businesses, our homes, our schools, and our communities!

For those of you who believe that the 16th Amendment repealed, replaced, modified, appended, amended or superseded the 13th Amendment, you are mistaken. For an Amendment to be changed, in any way, there must be an Amendment that emphatically declares this action. There is absolutely nothing in the Constitution that alters the efficacy of the 13th Amendment in even the slightest way. The 16th merely allowed the government to enter the "National Social Benefits" business where it finances the system with the mandatory contributions of voluntary participants. While all Americans certainly understand the concept of mandatory contributions, they fail to understand the concept of voluntary participation, largely due to a very effective marketing campaign on the part of our central government for several generations now since the Great Depression. The 16th gave the government the power to legally enter a contractual relationship with its citizens wherein the citizen voluntarily contributes a portion of his labor in exchange for social benefits. In order for both Amendments to peacefully coexist, the contractual relationships in the system created by the 16th cannot be forced upon the citizens. For to do so would be to contradict the 13th completely.

Two final questions, and a few final thoughts. Can we really take seriously the carping of politically correct historians about an arrangement (chattel slavery) that hasn’t existed for 140 years when they completely ignore the structurally similar arrangements (tax slavery) that have existed right under their noses during most of the years since. And does a governmental system which systematically violates its own founding documents, and then oversees the imprisoning of those who refuse to recognize the legitimacy of the violations, really have a claim on the loyalty of those who would be loyal to the ideals represented in those founding documents?

Eventually, we have to make a decision. How long are we going to continue to put up with the present hypocritical arrangements? In the Declaration of Independence is found these remarks:

"... and accordingly all Experience hath shewn, that Mankind are more disposed to suffer, while Evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the Forms to which they are accustomed."

We are accustomed to the income tax. Most people take it for granted, and don’t look at fundamental issues. Yet some have indeed opted out of the tax system. It is necessary, at present, to become self-employed and hire oneself out based on a negotiated contract in which you determine your hourly rate and then bill for your time. Then you send your client an invoice, they write a check directly to you in response, and you take the check and deposit it in your bank account; you may wish to open a bank account with a name like John Smith Enterprises DBA (DBA stands for ‘Doing Business As’). If the bank asks for a tax-ID number, you may give your social security number. This is perfectly legal since you are not a corporation nor are you required to be. Nor does the use of a government issued number contractually obligate you to participate in their system.

We should specify here that we are discussing taxes on income resulting from personal labor, to be carefully distinguished from taxes for the sale of material items, or excise taxes, both of which are usually indirect taxes on artificial entities like corporations. These are an entirely separate, and voluntary matter, because if you don’t want to pay the tax, you either don’t buy the good or don’t register as a corporation that sells the good.

By advocating opting out of the income tax slavery system, we are not advocating anything illegal here; that is the most surprising thing of all. The Treasury Department nailed Al Capone not because of failure to pay taxes on his personal labor but for his failure to pay the excise tax on the sale of alcoholic beverages. So a plan to be self-employed that includes profit from the sale of material goods should include a plan to pay all the excise taxes; you risk a prison sentence if you don’t. But the 13th Amendment directly prohibits anything or anyone from conscripting your person or the fruits of your physical or cognitive labors; to do so is make a slave of you. You may, of course, voluntarily participate in the SSA-W2 system by free choice. In this case you are required to submit to the rules as outlined in the Internal Revenue Code (IRC). And this means that you will contribute a significant fraction of your labor to pay for the group benefits of the system in which you are voluntarily participating.

Your relationship with the system technically begins with the assignment of a Social Security Number (Personal Tax ID Number). This government-issued number, however, does not contractually obligate you to anything. The government cannot conscript its citizens simply by assigning a number to them. Assigning the number is perfectly fine. But conscripting them in the process is a serious no-no. Some people that feel strongly about the last chapters of the book of Revelation might view this as pure – evil.

The critical point in the relationship begins when a citizen accepts a job with an IRS registered corporation. Accepting the government owned SSA-W2 job marries you to the system. The payroll department has the employee fill out a W4. This W4 officially notifies the employee that the job in question is officially part of the SSA-W2 system and that all job-income is subject first to the rules and regulations of the IRC and then secondly to the employee. When you sign that W4 you are at that point very, very married to the system.

So why not just decline to sign the W4?

You can decline to sign a W4 but this does not accomplish much nor does it un-marriage you from the system. Your payroll office will merely use the IRC defaults already present in the payroll software and all deductions will be based on those parameters.

Okay, you might say, fine, I'll sign a W4 but I'll direct my payroll department to withhold zero. (You can do this for federal withholding but not for social security tax.) This still does not un-marriage you from the system. Your payroll department still reports the gross income and deductions for your SSA-W2 job to the IRS each and every quarter. And at the end of the year you will probably end up being asked to write a large check to the IRS for the group contributions you declined to pay during the year. With skill and the resources in this book, you may escape this assumed but nonexistent liability.

You then might say, Okay, then I'll just direct my payroll office to decline to report income to the IRS.

Reply: they cannot legally decline to report your SSA-W2 income because of their contractual obligations under the IRC that were agreed to when they established their official IRS registered corporation. The corporation can get into deep trouble by violating their contract.

Okay, you reply in turn, I'll just get the corporation to create a non-SSA-W2 job for me.

Response this time: the corporation cannot do this either; their contract under the IRC requires every single employee-job in that corporation to be an SSA-W2 job. This is similar to labor union practices of insisting that all jobs in a plant be union jobs.

You retort: isn't this a government monopoly on every corporate job in America???

The short answer is YES.

So how can I legally decline to work for free?

The answer is to decline to be an 'employee' of an official IRS registered corporation.

How is that possible?

The answer is simple. You become an independent contractor. The Supreme Court upholds the sovereignty of the individual and has declared that your "...power to contract is unlimited." Corporations hire the labors of non-employees each and every day.

If there is an infestation of cockroaches near the employee break-room, the corporation doesn't create an SSA-W2 employee exterminator job. They hire a contract exterminator to kill the bugs. When the bug-man arrives they don't hand him a W4 and ask him to declare his allowances, they lead him straight to the big-fat-ugly roaches and implore him to vanquish the vermin immediately. When the bug-man finishes the job he hands them an invoice for his services. And the company sends him a check to pay the invoice. And nowhere on that check will you find a federal, state, county or city withholding deduction or a social security deduction or a medical or dental deduction or a garnishment or an "I'll-be-needling-an-accountant-to-figure-all-this-out" deduction or a "Tuesday-Save-The-Turnips-Tax" deduction. On the contrary, the bug-man receives full remuneration for his service. This simple arrangement is completely legal and the IRC has zero contractual claim to any part of this check (assuming the bug-man has made no contract under the IRC). And anyone or anything that attempts to forcibly conscript any part of that check is violating the bug-man's rights under the 13th Amendment.

Supreme Court Ruling on Individual Sovereignty

"There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."

[Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

What does the bug-man do with his check?

The short answer is ... he keeps it ... all of it.

What about filing a tax return?

The bug-man declines to file a return since he has nothing to report that is under the jurisdiction of the IRC. Since he does not work in a government owned SSA-W2 job he is out of the system and under no contractual obligation to make contributions. The corporation that wrote him a check for his service legally reports it as an internal business expense. He is legally classified as a non-participant.

If you are in the SSA-W2 system:

The purpose of an individual year-end tax-return is to settle the exact amount of contractually required contributions to the SSA-W2 system as determined by the IRC. Filing is purely voluntary. You can decline to file but doing so does not release you from your contractual obligations under the IRC. In the absence of a tax-return, the IRS falsely believes that the IRC permits them to file a tax-return on your behalf and they are allowed to file a return that maximally favors them. Most people don’t challenge their illegal attempt to make a return if you don’t provide them with one. And this they will do if it creates a receivable – accounting lingo for – "you owe them money." They will decline to file a return if it would create a payable – accounting lingo for "they owe you money." If the IRS files a return and creates a receivable against you they will send you a notice declaring their claim. If you decline to pay, the IRC permits the IRS to file a tax-lien against you if you are a "public officer" of the U.S. government. This of course will be seen on your credit report. And the end result is your credit is damaged. The IRS computers will see to it that the lien remains on your credit report until the lien is paid. You can't beat a computer.

What if I file a return but cheat like crazy?

This is a very bad idea. The Treasury Department nailed Leona Helmsley not because she failed to pay taxes on her personal labor but because she filed a fraudulent tax return. Filing a dishonest tax return puts you at risk. The IRS is very astute at defending itself. Basically the IRS is responsible for enforcing the IRC rules. If you are in the SSA-W2 system you have to live by the IRC. If you decide to stay in the system, we recommend securing the services of a highly qualified CPA or tax attorney that can assist you in filing the most advantageous return possible without committing fraud or risking an audit.

In the end, the law does allow you to opt-out because you can't be forced to work for free. If you do opt-out there are at least 2 potential inconveniences you need to understand:
1. Difficulty with conventional loans. You will have a far more difficult time getting loans from conventional banks, because so often these depend on verifying your income with signed tax returns you no longer have. You can hire an accountant to compose a certified financial statement that some loan institutions may accept as valid proof of income.

2. No unemployment benefits. This benefit is part of the SSA-W2 system and since you’re not in the system you can’t use the benefits. If you have no contracts you only have yourself to complain to, you can’t complain to the government because you can’t get anyone to do business with you.

Moreover, some who have opted out have moved all their physical assets into a trust. This measure makes it almost impossible for the IRS to touch the assets. The IRS, after all, cannot simply decide to go after a person’s wealth. They have to obey IRC rules as well. If there is no income over which they have jurisdiction then they can legally do nothing.

It is worth noting, finally, that the government is in the "National Social Benefits" business. The government entered this business with the ratification of the 16th Amendment and has achieved a near perfect monopoly in this market (a violation of anti-trust laws). If you don't believe this, try finding a non-SSA-W2 job with a U.S. corporation. As such, it is in the interest of any business that has a monopoly to get the customers to believe that there is no alternative to the present business relationship. The government is not about to provide any of its customers (you and I) with any information suggesting otherwise. In obtaining such information, we are clearly on our own; no government agency will assist you in opting out of the income tax system or the social security system, with the possible exception of the U.S. Supreme Court, should the right case one day come before them.

So one’s best weapon is still the Declaration of Independence, the U.S. Constitution, the 13th Amendment, and information. Whatever the inconveniences, the reward is personal sovereignty – otherwise known as freedom. If you would like to know more about the subject of the taxability of wages, we have prepared a whole line of deposition questions on the subject useful in an IRS audit or deposition that basically backs the government into the corner of admitting based on facts and evidence and their own words that wages of natural persons and not corporations cannot be taxable. It is at:

Look under section 2 of the questions entitled “Right to Labor” for some rather compelling evidence showing that what we are saying here is true.

5.4.13 The word “shall” in the tax code actually means “may”

Many people who read the tax code are deceived by the word “shall”. When they see that word, they assume it creates a mandatory obligation on their part to obey. In this section, we will explore further exactly what this important word means from a legal perspective to show that it really means “may”. This conclusion then reinforces our hypothesis that the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A is indeed completely “voluntary”.

The first place to check on how the word “shall” is being used in the Code, starts with where all construction begins, that is, within the statute itself. The word 'shall' is not defined in the Code. The next step would be to see, or how, in general, is the word 'shall' defined by the courts. There are very few judicial precedents that deal directly with on the definition of this important word, but we will review what we have found so far to conclusively prove the hypothesis of this section.

In Fort Howard Paper Company vs Fox River Heights Sanitary District, 26 N.W.2nd. 661, the court defined the word 'shall' in the following way:

"The word 'shall' in a statute may be construed to mean may, particularly in order to avoid a constitutional doubt."

The court in Gow v. Consolidated Coopermines Corp, 165 Atl. 136, defined it this way:
"If necessary, to avoid unconstitutionality of a statute, 'shall' will be deemed as equivalent to 'may'."

George Williams College v. Village of William Bay, 7 N.W.2d. 6, is another case that defined the word 'shall' as 'may' as well. Here is what they said:

"Shall' in a statute may be construed to mean 'may' in order to avoid constitutional doubt."

Here is another one. Ballou vs Kemp, 92 F.2d. 556:

"The word 'shall' in a statute may be construed as 'may' where the connection in which it is used or the relation to which it is put with other parts of the same statute indicates that the legislature intended that it should receive such a construction."

The reasonable but uninformed man, when reading the statutes might “assume” and say "THE WORD SHALL MEANS MUST". On the contrary, the word “shall” means “may” - so there is no constitutional contradiction with the legislative statutes. Furthermore, as you can see from the above judicial citation, notice how each case is a "lower court". It is either an appellate case or some state supreme Court giving the citation. Ladies and gentlemen - of course, the best is for last. Our United States supreme Court HAS EVEN STATED that the word “shall” means “may”!!! Take a look at what the supreme Court case in Cairo and Fulton Railroad Company v. Hect, 92 U.S. 170, stated within its decision:

"As against the government the word 'shall' when used in statutes is to be construed as 'may', unless a contrary intention is manifest."

[Cairo and Fulton Railroad Company v. Hect, 92 U.S. 170]

The reasonable question is - Has the word “shall” been defined otherwise in the Internal Revenue Code as to mean “must”? The answer is NO, therefore the logic is simple: There is no CONTRARY INTENTION that is manifest within the Internal Revenue Code! This is another argument on why we can DISCURSIVELY prove that the Internal Revenue Code is voluntary - it is because each time the word “shall” is used within a statute that which applies to alleged “people”, the word “shall” means “may” and when something is a “may” or “perhaps” then we can say SUCH ACTION IS VOLUNTARY.

5.4.14 Constitutional Due Process Rights in the Context of Income Taxes

(1) Rule 1.

An exaction by the U.S. Government, which is not based upon law, statutory or otherwise, is a taking of property without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Accordingly, an Appeals representative in his or her conclusions of fact or application of the law, shall hew to the law and the recognized standards of legal construction. It shall be his or her duty to determine the correct amount of the tax, with striction impartiality as between the taxpayer and the Government, and without favoritism or discrimination between taxpayers.” (4-1-96 Edition)

As we described earlier in section 3.11.8.3, the Fifth Amendment guarantees that we shall NOT be deprived of our property without due process of law.

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

[Fifth Amendment, Emphasis added]

In most cases, due process of law means a judicial trial and a resulting warrant issued by the court. The U.S. supreme Court in Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906) clearly reveals the need for a warrant:

"...we are of the opinion that there is a clear distinction in this particular between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the state. The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the state [including the payment of income taxes] or to his neighbors to divulge his business, or to open his doors to an
To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal, a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.

Upon the other hand, the corporation is a creature of the state. It is presumed to be incorporated for the benefit of the public. It receives certain special privileges and franchises, and holds them subject to the laws of the state and the limitations of its charter. Its powers are limited by law. It can make no contract not authorized by its charter. Its rights to [201 U.S. 43, 75] act as a corporation are only preserved to it so long as it obeys the laws of its creation. There is a reserved right in the legislature to investigate its contracts and find out whether it has exceeded its powers. It would be a strange anomaly to hold that a state, having chartered a corporation to make use of certain franchises, could not, in the exercise of its sovereignty, inquire how these franchises had been employed, and whether they had been abused, and demand the production of the corporate books and papers for that purpose. The defense amounts to this: That an officer of a corporation which is charged with a criminal violation of the statute, may plead the criminality of such corporation as a refusal to produce its books. To state this proposition is to answer it. While an individual may lawfully refuse to answer incriminating questions unless protected by an immunity statute, it does not follow that a corporation, vested with special privileges and franchises, may refuse to show its hand when charged with an abuse of such privileges."

[Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

Note that it says

"Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law."

This is what “due process of law” is all about. The IRS routinely violates this legal requirement by issuing “Levies”, Notice of levies”, “Notice of liens”, and “Liens” that are NOT issued by a judicial trial and have no basis in law whatsoever for a legal duty or legal liability. For such cases, the collection agent responsible for doing this can be held personally liable for his tort (injurious act). We describe how to do this later in Chapter 3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008.

Returning again to our Henkel cite above, I have a simple question for the IRS. When the Supreme Court says:

“He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."

The question for the government and the IRS then becomes:

“What part of NOTHING do you not understand?"

The answer to this question, or in the case of the IRS, its repeated and chronic failure to answer, is the heart of the hypocrisy, arrogance, fraud, and evil avarice that perpetuates the tyranny we all live under to this day in the context of the federal and state income tax.

5.4.14.1 What is Due Process of Law?

The Fifth Amendment establishes that the government can’t take our property without just compensation and without a court trial. The mere existence of such a right is evidence that the payment of federal income taxes cannot be anything other than voluntary and the deduction from our pay of these federal donations must be instituted voluntarily and without compulsion. That is why we have to fill out a W-4 form to institute withholding and why our private (not federal) employer can’t lawfully deduct taxes from our earnings from labor if we don’t authorize it. But the question arises, what is “due process of law”? Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 500 defines “due process of law” as follows:

Due process of law. Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice. Due process of law in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of the government as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs. A course of legal proceedings according to those rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement and protection of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal competent by its constitution—that is, by the law of the creation—to pass upon the subject-matter of the suit; and, if that involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant, he must be brought within its jurisdiction by service of process within the state, or his voluntary appearance. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714, 24 L.Ed. 565. Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard, by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively presumed [rather than proven] against him, this is not due process of law.

An orderly proceeding wherein a person with notice, actual or constructive, and has an opportunity to be heard and to enforce and protect his rights before a court having the power to hear and determine the case.
Kazubowski v. Kazubowski, 45 Ill.2d. 405. 259 N.E.2d. 282, 290. Phrase means that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, property or of any right granted him by statute, unless matter involved first shall have been adjudicated against him upon trial conducted according to established rules regulating judicial proceedings, and it forbids condemnation without a hearing. Pettit v. Penn, LaApp., 180 So.2d. 66, 69. The concept of "due process of law" as it is embodied in the Fifth Amendment demands that a law shall not be unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious and that the means selected shall have a reasonable and substantial relation to the object being sought. U.S. v. Smith, D.C.Iowa, 249 F.Supp. 515, 516. Fundamental requisite of "due process of law" is the opportunity to be heard, to be aware that a matter is pending, to make an informed choice whether to acquiesce or contest, and to assert before the appropriate decision-making body the reasons for such choice. Trinity Episcopal Corp. v. Romney, D.C.N.Y., 387 F.Supp. 1044, 1084. Aside from all else,
"due process" means fundamental fairness and substantial justice. Vaughn v. State, 3 Tenn.Crim.App. 54, 456
S.W.2d. 879, 883.

Embodied in the due process concept are the basic rights of a defendant in criminal proceedings and the requisites for a fair trial. These rights and requirements have been expanded by Supreme Court decisions and include, timely notice of a hearing or trial which informs the accused of the charges against him or her; the opportunity to confront accusers and to present evidence on one’s own behalf before an impartial jury or judge; the presumption of innocence under which guilt must be proven by legally obtained evidence and the verdict must be supported by the evidence presented; rights at the earliest stage of the criminal process; and the guarantee that an individual will not be tried more than once for the same offence (double jeopardy).

Note above that the existence of any kind of "presumption of liability" implies the absence of due process! This is very important because when Americans are hauled into court on criminal or civil tax charges, the government tries to use false or unsubstantiated presumptions of liability to convict nonfilers and "nontaxpayers" of "willful failure to file" under 26 U.S.C. §7203, for instance, in direct violation of the due process rights of the accused. Judges will also routinely violate the defendant’s due process rights by refusing to admit any evidence prejudicial to the government regarding the lack of any liability statute for Subtitle A federal income taxes.

The U.S. supreme Court says the following about “due process of law”:

"A fundamental requisite of due process of law is the opportunity to be heard."

But guess what?: federal judges violate this requirement of due process all the time as follows:

1. They will not allow the citizen litigant to take all the time he needs to properly present his case, which gives the jury an incomplete at best and downright wrong understanding of the facts and evidence. They will repeatedly disrupt and interrupt him. This is called “crazy-making” and it’s a sinister verbal abuse tactic to discredit and interfere with people’s train of thought and the logical and ethical presentation of their materials. They want to get you in a reactive mode so you look dogmatic and abusive. That way the jury can throw the book at you!

2. They will not allow evidence against the government to be admitted into evidence so that the jury can’t see the whole picture. This is generally done by granting a motion in limine by the U.S. attorney prior to trial granting the government’s request to suppress your evidence.

3. They will grant a motion by the U.S. attorney against you to strike your pleadings, so you have absolutely nothing left to argue. The most frequent reason for doing this is because they will say your arguments are “frivolous” and they will do this even if they indeed are not frivolous. They also do not even need to substantiate why they are frivolous or even what their definition of frivolous is, because the main goal is censorship of your free speech and keeping their friends and the IRS federal mafia employed and rich with your cash so they can pay judicial salaries and give the judge his next pay raise.

4. They filter and sensor the proposed jury instructions submitted by the citizen litigant so the jury can’t hear the truth that you want to communicate to them in violation of your First Amendment rights.

5. They make pleadings, docket, and their own rulings unpublished so that no one can even find out what you said in your pleadings against the government. They might even seal the court record if your case has some really compelling arguments or evidence against the government, and they don’t even have to explain why they are doing this or obtain anyone’s permission to do it! See section 2.8.13.8 for further details on this scandal.

6. They issue protective orders to interfere with your discovery of the truth and with your communicating that discovery to the jury or tribunal hearing your case. This also keeps evidence of government and judicial wrongdoing out of the court record, which is the number one goal of most corrupt federal judges. See section 2.8.13.5 for further details on this scandal.

Do you still think that we don’t live in a communist or socialist country? This is a police state and our government is at war against our God-given rights! Sit in any federal courtroom during one of your vacations and listen to a few tax trials as we have and please tell us we are wrong!

Another key thing to consider is that the purpose of “due process of law” is to protect individual rights deriving from the Bill of Rights. However, 28 U.S.C. §2201 specifically says that federal courts may not rule on rights in the context of federal tax cases, which ought to be a clue that the Internal Revenue Code subtitles A and C only apply where the Bill of Rights does not apply, and this can only be in the federal zone and abroad as we pointed out in section 4.8 earlier. Even if the case is being heard in an Article III (of the Constitution) court such as a District Court, in the context of federal taxes, these courts are actually performing an Article I function because of the above statute preventing them from ruling on rights. There is no other conclusion a reasonable person could reach on this matter.

5.4.14.2 Violation of Due Process using “Presumptions”

As we said in the previous section, anything that involves presumption of liability is a violation of the Fifth Amendment due process of law. The purpose of a presumption is therefore to shift the burden of proof from the government to the sovereign Americans so that the rights of that citizen are prejudiced by the law. Where a presumption exists, the burden of proof rests squarely on us as defenders of our rights to rebut such a presumption:

"presumption. For example, a criminal defendant is presumed to be innocent until the prosecuting attorney proves beyond a reasonable doubt that she is guilty. Presumptions are used to relieve a party from having to actually prove the truth of the fact being presumed. Once one party relies on a presumption, however, the other party is normally allowed to offer evidence to disprove (rebut) the presumption. The presumption is known as a rebuttable presumption. In essence, then, what a presumption really does is place the obligation of presenting evidence concerning a particular fact on a particular party.

The mere existence of presumption clearly violates a well established principle of the U.S. supreme Court, which states:

[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

Presumptions can also be used to violate a canon of American criminal jurisprudence, which says that we are innocent until proven guilty. In America, all persons accused of a crime are legally presumed to be innocent until they are convicted, either in a trial or as a result of pleading guilty. This presumption means not only that the prosecutor must convince the jury of the defendant's guilt, but also that the defendant need not say or do anything in his own defense. If the prosecutor can't convince the jury that the defendant is guilty using evidence and testimony other than his own (attorneys aren’t allowed to be witnesses), the defendant goes free. The presumption of innocence, coupled with the fact that the prosecutor must prove the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, makes it difficult for the government to put people behind bars.

But with sneaky statutes that are not positive law such as the Internal Revenue Code, the government can prejudice the case of the criminally accused by creating presumptions about the evidence or lack thereof. For instance, our greedy legislators can and often do write regulations and statutes that violate due process of law in the hopes that it will slip by an ignorant judge or jury so they make you into a “taxpayer” or a statutory “U.S. citizen” by false presumption and thereby pick your pocket and extort money out of you in clear violation of the RICO statute, 18 U.S.C. §255. Let’s look at an example to show what we mean:

26 CFR §301.6109-1(g)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

(1) General rule—

(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual’s social security number.

Above, a presumption is created by law which leads one to incorrectly conclude that if you have a Social Security Number, then you must be a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “resident alien” of the federal United States under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). But we will establish later in section 5.6.13.7.4 that “nationals” living outside the federal United States who are nonresident aliens can also have Social Security Numbers. We also established earlier in section 5.3.4 that most Americans are “nationals”. If the above regulation were just and truthful, it would establish the opposite presumption, which is that a person who has an SSN is a nonresident alien unless the government can provide evidence to the contrary. This would be the only way to meet the intent of the above supreme Court ruling in Spreckels and the “innocent until proven guilty” principle, whereby all doubt is in favor of the person against whom a tax is to be laid. If we aren’t aware of the above presumption by the government, then when we go into court to litigate our rights, we will not meet the burden of proof to establish our correct status and incorrectly be assumed to be a statutory “U.S. person” who is “completely subject to the jurisdiction of the United States” as we pointed out in section 4.11. Here is what one court said when one sovereign American failed to rebut the presumption that he was a “U.S. citizen” with the necessary evidence:

Defendant’s protestations to effect that he derived no benefit from United States government had no bearing on his legal obligation to pay income taxes; unless he could establish that he was not a statutory citizen of the United States[under 8 U.S.C. §1401]; IRS possessed authority to attempt to determine his federal tax liability.

U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 1, Sec. 8, Cl. 1; Amend. 16; 26 U.S.C.A. Sec. 1. [!!]

See what we mean? This is important stuff, folks, and that is why we tell you in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 that THE MOST IMPORTANT THING YOU CAN DO is amend or correct the governments records relating to your citizenship status so that they properly reflect your correct status as a “national” in order to prevent incorrect government presumptions about your citizenship that might inadvertently make you responsible to pay a tax you don’t owe. That way you will have admissible evidence you can present in court of your status as a “nonresident alien” with no tax liability!

Another very common presumption you will have to overcome in court and in your dealings with the IRS is the presumption that you are a “taxpayer”, who is a person who is liable for Subtitle A federal income taxes. You won’t read any statute or regulation anywhere that creates a presumption that you are a “taxpayer” but this myth is so firmly planted in the minds of most Americans by our government-run educational system and the media that it can be very difficult to overcome and MUST be overcome if you are going to win in court against the IRS. Below are some of the facts relating to the status of being a “taxpayer” that will be extremely helpful in assisting you to overcome the presumption and meet the burden of proof that you are a “nontaxpayer”:

• We showed in section 1.5 that the only place the word “liable” is used in Subtitle A is in the context of withholding agents for nonresident aliens, and this regulation made the withholding agent responsible to pay the taxes he deducts from the pay of people who volunteer to pay the federal income tax. This withholding agent is none other than the federal government itself, and of course the federal government has jurisdiction over its own employees!
• We will show later in section 5.6.1 that there is no statute that makes anyone liable for Subtitle A income taxes.
• We show you the court’s interpretation of the word “taxpayer” and “nontaxpayer” in section 5.3.1.
• In section 5.4.27 we will show that most persons are not liable to file returns.
• In section 5.6 and following we will show that most persons are not liable to pay income taxes.
• It is shown in section 2.5.2.6 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 that it is extremely important for you to watch your language when communicating with the government to remove the word “taxpayer” from your vocabulary and to contradict the presumption that you are one whenever you hear government employees using that word.

Understanding the above information is extremely important and will give you the ammunition you will need to fight this unreasonable presumption by the average American that you are a “taxpayer”.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Another very important aspect of the presumed use of the word “taxpayer” is that you need to be very careful when you are reading government statutes and regulations about the use of that word. We did a search on the U.S.C. and found that the word “taxpayer” is used no less than 479 times in all of title 26, which is the income tax Title! Whenever the code uses that word, you should assume they aren’t referring to you! Below is just one example from the Internal Revenue Manual:

IRM 35.18.9.1 (08-31-1982)

Taxpayers

1. It has been uniformly held that the waiver of sovereign immunity in section 1346(a)(1) of the Judiciary Code (28 U.S.C. §1346(a)(1)) only applies to taxpayers, and not nontaxpayers or interested parties. Busse v. United States, 542 F.2d. 421 (7th Cir. 1976); Hofheinz v. United States, 511 F.2d. 661 (5th Cir. 1975); Eighth Street Baptist Church v. United States, 431 F.2d. 1193 (10th Cir. 1970); Phillips v. United States, 346 F.2d. 999 (2d Cir. 1965); First Nat’l Bank of Emlenton v. United States, 165 F.2d. 297 (3rd Cir. 1959). Accordingly, where a party not liable for the tax has brought a refund suit, a motion to dismiss should be recommended.

So what the above cite from the Internal Revenue Manual is saying is that the government, that is the “state”, can assert a sovereign immunity if you are a “nontaxpayer” who is suing the government for a refund. However, such a waiver does not apply to employees of the government who performed illegal collection or assessment of income taxes, who it is said in section 2.5.5.12 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 can be prosecuted under a Bivens action for their injurious actions not authorized by law. Keep in mind that the above citation is NOT the law, and the courts can’t enforce it. The Internal Revenue Manual, or IRM, is simply an internal directive used only within the IRS to govern its employees and is not binding on sovereign Americans because it is not published in the Federal Register.

5.4.14.3 Substantive Rights and Essentials of Due Process Background

What is a "substantive due process right"?

The Sixth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States establishes several "substantive" or constitutionally-secured due process rights within federal jurisdiction inside the 50 Union states and outside the federal zone. This right can be broken down into three components:

1. The right to know the nature and cause of action against you
2. The right to confront adverse witnesses
3. The right to compel testimony by whoever has relevant knowledge.

The Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments secure due process in the course of the common law. This, too, is a substantive right, with one of the more important distinctions between due process in the course of the common law and due process in the course of the civil law being that an case or controversy must clearly set out fact and law.

Bills of rights in our respective state constitutions secure corresponding rights within state jurisdiction, including rights to access to courts and redress of wrongs. All states other than Louisiana are common law states. Louisiana implemented the civil law system. Insular possessions of the United States also retained civil law process.

Government, government agencies, and corporations are creatures of law. Collectively they are known as "juristic" entities. As creatures of law, they may exercise only powers specifically enumerated to them by the Constitution, the statutes which implement the powers granted by the Constitution, and the regulations which implement the statutes. Where government departments and agencies are concerned, the scope of authority and procedure are detailed in statutes, regulations and intra-departmental policy. Officers, employees and agents of governmental entities must act within procedural bounds prescribed by statutes and the regulations they implement as well as published policy for that agency. In a manner of speaking, procedural requirements prescribed for the governmental agency secures public rights. If and when government personnel fail to comply with procedural mandates and prohibitions, they become personally liable to whoever is the object of their actions, they are subject to agency discipline, and in the event of knowing and willful abuse, may be criminally prosecuted.

Supreme courts of the United States and our respective states have articulated government personnel accountability principles time and again, but there has been a tendency for government prosecutors not to prosecute government personnel, particularly in tax agencies, when they’ve exceeded authority. The problem has caused enough furor that via the Internal Revenue Service restructuring and reform act of 1998, Congress enacted a new Internal Revenue Code section that specifically makes IRS personnel accountable to the Internal Revenue Code, Treasury regulations, and published policy, i.e., the Internal Revenue Manual, added a new administrative discipline section, and created the office of Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration to investigate complaints against IRS personnel.

Another aspect of dealing with government is that government always has the burden of proof either in civil or criminal forums and at both administrative and judicial levels. In the new Internal Revenue Code section 7491, Congress spelled this out, too, by specifying that when a Citizen (notice we didn't say “taxpayer”) presents credible evidence of non-liability for Subtitle A & B taxes, the Secretary, i.e., IRS bears the burden of proof.

Treasury regulations in Title 31 of the Code of Federal Regulations spell out the right to discovery in dealings with Internal Revenue Service personnel. Per § 2 of 31 CFR Part 1, Appendix B of Subpart C, whoever has dealings with IRS is entitled to whatever evidence of liability the Service has in its systems of records:

"Internal Revenue Service procedures permit the examination of tax records during the course of an investigation, audit, or collection activity. Accordingly, individuals should contact the Internal Revenue Service employee conducting an audit or effecting the collection of tax liabilities to gain access to such records, rather than seeking access under the provisions of the Privacy Act."

With these basics, we can set out minimum requirements for administrative or judicial liability:

1. The government agency must have evidence of one sort or another to establish fact.
2. There must be a competent witness with first-hand knowledge of facts to verify the evidence.
3. The advocate must prove application of law to verified facts.

By utilizing discovery, the target of government initiatives can force disclosure in the context of Sixth Amendment rights. Substantive rights do not begin at the courthouse door. They are ever-present in all dealings with government agencies and personnel. Where tax issues are concerned, knowing the nature and cause of action includes forcing the tax agency, via the revenue officer or whoever the target is dealing with, to disclose taxing and liability statutes, and disclosing whatever competent witness there is. Where authority is concerned, i.e., subject matter jurisdiction, the agency or agent has the burden of proof when authority is challenged and when procedure is challenged.

Does a government agency have authority, i.e., statutory or delegated authority, to do whatever it is attempting to do, then is the agency complying with procedural mandates? Where an agency doesn't have statutory or delegated authority over the "subject matter", any action by that agency is unlawful and void, and where the agency doesn't comply with procedural mandates, it loses subject matter jurisdiction. Unless a procedurally proper assessment has been executed, there is no tax liability. Various secondary reports may constitute presumptive evidence that an assessment has been made, but only the assessment certificate constitutes conclusive evidence. The actual assessment certificate, or a verified copy, qualifies as self-authenticating evidence.

What does a witness do? He testifies to facts he has first-hand knowledge of. Testimony may be in one of three forms: By affidavit (a sworn statement of fact), deposition (sworn testimony outside the court setting in the presence of plaintiff and defendant or their respective representatives), or direct oral examination in open court. The adverse party in all cases has the right to cross-examine the witness. This is fundamental to our adversarial system.

Without a competent witness, any administrative ruling or court judgment is void and can be vacated at any time without time limitation.

If and when a government agency or officer fails to disclose the nature and cause of action, evidence of liability, and whatever witnesses will verify facts, the controversy shifts from the original issue to the substantive rights the agency or agent may be depriving the target of. In the event a defendant's constitutionally secured rights are abridged, the agency or court loses subject matter jurisdiction regardless of whatever liability the defendant might otherwise have. Government agents and agencies must proceed in whatever A > B > C sequence the law prescribes, they cannot jump from A to C unless the law authorizes elimination of B.

One person filed claims for refunds from the Internal Revenue Service based on the gross income "source" position (26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(vi)). It took ten months, but a revenue officer finally denied the claim. According to his investigation, the revenue agent claimed, the company is liable for Social Security and employment taxes (Subtitle C, Chapters 21 & 24).
However, the agent didn't specify fact nor did he disclose what testimony his decision was based on. He certainly didn't prove application of law.

This is one of the few instances I've seen where IRS personnel have disclosed the "nature and cause" of the action, i.e., the specific tax at issue. However, his disclosure presents a few problems that afford the opportunity to challenge subject matter jurisdiction in addition to procedure particulars.

The social welfare taxes in Chapters 21-23 and government personnel tax in Chapter 24 or the Internal Revenue Code are collectively classified as employment taxes, which is a classification distinct from Subtitle A & B income taxes. The Internal Revenue Service serves as delegate of the Secretary for administration of Chapter 1, 2 & 21 taxes in insular possessions (See 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(12)(B)), and administers Subtitle A & B taxes in the several States (See 26 U.S.C. §7491, added by the 1998 act), but the Treasury Financial Management Service and the General Accounting Office have primary responsibility for administration and enforcement of Chapter 21 & 24 employment taxes in States of the Union. The Internal Revenue Service merely maintains records, provides accounting services, and distributes information, it does not have direct administrative enforcement authority, particularly for Chapter 24 government personnel tax.

The Financial Management Service must notify and train government agencies responsible for withholding at the source, and issue Form 8655 Reporting Agent Authorization certificates to whatever agency is required to withhold at the source. (See Internal Revenue Manual §3.0.258.4 (11/21/97), January 1999 edition)

Tax freedom fighters should submit into their administrative record an affidavit addressing the extent of their liability for normal tax and other species of income in Subtitles A & B, employment taxes in Subtitle C, and assorted taxes in Subtitles D & E and Title 19. The affidavit should include statements that they have never been contacted by the Treasury Financial Management Service and has never received a Form 8655 Reporting Agent Authorization certificate.

By submitting the disclosure affidavit into their IRS administrative record, tax freedom fighters can enter testimony concerning their financial circumstance into record. In order to overcome the affidavit, the government adverse party must (1) disprove stated fact or prove alternative fact, then (2) prove application of law to stated or alternative facts. In addition to these requirements, in this case the Internal Revenue Service must prove subject matter jurisdiction by citing and/or providing properly executed delegations of authority that vest the agency with authority to administer Subtitle C employment taxes in States of the Union.

"My research verifies that your company is liable for" any given tax isn't sufficient. When challenged, IRS and other government personnel must prove authority and liability within the framework of and to the satisfaction of constitutionally secured due process rights. In this particular case, the agent must

1) Provide verified copies of whatever documentary evidence he has.
2) Provide copies of whatever affidavits he has.
3) Disclose whatever other fact witnesses he is relying on.
4) Provide a list of prospective witnesses.
5) Prove application of law to whatever facts he is relying on, and
6) Prove subject matter jurisdiction.
7) Rebut any affidavits submitted by an accused party with more authoritative evidence.

It is important to understand that government personnel, particularly tax agency personnel, for the most part rely on documents prepared by third parties. They are rarely if ever competent witnesses with first-hand knowledge of facts. Further, the various documents they work from are for the most part "hearsay evidence" and declarations, not affidavits, as there are seldom signatures on these documents and they rarely if ever verified by notary publics or the number of witnesses required by common law standards. Consequently, third parties who submit documents are technically prospective witnesses, they have not submitted testimony as such that can be admitted into evidence in a court of law.

Somewhat the same disclosure is required for most criminal investigations where the government is the alleged victim due to someone failing to comply with or doing something prohibited by statute other than what are classified as common law crimes. For example, 26 CFR §601.107 generally secures rights of those being investigated for offenses relating to income, estate, gift, employment, and certain excise taxes. General disclosure requirements are outlined where there is a conference with the Chief of the Criminal Investigation Division of any given district at 26 CFR §601.107(b)(2):

26 CFR §601.107(b)(2)

"At the conference, the IRS representative will inform the taxpayer by a general oral statement of the alleged fraudulent features of the case, to the extent consistent with protecting the Government's interests, and, at the same time, making available to the taxpayer sufficient facts and figures to acquaint him with the basis, nature, and other essential elements of the proposed criminal charges against him."

As researchers and advocates increasingly master due process essentials and continue to unravel proper application of law, administrative and judicial remedies will become considerably more reliable and government encroachment in general can be pushed back. Procedure is particularly important.

5.4.14.4 Due process principles and tax collection

Via the due process clauses of the 5th and 14th Amendments, both the state and federal governments must provide certain fundamental procedures before life, liberty or property are taken. For those interested in this subject, reading the cases of, Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp., 395 U.S. 337 (1969), 89 S.Ct. 1820 (1969), Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 92 S.Ct. 1983 (1972), and North Georgia Finishing, Inc. v. Di-Chem Inc., 419 U.S. 601, 95 S.Ct. 719 (1975), are important in understanding the views of the Supreme Court regarding the due process procedures to which the states are bound. However, one cannot ignore the fact that there are two different due process standards; one standards is applicable to us and the states under the 14th Amendment, and quite another exists for Uncle Sam under the Fifth Amendment.

There is a popular position of late, Goldberg v. Kelly, 397 U.S. 254 (1970), 90 S.Ct. 1011 (1970), that is the "key" due process case regarding the collection of taxes. If you wish to understand principles of due process in reference to tax matters, the cases of, Phillips v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 283 U.S. 589 (1931), 51 S.Ct. 608 (1931), and, Commissioner v. Shapiro, 424 U.S. 614 (1976), 96 S.Ct. 1062 (1976), are the ones to be read.

5.4.15 IRS has NO Legal Authority to Assess You With an Income Tax Liability

"There is no worse tyranny than to force a man to pay for what he does not want merely because you think it would be good for him."

[Robert Heinlein]

As per 26 U.S.C. §6201(a)(1), only the person paying the tax may make an assessment of tax liability on himself. The Secretary of the Treasury may not make assessments of the liability of individuals under Subtitles A and C personal income taxes. It is quite common for IRS agents to “estimate” the liability of a “taxpayer”, especially as an intimidation mechanism during an exam or audit. However, unless the “taxpayer” voluntarily signs the return forms presented by the agent authorizing the assessment or settlement, the assessment is not valid. Without a valid assessment, collection activity cannot be commenced!

Furthermore, under 26 CFR §301.6211-1, either making no return or a return showing no tax amounts to a zero return. Any amount imputed by the IRS to be owed above the amount on the return is referred to as a “deficiency” under that regulation. However, 26 CFR §301.6211-1 is based on the repealed 1939 Internal Revenue Code that is no longer in effect! If you look at the bottom of this regulation, it cites NO statutory authority and therefore is NOT a legislative regulation and cannot be enforced by the courts! To confirm this conclusion, this regulation also does NOT appear in the Parallel Table of Authorities cross-referencing regulations to statutes. See section 5.4.16 for a look at the Parallel Table of Authorities. See also:

26 U.S.C. §6020 says the following about returns prepared by the Secretary of the Treasury:

Subtitle F - Procedure and Administration
CHAPTER 61 - INFORMATION AND RETURNS
Subchapter A - Returns and Records
PART II - TAX RETURNS OR STATEMENTS
Subpart D - Miscellaneous Provisions §6020 Returns prepared for or executed by Secretary

(a) Preparation of return by Secretary
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

If any person shall fail to make a return required by this title or by regulations prescribed thereunder, but shall consent to disclose all information necessary for the preparation thereof, then, and in that case, the Secretary may prepare such return, which, being signed by such person, may be received by the Secretary as the return of such person.

So you can see that once again, the IRS and the Secretary of Treasury rely on the tax payer’s self-assessment in order to establish a tax liability. Agents do not have delegated authority to prepare a tax form on behalf of an American without the signature of the person. This is clearly shown on their Pocket Commission (see IRM Section [1.16.4] 3.1 through [1.16.4] 3.2). Their pocket commission must indicate that they have Enforcement commission (the last letter of the serial number of the pocket commission must be “E”) in order to complete a 23C Assessment form, for instance, and none of the revenue officers associated with Subtitles A and C have such commissions. Revenue officer must also have a Delegation Order showing their authority specifically to sign the IRS Form 23C and/or the 1040. No revenue officers who administer Subtitles A and C have such delegation orders and are acting outside their lawful authority to sign such forms. You should demand a copy of their Delegation Order and their Pocket Commission if any agent tries to exceed their authority by signing a return for you or a 23C Assessment form.

If you argue with the revenue officer over their authority to assess you, they like to point to regulation 26 CFR §301.6201-1, which is an explanatory but not implementing regulation for 26 U.S.C. §6201. They will try to say that this authorizes them to make an assessment, but this is simply false! This regulation simply reiterates what was found in 26 U.S.C. §6201 and exists for informational purposes only:

Sec. 301.6201-1 Assessment authority.

(a) IN GENERAL.

The district director is authorized and required to make all inquiries necessary to the determination and assessment of all taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or any prior internal revenue law. The district director is further authorized and required, and the director of the regional service center is authorized, to make the determinations and the assessments of such taxes. However, certain inquiries and determinations are, by direction of the Commissioner, made by other officials, such as assistant regional commissioners. The term "taxes" includes interest, additional amounts, additions to the taxes, and assessable penalties. The authority of the district director and the director of the regional service center to make assessments includes the following:

(1) TAXES SHOWN ON RETURN. The district director or the director of the regional service center shall assess all taxes determined by the taxpayer or by the district director or the director of the regional service center and disclosed on a return or list.

(2) UNPAID TAXES PAYABLE BY STAMP.

(i) If without the use of the proper stamp:

(a) Any article upon which a tax is required to be paid by means of a stamp is sold or removed for sale or use by the manufacturer thereof, or

(b) Any transaction or act upon which a tax is required to be paid by means of a stamp occurs; The district director, upon such information as he can obtain, must estimate the amount of the tax which has not been paid and the district director or the director of the regional service center must make assessment therefor upon the person the district director determines to be liable for the tax. However, the district director or the director of the regional service center may not assess any tax which is payable by stamp unless the taxpayer fails to pay such tax at the time and in the manner provided by law or regulations.

(ii) If a taxpayer gives a check or money order as a payment for stamps but the check or money order is not paid upon presentment, then the district director or the director of the regional service center shall assess the amount of the check or money order against the taxpayer as if it were a tax due at the time the check or money order was received by the district director.
It’s very important to realize that the above regulation is NOT an implementing regulation and does not apply the ability to assess a tax liability to income taxes in Subtitles A and C of the Internal Revenue Code! It is simply an explanatory regulation. If the IRS had authority to assess Subtitle A personal income taxes under 26 U.S.C. §6201, then there would be an implementing regulation number 26 CFR §1.6201, which there is not! A statute cannot be applied to a particular tax until the Secretary of the Treasury writes an implementing regulation, and 26 CFR §301.6201 does not implement or enforce Subtitle A income taxes.

The section above clearly shows that the only thing the district director can do is make assessments of taxes collected by stamp under 26 CFR §301.6201-1(a)(2) but NOT personal income taxes coming under Subtitles A and C. Notice that this regulation does NOT give the revenue office authority to estimate tax nor sign a return or list on behalf of a person, or it would have said so. Subtitles A and C personal income taxes must instead appear on a tax return, and the 1040, 2555, or 1040NR are the only things that qualify as legitimate returns upon which to base an assessment of Subtitle A and C personal income taxes. 26 CFR §301.6201-1(a)(1) says the taxes assessed by the district director MUST be “disclosed on a return or list”. Even the title says that: “TAXES SHOWN ON RETURN”. If the agent has no Delegation Order or delegated authority to prepare such a return, then he is acting outside his lawful delegated authority and can be prosecuted for violation of 26 U.S.C. §7214! The General Accounting Office (GAO) published a surprising audit report, report number GAO/GGD-00-60R on the IRS Substitute for Return program. This report confirms that Substitute For Returns are not really returns! The report says, and I quote:

“[IRS] Customer Service Division official commented on the phrase ‘Substitute for Return.’ They asked us to emphasize that even though the program is commonly referred to as the SFR program, no actual tax return is prepared.”

You know what that means, folks? If the IRS doesn’t prepare an actual return as required above in order to create a valid self-assessment, then they pull it out of their ass and then falsify their IDRS computer system IMF records by putting the system in manual override mode and creating a bogus backdated and fraudulent assessment so they fall within the statutorily allowed date period. You can confirm this if you FOIA your complete unsanitized master file for the years in question. It’s financial terrorism and extortion, folks and these criminals should be locked up in jail and have the key thrown away for doing it! Our politicians look the other way because they want your money so bad that they condone extortion to get it. Below is a direct link to the GAO report if you would like to read it for yourself on our website:

Furthermore, there are no regulations implementing 26 U.S.C. §6201 against the IRC Section 1 income tax. Therefore these statutes cannot be applied against Subtitle A income taxes. If there were implementing regulations for personal income taxes, then the regulation number would have to be 26 CFR §1.6201, and there is no such regulation:

With these kinds of shenanigans going on, we need to ask ourselves:

“If the income tax isn’t voluntary, then why don’t they just assess us without our permission and send us a bill like they do with property taxes? Why do they need us to snitch on ourselves and send in a 'confession' called a tax return if it’s a mandatory "tax"?"

The answer, once again, is that it is and always has been a voluntary tax, which is why the IRS has no authority to assess you and why only you can assess yourself! If all you ever put on your tax return is a zero, then you have no liability and no one other than a judge can determine otherwise. The IRS will try to scare you by sending a bogus Notice and Demand for tax, but they can’t do this either, because the regulation they rely on, 26 CFR §301.6303-1, to send it is not the law so they are acting outside their authority in doing so. This is confirmed by the absence of a reference at the bottom of the regulation pointing to an authorizing statute, which means the regulation is NOT a legislative regulation. Don’t let the IRS... scare you with a trick Notice and Demand for tax following an examination or with a bogus assessment, because they do not have the authority to issue either.

5.4.16 IRS Has NO Legal Authority to Assess Penalties on Subtitles A and C Income Taxes on Natural Persons

"By the blessing of God, may our country become a vast and splendid monument, not of oppression and terror, but of wisdom, of peace, and of liberty upon which the world may gaze with admiration forever."

[First Bunker Hill Oration, Daniel Webster [inscribed on a bronze plaque on the quarterdeck of the USS Bunker Hill, CG-52]

The Congress and the 50 state governments are prohibited by the Constitution from imposing any kind of punishment or penalty against natural persons without a judicial proceeding. This includes financial penalties associated with ensuring compliance with the Internal Revenue Code. This requirement derives from the U.S. Constitution, which in Articles 1, Section 9, Clause 3 prevents Congress from passing any kind of Bill of Attainder law. Likewise, Article 1, Section 10 applies the same requirement to the 50 Union states. Below is the Constitutional restriction:

Article 1, Section 9, Clause 3: "No Bill of Attainder or ex post facto Law shall be passed." (with respect to the U.S. Congress)

Article 1, Section 10, Clause 1: "No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility."

Below is the definition of a Bill of Attainder for your reference:

Bill of attainder: Legislative acts, no matter what their form, that apply either to named individuals or to easily ascertainable members of a group in such a way as to inflict punishment on them without a judicial trial. United States v. Brown, 381 U.S. 437, 448-49, 85 S.Ct. 1707, 1715, 14 L.Ed. 484, 492; United States v. Lovett, 328 U.S. 303, 315, 66 S.Ct. 1073, 1079, 90 L.Ed. 1252. An act is a "bill of attainder" when the punishment is death and a "bill of pains and penalties" when the punishment is less severe; both kinds of punishment fall within the scope of the constitutional prohibition. U.S.Const. Art. 1, Sect 9, Cl. 3 (as to Congress);' Art. I, Sec, 10 (as to state legislatures).

The above restrictions form the basis of why the U.S. Congress and the states cannot write statutes and the executive branch cannot write implementing regulations authorizing the IRS to impose financial penalties on natural persons for noncompliance with Subtitle A income taxes absent a judicial trial, nor can they collect any penalties without a trial. The following easily verifiable facts prove our point:

- That there is no implementing CFR or Federal Register regulation providing IRS with the authority to assess any kind of financial penalties, including late payment fees, frivolous return fees, etc.
- The definition of “person” found in Subtitle F also confirms that penalties may not be applied against natural persons. In fact, all such penalties are only applicable to Title 27 taxes relating to Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms against corporations under Subtitles D and E!

Whenever the government seeks to impose penalties for violations of the Internal Revenue Code, they have the burden of proof to show that the person against whom the penalty is imposed is liable for the penalty:

"26 U.S.C. §6703"

(a) BURDEN OF PROOF.—

In any proceeding involving the issue of whether or not any person is liable for a penalty under 6700, 6701, or 6702, the burden of proof with respect to such issue shall be on the Secretary."

Most IRS agents are made blissfully unaware of the above facts by their supervisors but they are nevertheless true. You will never hear IRS admit to this, because it is their most important and most secret weapon against the vast majority of Americans, who are natural persons. By way of example, below is the section right out of their own regulations found at the government’s own website at http://frwebgate.access.gpo.gov/cgi-bin/getcfr.cgi?TITLE=26&PART=301&SECTION=6671-1&YEAR=2000&TYPE=TEXT that describes the ONLY persons who can be assessed penalties related to I.R.C. Subtitle A income taxes:

(b) Person defined. For purposes of subchapter B of chapter 68, the term “person” includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

Even more interesting, is that the above not only doesn’t apply to most Americans: It also doesn’t apply to most corporations or partnerships either! Why?...because the corporations or partnerships mentioned above must be registered in the District of Columbia (the federal zone). State-(only) chartered corporations or partnerships that aren’t involved in foreign commerce aren’t liable for IRS penalties because they aren’t within the territorial jurisdiction of the IRS either. Furthermore, the only type of employee who can be penalized is an employee of a U.S. corporation registered in the District of Columbia and who is involved in reporting and complying with taxes for the corporation, and NOT for himself individually!

Now when the IRS hears this argument, they often try to say that the above definition of “person” uses the word “includes”, which is an expansive rather than limiting term. Here is what they will quote, from 26 U.S.C. §7701(c ) in making this statement:

“Sec. 7701(c) INCLUDES AND INCLUDING. - The terms ‘include’ and ‘including’ when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.”

The IRS will say that the phrase in 26 CFR §301.6671-1 “includes an officer or employee of a corporation” does not exclude other uses of the term, like EVERYONE else or ALL Americans, because of the definition of the word “includes” found in section 3.12.1.8 earlier. But we know from statements made in Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A that Subtitles A and C income taxes are excise taxes, and that the “persons” indicated in the above regulations are the only ones in receipt of privileges from the U.S. government. Expanding the operation of penalties beyond these legal fictions called “persons” makes the income tax operate effectively as a direct tax rather than an indirect tax, which is clearly unconstitutional if enforced outside of federal jurisdiction or within states of the Union.

We answer this issue on the abuse of the word “includes” and “including” by the IRS in sections 5.10.1 and 8.2.20. This is a very common and unscrupulous tactic designed to confuse and intimidate Americans and illegally expand the jurisdiction of the taxing power of the federal government for Subtitle A income taxes beyond its clear limits found in the definition of “United States” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and “State” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10).

Now let’s talk about the requirement for implementing regulations. Pursuant to 44 U.S.C.A. §§1504-1507, before a national domiciled in the union states of the United States of America can be bound by, or adversely affected by legislation or an “Act of Congress” having general applicability to such individuals, it must be published in the Federal Register.

5 U.S.C. §552(a): Public information; agency rules, opinions, orders, records, and proceedings

Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms thereof, a person may not in any manner be required to resort to, or be adversely affected by, a matter required to be published in the Federal
There are three and only three exceptions to the requirement of publication in the Federal Register of all implementing regulations, which are:

2. A matter relating to agency management or personnel or to public property, loans, grants, benefits, or contracts. 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2).
3. Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof. 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1).

Note that all of the above three exempted groups are within the government itself. Therefore, if the government directly cites and enforces a statute against you for which there is no enforcement regulation published within the Federal Register, then they are “presuming”, usually wrongfully, that you are a member of one of the three groups within the federal government who are specifically exempted from the requirement. All such presumptions against those who are protected by the Constitution are an unconstitutional violation of due process of law which essentially compel you to accept the legal disabilities associated with a federal franchise which in most cases, you derive no benefit from. This frequent and unconstitutional abuse of presumption to prejudice and destroy your rights is thoroughly documented below:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Enforcement regulations published as required within the Federal Register are then categorized pursuant to their applicable Title in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR). 26 U.S.C. §7805(a) states:

"...the Secretary shall prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this title."

The Internal Revenue Code is not self-executing. Without an implementing regulation, applicable to a particular type of tax, a statute has no force of law against anyone who is not part of the government as a “public officer” or “employee”, and therefore imposes no duties or penalties. This is confirmed by the definition of “person” found in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and by the levy statute which identifies the proper audience for “levy” actions, which are enforcement actions:

Subtitle F > CHAPTER 64 > Subchapter D > PART II > § 6331
§ 6331. Levy and distraint
(a) Authority of Secretary

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.
According to evidence available to us in the form of a letter provided directly by the Internal Revenue Service in response to a Freedom of Information Act request:

“There are no published regulations under Internal Revenue Code Sections 6702 and 6703, which authorize the imposition and collection of penalties for filing frivolous returns.”

Furthermore, the Parallel Table Authorities for 26 CFR reveals that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms is the only authority authorized to use distraint or assess penalties for nonpayment of income taxes under Title 27 ONLY. The following is taken from the Parallel Table of Authorities in the back of the Title 26 Code of Federal Regulations [CFR]. It is a list of the ONLY 26 CFR Part 301 Regulations that derive their Authority for implementation from Title 26 USCS or 26 IRC [Income Taxes]. Note the conspicuous absence of any penalty, interest, levy or seizure for the Title 26 Voluntary Income Tax. Again, it is inconceivable that the Congress would legislate penalties for the individual income tax, since the supreme Court and the IRS have both substantiated that such a Tax is voluntary and NOT based upon distraint. It would be absurd to impose penalties for non-compliance, when such an option is what made the tax voluntary to begin with!

Most noteworthy of the above is that ALL of the provisions identified in Subtitle F are associated with Title 27, Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, and NOT Subtitle A Income taxes! Why? Because these types of taxes are indirect excise taxes on privileges. If you don’t want the penalty, then don’t choose the privileged manufacture of alcohol, tobacco, or firearms.
In addition, the following court ruling clearly expresses the lack of IRS authority to assess penalties absent implementing regulations:

"...the Act’s civil and criminal penalties attach only upon the violation of a regulation promulgated by the Secretary: if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone...only those who violate the regulations (not the Code) may incur civil or criminal penalties, it is the actual regulation issued by the Secretary of the Treasury and not the broad authorizing language of the statute, which is to be tested against the standards of the 4th Amendment.

An older version of the Internal Revenue Manual, which is reflective of the ruling case law on this subject, states that the IRS has no delegated authority to issue a civil penalty or to collect penalties without a judgment signed by a magistrate:

IRM 546 §19(b)(2) “the civil penalty for non-compliance may be imposed only by filing a suit in the name of the United States, naming the taxpayer as a defendant and securing a judgment.”

The supreme Court agrees with this conclusion in the following case:

“Our system of taxation is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint.”

In case you don’t understand, “distraint” is defined as follows and is the equivalent of “force” or “coercion” or “compulsion” in the collection of debts and legal liabilities:

“...the act or process of DISTRAINT whereby a person (the DISTRAINOR), without prior court approval, seizes the personal property of another located upon the distrainor’s land in satisfaction of a claim, as a pledge for performance of a duty, or in reparation of an injury. Where goods are seized in satisfaction of a claim, the distrainor can hold the goods until the claim is paid and, failing payment, may sell them in satisfaction.”

Therefore, IRS assessments of penalties and demands for money, without the authority of law, their lawless actions to penalize Americans that have not been legally defended or explained or justified based on their delegated authority, constitutes extortion under the color of law, mail fraud, mailing threatening communications, and conspiracy against the rights of a Citizen, for which they can be held personally liable should legal action become necessary.

5.4.17 No Implementing Regulations Authorizing Collection of Subtitles A and C Income Taxes

Collections is one of three parts of the enforcement process. Enforcement of a tax involves:

1. Assessment (26 U.S.C. §6201, which has no implementing regulation under the tax imposed in section 1 of the I.R.C.).
2. Penalties for noncompliance (26 U.S.C. §§6671-6715, which also has no implementing regulations under the tax imposed in section 1 of the I.R.C.)
3. Collections (26 U.S.C. §6330 and 6331, which has no implementing regulations under the tax imposed in Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code).

We already covered the first two aspects of enforcement in sections 5.4.15 and 5.4.16 of this book respectively. We noted above that collections of Subtitle A income taxes under 26 U.S.C. §6330 and 6331 also has no implementing regulations like the other two parts of the enforcement process. This is no accident, but a direct result of the fact that personal income taxes are and always have been voluntary, which means that they are donations instead of taxes! For a statute to be realized as an enforceable law, then it must have an implementing regulation that applies it to a specific tax. If you look in the CFR, you will not find either of the following two regulations which would apply the ability to collect to the income tax: 26 CFR §1.6331 or 26 CFR §1.6330. The only implementing regulations for 6330 and 6331 are found in 26 CFR Part 70, which is for Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, because these taxes are enforced taxes and the BATF is an enforcement agency. The IRS is not an enforcement agency like the BATF, but instead is an administrative agency who cannot use distraint against Citizens to collect personal income taxes because it is a voluntary tax:

What the IRS likes to do is point to 26 CFR §301.6330 and 26 CFR §301.6331 and say these are the implementing regulations that authorize them impose collections for Subtitle A. This claim is pure fraud! These regulations are only explanatory or amplifying regulations, but they are not implementing regulations that apply the statute to a specific tax. The “301” in the regulation number simply refers to Part 301 of the Regulations under 26 CFR, instead of the section of the Subtitles A and C tax that is implemented! For instance, if there was a regulation implementing collection of Employment taxes under Subtitle C, then the regulation number would be 26 CFR §31.6330 or 26 CFR §31.6331, but there is no such regulation!

"...the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of the regulation promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone. The Government urges that since only those who violate these regulations [not the Code] may incur civil or criminal penalties, it is the actual regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the broad authorizing language of the statute, which are to be tested against the standards of the Fourth Amendment; and that when so tested they are valid.”

5.4.18 No Implementing Regulations for “Tax Evasion” or “Willful Failure To File” Under 26 U.S.C. §§7201 or 7203!

Just like other aspects of enforcement covered earlier for assessment, collections, and penalties, the Secretary of the Treasury also has not written any implementing regulations for the criminal acts of Tax Evasion under 26 U.S.C. §7201 or Willful Failure to File under 26 U.S.C. §7203. If there were an implementing regulation for these that applied it to Subtitle A Income Taxes imposed in Section 1, which is in Part 1 of the I.R.C., then the regulation numbers would be 26 CFR §1.7201 (Tax Evasion) and 26 CFR §1.7203 (Willful Failure to File) respectively, but these regulations do not exist! Without implementing regulations, these code sections do not apply to the personal income tax and therefore can’t be lawfully enforced!

A search of the U.S. Attorneys’ Manual on the Department of Justice website confirms the conclusions of this chapter. Look in section 9-4.139 entitled “Internal Revenue Code” found at:

This section comes under the general section entitled “Statutes Assigned by Citation”. The section lists all the criminal statutes under each title of the U.S. Code and the federal agency authorized by law to investigate the crime. In the right hand column listed under “Agency With Investigative Jurisdiction” for Internal Revenue Code sections §§7201-7209, it conspicuously says “None”! The reason is because there are NO IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS. Either the Internal Revenue Service or the BATF would need to write implementing regulations under these criminal code sections in order for them to be considered enforceable outside of the federal government and the agency that wrote the implementing regulation would then be the agency listed in the U.S. Attorneys’ Manual as having investigative jurisdiction. Quite a scam, huh?

In fact, the only people who can be prosecuted for “failure to file” under 26 U.S.C. §7201 are officers and employees of the United States when acting in their official capacity as an agent of the government. The federal courts have indirectly confirmed this fact. For instance, here is what one of them said about the fact that there are no implementing regulations for federal tax crimes:

“Federal income tax regulations governing filing of income tax returns do not require Office of Management and Budget control numbers because requirement to file tax return is mandated by statute, not by regulation.”

Below is what it says about the requirement to publish in the Federal Register, and note that anything that imposes a “penalty” has a requirement to publish in the Federal Register and is defined as having “general applicability and legal effect”. Certainly the requirement to file a tax return, if it can land a person in jail, would impose a penalty and have “general applicability and legal effect”, and yet it is not published in the Federal Register by the admission of the court above!:

44 U.S.C. §1505 Documents to be Published in the Federal Register
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

(a) Proclamations and Executive Orders; Documents Having General Applicability and Legal Effect [against persons living in states of the Union]; Documents Required To Be Published by Congress.

There shall be published in the Federal Register -

(1) Presidential proclamations and Executive orders, except those not having general applicability and legal effect or effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof;

(2) documents or classes of documents that the President may determine from time to time have general applicability and legal effect; and

(3) documents or classes of documents that may be required so to be published by Act of Congress.

For the purposes of this chapter every document or order which prescribes a penalty has general applicability and legal effect.

Finally, here is what the implementing regulations for the Internal Revenue Code says about the effect of statutes and regulations that are not published in the Federal Register, and note that they cannot have any affect on the rights of anyone when they are not so published:

26 CFR §601.702 Publication, public inspection, and specific requests for records.

(ii) Effect of failure to publish.

Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms of any matter referred to in paragraph (a)(1) of this section which is required to be published in the Federal Register, such person is not required in any manner to resort to, or be adversely affected by, such matter if it is not so published or is not incorporated by reference therein pursuant to paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section. Thus, for example, any such matter which imposes an obligation and which is not so published or incorporated by reference shall not adversely change or affect a person’s rights.

In conclusion, the only types of statutes that can impose a penalty and either not have implementing regulations or not have the statute or implementing regulations published in the Federal Register are those that affect only federal employees acting in the official capacity of their employment. Everything else must be published in the F.R. and when it is not, it cannot affect anyone other than federal employees acting in their official capacity as officers and agents of the government. Consequently, nearly all of the people who do not work for the federal government who have ever been prosecuted for Willful Failure to File in violation of 26 U.S.C. §7201 were “assumed” or “presumed” to be “employees” and “officers” of the United States government, and in nearly all cases, this was a violation of their due process rights and produced a “void judgment” that is reversible. It also creates an opportunity for these maliciously prosecuted individuals to seek damages under equity jurisdiction against the judges and prosecutors who wrongfully allowed them to be convicted.

Why do some people get convicted under these statutes anyway? The main reasons are:

1. Ignorant judges who don’t know the law.
2. Ignorant Citizens and their legal counsel who don’t know about implementing regulations and therefore don’t use this knowledge as a defense.
3. Judicial tyranny and conspiracy to protect the income tax. This conspiracy exploits the ignorance of the law by jurors, Citizens, and the legal profession to uphold and expand the operation of the income tax, as we thoroughly documented earlier in section 2.8.13 and later in section 6.6 of this book.

The government loves to make examples out of people whose ignorance of the law allowed them to be convicted of tax evasion and willful failure to file. That is how they keep the “sheeple” (sheep people) scared and “volunteering” to be slaves. But when people do learn the law and use it to defend themselves, the government makes sure that such cases, if they are litigated, go unpublished and never get entered into the court record or case databases, which amounts to fraud, extortion, and a conflict of interest on the part of judges.

5.4.19 The “person” addressed by criminal provisions of the IRC isn’t you!
26 U.S.C. §7343 defines the legal “person” who may be held criminally liable under the Internal Revenue Code for failure to comply with the code. Below is the content of that statute:

26 U.S.C. §7343: Definition of term “person”

Person - The term “person” as used in this chapter includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

Ah...so when a real-live-flesh-and-blood person (known in law as a "natural person") is held accountable for criminal non-compliance with the law, he is held accountable only in his capacity as the officer or employee, under a duty to perform, on behalf of the "legal fiction" called a corporation. The same kind of constraint also applies to liability for penalties as well, as we explained earlier in section 5.4.16, where we talked about the definition of “person” found in 26 CFR §301.6671-1. Once again: you are sovereign and the government is the servant and not the master. The only people the government can boss around and abuse in a free country are those who volunteer and consent to such abuse by volunteering to receive taxable government privileges as a corporation!

5.4.20 The Secretary of the Treasury Has No Delegated Authority to Collect Income Taxes inside of States of the Union!

Earlier in section 4.3.6, we thoroughly described the Separation of Powers Doctrine and showed that it is the essence of our "Republican Form of Government". We showed that the Separation of Powers Doctrine was the main mechanism envisioned by the Founding Fathers to guarantee the protection of our liberties. In this section, we are going to apply the Separation of Powers Doctrine to show that the Secretary of the Treasury is completely without authority to enforce or collect income taxes from anyone but federal instrumentalities.

The power of taxation was granted to the Legislative Branch under Article I, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the Constitution. Under the Separation of Powers Doctrine and under Article 4, Section 4 of the Constitution, no branch of government can delegate its powers to any other branch of government. The Supreme Court agreed with this in the case of Butcher’s Union when it said:

"Whatever differences of opinion," said the court, in the case of Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U.S. 281 'may exist as to the extent and boundaries of the police power, and however difficult it may be to render a satisfactory definition of it, there seems to be no doubt that it does extend to the protection of the lives, health, and property of the citizens, and to the preservation of good order and public morals. The legislature cannot by any contract divest itself of the power to provide for these objects. They belong emphatically to that class of objects which demand the application of the maxim, salus populi suprema lex, and they are to be attained and provided for by such appropriate means as the legislative discretion may devise. That discretion can no more be bargained away than the power itself.'

..."In the still more recent case of Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814, the whole subject is reviewed in the opinion delivered [111 U.S. 746, 753] by the chief justice. That also was a case of a chartered lottery, whose charter was repealed by a constitution of the state subsequently adopted. It came here for relief, relying on the clause of the federal constitution against impairing the obligation of contracts. 'The question is therefore presented, (says the opinion,) whether, in view of these facts, the legislature of a state can, by the charter of a lottery company, defeat the will of the people authoritatively expressed, in relation to the further continuance of such business in their midst. We think it cannot. No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. The supervision of both these subjects of governmental power is continuing in its nature, and they are to be dealt with as the special exigencies of the moment may require. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of the power to provide for them. For this purpose the legislative discretion is allowed, and the discretion cannot be parted with any more than the power itself.'"

[Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884)]

The power to collect taxes cannot therefore be delegated by the Legislative Branch to the Executive Branch because that would separate the taxation and representation functions. The President, who is in the Executive Branch, cannot oversee or implement the collection of taxes by the Legislative Branch. Recall that the entire American revolution was fought over the issue of taxation with representation. We were being taxed by the British King and we had no representation in the British Parliament. When we formed our new government in 1789 after the American Revolution, we put the taxation and representation functions together and within the Legislative Branch of the new government. The House of Representatives was the place where the will of the people was directly represented. Members of the House were elected every two years to ensure that they would be in close touch with the sentiments of the people because if they weren’t, the bastards would be on the street in two short years! The first tax ever passed by the Congress was a tax on imports, which was called a “duty” (see 1 Stat. 24) and the first collectors of these taxes resided at shipping ports of entry. These collectors reported directly to the House of Representatives initially and paid monies they collected directly to the Treasury Department in the Executive Branch. After that first tax was instituted in March 1789, the office of Secretary of the Treasury was created in the act of Sept. 2, 1789 (1 Stat. 65), and he reported directly to the House of Representatives and the Senate in the Legislative Branch, and not to the President in the Executive Branch. The job of the Secretary of the Treasury was to “superintend” or supervise the collection of all revenues by the collectors stationed at each port of entry. Therefore, the taxation and the representation functions were coincident and within the Legislative Branch as required by the Separation of Powers Doctrine.

Now let’s fast forward to take a look at how things are being done today. The Department of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Treasury are BOTH in the Executive Branch. The Secretary of the Treasury is appointed by the president and not the House of Representatives and serves under the President and not the Congress. This was not the case at the foundation of our country. The Secretary of the Treasury is now responsible for collecting taxes and the IRS works for the Secretary. Public servants in the Executive Branch are not directly accountable to the people because all of them are appointed, not elected. The Congress deceptively whines and complains in its correspondence with constituents who have been abused by the IRS that they cannot control what the IRS does, because it is in the Executive Branch, but we must realize that they are the ones who created this defect to begin with. We cannot have members of the Executive Branch in the role of collecting taxes from people in the states of the Union because it violates the Separation of Powers Doctrine. The fact that members of Congress complain about this situation is their own fault, because they are responsible for fixing it. Does it seem as though the Constitution is being violated in this case? The answer is an emphatic no, but you can only reach that informed conclusion after you take the time to understand the true nature of the Internal Revenue Code as we describe it in this chapter.

As we have been saying throughout this entire chapter, the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A is a tax on only public offices, instrumentalities, and statutory “employees” of the federal government, who are all engaged in some way or another with a “trade or business”, which is defined as “the functions of a public office” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). This is consistent with the Legislative Intent of the Sixteenth Amendment revealed by President Taft in his written address to Congress found in the Congressional Record at 44 Cong.Rec. 3344 and given June 16, 1909. As a tax on only federal government “employees” and instrumentalities, it is not a direct tax on people in states of the Union nor was it ever intended to be collected outside of the federal zone or outside of the federal government. The Internal Revenue Code was obfuscated (using “words of art”) over the years to make it deceptively “appear” like it might apply to people in states of the Union, but in fact it does not and never has. It is instead a tax only on federal instrumentalities, such as “employees” and contractors. Federal “employees’” all work in the federal zone, and the federal zone is not a constitutional republic. It is instead a legislative socialist democracy, as we showed earlier in sections 4.7 and 4.8. The requirement found in Article 4, Section 4 of the Constitution to guarantee a “Republican form of Government” with separation of powers does not apply to dealings between federal employees and the Congress. There is no need for separation of powers in dealing with federal employees because Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution says Congress can do whatever it wants inside the federal zone and need not abide by the Bill of Rights there. Consequently, it is perfectly Constitutional for the Legislative Branch to institute a direct, unapportioned tax (actually a “kickback” of federal pay) only on federal “employees” and to have a person who is not part of the Legislative Branch called the Secretary of the Treasury collect the tax. We will now examine the delegated of the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to prove the conclusions of this section.

Treasury Department Order No. 150-42, dated July 27, 1956, appearing in at 21 Fed. Reg. 5852, specifies the following:

The Commissioner shall, to the extent of the authority vested in him, provide for the administration of United States internal revenue laws in the Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

On February 27, 1986 (51 Fed. Reg. 9571), Treasury Department Order No. 150-01 specified the following:

The Commissioner shall, to the extent of authority otherwise vested in him, provide for the administration of the United States internal revenue laws in the U.S. Territories and insular possessions and other authorized areas of the world.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The point is that the above order does not authorize collection of revenues within the borders of the Union states because Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution forbid collection of direct taxes by the federal government from natural persons.

Authors note: It should be stated clearly and unambiguously that it is UNCONSTITUTIONAL for any part of the federal government to collect a revenues from Americans, except for congress! The founding fathers insisted it be that way, so that if congress tried to impose and collect a tax the people didn't want, they could vote the rascals out!! So how is it that the current fraud is allowed to continue, where the Internal Revenue Laws are imposed on American Citizens domiciled in the 50 Union states with income from within the 50 Union states. Show me the Delegation of Authority Order (DAO) that authorizes this!

On September 14, 1787, a motion was proposed in Congress to “strike out” the power of Congress to impose and collect taxes and, instead, delegate that authority to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury is not elected but appointed by the President in the Executive Branch of the Government. This motion was denied because it was a direct violation of the Constitutional “Separation of Power” protections for the American Citizens. Therefore, the Secretary of the Treasury has never formally been delegated the Constitutional Authority to collect any type of tax from the citizens of the 50 Union states, even though today he tries to fool everyone into thinking that is his lawful responsibility! Absent a valid delegation of authority order, the Secretary of the Treasury, under whom the IRS Commissioner serves, is acting entirely outside the bounds of his Constitutional authority in collecting taxes as he does!

Remember, there are two classes of citizens in the United States, (1) non-citizen nationals of the 50 Union states, described in the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1, to the Constitution and (2) statutory “citizens subject to its jurisdiction” described in 8 U.S.C. §1401 who were born in territories over which the United States is exclusively Sovereign (i.e. District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, etc.). These citizens are not legislated for under constitutional guidelines. The only taxing authority the Secretary of the Treasury can have would be over these subject federal citizens, in addition to “resident aliens”, who are under the exclusive territorial jurisdiction of the United States. The Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A is “situs based” territorial federal legislation. It is only applicable to domiciliaries of the federal zone and to persons receiving federal payments outside the federal zone. Otherwise the tax is as foreign as the Japanese income tax. That’s why the Treasury Secretary can NEVER have any delegated authority derived from the constitution to enforce income tax collection upon those domiciled in nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states.

"The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."

[Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

Now let's look at what the U.S. Supreme Court said about the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to administratively enforce the income taxes outside the federal zone. We quote from the Supreme Court case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Company No. 140, 240 U.S. 1, 36 S.Ct. 236, 60 L.Ed. 493 (1916). This case was argued October 14 and 15, 1915 and decided January 24, 1916:

"We have not referred to a contention that because certain administrative powers to enforce the act were conferred by the statute upon the Secretary of the Treasury, therefore it was void as unwarrantedly delegating legislative authority [to collect taxes inside states of the Union], because we think to state the proposition is to answer it."

The U.S. Supreme Court cited the following cases in reaching this conclusion:

That's right!: According to the Supreme Court, revenues under I.R.C. Subtitle A can only be collected inside the federal zone because the Secretary of the Treasury has NO LAWFUL DELEGATED AUTHORITY TO ADMINISTER THE IT OUTSIDE THE FEDERAL ZONE! When it comes to income taxes, the truth can sometimes be stranger than fiction!
The Federalist Papers, written by the founding fathers in order to encourage states to join the Union by ratifying the Constitution, confirmed the above conclusions as follows:

"It is true, that the Confederacy is to possess, and may exercise, the power of collecting internal as well as external taxes throughout the States; but it is probable that this power will not be resorted to, except for supplemental purposes of revenue; that an option will then be given to the States to supply their quotas by previous collections of their own; and that the eventual collection, under the immediate authority of the Union, will generally be made by the officers, and according to the rules, appointed by the several States [not by anyone in the federal government!]. Indeed it is extremely probable, that in other instances, particularly in the organization of the judicial power, the officers of the States will be clothed with the correspondent authority of the Union."

[The Federalist Paper #45, James Madison]

Why must state revenue officers collect taxes on behalf of the federal government rather than the federal government doing it directly? The reason is once again that Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution require that all direct taxes must be apportioned among the states!

5.4.21 The Department of Justice has NO Authority to Prosecute or investigate IRC Subtitle A Income Tax Crimes!

The responsibility of the Department of Justice is to prosecute individuals for violation of the tax code (not “law”, but “code”). Their authority is derived from 28 CFR §0.70, which you can read for yourself at:

http://squid.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/get-cfr.cgi?TITLE=28&PART=0&SECTION=70&TYPETEXT

The U.S. Attorneys’ Manual, Section 6-1.000 also describes their lawful role in tax prosecutions, which is also available at our website at:

The Department of Justice prosecutes tax crimes using a document called the Department of Justice, Tax Division, Criminal Tax Manual. The 1994 version of this document is posted on our website in its entirety for you to read and examine at http://famguardian.org/. The IRS relies on the Department of Justice to:

1. Decide whether a particular tax case should be litigated.
2. Institute the litigation.
3. Criminally prosecute against tax crimes which they have delegated authority to prosecute.

If you examine the U.S. Attorneys’ Manual, the Department of Justice has NO delegated authority to prosecute tax crimes involving U.S. citizens. Here is the section from their manual dealing with their authority to prosecute tax crimes involving the IRS:

U.S. Attorneys’ Manual
6-4.270 Criminal Division Responsibility

The Criminal Division has limited responsibility for the prosecution of offenses investigated by the IRS. Those offenses are: excise violations involving liquor tax, narcotics, stamp tax, firearms, wagering, and coin-operated gambling and amusement machines; malfeasance offenses committed by IRS personnel; forcible rescue of seized property; corrupt or forcible interference with an officer or employee acting under the internal revenue laws (but not omnibus clause); and unauthorized mutilation, removal or misuse of stamps. See 28 C.F.R. Sec. 0.70.
Section 7801 of the Internal Revenue Code concurs with the above description:

Internal Revenue Code
Sec. 7801, Authority of Department of the Treasury

(a) Powers and duties of Secretary

Except as otherwise expressly provided by law, the administration and enforcement of this title shall be performed by or under the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

(b) Repealed. Pub. L. 97-258, Sec. 5(b), Sept. 13, 1982, 96 Stat. 1068, 1078

(c) Functions of Department of Justice unaffected

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Do you see anything in the above authority of the DOJ relating to prosecuting tax crimes involving any of the following? We don’t!

2. Frivolous returns (26 U.S.C. §6702)

You can confirm the conclusions of this section for yourself on the Internet. Section 9-4.139 of the Department of Justice, U.S. Attorneys’ Manual (USAM) found on the DOJ website at:

http://www.usdoj.gov/usao/eousa/foia_reading_room/usam/title9/4mcrm.htm#9-4.139 has a listing of all of the statutes within the Internal Revenue code and the specific agency that has “investigative jurisdiction” for that statute. The agency with “investigative jurisdiction” is the agency responsible for enforcing a specific statute. All of the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code are found in sections 7201 through 7209 of the Internal Revenue Code. In order to have investigative jurisdiction, an agency must write an implementing regulation that then creates the authority and the procedure to enforce a specific criminal provision upon a specific tax under the Internal Revenue Code. For instance, if there were an implementing regulation written by the IRS for Willful Failure to File for Subtitle A income taxes, the regulation number would be 26 CFR §1.7203, but there is no such regulation! As we said earlier in section 5.4.18, there are no implementing regulations for any tax crimes for Subtitle A income taxes. The consequence is that there is no agency with “investigative jurisdiction” to enforce the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. The org chart for the IRS also confirms that the IRS is NOT an enforcement agency because it does not fall under the Undersecretary for Enforcement within the Department of the Treasury, as shown below:

Below was the entry under 26 U.S.C. §7201-7209 found within section 9-4.139 of the USAM as of February 2002, showing who has investigative authority for tax crimes under the Internal Revenue Code, repeated here for your benefit:

This is a tacit admission by our government that no agency may enforce the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, which is another way of saying that no one is liable to pay this tax because it is in fact a donation as we have said repeatedly throughout this chapter! If the IRS or the DOJ do investigate crimes related to the Internal Revenue Code without the above authority or an implementing regulation, then they are acting unlawfully and have exceeded the authority delegated to them by the U.S. codes and the regulations that implement them which are written by the Secretary of the

Treasury. They can be prosecuted for libel and any number of crimes if their illegal action causes you any kind of injury or expense.

Subsequent to the writing and publication of this section, the Department of Justice rewrote the above entry in their table. Sometime between February 2002 and July 2005, the entry was changed to read:

Table 5-44: Agencies with investigative jurisdiction as of July 2005

The above entry is fraudulent, because:

1. The same Department of Justice admitted that the IRS is NOT an agency of the federal government. See:

   http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/USGovDeniesIRS/USGovDeniesIRS.htm

   The reason the IRS is not an agency of the federal government is that it isn’t carrying out a constitutional function within the states and therefore is an independent creation of Congress that only has jurisdiction over matters INTERNAL to the federal zone, as is shown throughout the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, Chapter 7. That is why they are called the INTERNAL Revenue Service to begin with. Even the IRS identifies itself NOT as an “agency”, but a “bureau”. See their document 7233 at the link below. Search for the word “bureau” and you will see what we mean:

2. There are not implementing regulations published in the Federal Register authorizing enforcement of I.R.C. Subtitle A against private persons in states of the Union. The only people the IRS can enforce against are federal instrumentalities in the District of Columbia, according to 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) and 5 U.S.C. §553(a), who are the only groups that can be the target of penalties absent said publication.

Therefore, the DOJ is LYING in the new version U.S. Attorneys’ Manual above, and they know it, because a U.S. Attorney basically admitted as much in the link above.

5.4.22 The Federal Courts Can’t Sentence You to Federal Prison for Tax Crimes if You Are A statutory “U.S. citizen” and the Crime was Committed Outside the Federal Zone

Amazingly, even if you are stupid enough to claim you are a domiciliary of the federal zone, whether it be a “U.S. citizen” or “resident”, and thereby subject yourself to the corrupt jurisdiction of a federal court, even under such circumstances, if you commit a “tax crime” outside the federal zone and inside one of the sovereign Union states, no federal court can lawfully imprison you. That’s right! 18 U.S.C. §4001(a) states:

TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001. Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisoners

(a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of Congress.

And in the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 54(c) prior to Dec. 2002, it states:

Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 54: Application and Exception

(c) Application of Terms.

As used in these rules the following terms have the designated meanings.

5-538

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession.

The U.S. attorney prosecuting you will try to fool you into thinking that you can be prosecuted for “Willful failure to file” under 26 U.S.C. §7203 or “Tax Evasion” 26 U.S.C. §7201 or Fraud under 26 U.S.C. §7206, but the fact of the matter is that unless you committed this crime inside the federal zone as per Rule 54(c) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure, then they can’t legally sentence you.

Also, as you learned earlier in section 5.4.18, there are no implementing regulations for Willful Failure to File or Tax Evasion, which means these cannot be crimes for anyone but federal employees, even if you were residing inside the federal zone when you violated these statutes.

“...we think it important to note that the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of regulations promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone.”
[California Bankers Ass’n v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 21 (1974)]

So why do so many people get prosecuted for Willful Failure under 26 U.S.C. §7203 or File and Tax Evasion 26 U.S.C. §7201? Here are a few possible explanations:

1. They filed the wrong form, an IRS Form 1040, which says at the top that they are a “U.S. individual”. This fooled the federal government into thinking that they were a “U.S. person” domiciled inside the territorial jurisdiction of the “United States”, which is the federal zone. The more appropriate form should have been a 1040NR if they filed anything.
2. They hired an ignorant lawyer who didn’t know the limited territorial jurisdiction of the federal laws and/or didn’t know that there were no implementing regulations for Willful Failure to File or Tax Evasion.
3. Their lawyer was coerced by the judge, who may at one time or another threatened to pull his license to practice law in that court if he told the truth about the limited territorial jurisdiction of the court and submitted evidence into the record that the criminal defendant did not reside in the federal zone and did not commit a “crime” there.
4. They lied on their tax return, which you should NEVER do.
5. They were incompetent and defended themselves.
6. The judge wouldn’t allow them to submit evidence into the record that the crime was not committed in the federal zone or that he was not a statutory “U.S. citizen” or subject to the jurisdiction of the federal court.
7. They could not challenge the jurisdiction of the court because they hired an attorney. See: http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Articles/WhyYouDontWantAnAtty/WhyYouDon'tWantAnAttorney.htm

5.4.23  You Don’t Have to Provide a Social Security Number on Your Tax Return!

There is a presumption found in 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b) that if you submit a tax return to the U.S. government, then you are by default a “U.S. person”. We repeat that section below, which is the only section of the regulations that talks about the requirement to furnish an identifying number on a tax return:

26 CFR §301.6109-1(b)

(b) Requirement to furnish one’s own number--(1) U.S. persons. Every U.S. person who makes under this title a return, statement, or other document must furnish his own taxpayer identifying number as required by the forms and the accompanying instructions.

Notice the word “its”. This should clue you into the fact that the tax code doesn’t apply to flesh and blood people, who are called “natural persons” in laws like that above. If they had meant to refer to such a natural person, the word “it’s” would have said “his” or “her”. Consequently, the only type of “person”, they can be referring to is a privileged corporation, as we pointed out at the beginning of this chapter.

According to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30), a “U.S. person” is either an alien or a federal statutory “U.S. citizen” under in 8 U.S.C. §1401. Here is the definition:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701 - Definitions
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

(a)(3) United States person

The term “United States person” means -

(A) a [corporate] citizen or resident [alien] of the [federal] United States,
(B) a domestic partnership,
(C) a domestic corporation,
(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and
(E) any trust if -
   (i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and
   (ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

This means that if such the “person” is a “citizen” under the I.R.C., then they must have been domiciled or incorporated in the federal “United States”/federal zone, which is limited only to the District of Columbia or U.S. territories. Don’t let the word “citizen” above fool you either, because corporations within law are “citizens” as well and they are “born” at the instant when they are officially “incorporated” by the Secretary of State of the jurisdiction where they are domiciled. Congress wants to deceive you into believing that the term “citizen” also means a natural persons (people), but in the Internal Revenue Code subtitle A, this term ONLY refers to corporations because “income”, as you will learn later in section 5.6.5, is defined by our Constitution and by the Supreme court to be limited only to monies earned by federal corporations in the conduct of foreign commerce! This is also consistent with the use of the word “it’s” as used above in 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b), where the only “U.S. persons” in the IRC who can have TINs are corporations. Here is some more proof of that to whet your appetite to read later sections:

19 C.J.S., Corporations §886 [Legal encyclopedia]

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886]

The other very interesting result of the above regulation at 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b) is the use of the word “Taxpayer Identification Number”, which is called a “TIN” for short. This is a VERY important word, folks! Here is the meaning of that word from the Treasury regulations:

26 CFR §301.6109-1(d)(3)

(3) IRS individual taxpayer identification number -- (i) Definition. The term IRS individual taxpayer identification number means a taxpayer identifying number issued to an alien individual by the Internal Revenue Service, upon application, for use in connection with filing requirements under this title. The term IRS individual taxpayer identification number does not refer to a social security number or an account number for use in employment for wages. For purposes of this section, the term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or national of the United States.

So anyone who has or uses a TIN is an “alien”, and a Social Security Number is NOT a Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) according to the regulations. We learned earlier in 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b) that the only thing you are required to provide on a tax return is a “Taxpayer Identification Number” (TIN) and we learned above that a Social Security Number (SSN) is NOT a TIN. Further confirmation of these conclusions can be found by looking at the forms used to obtain “Taxpayer Identification Numbers”. Form W-7 is used to get a TIN while a Social Security form SS-5 is used to obtain a Social Security Number: two totally different forms. Consequently, you can’t be and aren’t required to provide your SSN on a tax return! Amazing, isn’t it? This is another way of saying that you aren’t the proper subject of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code and aren’t a “taxpayer” folks! The form W-7 even confirms that it is ONLY for aliens, when it says at the top:

The only thing you can be if you are neither a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 nor a “national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) is an “alien”! Duhhh! Don’t believe us? Look at the W-7 form for yourself below:

After you look at the W-7 form, go back and reread section 4.11.13, table 4-25 of this book and you will see that the only thing a person can be who is not a “U.S. citizen” or a “national” is an “alien”. The IRS just doesn’t have the courage to directly state the truth on the W-7 form because then NO ONE would fill it out and everyone would drop out of the tax system in droves!

Even more interestingly, under 26 CFR §301.6109-1(g), having a social security number creates a “presumption” that you maintain a legal “domicile” within the federal zone. Here is what the regulation says about the requirement to provide a social security number when furnishing returns:

26 CFR §301.6109-1(g)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—(1) General rule—(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual’s social security number.

What both “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and “resident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) have in common is that they both maintain a legal “domicile” within the federal zone. We proved this earlier in section 5.4.8. As a presumed domiciliary of the federal zone or a “U.S. person”, you have NO Constitutional rights according to the U.S. Supreme Court in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)! You must therefore rebut the false presumptions below that you are:

1. A domiciliary of the federal zone.

...whenever you correspond with the IRS and continually emphasize instead that you are a “national” and not a “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and a “nonresident alien” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). The way to do this is by following the regulation above and requesting a change in the status of your Social Security Number with the IRS!

The point is that if you are anything BUT an alien, then you aren’t required to provide an identifying number on any tax return. Only “aliens” have to provide identifying numbers and “nonresident aliens” are not “aliens” as shown in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )3) , 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and (b)(1)(B). That’s the foundation of the reason in this section why we recommend that you correct or amend your citizenship status so that federal government records properly reflect that you are a “national”.

We give you instructions in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 entitled “IMPORTANT: Change Your U.S. Citizenship Status” on how to expatriate from 14th Amendment or U.S. citizenship and to obtain evidence proving your change in citizenship. This frees you from the legal obligation to complete income tax returns. We can’t guarantee that the IRS will never bother you again if you don’t file beyond that point, but we do help to minimize the risk that they will bother you or cause any trouble by showing you how to prove that you aren’t a U.S. citizen or aren’t therefore liable for submitting returns or paying income tax.

Lastly, it may also interest you to know that there are only two places in the Bible where numbers are referred to in the context of people, and both of them are referred to the efforts of Satan himself. Here is the first one:

Now Satan stood up against Israel, and moved David to number Israel. So David said to Joab and to the leaders of the people, “Go, number Israel from Beersheba to Dan, and bring the number of them to me that I may know it.”

[1 Chron. 21:1-2, Bible, NKJV]

The only other place numbering of people is referenced is throughout the book of Revelation in reference to the last days. The mark is given by “the Beast”, which is defined to be the “Kings of the earth” who are at war with God as described in Rev. 19:19:

“And I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him who sat on the horse and against His army.”

[Rev. 19:19, Bible, NKJV]

5-541

“[He, the Beast, which is the political rulers of the earth] causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark [on their right hand or on their foreheads] and that no one may buy or sell except one who has the mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

“Here is wisdom. Let him who has understanding calculate the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man: His number is 666.”
[Rev. 13:16-18, Bible, NKJV]

Those who allow themselves to accept the mark of the beast shall be tormented by God himself and it would appear that he shall receive the same punishment as all of Babylon and be part of Babylon:

“And another angel followed, saying, “Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.” Then a third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, “If anyone worships the beast and his image, and receives his mark on his forehead or on his hand, he himself shall also drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out full strength into the cup of His indignation. He shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb. And the smoke of their torment ascends forever and ever; and they have no rest day or night, who worship the beast and his image, and whoever receives the mark of his name.”
[Rev. 14:8-11, Bible, NKJV]

The people who receive this mark will be among those who are victims of the first Bowl judgment of God’s wrath:

“So the first [angel] went and poured out his bowl [of judgment] upon the earth, and a foul and loathsome sore came upon the men who had the mark of the beast and those who worshiped his image.”
[Rev. 16:2, Bible, NKJV]

Only those who do not accept the mark will reign with Christ in Heaven:

“And I saw thrones, and they sat on them, and judgment was committed to them. Then I saw the souls of those who had been beheaded for their witness to Jesus and for the word of God, who had not worshiped the beast or his image, and had not received his mark on their foreheads or on their hands. And they lived and reigned with Christ for a thousand years.”
[Rev. 20:4, Bible, NKJV]

Is it therefore any surprise that the only status you can have which doesn’t require a number is not associated with the political rulers of the earth is that of a “nonresident alien” who has no income from the government, which is the “beast” in the Bible? Accepting money from the government that you didn’t earn is fornication with Babylon, and the mark is the means of controlling how the stolen loot is distributed among the thieves. The victims of the theft are all the people who did not want to participate in the system of usury and abuse and socialism called the “income tax”. Anyone who accepts this money is a “thief”, and the Bible says when a thief is found, he shall pay double the amount stolen:

“If a man [the government, in this case] delivers to his neighbor [a citizen, in this case] money or articles to keep, and it is stolen out of the man’s house [our out of his paycheck], if the thief is found, he shall pay double. If the thief is not found, then the master of the house shall be brought to the judges to see whether he has put his hand into his neighbor’s goods.”
[Exodus 22:7-8, Bible, NKJV]

The tribulation described in the Bible book of Revelation is God’s punishment and judgment to all those who became thieves by accepting stolen loot from a corrupted socialist government.

“My son, if sinners [socialists, in this case] entice you, Do not consent If they say, “Come with us, Let us lie in wait to shed blood [of innocent "nontaxpayers"]; Let us lurk secretly for the innocent without cause; Let us swallow them alive like Sheol, And whole, like those who go down to the Pit: We shall fill our houses with spoil [plunder]; Cast in your lot among us, Let us all have one purse [share the stolen LOOT]”--

My son, do not walk in the way with them! Do not ASSOCIATE with them and don’t let the government FORCE you to associate with them either by forcing you to become a "taxpayer"/government whore or a “U.S. person”.

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Keep your foot from their path;
For their feet run to evil,
And they make haste to shed blood.
Surely, in vain the net is spread
In the sight of any bird:
But they lie in wait for their own blood.
They lurk secretly for their own lives.
So are the ways of everyone who is greedy for gain [or unearned government benefits];
It takes away the life of its owners.”
[Proverbs 1:10-19, Bible, NKJV]

The book of Revelation echoes the above by saying:

“...And I heard another voice from heaven [God] saying, ‘Come out of her [Babylon the Great Harlot, a democratic, rather than republican, state full of socialist non-believers], my people [Christians], lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues.’”
[Revelation 18:4, Bible, NKJV]

5.4.24 Your Private Employer Isn’t Authorized by Law to Act as a Federal “withholding agent”

IRS Publication 15, Circular E, Employer’s Tax Guide indicates on page 6 what the definition of “employer” is. It only lists federal agencies and “States” as employers. See for yourself:

Remember that “States” in the Internal Revenue Code means territories and possessions of the United States as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §1101(d). Private employers do not appear anywhere in the booklet. One of our readers did an FOIA request asking the IRS for the forms and publications that private employers should use. Guess what the response said:

Do you get it? The I.R.C. Subtitle A federal income tax and I.R.C. Subtitle C employment withholding taxes only apply to:

1. “U.S. persons” with a domicile in the District of Columbia, most of whom work for the federal government. These people are described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).
2. Territories of the United States, which are classified as “States” in federal statutes and “acts of Congress”.
3. Those engaged in a “trade or business” temporarily abroad as described in 26 U.S.C. §911.

States of the Union cannot and do not appear in the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A and if they did, they would appear as “states” and not “States”. This is further confirmed by the regulations below, which prove that there are no “employers” outside the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) to include only the District of Columbia and nowhere defined to include states of the Union within Subtitle A of the I.R.C.:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
Subpart B—Federal Insurance Contributions Act (Chapter 21, Internal Revenue Code of 1954)
General Provisions
§31.3121(b)-3 Employment: services performed after 1954

(a) In general. Whether services performed after 1954 constitute employment is determined in accordance with the provisions of section 3121(b).

(b) Services performed within the United States [District of Columbia]. Services performed after 1954 within the United States (see §31.3121(e)–1) by an employee for his employer, unless specifically excepted by section 3121(b), constitute employment. With respect to services performed within the United States, the place where the contract of service is entered into is immaterial. The citizenship or residence of the employee or of the employer also is immaterial except to the extent provided in any specific exception from employment. Thus, the employee and the employer may be citizens and residents of a foreign country and the contract of service may be entered into in a foreign country, and yet, if the employee under such contract performs services within the United States, there may be to that extent employment.
"(c) Services performed outside the United States—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraphs (c)(2) and (3) of this section, services performed outside the United States (see §31.3121(e)–1) do not constitute employment."

Note from the above that services performed outside the District of Columbia do not constitute “employment”. This is also consistent with:

1. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(c)(ii), which says that “nonresident aliens” not engaged in a “trade or business” [public office in the U.S. government], even if they work in the “United States”, do not earn taxable income. You will note that 4 U.S.C. §72 says that all public offices shall be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere.

26 U.S.C. §3401(a)(6) says that services of a nonresident alien individual (a person domiciled in a state of the Union) do not constitute “wages” that can be included on a W-2 form.

26 CFR §1.872-2(f) says that earnings from outside the “United States” (District of Columbia) does not constitute “gross income”.

Private employers aren’t covered by the Internal Revenue Code, and the only reason that any of them think otherwise is because they never bothered to read the Internal Revenue Code or IRS Publication 15, Circular E for themselves and simply were reacting to authority that the IRS in fact did not have.

The term “withholding agent” is defined as follows in the Internal Revenue Code:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701. - Definitions
(a)(16) Withholding agent

The term “withholding agent” means any person required to deduct and withhold any tax under the provisions of section 1441, 1442, 1443, or 1461.

Now if you look up each of the above four statutes mentioned in the above definition, here is what you end up with:

Table 5-45: Statutes authorizing "withholding agents"

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>26 U.S.C./I.R.C. section</th>
<th>Title of section</th>
<th>Object of tax</th>

So the question is: “Which one of the above are you as a person in a state of the Union who is working for a private, non-federal employer?”. The answer is “nonresident alien”. The trouble is, your private employer fits in the same category as you and is therefore outside of federal jurisdiction and not even subject to the Internal Revenue Code or to withholding. See paragraph (b) below:

(a) In general, All remuneration paid after December 31, 1966, for services performed by a nonresident alien individual, if such remuneration otherwise constitutes wages within the meaning of §31.3401(a)–1 and if such remuneration is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is subject to withholding under section 3402 unless excepted from wages under this section. In regard to wages paid under this section after February 28, 1979, the term “nonresident alien individual” does not include a nonresident alien individual treated as a resident under section 6013 (g) or (h).

(b) Remuneration for services performed outside the United States. Remuneration paid to a nonresident alien individual (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the United States is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.
Keep in mind that the I.R.C is “legislation” as described by the Supreme Court below:

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.” [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

A person can ONLY be designated as a withholding agent using IRS Form 2678, which you can view below:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSForm2678.pdf

Does your private employer have one of these signed forms on file? Chances are he doesn’t, and he is withholding ILLEGALLY. That means he is STEALING.

So the question then becomes: By what lawful authority does my private employer deduct and withhold “taxes” on my personal earnings from labor (not “wages”, but “earnings”) and where is he even defined as an ‘employer’ in the Internal Revenue Code?” We’ll now answer that question.

The IRS’ own Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) confirms the above, which says:

Internal Revenue Manual
5.14.10.2 (09-30-2004)
Payroll Deduction Agreements

2. Private employers, states, and political subdivisions are not required to enter into payroll deduction agreements. Taxpayers should determine whether their employers will accept and process executed agreements before agreements are submitted for approval or finalized. [http://www.irs.gov/irm/part5/ch14s10.html]

The Internal Revenue Code provisions under Subtitle C, Employment Taxes, is based on the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939. That act only lawfully taxed “Public Salaries”, which is to say salaries of ‘public officers” of the United States Government engaged in a “trade or business” only. Below is the definition of “employee” right from the code:

26 U.S.C. Sec. 3401(c ) Employee

For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.

And below is the regulation that interprets the above section for clarification:

26 CFR §31.3401(c ) Employee:

"...the term [employee] includes[is limited to] officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."

And the only definition of “employee” that we are aware of that has ever been published in the Federal Register reads as follows:

8 Federal Register, Tuesday, September 7, 1943, §404.104, pg. 12267

Employee: “The term employee specifically includes officers and employees whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a state, territory, or political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing.”

Any way you slice it, Subtitle A income taxes are indirect excise taxes upon the “privileges” of “public office” within the federal United States corporation as we pointed out in section5.1.8. Keep in mind also that a “public office” includes more than just an elected or appointed employment position. Any artificial entity can be a “public office”, including a whole company, if it is owned or controlled or under contract with the federal government. Even the U.S. Congress agrees with this conclusion in their “Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax”, Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A. See:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/CRS/CRS-97-59A-rebuts.pdf

In addition to all the above conclusions, even more important is the fact that Subtitle A income taxes only apply to persons domiciled inside the federal zone, those receiving federal payments, or to those with contracts, agency, or employment with the federal government as we thoroughly documented earlier in sections 5.2 through 5.2.19. This is a product of the fact that the federal government has no police powers inside states of the Union and because the Sixteenth Amendment never delegated the authority to collect direct, unapportioned taxes upon People within states of the Union. It authorizes collection of a direct, unapportioned tax inside the federal zone or federal United States, but not within states of the Union.

Since in most cases, the company you work for is not a federal “employer”, then neither you nor that company are the proper subject of either Subtitle A income taxes or Subtitle C employment taxes. But here is the clincher: Either one of you can volunteer to be subject to and liable for these taxes under Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code! You, who a “public official” of the United States Government can volunteer to withhold these “donations” to the federal government and once you volunteer by signing a contract/agreement called a W-4, your private employer, if he is within the federal zone, becomes liable to pay them to Uncle Sam under 26 U.S.C. §1461 because if he doesn’t, he has defrauded the government. But if you don’t decide to donate or withhold, your private employer isn’t liable to do anything. The only thing that any private employer is liable to do is to deduct and withhold WHEN YOU ASK him to, and to pay monies deducted to the federal government under 26 U.S.C. §1461. Even then, though, he must maintain a legal domicile in the federal zone or represent a corporation that does under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 17(b) in order to be subject to federal law. Businesses in states of the Union aren’t within the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code. As a matter of fact, our research in section 5.6.8 reveals that the IRS classifies all employment taxes deducted as gifts to the federal government, which is what Tax Class 5 is! How can a private employer domiciled within states of the Union and outside of federal jurisdiction be held “liable” for not sending gifts to the federal government? Furthermore, we will show in section 11 that it would be a serious violation of law for the IRS to coerce or force either you or the business you work for to donate such gifts, because that would amount to solicitation of a bribe, which is just money that is extorted without the authority of law.

Now let’s look at whether private employers who are not part of the federal government and have no federal workers are allowed to withhold. The U.S. Supreme Court said that the labor of a human being is “property” in a legal sense:

"Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment...It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOLABLE... to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property." [Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884)]

Anyone who withholds on earnings from labor that are not connected with a voluntary, excise taxable activity is effecting slavery, because they are literally STEALING property. This is confirmed by examining the withholding regulations at 26 CFR §1.1441-2 say that withholding may not be effected on the sale of “property”:

"Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment...It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOLABLE... to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property." [Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884)]

Anyone who withholds on earnings from labor that are not connected with a voluntary, excise taxable activity is effecting slavery, because they are literally STEALING property. This is confirmed by examining the withholding regulations at 26 CFR §1.1441-2 say that withholding may not be effected on the sale of “property”:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART I—INCOME TAXES
Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Corporations and Tax-Free Covenant Bonds
§ 1.1441-2 Amounts subject to withholding.

(b) Fixed or determinable annual or periodical income—

(1) In general—

(i) Definition. For purposes of chapter 3 of the Internal Revenue Code and the regulations thereunder, fixed or determinable annual or periodical income includes all income included in gross income under section 61 (including original issue discount) except for the items specified in paragraph (b)(2) of this section. Items of income that are excluded from gross income under a provision of law without regard to the U.S. or foreign status of the owner of the income, such as interest excluded from gross income under section 103(a) or qualified scholarship income under section 117, shall not be treated as fixed or determinable annual or periodical income under chapter 3 of the Internal Revenue Code. Income excluded from gross income under section 892 (income of foreign governments) or section 115 (income of a U.S. possession) is fixed or determinable annual or periodical income since the exclusion from gross income under those sections is dependent on the foreign status of the owner of the income. See §1.306-3(h) for treating income from the disposition of section 306 stock as fixed or determinable annual or periodical income.

(2) Exceptions. For purposes of chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder, the items of income described in this paragraph (b)(2) are not fixed or determinable annual or periodical income—

(i) Gains derived from the sale of property (including market discount and option premiums), except for gains described in paragraph (b)(3) or (c) of this section; and

(ii) Any other income that the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) may determine, in published guidance (see §601.601(d)(2) of this chapter), is not fixed or determinable annual or periodical income.

Note that withholding is not authorized on gains derived from any kind of property other than that listed above, and since labor isn’t included in the list, then there can be no withholding on “labor”. Next, we examine I.R.C. Section 61 to determine whether “labor” is included in the definition of “gross income”. We have highlighted and boldfaced and underlined the only portion of that section that relates to “labor” of a human being:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter B > PART I > § 61
§ 61. Gross income defined (a) General definition

Except as otherwise provided in this subtitle, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:

(1) Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, fringe benefits, and similar items:
(2) Gross income derived from business;
(3) Gains derived from dealings in property;
(4) Interest;
(5) Rents;
(6) Royalties;
(7) Dividends;
(8) Alimony and separate maintenance payments;
(9) Annuities;
(10) Income from life insurance and endowment contracts;
(11) Pensions;
(12) Income from discharge of indebtedness;
(13) Distributive share of partnership gross income;
(14) Income in respect of a decedent; and
(15) Income from an interest in an estate or trust.

The above definition uses several tricky “words of art: to deceive the reader about withholding on “labor”, such as "compensation", “services”, etc. These “words of art” are then defined in the Classification Act of 1923, 42 Stat. 1988 as follows:

1. “department”: “the term ‘department’ means an executive department of the United States Government, a governmental establishment in the executive branch of the United States Government which is not a part of an executive department, the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Botanic garden, Library of Congress, Library Building and Grounds, Government Printing Office, and the Smithsonian Institution.”
2. “position”: “means a specific civilian office or employment, whether occupied or vacant, in a department other than the following: Offices or employment in the Postal Service; teachers, librarians, school attendance officers, and employees of the community center department under the Board of Education of the District of Columbia; officers and members of the Metropolitan police, the fire department of the District of Columbia, and the United States park police; and the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, the public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey.”
3. “employee”: “means any person temporarily or permanently in a position.”
4. “service”: “means the broadest division of related offices and employments.”
5. “compensation”: “means any salary, wage, fee, allowance, or other emolument paid to an employee for service in a position.”
What the above definitions show, is that “labor”, in the context of Subtitle A of the I.R.C., is not the commodity being taxed. Rather, “compensation” for “services” performed in conduct of a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office” is the voluntary, excise taxable activity that is being taxed. Remember, Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is an indirect excise tax upon privileged, excise taxable activities, according to the U.S. Supreme Court. The “activity” is a “trade or business”, which is basically privileged employment with the federal government:

"...by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning being taken out of the category of direct excise taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed."

The Supreme Court also said after Congress attempted to establish the first income tax in 1862 to fund the civil war that a “trade or business” cannot be licensed or taxed within the borders of a state of the Union:

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

[License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

You will also note that the Supreme Court has said that no one may withhold the wages of a worker against his will:

"Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will ...

[The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66; 10 Wheat 66; 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

Even the statutes confirm that labor is not a commodity or article of commerce that therefore may be “taxed”:

United States Code
TITLE 15 - COMMERCE AND TRADE
CHAPTER 1 - MONOPOLIES AND COMBINATIONS IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE
Sec. 17. Antitrust laws not applicable to labor organizations

The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce....

Now let’s look at what the Bible says about the theft and fraud of holding back the wages of the laborer, and it’s not pretty, Mr. Employer:

"The laborer is worthy of [ALL of] his wages."

[1 Tim. 5:18, Bible, NKJV]

"Woe to him who builds his house by unrighteousness
And his chambers by injustice,
Who [whether individual or government] uses his neighbor’s service without wages
And gives him nothing for his work,"

[Jer. 22:13, Bible, NKJV]

"Come now, you rich, weep and howl for your miseries that are coming upon you! Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver are corroded, and their corrosion will be a witness..."
5.4.25 The money you pay to government is an illegal bribe to public officials

For those who deduct payroll taxes involuntarily and without consent, the money they pay either through Subtitle C withholding or through Subtitle A 1040 returns amounts to extortion under the color of law and a compelled bribe because there is no liability statute and no Constitutional authority to collect inside states of the Union. The payments amount to extortion because:

1. The IRS threatens and pressures private employers to withhold on their employees.
2. Private employers make payment of income taxes based on the above pressure a precondition of obtaining or keeping a job.
3. The IRS and the Department of Injustice terrorize and legally harass employers who choose not to withhold. Case in point is Arrow Plastics, whose proprietor Dick Simkanin was hounded for three straight years in what amounts to an abuse of the legal system and forced labor in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1589. The DOJ had to endlessly pester three different grand juries and he appeared to testify in front of the first two but they didn’t get an indictment until they were able to keep him away from the third grand jury.

This illegally paid and collected money contributes to the corruption and delinquency of our elected or appointed officers, because it enhances their power and influence and causes them to commit treason against the republic by transforming it into a socialist democracy and starting up all kinds of government handout programs. Here is the law making this bribe illegal:

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 11 > Sec. 201.

Sec. 201. - Bribery of public officials and witnesses

(b) Whoever -

(1) directly or indirectly, corruptly gives, offers or promises anything of value to any public official or person who has been selected to be a public official, or offers or promises any public official or any person who has been selected to be a public official to give anything of value to any other person or entity, with intent -

(A) to influence any official act; or

(B) to influence such public official or person who has been selected to be a public official to commit or aid in committing, or collude in, or allow, any fraud, or make opportunity for the commission of any fraud, on the United States; or

(C) to induce such public official or such person who has been selected to be a public official to do or omit to do any act in violation of the lawful duty of such official or person;

(2) being a public official or person selected to be a public official, directly or indirectly, corruptly demands, seeks, receives, accepts, or agrees to receive or accept anything of value personally or for any other person or entity, in return for:

(A) being influenced in the performance of any official act;
Since Article 4, Section 4, Clause 1 of the U.S. Constitution requires that the United States Government shall guarantee a republican form of government to each state in the union, then anyone who pays such bribes or accepts them is committing treason by doing so. They are also subsidizing the oppression of fellow Americans, treason, and conspiracy against the rights of their fellow Americans. Have you ever been to the zoo and seen the sign that says “Please don’t feed the animals”? Well, I think we need one on every federal building and on every Internal Revenue Service form you fill out. The animals are your public dis-servants!

Since you must be a “public officers” of the U.S. government in order to be the proper subject of Subtitle C employment taxes as indicated above, your voluntary payment of employment taxes amounts to a bribe to procure public office!

That’s right, you have made yourself into a criminal by volunteering to pay Subtitle C Employment Taxes and the judges and your Congressmen just look the other way because they are bought and paid for with your bribes, which you never would have paid if they had told you the truth to begin with.

That’s not all folks. Recall from our investigation earlier in section 2.8.10 that the Federal Reserve is a private, for profit trust which is not part of the federal U.S. government. It is foreign to the U.S. government. It is not federal, there are no “reserves” and calling it this is a FRAUD! Even the federal courts agreed that the Federal Reserve is a private trust in Lewis v. U.S., 680 F.2d. 1238, 1241 (1982). Also recall that most of the income tax revenues go to the Federal Reserve to pay off the national debt to the private, foreign Federal Reserve. In that capacity, the U.S. Congress and the IRS are acting as collection agents for a foreign principal. Did your Congressman register as an agent of a foreign principal as required by law to indicate that he is a collection agent of that foreign principal?

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)  Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship  http://famguardian.org/
You might want to do a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request of your Congressman and ask him for his Foreign Agent Registration documents. What? He doesn’t have them? Prosecute the criminal and have him thrown in jail for two years like the IRS mafia did to Congressman James Traficant! Your Congressmen and their henchmen at the IRS are traitors and criminals, and these laws prove it! Anyone who sends their hard-earned money to Washington, D.C. is subsidizing criminal activity and is involved in a financial crimes enterprise in violation of 18 U.S.C. §225, and they are subsidizing bank robbery under 18 U.S.C. §2113 and the monetary transactions derived from unlawful activity under 18 U.S.C. 1957. In short, they are traitors. You can’t pay Subtitle C taxes, which are technically gifts, without being a criminal and in effect bribing your Congressman and the IRS. Remember, it is Congress who decides how the money you donate is spent.

What about your private employer? His federal Employer Identification Number is what identifies him as part of the Federal Corporation called the United States government identified in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). He is acting as a voluntary agent of the federal government under the “color of law”. In order to act as such an agent, he has to fill out IRS Form 2678 in accordance with 26 U.S.C. §3504 and be designated as a “withholding agent” by the Secretary of the Treasury, which most private employers have never done. Here is that section:

c. For the purpose of this section "public official" means Member of Congress, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner [IRS Commissioner], either before or after he has qualified, or an officer or employee or person acting for or on behalf of the United States, or any department, agency, or branch of Government thereof, including the District of Columbia, in any official function, under or by authority of any such department, agency, or branch of Government.

However, even if your private, nonfederal employer tried to volunteer as a “withholding agent”, the Constitution doesn’t authorize the federal government or the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint private employers within the States of the Union as “withholding agents” for Subtitle A taxes so they are acting illegally.

You can confirm the above assertions by requesting a copy of his delegation order and seeing whether it says the Secretary is liable under equity jurisdiction in any state court for the injury or tort that he causes you. Plain and simple. Even if your private employer is not operating with the authority of federal law and really has no lawful authority at all to act as a “withholding agent” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16). If his actions as a voluntary federal agent result in an oppression of your sacred Constitutional rights, then he is liable under equity jurisdiction in any state court for the injury or tort that he causes you.
employer isn’t being compensated for his acts as a federal agent, he can be prosecuted under the same standards as a government employee! This opens a whole new realm of possibilities, folks.

As an agent of a foreign principal, the federal reserve, your private employer is part of this criminal conspiracy and treason against the constitutional republic. He is a communist and a socialist, in fact, as we showed in the introduction to this chapter. This is especially true if he forces you to pay payroll taxes by threatening to fire or discipline you if you don’t file a W-4 with him or her to initiate withholding. Since he has no lawful authority to deduct or withhold the taxes, being outside the exclusive territorial jurisdiction of the United States government under Subtitles A or C of the I.R.C., then coercing you to deduct or withhold or filing a W-4 without your consent is a clear violation of the Fifth Amendment, which says that we can’t be deprived of our property without due process of law or just compensation.

There aren’t a lot of private employees who would resort to suing their employers, because this would amount to looking a gift horse in the mouth, but this is what most ignorant employers deserve for their negligent and harmful administration of payroll tax withholding. If your employer in effect discriminates against you because you refuse to volunteer, ignorantly and wrongfully thinking that he has the authority by law to compel you to withhold, then you have a case with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC for employment discrimination based on your religious beliefs and based on 8 U.S.C. §1324(a)(3)(A). The same argument applies if they won’t accept the government form you choose to submit to stop withholding, which in most cases is the Amended W-8BEN form we have on our website. If they say they won’t accept the Amended W-8BEN and demand a W-4, then they are violating your First Amendment rights by telling you you can or must communicate with your government. Free speech implies the ability to either not communicate at all with your government or to communicate on the forms that YOU choose. If you have a coercive or tyrannical employer, then lodging a formal complaint with the EEOC might be an effective strategy to twist their arm. You’ll have your employer scurrying like cockroaches when the lights come on with such tactics, folks!

5.4.26 How a person can “volunteer” to become liable for paying income tax?

Even if a person is not liable for paying any federal taxes on their income, they can nevertheless “volunteer” to make themselves liable to pay. This topic is also discussed in section 3.12.1.21, where we talk about “Taxpayer.” For instance, if you have a large income but none of it is taxable as “gross income”, you can make yourself liable anyway simply by misreporting nontaxable income as taxable on a 1040 form, signing it, and sending it in! That’s called a donation. Do you think the IRS will argue with or correct people who do this? Quite the contrary, they will prosecute such people if they can get more money out of them! This was clearly stated in the case of Lyddon & Company v. U.S., 158 F.Supp. 951:

"When one files a tax return showing taxes due, he has, presumably, assessed himself and is content to become liable for the tax, and to pay it either when it is due according to statute, or when he can get the money together."

There are other equally important choices we can make that will identify us as “volunteers who want to pay federal income taxes” as far as the federal courts are concerned. Here are just a few:

1. Claiming we are a U.S. citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which we should never do on any piece of paper we sign.
Instead, if we have to claim we are a U.S. citizen in order to vote, for instance, then we should always clarify exactly what we mean, which is that we are a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), but not a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Once we are a statutory “U.S. person”/”U.S. citizen”/”U.S. resident”, we are completely subject to federal jurisdiction, which is a BAD idea with federal court system as corrupt as the one we have.
2. Submitting a 1040, which tells the IRS we are electing to be a federal citizen or a “U.S. person” and a resident or domiciliary of the District of Columbia and the federal zone. The correct form to submit is the W-8BEN and the 1040NR, which makes us a nonresident alien with respect to federal income taxes.
3. Signing up for the Social Security program or receiving a Social Security Number and saying we are “U.S. citizens” on the SSA Form SS-5. We instead need to specify on the SSA Form SS-5 that we are “nationals” under 8 U.S.C.
§1101(a)(22)(B). We also need to change the status of our SSN by submitting a W-8BEN to the IRS and asking them to register us as “nationals” and “nonresident aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens”, or else we by default become “U.S. citizens” who have no constitutional rights.
4. Signing and submitting a W-4 or W-4 Exempt to the private company we work for. This identifies us as a federal “employee” who has made an election to be treated as being involved in a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26
U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a trade or business”.

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOOU) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
5. When we use the postal system and put zip codes on our mail and use state abbreviations. We should instead use the full state name and put all postal zip codes in parentheses to emphasize that we are not subjecting ourselves to federal jurisdiction.

Below is how one of our readers succinctly described how we volunteer to become liable to pay federal income taxes:

“There seems to be two camps. One says the tax is illegal and doesn’t apply to them...ie (Joe Banister) 16th amendment wasn’t properly ratified, taxes aren’t apportioned ...etc. All these and related arguments miss an important and critical point. Why is it that a ‘patriot’ finds himself in court...makes a valid argument...and then loses the case? Why did Robert Clarkson spend five years in jail...convicted of interfering with IRS operations. The judge would not allow any first amendment arguments. Everyone thought the judge was a communist pinko. The judge was right when he said no free speech arguments would be allowed because the constitution did not apply. Everyone missed the real issue including Robert who did five years. I reject the court’s decision... but THE JUDGE WAS RIGHT.”

“The citizenship issue is a huge issue or should I say nexus. I ran into a fella a while back that had the case cite where a judge said we become citizens of the corporate U.S. when we pay the first dollar into social security as an adult; and our use of the current postal system. The judge declined to elaborate but (here I’m being very optimistic) was trying to tell the litigant what he must do to beat the infidels back. I have expatriated / re-patriated, filed my UCC documents, and am making use of common law trusts. Appears that everything is working and soon I will find out in an up-coming court case... The ex-patriating issue and KNOWING how the uniform commercial code and how we get into contracts with the corporate US seems to be the minimum we must know and defend. For nearly thirty years I have heard it all from sincere but wide-eyed ‘patriots’ who were eager to convince me how the income tax was illegal...blah, blah, blah. It never occurred to them that they are not SUBJECT TO the tax (even if it was legal). Several judges I see now and then are now avoiding me. I made the ‘mistake’ of asking them about jurisdiction and strawman and Uniform Commercial Code issues. Squirm and sweat describes their responses. Maybe we haven’t found the "Magic-Bullet" yet but it seems that we are very close.”

Therefore, all of our problems begin when we claim to be persons domiciled within exclusive federal jurisdiction, which includes “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “residents” (aliens with a domicile) under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). This is what makes us slaves of the state in the pursuit of taxable government privileges and benefits, whether they be the right to vote, social security, driver’s licenses, permits, etc. In a way, one could say that the effort by the government to fool American Nationals, who are “nonresident aliens”, in to claiming they are domiciliaries of the federal zone constitutes the crime of “conspiracy against rights” in violation of 18 U.S.C. §241, because once we become domiciliaries of the federal zone, we lose all our rights and no one including the states may interfere. Once we are “U.S. citizens” or “residents”, we become nonresidents in our out state and divorce our state and now become privileged “franchisees” of the federal government. We’re slaves, and from that point on our government will call us “taxpayers”, which is nothing but a polite way to say that we are federal whores! At that point, every visit we make to a federal court assumes that we have the burden of proving that we are not whores, I mean “taxpayers”. Every case is litigated in equity rather than the Constitution, and the federal courts become administrative courts to enforce our voluntary “domicile contract”, which amounts to indentured servanthood. But keep in mind that “U.S. citizenship” status is voluntary, according to the U.S. supreme Court as follows:

“The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction.”

If you don’t want the “privileges” of being a domiciliary of the federal zone, then your government, in a free country, can’t force you to accept them or pay for them through income taxes. Compelled receipt of and payment for a government benefit is not a benefit at all, but slavery disguised as government benevolence in plain violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. Period, end of discussion. It’s ludicrous the way our government treats “taxpayers” to even claim in the first place that being a statutory “U.S. person” or “U.S. citizen” is a “privilege”? What a joke!

Remember the following important facts regarding the voluntary nature of “domicile”. Also remember that under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 17(b), our “domicile” and any agency we are exercising is where federal courts get civil jurisdiction. The main purpose of the Federal District Courts is to facilitate “business” or “commerce” by enforcing the Social Security contract with otherwise sovereign Americans in the states. Also remember that:

1. “Domicile” is the origin of the government’s tax jurisdiction.
2. The choice of “domicile” is voluntary and we aren’t obligated to have ANY earthly domicile.
3. All “residents” are “aliens” with a domicile in the federal zone. See 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
4. All “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are American Nationals with a domicile in the federal zone. They are automatically also “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
6. The government cannot remove any aspect of your citizenship status without your voluntary consent and participation, because citizenship is a right and a contract, once granted by the government, and can only be revoked by the recipient, which is you. See Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253 (1967):

   “Citizen has constitutional right to remain a citizen in a free country unless he voluntarily relinquishes that citizenship.”

7. If you change your domicile to be outside the federal zone, you still retain your “national” status but lose your statutory “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401. The government can’t take away your “national” status in the process, because they can’t take away your citizenship without your consent.
8. 8 U.S.C. §1452 describes how to obtain evidence that you are a “non-citizen national”.
9. We have procedures on how to change your domicile and amend government records to remove any presumed statutory “U.S. citizen” status to become exclusively a “national” but not a “citizen” in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

5.4.27 Popular illegal government techniques for coercing “consent”

Now that we have firmly established that consent is required in the assessment and collection of income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, it’s reasonable to ask what devious and illegal means the government uses to coerce “consent” or what they popularly call “voluntary compliance” out of the populace. We covered such techniques generally earlier in section 4.3.16, but it is reasonable to particularize the techniques down so that we can be very aware of the tools of coercion, force, and fraud used directly against us in the case of income taxation. We will therefore itemize each technique into a very specific “MO”, which is a “Method of Operation” used by criminal public servants for accomplishing their crime. The reason we put this section at the end of the treatment of the “voluntary” nature of income taxes is so that we can start from the point of knowing exactly what the lawful limits are upon the IRS’ authority. The techniques in the following subsections will be listed in order of the frequency they occur.

5.4.27.1 Deceptive language and words of art

IRS makes false presumptions about the meaning of several important words in its publications and forms and website which it is unwilling to share with you and which prejudice your rights and sovereignty in most cases. In such a case, we must remind ourselves what the U.S. Supreme Court said about the abuse of “presumption” to exceed the authority of the Constitution:

“The power to create [false] presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions,”

The purpose of these “words of art” is to deceive you into believing their false presumptions and thereby commit constructive fraud. The abused words include, but are not limited to:

1. “United States”
2. “State”
3. “state”
4. “foreign”
5. “nonresident alien”
6. “U.S. citizen”
7. “employee”
8. “income”
9. “gross income”
10. “trade or business”
11. “wages”
12. “individual”
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The only way to overcome false presumptions about the meaning of the above words is to read the codes and laws for oneself, which the IRS knows that few Americans will do. This constructive fraud counts on the following elements to be successful:

1. A deficient public education system run by the government which dumbs-down Americans by not teaching them either “law” or “constitutional law”, in any grammar, junior high, or high school curricula.
2. College and university curricula in government-run universities that do not require the study of any aspect of law for most majors.
3. IRS and government websites that do not define the meaning of these words. See section 3.12.1 and following earlier for examples.
4. IRS publications that deliberately do not define the meaning of these words.
5. Legal dictionaries that have had these critical words removed so that they cannot be easily understood. For instance, no legal dictionary published at this time that we could find has a definition of the term “United States” in it. See section 6.10.1 later, for instance.
6. Federal courts that have become vehicles for political propaganda and terrorism rather than justice. See sections 2.8.13 through 2.8.13.8.1 earlier.
7. A refusal, upon submitting a Freedom of Information Act Request, to provide an unambiguous and honest definition of these words that includes the WHOLE truth.

Those who try to educate the public about the legal meaning of the above words have been persecuted by the IRS, and this includes us. If you would like to learn more about this fraud, consult:

- Subsections underneath section 3.12.1 earlier.
- Section 5.10 later about vague laws

5.4.27.2 Ignoring Responsive Correspondence to Collection Notices

When the IRS attempts illegal collection actions against Americans, they send out threatening correspondence, often via certified mail. Many recipients respond faithfully to this correspondence, using research from this book, documenting that the IRS is:

1. Violating enacted positive law.
2. Wrongfully enforcing against a “nontaxpayer”.
3. Involved in racketeering and organized extortion.
4. Collecting without the consent of the target.

We call such responses to illegal enforcement actions “response letters”. Any time a person sends a response letter to the IRS, they are doing what is called “Petitioning their government for illegal and unconstitutional abuses.” The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution makes petitioning the government a protected right, the exercise of which cannot be penalized. Such a petition also requires an earnest response by the IRS and due respect for the legal issues raised in it. Seldom are these response letters read or even responded to by the IRS. Instead, the IRS routinely penalizes those submitting such correspondence by:

1. Instituting penalties illegally and in violation of the Constitutional prohibition against Bills of Attainder. A Bill of Attainder is a penalty without a court trial, and it is prohibited by Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution against natural persons.
2. Creating additional retaliatory assessments.
3. Falsifying the Individual Master File (IMF) of the respondent by indicating that they are involved in criminal activity. When the respondent notices this in their record, then the IRS refuses to correct the computer fraud, which is actually a violation of 18 U.S.C. §1030. See our Master File Decoder for how this fraud works: http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Programs/MFDecoder/MFDecoder.htm

5.4.27.3 Fraudulent forms and publications

The IRS publications are constructively fraudulent. Their purpose is mainly as a government propaganda vehicle intended to encourage false presumption, because they exclude discussion of any of the below subjects, and therefore encourage incorrect conclusions about the tax liability of the reader:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. The limits upon federal jurisdiction.
2. The implications of these limits upon the definition of terms such as “United States”, “State”, “employee”, and “income”
3. The fact that the Internal Revenue Code is not “law” and therefore imposes no obligation upon anyone except those who consent to be subject to its provisions.
4. The fact that the Internal Revenue Code does not describe a lawful “tax” as defined by the Supreme Court
5. The dual nature of the Internal Revenue Code as a municipal tax upon all federal territories, possessions, and the District of Columbia as well as a “national” tax upon imports of corporations ONLY.

The IRS admits that its publications are not trustworthy, by saying in its Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) the following:

“IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position.”

If you would like to learn more detail about this subject, read:

- Section 3.12 earlier on “words of art”
- Section 5.5.9 about fraud in the use of the 1040 form

- Our website article describing how the courts refuse to hold the IRS responsible for the content of its publications, forms, and telephone advice at: http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

5.4.27.4 Political propaganda

There are five main sources of political propaganda designed to terrorize the American public into consenting to comply with the I.R.C. These sources are:

2. The Department of Injustice press releases. See: http://www.usdoj.gov/tax/TEN.htm
3. Press releases leaked indirectly to the media.
5. Informal publications posted on the IRS website which the IRS refuses to take responsibility for. This includes the IRS pamphlet entitled “The Truth About Frivolous Tax Arguments”. See:
6. Abuse of caselaw for political rather than legal purposes. The IRS will quote irrelevant federal caselaw from federal courts that have no jurisdiction over us because we do not live on federal property. They will do this in violation of their own Internal Revenue Manual, which says on the subject the following:

    Internal Revenue Manual
    4.10.7.2.9.8 (05-14-1999) Importance of Court Decisions

    1. Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.

    2. Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.

    3. Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers.

Because none of these sources portray the relevant, complete or most important truth about the limits upon federal taxing powers, the result is that they exploit ignorance to create fear of the government and the IRS in order to encourage “voluntary compliance”. We might add that any decision accomplished in the presence of fear, at least in the context of rape, cannot be considered “consensual”. The only way consent can lawfully be procured is when it is FULLY INFORMED, meaning that the decision maker is give the WHOLE truth upon which to make his decision, rather than only that subset of the truth which benefits the government.

"Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."

5.4.27.5 Deception of private companies and financial institutions

Through a systematic campaign of dis-information, the IRS deceives private companies outside of its jurisdiction into believing that they are required to comply with whatever IRS agents tell them on the telephone or whatever gets mailed to them in the form of a Notice of Levy or a Notice of Lien. The most famous private company, No Time Delay Electronics, which challenged the IRS authority to use such tactics has been targeted for endless legal harassment and terrorism by the IRS and the Franchise Tax Board. The owner of that establishment, Nick Jesson, was featured on the movie on our website entitled “How to Keep 100% of Your Earnings” at:

http://famguardian.org/Media/movie.htm

Mr. Jesson eventually became the target of endless legal terrorism, the techniques of which are documented in the next section.

Private employers not within the jurisdiction of the federal government that don’t ask any questions and comply with illegal requests by the IRS are left alone. However, those that request any of the following are harassed and terrorized:

1. Proof of the legal identity and service of process address of the person in the IRS who is making the request or sending the illegal Notice of Lien or Notice of Levy.
2. The basis upon which to believe that the I.R.C. is “law”.
3. Why the Notice of Levy form 668A-c(DO) is missing paragraph (a) of 26 U.S.C. §6331, which states that levies are limited only to elected or appointed officers of the United States government or federal “instrumentalities” such as “public officers”.
4. An abstract of judgment signed by a judge authorizing the levy or lien of the property of the accused. The “Notice of Levy” and “Notice Of Lien” must meet the requirements of the Fifth Amendment, which requires that all such takings of property must be signed by a judge and be executed ONLY through judicial process.

In response to questions of the kind above, the IRS only offers threats, because it can’t demonstrate legal authority. Disinformation of payroll people at private companies is effected mainly through the techniques documented later in section 5.4.27.8. If you would like to learn how to fight such underhanded intimidation of private companies and financial institutions in the context of withholding, please refer to our free pamphlet entitled Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers available at:

5.4.27.6 Legal terrorism

Those people who expose the illegal and fraudulent dealings of the government relating to income taxes are frequently targeted for endless litigation and terrorism by the government. The nature of litigation is that it is expensive, very time-consuming, and complex. The government institutes what is called “malicious abuse of legal process” to essentially wear down, distract, and plunder their opponents of financial resources. Most Americans are unfamiliar with the legal process, and when falsely accused or litigated against by the government, must hire an expensive attorney. This attorney, who is licensed by the government, becomes just another government prosecutor against them who essentially bilks their assets while cooperating subtly with the government in ensuring a conviction. It doesn’t take long to exhaust the financial resources of the falsely accused American, and so even if there is no money left for the IRS to collect at that point, they have still accomplished the financial punishment that they sought originally. As long as it really hurts financially to not “consent”, then the government will win in the end.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax 5-557

We must remember, however, that such an abuse of legal process to effect the equivalent of slavery, is a crime if effected within federal jurisdiction. The government parties who cooperate in such legal terrorism become personally liable for this type of slavery:

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 77 > Sec. 1589.

Sec. 1589. - Forced labor

Whoever knowingly provides or obtains the labor or services of a person -

(3) by means of the abuse or threatened abuse of law or the legal process.

shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both. If death results from the violation of this section, or if the violation includes kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or the attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill, the defendant shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for any term of years or life, or both

The slavery produced by this legal terrorism also violates the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude and is punishable under 18 U.S.C. §1994 and 18 U.S.C. §1581.

5.4.27.7 Coercion of federal judges

Since 1918, federal judges sitting in the District and Circuit courts have been subject to IRS extortion and coercion. Since 1938, this extortion has enjoyed the blessing of no less than the U.S. Supreme Court. The Revenue Act of 1918, section 213, 40 Stat. 1057, was the first federal law to impose income taxes on federal judges. That act was challenged by federal judges in the case of Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501 (1924) and the judges won. Congress attempted again in the Revenue Act of 1932, section 22, to do the same thing by much more devious means. Federal judges again challenged the attempt in the case of O’Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939), and lost. Since that time, the independence of the federal judiciary on the subject of taxation has been completely compromised. No judge who is subject to IRS extortion can possibly be objective when ruling on an income tax issue. He cannot faithfully and with integrity perform his job without violating 28 U.S.C. §144, 28 U.S.C. §455, and 18 U.S.C. §208. Consequently, the rulings of the federal district and circuit courts since that time have consistently favored the government, and thereby prejudiced the rights of the sovereign people. Every case involving a judge with this kind of conflict of interest can only be described as violation of due process of law, which requires both an impartial jury AND judge to preside over the trial. The very problem documented in the Declaration of Independence that was the reason for creating this country to begin with has once again come back to haunt us:

“They have made Judges dependent on their will alone, for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries.”

[Declaration of Independence]

An entire book has been written about the corruption of the federal judiciary and its nature as an Article IV, territorial court which enjoys no jurisdiction in states of the Union, if you wish to investigate further:

5.4.27.8 Manipulation, licensing, and coercion of CPA’s, Payroll clerks, Tax Preparers, and Lawyers

The IRS maintains several “education programs” for tax preparers, tax professionals, payroll people, and CPAs, which have really become nothing but propaganda, disinformation, and terrorism mechanisms. Below are a few:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. TaxTalk Today: A website devoted to “educating” tax attorneys, CPAs, and payroll people. See http://www.taxtalktoday.tv/

3. Enrolled Agent Program: Described in Treasury Circular 230, this publication prescribes the requirements that tax professionals must meet in order to get “privileged”, priority service from the IRS in the resolution of tax problems. Those who don’t participate in the program and meet all the governments demands are put on hold forever on the telephone and ignored when they seek tax help in the resolution of problems for their clients. Undoubtedly, they must be “compliant” and not challenge the authority of the IRS, and when they don’t, their “privilege” of participating is summarily revoked.

Can you see how insidious and devious this manipulation is? On top of the above, those tax professionals who reveal the truth are threatened to have their licenses and CPA credentials pulled. This happened to former IRS Criminal Investigator Joe Banister, who became the target of an attempt by the Secretary of the Treasury to suspend his CPA license because he was informing people about the government fraud documented in this book. This same kind of illegal duress of tax professionals also extends to those who left the IRS to speak out against the agency: They are persecuted and become the target of media slander campaigns. 5.5 Why We Aren’t Liable to File Tax Returns or Keep Records

5.5.1 It’s illegal and impossible to “file” your own tax return!

That’s right: It is ILLEGAL to file your own tax return! The term “file” is nowhere defined in the Internal Revenue Code. If you ask the IRS at an audit exactly what it means to “file” a tax return and when that task is accomplished they will tell you the following as they told us:

1. A return is only considered “filed” after a Document Locator Number (DLN) is assigned to it in the upper right corner.
2. The only person who can assign a Document Locator Number (DLN) to any document filed with the IRS is the clerk processing a tax return that you have mailed in.
3. If you personally appeared at the processing center and asked to personally file the return yourself, they would tell you that:
   3.1. They can’t let you inside their facility.
   3.2. You aren’t allowed to enter into the processing area where a DLN could be assigned because you would then have access or display of sensitive Privacy Act information about other “taxpayers”, which is illegal.
4. If you asked an IRS agent to give you the next “DLN” to assign to your return so you could write it on the return yourself, they would say they aren’t authorized to.

Therefore, it is not only literally impossible for you to personally “file” a tax return document about yourself, but it is also ILLEGAL to file the return yourself because it would violate the privacy of other “taxpayers” in the process because you would have to be physically present inside the IRS processing facility, which is illegal. Consequently, the only person who can “file” a tax return is the clerk who processes it on behalf of someone else.

Knowing the above concept, one of our readers actually used this knowledge in his favor at an IRS audit. He has a certified transcript under oath of two IRS agents admitting on the record that it is illegal to “file” a tax return! It’s hilarious and he has it on tape! The agents were totally embarrassed and we recommend that you use this approach as well.

The above reader also took the knowledge in this section one step further. He filed two blank returns to the IRS. The first one had in big black letters “NOT LIABLE” written across the return as required by IRS regulations. Then he attached to it... a blank return along with an IRS Form 2848 Power of Attorney and a letter stating that he had authority to prepare and sign the return on behalf of him if the agent would:

1. Provide the statute making him “liable” to pay.
2. Provide a signed copy of his delegation order authorizing him to “assess” a tax under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code against a person who doesn’t volunteer to pay the tax.
3. Provide a photocopy of his Pocket Commission and his state driver’s license.
4. Provide his real legal name and home address so he could be served with legal papers in the event that he didn’t follow directions.

Guess what the response of the IRS was to the above request? It took them almost two years to respond to the paperwork they got and they never filed a return on behalf of the reader! Then the reader decided to prosecute the AGENT for “Willful Failure to File” under 26 U.S.C. §7203! He decided to do this because it’s literally impossible and illegal for him to personally “file” a tax return so he thought he better let the agent do it, and the agent couldn’t prove that he had the lawful authority to do it even though he was given the responsibility to do it using the 2848 form. That made the IRS agent criminally liable for Willful Failure to File. That’s the same statute that the IRS tries to use to go after us, but we can use it to turn the tables on them instead. Go get’em folks!

5.5.2 Why God says you can’t file tax returns

The book of Isaiah 39 records the story of a Israelite King Hezekiah who had great riches and honor. Envoys from a far away land of Babylon sent him letters of condolence while he was sick, hoping to sweet talk him out of his wealth. In response to the flattering letters, King Hezekiah invited them to visit and when they visited, he thought he would show off and parade his wealth by showing them all that he had. Here is the story:

The Babylonian Envoys

Babylonian Captivity of Judah Foretold

1 At that time Merodach-Baladan the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present to Hezekiah, for he heard that he had been sick and had recovered. "And Hezekiah was pleased with them, and showed them the house of his treasures--the silver and gold, the spices and precious ointment, and all his armory--all that was found among his treasures. There was nothing in his house or in all his dominion that Hezekiah did not show them.

2Then [prophet] Isaiah the prophet went to King Hezekiah, and said to him, "What did these men say, and from where did they come to you?"

So Hezekiah said, "They came to me from a far country, from Babylon."

4And he said, "What have they seen in your house?"

So Hezekiah answered, "They have seen all that is in my house; there is nothing among my treasures that I have not shown them."

5Then Isaiah said to [King] Hezekiah, "Hear the word of the LORD of hosts: 6 Behold, the days are coming when all that is in your house, and what your fathers have accumulated until this day, shall be carried to Babylon; nothing shall be left,' says the LORD. "And they shall take away some of your sons who will descend from you, whom you will beget; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.'"

6So Hezekiah said to Isaiah, "The word of the LORD which you have spoken is good!" For he said,
"At least there will be peace and truth in my days."
[Isaiah 39, Bible, NKJV]

Subsequently, the prophet Isaiah’s predictions were fulfilled in 2 Chron. 36:1-17. The moral of the above story is that those who are not discreet and who do not protect their privacy and information about their wealth will not keep it for long, and will be plundered by covetous people, governments, and nations.
Now let’s apply these principles to your situation. Tax returns record EVERY aspect of your wealth and earnings, and report it to foreigners in a foreign state and a foreign jurisdiction called the District of Criminals. By reporting everything on your tax return, you are inviting them to come and take it. You are “showing off” your wealth, which, according to the prophet Isaiah, is a grievous sin that will invite strife and subjection. Below are some additional Bible cites that confirm this conclusion:

“A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself [and his assets],
But the simple pass on and are punished [and plundered].”
[Prov. 22:3, Bible, NKJV]

“Those who trust in their wealth
And boast [on a tax return to a bunch of criminal politicians and lawyer thieves] in the multitude of their riches,
None of them can by any means redeem his brother,
Nor give to God a ransom for him—
For the redemption of their souls is costly,
And it shall cease forever—
That he should continue to live eternally,
And not see the Pit.
For he sees wise men die;
Likewise the fool and the senseless person perish,
And leave their wealth to others [foreigners in the District of Criminals].
Their inner thought is that their houses will last forever,
Their dwelling places to all generations;
They call their lands after their own names.
Nevertheless man, though in honor, does not remain;
He is like the beasts that perish.
This is the way of those who are foolish,
And of their posterity who approve their sayings.Selah
Like sheep they are laid in the grave;
Death shall feed on them;
The upright shall have dominion over them in the morning;
And their beauty shall be consumed in the grave, far from their dwelling.
But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave,
For He shall receive me. Selah
Do not be afraid when one becomes rich,
When the glory of his house is increased;
His glory shall not descend after him.
Though while he lives he blesses himself
(for men will praise you when you do well for yourself),
He shall go to the generation of his fathers;
They shall never see light.
A man who is in honor, yet does not understand,
Is like the beasts that perish.”
[Psalm 49:6-20, Bible, NKJV]

Therefore, you CANNOT complete a tax return and send it to anyone in government, because it is against God’s law. Such an unwise act amounts to:

1. “boasting of your wealth” and invites strife and thievery by the government.
2. The perjury statement at the end of the return amounts to an oath of allegiance to your sovereign and protector, the government. This is idolatry, because the government becomes your substitute God. Even the Supreme Court says that the last oath you took determines who your real “sovereign” or false god is:

[Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795); From the syllabus but not the opinion; SOURCE: http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/search/display.html?terms=choice%20or%20conflict%20and%20law&url=/s upct/html/historics/USSC_CR_0003_0133_ZS.html]

Jesus, on the other hand, said that we cannot take oaths, which implies that we cannot sign the perjury oath at the end of the tax return:

5-561

[Matt. 5:33-37, Bible, NKJV]

If you do not heed these warnings in God’s law, then the same fate that happened to the tribe of Judah in the Bible will happen to you. Instead of the plunderer being “Babylon”, it will be the equivalent of Babylon, which is the District of Criminals, which is what the “D.C.” means in “Washington, D.C.”.

5.5.3 You’re Not a “U.S. citizen” If You File Form 1040, You’re a “Alien”!

The income tax is “imposed” in 26 U.S.C. §1 on “U.S. citizens”, “residents” (who are only “aliens”), and “nonresident aliens”. 26 CFR §1.1-1 explains this section as follows:

26 CFR §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

(a) General rule

(1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual...

The group of people called “citizens and residents” in the above regulation are called “U.S. persons” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). These people maintain a “domicile” within the District of Columbia. Later in the regulations, in section 26 CFR §1.1441(c), we find that the definition of “individual” means an “alien” or “nonresident alien”. Here’s the definition of “individual”:

26 CFR 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

By the way, don’t be distracted by the title of the regulation above, because the titles mean nothing according to 26 U.S.C. Section 7806(b). The title says “foreign persons”, and in fact that’s exactly what you declare yourself to be when you file a form 1040! Based on the preceding discussion, if you are a “U.S. citizen”, then there is only one occasion where you can also be an “individual”, and that occasion is when you are overseas and domiciled in a foreign country that is not a state of the Union. These people are called “U.S. citizens living abroad” in the IRS publications and if they volunteer to file a return, they should file a 1040 with an attached 2555. What the code is really saying is that if you are in a foreign country that is not a state of the Union, then:

1. You are outside the protections of the Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights, which are the first ten amendments to the Constitution, only applies inside states of the Union. See Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901).
2. It's perfectly constitutional to tax you while in a foreign country since rights to not apply and doing so would not violate any of your Constitutional rights.

3. When you are in a foreign country, you are an “alien” relative to that foreign country and chances are that you come under the provisions of an income tax treaty between the United States and that foreign country. Within the Internal Revenue Code, under such circumstances, you would be referred to as an “alien” even if you in fact were also a statutory “U.S. citizen”!

4. The reason that federal “citizens” can be taxed under the provisions of a treaty with a foreign country is because:
   4.1. When “citizens” (under federal law, who are born in the District of Columbia and federal territories only) are abroad and domiciled in a foreign country, they are subject to the laws of the federal United States. They have to be subject in order to be under the protection of the government when traveling.
   4.2. There is a cost to provide the protection that government provides to its citizens when overseas, and its reasonable that they should pay for that cost.

5. In spite of all the above, since the Internal Revenue Code is not “positive law” and there is not liability statute for anyone other than withholding agents in 26 U.S.C. §1461, then the payment of Subtitle A income taxes even by statutory “U.S. citizens” or “residents” or “U.S. persons” temporarily abroad is still not compulsory or mandatory. The “U.S. citizen” we are referring to here is a statutory citizen defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401, and that definition doesn’t include most Americans.

The Supreme Court confirmed the above conclusions in the case of Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924), in which it said:

“The question in the case, and which was presented by the demurrer to the declaration is, as expressed by plaintiff, whether Congress has power to impose a tax upon income received by a native citizen of the United States who, at the time the income was received, was permanently resident and domiciled in the city of Mexico, the income being from real and personal property located in Mexico.

“Plaintiff assigns against the power, not only his rights under the Constitution of the United States, but under international law, and in support of the assignments cites many cases. It will be observed that the foundation of the assignments is the fact that the citizen receiving the income and the property of which it is the product are outside of the territorial limits of the United States. These two facts, the contention is, exclude the existence of the power to tax. Or to put the contention another way, to the existence of the power and its exercise, the person receiving the income and the property from which he receives it must both be within the territorial limits of the United States to be within the taxing power of the United States. The contention is not justified, and that it is not justified is the necessary deduction of recent cases. In United States v. Bennett, 232 U.S. 293, 34 Sup.Ct. 431, the power of the United States to tax a foreign-built yacht owned and used during the taxing period outside of the United States by a citizen domiciled in the United States was sustained. The tax passed on was imposed by a tariff act, but necessarily the power does not depend upon the form by which it is exerted.

“It will be observed that the case contained only one of the conditions of the present case, the property taxed was outside of the United States. In United States v. Goellet, 232 U.S. 293, 34 Sup.Ct. 431, the yacht taxed was outside of the United States, but owned by a citizen of the United States who was 'permanently resident and domiciled in a foreign country.' It was decided that the yacht was not subject to the tax—but this was a matter of construction. Pains were taken to say that the question of power was determined 'wholly irrespective' of the owner's 'permanent domicile in a foreign country,' and the court put out of view the situs of the yacht. That the court had no doubt of the power to tax was illustrated by reference to the income tax laws of prior years and their express extension to those domiciled abroad. The illustration has pertinence to the case at bar, for the case at bar is concerned with an income tax, and the power to impose it.

“We may make further exposition of the national power as the case depends upon it. It was illustrated at once in United States v. Bennett by a contrast with the power of a state. It was pointed out that there were limitations upon the latter that were not on the national power. The taxing power of a state, it was decided, encountered at its borders the taxing power of other states and was limited by them. There was no such limitation, it was pointed [265 U.S. 47, 56] out, upon the national power, and that the limitation upon the states affords, it was said, no ground for constructing a barrier around the United States, 'shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty.'

“The contention was rejected that a citizen's property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in 'mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation to it.' And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it 'belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make citizenship completely beneficial.' In other words, the principle was declared that the government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and therefore has the power to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal- the government having power to impose the tax.

Judgment affirmed.”

So the question is, how can the IRS claim you owe anything under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code if you claim to be a “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401? The answer is that it can ONLY happen when all of the following constraints apply:

1. You are either domiciled in the federal zone or living abroad, but not while you are in a state of the Union.
2. You filed a 1040 in the past and gave the IRS the mistaken impression that you were a “U.S. person” living abroad. If you did not attach a Form 2555 to the form 1040, then you basically admitted to them that you are an “alien” domiciled in the federal zone which has no constitutional rights, which you are perfectly entitled to do. Therefore, the IRS will continue to think that you are a “alien” unless or until you notify them of your changed status by correcting all federal paperwork that indicates your citizenship status, such as your passport application and SSA Form SS-5.
3. Even then, you must also volunteer to be a “taxpayer”, because there is no liability statute requiring you to pay absent your consent.

When you fit the above constraints, you can be described as an “individual” under the Internal Revenue Code, which in most cases is a “U.S. person” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) living abroad and coming under the provisions of an income tax treaty with that foreign country pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911. That’s why the IRS doesn’t ask you on your 1040 income tax return if you are a “U.S. citizen” but instead they put a title at the top of the form that says “U.S. Individual”! They are indirectly asking you if you are either an “alien” domiciled in the federal zone (which are the only kinds of “residents” in the code) or a statutory but not constitutional “U.S. citizen” living abroad who comes under an income tax treaty and is therefore an “alien” under that treaty.

Those who declare themselves to be “U.S. individuals” by filing a form 1040 are declaring themselves to be either a “nonresident alien” or an “alien” based on the definition of “individual” found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) above, which is the ONLY definition of “individual” anywhere in the Treasury Regulations, 26 CFR. Now since the form 1040NR is filed by “nonresident aliens” and since we must either be an “alien” or a “nonresident alien” to be a “U.S. individual” subject to income taxes, the only thing we can be is an “Alien” under 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) if we file a form 1040. Leave it to an IRS lawyer to figure out how to fool you into admitting that you are legally an alien in your own country so that you can be taxed. Outrageous, isn’t it?

The definition for “individual” that the government wants you to incorrectly assume, however, is that found in 5 U.S.C. §552(a)(2):

(2) the term “individual” means a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence;

But this definition of “individual” is superseded by the only definition of “individual” found in the Treasury Regulations found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1 above. The whole purpose for providing a definition in a statute is to supersede the common definition or other definitions.

The content of this section is confirmed by 26 CFR §1.1-1, which says the tax is “imposed” on “aliens” ONLY. Do you see “citizens” mentioned anywhere in the following section(?):
amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by an unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8.” [26 CFR §1.1- 1(a)(2)(ii)]

Here’s a definition from Black’s Law Dictionary that confirms the findings of this section:

Resident alien. “One, not yet a citizen of this country, who has come into the country from another with the intention to abandon his former citizenship and to reside here.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition][Underlines added]

If you are a “national” but not a statutory “citizen”, then you are a “nonresident alien” and you DO NOT fit the description of being a “Resident alien” or an “alien” above because although you are not a statutory “U.S. citizen”, you do not reside or maintain a domicile within the federal United States or federal zone, which is the area that the term “resident” is relative to.

Finally, the Internal Revenue Code further confirms the content of this section. 26 U.S.C. §6091 confirms that statutory “citizens of the United States” described in 8 U.S.C. §1401 who reside outside the federal United States are not allowed to file their returns in a local IRS District Office or Service Center:

- TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 61 > Subchapter A > PART VII > Sec. 6091.
- Sec. 6091. - Place for filing returns or other documents

(a) General rule

When not otherwise provided for by this title, the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the place for the filing of any return, declaration, statement, or other document, or copies thereof, required by this title or by regulations.

(b) Tax returns

In the case of returns of tax required under authority of part II of this subchapter -

(1) Persons other than corporations

(A) General rule

Except as provided in subparagraph (B), a return (other than a corporation return) shall be made to the Secretary -

(i) in the internal revenue district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the person making the return, or

(ii) at a service center serving the internal revenue district referred to in clause (i), as the Secretary may by regulations designate.

(B) Exception

Returns of -

(i) persons who have no legal residence or principal place of business in any internal revenue district,

(ii) citizens of the United States whose principal place of abode for the period with respect to which the return is filed is outside the United States,

(iii) persons who claim the benefits of section 911 (relating to citizens or residents of the United States living abroad), section 931 (relating to income from sources within Guam, American Samoa, or the Northern Mariana Islands), or section 933 (relating to income from sources within Puerto Rico),

(iv) nonresident alien persons, and
The term “United States” above, means the federal zone, as we explained earlier in chapter 4. Consequently, if a “citizen of the United States”, who is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 (meaning a person born in a territory or possession of the United States or the District of Columbia) is domiciled in a state of the Union, he can’t file his tax return at a District Office, because he:

1. Does not live within any Internal Revenue District.
2. Does not live in any federal judicial district either.
3. Does not live in the federal zone or federal “United States”.

Where would he file his return then? He would file it with the International Branch of the Internal Revenue Service located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. That is the place where all 1040NR forms are sent by “nonresident aliens” and also where all 1040 forms that have an attached form 2555 are sent. The 1040 form with the attached 2555 form are used by “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 who are traveling overseas or who are within states of the Union and who choose to volunteer to donate to the government under the authority of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code.

5.5.4 You’re NOT the “individual” mentioned at the top of the 1040 form if you are a “U.S. citizen” Domiciled in the Federal “United States”

The term “individual” is never defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code but appears at the top of the 1040 form “U.S. Individual Income Tax Return” and is mentioned also in 26 U.S.C. §1 and 26 U.S.C. §6012(a). 26 U.S.C. §6012(a) is the section of the I.R.C. that most lawyers and the IRS will tell you creates an obligation to file a “return of income”. So who is this “individual”? Here is the only definition, hidden deep inside the Treasury regulations in a place you would never think to look, which we only found after we bought the regulations in searchable electronic CD-ROM form and did a search of the entire 20,000 pages of regulations:

26 CFR 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c ) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

The above definition is the ONLY definition of the term “individual” found ANYWHERE in either the Internal Revenue Code or the Regulations. The above definition ought to raise some BIG red flags! First of all, if you live in the [federal] United States as a “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, then you aren’t an “individual” because the definition of “individual”, doesn’t include citizens of the United States!!! If you are an alien, that is a person who is neither a citizen nor a national of the United States, who is domiciled in the federal United States, then you are an individual. That also makes you a “resident” because the terms “alien”, “resident alien”, and “resident” are all synonymous in the Internal Revenue Code. For confirmation of this fact, examine 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) discussed in the previous section.
Therefore, the tax code can’t apply to you even if you claim to be a U.S. citizen on a 1040 income tax return! That is why they don’t ask you if you are a “U.S. citizen” on the tax return and only say at the top “U.S. Individual”! This is consistent with our findings elsewhere in this chapter. It also explains why a U.S. citizen is defined as someone who lives in the Virgin Islands, Guam, Puerto Rico, or American Samoa, as follows:

26 CFR §31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen.

(b) The term ‘citizen of the United States’ includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

You therefore can’t be a “individual” who can be the subject of Subtitle A income taxes under 26 U.S.C. §1 unless you are:

1. A statutory “U.S. citizen” temporarily outside the “United States” (the country, which is called “abroad” in IRS publications) under 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)
2. A statutory “U.S. resident” (alien) as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) domiciled in the federal zone and temporarily outside the “United States” the country.
3. A statutory “U.S. person” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) temporarily outside the “United States” the country but domiciled in the federal zone.

That’s why they created a definition of statutory “U.S. citizen” that means you are living outside the United States in the Virgin Islands) so they can “pretend” that you are taxable! That way, even when you tell them you live in the “United States” by giving them an address in the 50 Union states on your tax return, they can still claim that you live in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands because of your status as a “U.S. citizen”! This whole scheme can be confirmed by ordering a copy of your non-sanitized Individual Master File (IMF) from the IRS and looking at the transaction codes on the IMF. If you look at your IMF and you have been filing 1040 forms for a while, chances are your record reflects that you reside in the Virgin Islands, even if you really have a domicile in one of the 50 Union states outside the federal zone! That’s why the IRS made the Publication 6209, which is used for decoding the IMF file, “For Official Use Only”, which is short for “Don’t let Citizen bastards get their hands on this at all costs!”. They know they are committing fraud and they don’t want you, the Citizen, to know the horrible truth and expose that fraud, because then they lose their ability to claim “plausible deniability”.

Even more interesting is the fact that form 1040NR is intended for nonresident aliens. The only type of “individual” not covered by the 1040NR is the “Alien”. Therefore, the 1040 form is intended for “Aliens”. How does it feel to be an “alien” in your own country? Leave it to greedy lawyers to dream up this kind of scam using definitions to fool you into paying taxes. The definition of Alien above excludes U.S. citizens or “nationals”, so you have to in effect commit fraud by declaring yourself to be a foreigner domiciled in the federal zone in order to be the subject of the income tax.

The next time you file a Form 1040 as the “national” that you rightfully are, consider that you are committing “fraud” by claiming to be a “U.S. Individual”. Your employer is also committing fraud on the W-2 he sends to you by claiming in Block 2 that you earn “wages”, which you will find out later in section 5.6.5 means that you are an elected or appointed employee of the federal government and who comes under the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939! No kidding!

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you don’t believe an “individual” can only be defined as an “alien” or “nonresident alien” as above or that the above definition is the only definition of “individual” anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code” or 26CFR, then we challenge you to find a definition in either of these two titles (not IRS Publications, which we will find out later are a fraud, but the statutes, which aren’t “positive law” by the way) that defines the word “individual” as also including “U.S. citizens” or “citizens of the United States”. We searched the entire I.R.C. and 26 CFR (20,000 pages) electronically and found NO other definitions! Furthermore, we challenge you to explain why the 1040 income tax form doesn’t say “U.S. Citizen or Resident” instead of “U.S. Individual” at the top of the form!

5.5.5 No Law Requires You to Keep Records

26 U.S.C. §6001 states the following:

TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE
Subtitle F - Procedure and Administration
CHAPTER 61 - INFORMATION AND RETURNS
Subchapter A - Returns and Records

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)  Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship  http://famguardian.org/
PART I - RECORDS, STATEMENTS, AND SPECIAL RETURNS

Sec. 6001. Notice or regulations requiring records, statements, and special returns

Every person liable for any tax imposed by this title, or for the collection thereof, shall keep such records, render such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and regulations as the Secretary may from time to time prescribe. Whenever in the judgment of the Secretary it is necessary, he may require any person, by notice served upon such person or by regulations, to make such returns, render such statements, or keep such records, as the Secretary deems sufficient to show whether or not such person is liable for tax under this title. The only records which an employer shall be required to keep under this section in connection with charged tips shall be charge receipts, records necessary to comply with section 6053(c), and copies of statements furnished by employees under section 6053(a).

If you look through all of the regulations pertaining to Subtitles A and C income taxes in the Internal Revenue Code, you will not find a single regulation requiring you to keep records to comply with the requirements of the code. The only thing records are needed for is to justify exemptions claimed during an examination or audit. The purpose of examinations and audits by the IRS is to exclude exemptions and thereby increase the amount of tax owed by the person being audited. However, if you don’t have any taxable income because your income does not fall in the category of corporate profits (as a corporation, because the income tax is only legal as an indirect excise tax) as identified later in section 5.6.1, then you don’t have to worry about exemptions so you don’t have to worry about records either, unless specifically notified personally by the Secretary of the Treasury or by someone who can show you a delegation of authority order authorizing him or her to act in their behalf! If an IRS agent asks you to bring your records to an examination, you can safely tell him you were never notified personally by the Secretary of the Treasury that you were required to keep records. For examples under the Internal Revenue Code that require the keeping of records, refer to the following:

- 26 U.S.C. §4403 Record Requirements (Taxes on Wagering)
- 26 U.S.C. §5114 Records (Excise taxes on alcohol)
- 26 U.S.C. §5124 Records (Records on all distilled spirits received)
- 26 U.S.C. §5741 Records to be maintained (Records required for manufacturers of tobacco products)

Another interesting fact, is that the 1040 form constitutes a record in and of itself, which then points to the assumption of the existence of other records or evidence you have documenting the numbers on the form. If you can’t be required to maintain records, then why can you be required to file a tax return?

5.5.6 Federal courts have NO authority to enforce criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code to crimes committed outside the federal zone

26 U.S.C. §7402(f) is the only place that describes the jurisdiction of the federal district courts of the United States to enforce the Internal Revenue Code. It states:

For general jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States in civil actions involving internal revenue, see Section 1340 of Title 28 of the United States Code.

Thus it is plain that district courts were only given jurisdiction to hear “civil actions”—not criminal ones—as far as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned. Even for “civil actions,” the Code refers to the jurisdiction contained in 28 U.S.C. §1340, the United States Code of Civil Procedure. This alone proves that all trials involving alleged criminal violations of the Code by persons domiciled outside the federal zone, including those under 26 U.S.C. §7201 (tax evasion) and 7203 (willful failure to file) were and are illegal, and that federal judges never had jurisdiction to conduct them!

It is well-established that in order for the U.S. government to prosecute a person for a crime, the crime must be committed on federal property subject to the territorial jurisdiction of the federal government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. The burden of proof belongs to the federal government to demonstrate using a preponderance of evidence that the crime was committed on federal property that was ceded to the U.S. government by the state. Proof must consist of the cession documents. You can find more information about this concept in 40 U.S.C. §3112:

TITLE 40 > SUBTITLE II > PART A > CHAPTER 31 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 3112
§ 3112. Federal jurisdiction

(a) Exclusive Jurisdiction Not Required.— It is not required that the Federal Government obtain exclusive jurisdiction in the United States over land or an interest in land it acquires.
(b) Acquisition and Acceptance of Jurisdiction.— When the head of a department, agency, or independent establishment of the Government, or other authorized officer of the department, agency, or independent establishment, considers it desirable, that individual may accept or secure from the State in which land or an interest in land that is under the immediate jurisdiction, custody, or control of the individual is situated, consent to, or cession of, any jurisdiction over the land or interest not previously obtained. The individual shall indicate acceptance of jurisdiction on behalf of the Government by filing a notice of acceptance with the Governor of the State or in another manner prescribed by the laws of the State where the land is situated.

(c) Presumption.— It is conclusively presumed that jurisdiction has not been accepted until the Government accepts jurisdiction over land as provided in this section.

To give you some examples, in United States v. Bateman, 34 F. 86 (N.D.Cal. 1888), it was determined that the United States did not have jurisdiction to prosecute for a murder committed at the Presidio because California had never ceded jurisdiction; see also United States v. Tully, 140 F. 899 (D.Mon. 1905). But later, California ceded jurisdiction for the Presidio to the United States, and it was held in United States v. Watkins, 22 F.2d. 437 (N.D.Cal. 1927), that this enabled the U.S. to maintain a murder prosecution; see also United States v. Holt, 168 F. 141 (D.Wash. 1909), United States v. Lewis, 253 F. 469 (S.D.Cal. 1918), and United States v. Wurtzbarger, 276 F. 753 (D.Or. 1921). Because the U.S. owned and had a state cession of jurisdiction for Fort Douglas in Utah, it was held that the U.S. had jurisdiction for a rape prosecution in Rogers v. Squier, 157 F.2d. 948 (9th Cir. 1946). But, without a cession, the U.S. has no jurisdiction; see Arizona v. Manypenny, 445 F.Supp. 1123 (D.Ariz. 1977).

It stands to reason then, that no federal tax crime can be prosecuted in a federal court which did not occur on federal property subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the United States under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17. The only exception to this rule with respect to taxes are those which come under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution dealing with foreign (overseas) commerce, since this is a specific power or subject matter delegated to the federal government in the constitution and it applies throughout the country and on nonfederal land within the 50 Union states:

> Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3
>
> The Congress shall have Power ...To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes;
>
> It is precisely the above clause of the constitution that explains, later in this chapter, most of the taxable sources of income found in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f), when we discuss the 861 Position in section 5.6.10 and following.

Federal courts rightly say that federal tax crimes don’t require implementing regulations to enforce. Here is an example:

> “Federal income tax regulations governing filing of income tax returns do not require Office of Management and Budget control numbers because requirement to file tax return is mandated by statute, not by regulation.”

The reason the federal courts are completely correct in the above conclusion is because the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code found in 26 U.S.C. §6700 and 7201-7217 only apply to federal “employees” acting in their official capacity, which almost exclusively occurs on federal property under the requirements of 4 U.S.C. §§71 & 72. Here is the main reason why this is true:

> TITLE 44 > CHAPTER 15 > Sec. 1505.
> Sec. 1505. - Documents to be published in Federal Register

(a) Proclamations and Executive Orders; Documents Having General Applicability and Legal Effect; Documents Required To Be Published by Congress.

> There shall be published in the Federal Register -

(1) Presidential proclamations and Executive orders, except those not having general applicability and legal effect or effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof;

(2) documents or classes of documents that the President may determine from time to time have general applicability and legal effect; and

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
(3) documents or classes of documents that may be required so to be published by Act of Congress.

For the purposes of this chapter every document or order which prescribes a penalty has general applicability and legal effect.

When no implementing regulations are published in the Federal Register for any law that institutes a penalty that can adversely affect the Constitutional rights of a person domiciled in states of the Union and outside of federal territory, the law may not be enforced against anything but federal “employees”, “officers”, and “agents” acting in their official capacity on federal territory. The implementing regulations for Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code confirm this:

26 CFR §601.702 Publication and public inspection

Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms of any matter referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph which is required to be published in the Federal Register, such person is not required in any manner to resort to, or be adversely affected by, such matter if it is not so published or is not incorporated by reference therein pursuant to subdivision (i) of this subparagraph. Thus, for example, any such matter which imposes an obligation and which is not so published or incorporated by reference will not adversely change or affect a person’s rights.

When the Department of Injustice attempts to illegally and maliciously prosecute you for “Failure to File”, they will use your incorrectly submitted W-4 form as prima facie evidence that you are a federal “employee”, because it says “employee” in the upper left corner. When they do this, they have violated your due process rights because even though you swore under penalty of perjury that you were an “employee” on the incorrect W-4 form, they still are not allowed to presume that it is true until they actually prove it, and if you are smart, you will submit an affidavit with your pleading which rescinds or revokes your signatures on any such forms whenever you send correspondence to the IRS and whenever you file any kind of motion as a criminal defendant in such an action. We also show in sections 3.5.3.14 and 3.5.4.13 and the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 how to use the W-8 form instead of the W-4 form to stop withholding, and to use a version of the form that does not create any false presumptions about your true status as a “nonresident alien” and a “nontaxpayer”.

Within the 50 Union states, the ONLY federal crimes which can be prosecuted in a federal court that occurred outside of the territorial jurisdiction of the federal government are the following, all of which require implementing regulations if prosecuted against persons who are not federal “employees”:

1. Federal government espionage.
3. Destruction of federal property.
4. Interference with the mail.
5. Frauds on the federal government.
6. Violations of Constitutional rights by either state or federal employees or officials.
7. Crimes involving federal insurance (such as FDIC).
8. Excise tax violations involving foreign commerce (Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution).
9. Slavery and enticement into slavery (Thirteenth Amendment).

For further details on the limits of the jurisdiction of the federal courts, refer to sections 7.4 through 7.4.10 in the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008.

5.5.7 Objections to Filing Based on Rights

The Bill of Rights is a series of amendments to the original U.S. Constitution that serve to constrain the authority of the federal government over citizens. They establish certain civil rights which may not be violated by the government. The first ten amendments were ratified as part of the original Constitution, and subsequent amendments were added after the union of the first Thirteen Colonies was formed. The First, Fourth, Fifth, and Tenth Amendments clearly eliminate any possibility that the federal government can compel or force us to file tax returns. We summarize our findings here:
Table 5-46: Constitutional constraints on filing of income tax returns

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Amendment</th>
<th>Content</th>
<th>Applicability to filing of tax returns</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>First</td>
<td>Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.</td>
<td>Freedom of speech includes one’s right to NOT communicate with one’s government, including on a tax return.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fourth</td>
<td>The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.</td>
<td>Filing of tax returns violates our privacy and the security of our papers and effects, most notably our business records. It exposes them to undue and unwanted examination by the government. Compelled filing of tax returns creates a police state mentality in which we can get our own family members in criminal trouble for disclosing financial information about ourselves.</td>
<tr>
<td>Fifth</td>
<td>No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.</td>
<tr>
<td>Tenth</td>
<td>Direct taxes on citizens can be used for any social purpose and “social engineering”, to usurp the authority of the States. For instance, if a State passes a law permitting abortion and the federal government wants to outlaw abortion, then all the federal government has to do is establish a huge tax credit for people who don’t have abortions. This clearly violates the tenth Amendment.</td>

In accordance with the U.S. Supreme Court Case of Garner v. U.S., 424 U.S. 648 (1976), income tax returns are submitted under duress and coercion and constitute the “compelled testimony of a witness”. Therefore, by the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, tax returns are inadmissible as evidence in a court of law because they violate the right of non-self-incrimination and were therefore obtained illegally as per the supreme Court case of Weeks v. United States, 232 U.S. 383 (1914). Below is a list of some of the types of coercion applied to compel such witnesses to testify against themselves:

1. 26 U.S.C. §7201: Attempt to evade or defeat tax (up to $100,000 fine or imprisonment not more than 5 years along with attorney fees).
2. 26 U.S.C. §7203: Willful Failure to File (fine up to $25,000 or imprisonment for one year or both)
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

4. IRS Liens and levies being imposed for nonpayment of taxes.
5. Receipt of threatening mail communications from the IRS (e.g. CP-515 “Notice of Deficiency” and subsequent Notice of Lien and Levy”).
6. Constant anxiety from and harassment by IRS agents (by telephone and otherwise).

Remember that the essential aspect of being a “right” is that the free exercise of rights CANNOT be penalized, taxed, or regulated in any way by the government. The above laws, however, indeed do precisely that and are therefore to be regarded as unconstitutional, illegal, null, and void and they should immediately be declared as such by all federal courts.

The U.S. Constitution is and always has been the Supreme Law of the land, and it supersedes all other law. The below Supreme Court case emphasizes constraints on treatment of the rights of citizens by both the government and individuals in Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965):

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm’n of California, 271 U.S. 583.

The only way to overcome Fifth Amendment restrictions on the filing of tax returns that are documented above absent a waiver of rights is for the IRS to sign an “Immunity from Prosecution Letter” under 26 U.S.C. §§6002-6003. In the event an authorized agent of the U.S. Government is willing to sign such an agreement for ALL future income tax returns having to do with you, then you are encouraged to submit returns, if you owe tax of course, which is highly unlikely. If there is some other way to avoid waiving rights without fear of criminal prosecution that is not documented here, then we invite your help in showing us what that method is.

One of the most famous Fifth Amendment tax resistance proponents is William Conklin. For years, he has had a standing challenge, offering up to $100,000 to the first person who can show how a Citizen can file a tax return without waiving his Fifth Amendment rights. He wrote a fascinating and excellent book about the subject called Why No One is Required to File Tax Returns, ISBN 1-891833-91-X, $21, copyright 1996, 2000. This book is available from Davidson Press, 21520 Yorba Linda Blvd, #G440; Yorba Linda, CA 92887-3753, info@davidsonpress.com; http://davidsonpress.com. Bill’s website is at the following address:

For further information on issues relating to the filing of 1040 forms, please read section 6.6.7 entitled “IRS Form 1040: Irrational Conspiracy to Violate Rights”.

Similar arguments as those for the 1040 form above also apply to the filing of IRS Form W-4’s by citizens. We discuss this subject further in section 6.6.8 entitled “IRS Form W-4 Scandals”.

5.5.8 We Don’t Have to Sign Tax Returns Under Penalty of Perjury, Which Makes Them Worthless and Useless!74

The premise of this section is that there is no law pursuant to the Constitution of the United States that requires an individual to make and sign under penalties of perjury a Form 1040 tax return. Unless otherwise noted, the terms defined in this section are quoted from the Sixth Edition of Black’s Law Dictionary. To readers who consider as unnecessary (or perhaps even an affront to their intelligence) listing below the definitions of some simple legal terms, the writer extends his apologies and states that by including them here he merely wishes to preclude any effort on the part of potential gainsayers who think they can refute the logical and legal premise of this work.

5.5.8.1 Definitions

"Affiant. The person who makes and subscribes an affidavit."

74 Portions from Pitman Buck, http://www.pointecom.net/~sunlight/form1040.htm
"Affidavit. A written or printed declaration of facts, made voluntarily, and confirmed by the oath or affirmation of the party making it, taken before a person having authority to administer such oath or affirmation. ....See also Certification; Jurat; Verification." (The word "voluntarily" has been emphasized by the author.)

"Authority. Permission. Right to exercise powers; to implement and enforce laws; to exact obedience; to command; to judge. Control over; jurisdiction. Often synonymous with power. The power delegated by a principal to his agent."

"Belief. A conviction of the truth of a proposition, existing subjectively in the mind, and induced by argument, persuasion, or proof addressed to the judgment." (Italics added.)

"Certification. The formal assertion in writing of some fact. The act of certifying or state of being certified."

"Confession. A voluntary statement made by a person charged with the commission of a crime or misdemeanor, communicated to another person, wherein he acknowledges himself to be guilty of the offense charged, and discloses the circumstances of the act or the share and participation which he had in it. See 18 U.S.C.A. § 3501." (Italics added for emphasis.)

"Confessions, admissibility of. Subsections (d) and (e) of Title 18 U.S.C.A. § 3501 read as follows: "(d) Nothing contained in this section shall bar the admission of any confession made or given voluntarily by any person to any other person without interrogation by anyone, or at any time the person who made or gave such confession was not under arrest or other detention. (e) As used in this section, 'confession' means any confession of guilt of any criminal offense or any self-incriminating statement made or given orally or in writing." (Italics added.) Subsections (d) and (e) of the U.S. Code are quoted to show that the legal definition of "confession" is not restricted or applied solely to persons "charged with the commission of a crime or misdemeanor."

"Fraud on court. A scheme to interfere with judicial machinery performing task of impartial adjudication, as by preventing opposing party from fairly presenting his case or defense. ....It consists of conduct so egregious that it undermines the integrity of the judicial process."

"Individual. As a noun, this term denotes a single person as distinguished from a group or class, and also, very commonly, a private or natural person as distinguished from a partnership, corporation or association...."

"Intimidation. Unlawful coercion; extortion; duress; putting in fear. To take, or attempt to take, 'by intimidation' means wilfully to take, or attempt to take, by putting in fear of bodily harm. Such fear must arise from the willful conduct of the accused, rather than from some mere temperamental timidity of the victim; however, the fear of the victim need not be so great as to result in terror, panic, or hysteria."

"Involuntary confession. Confession is 'involuntary' if it is not the product of an essentially free and unrestrained choice of its maker or where maker's will is overborne at the time of the confession. [Citation omitted.] Term refers to confessions that are extracted by any threats of violence, or obtained by direct or implied promises, or by exertion of improper influence. [Citation omitted.]"

"Jurat. Certificate of officer or person before whom writing was sworn to. In common use term is employed to designate certificate of competent administering officer that writing was sworn to by person who signed it. The clause written at the foot of an affidavit, stating when, where, and before whom such affidavit was sworn."

"Knowledge. Acquaintance with fact or truth."

"Perjury. In criminal law, the willful assertion as to a matter of fact, opinion, belief, or knowledge, made by a witness in a judicial proceeding as part of his evidence, either upon oath or in any form allowed by law to be substituted for an oath, whether such evidence is given in open court, or in an affidavit, or otherwise, such assertion being material to the issue or point of inquiry and known to such witness to be false." (Italics added.)

"Prima facie evidence. Evidence good and sufficient on its face. Such evidence as, in the judgment of the law, is sufficient to establish a given fact, or the group or chain of facts constituting the party's claim of defense, and which if not rebutted or contradicted, will remain sufficient. Evidence which, if unexplained or uncontradicted, is sufficient to sustain a judgment in favor of the issue which it supports, but which may be contradicted by other evidence."

"Proceeding.....An act which is done by the authority or direction of the court, agency, or tribunal, express or implied; an act necessary to be done in order to obtain a given end, a prescribed mode of action for carrying into effect a legal right."

"Subpoena. A subpoena is a command to appear at a certain time and place to give testimony upon a certain matter. A subpoena duces tecum requires production of books, papers and other things."
"Summons. Instrument used to commence a civil action or special proceeding and is the means of acquiring jurisdiction over a party. [Cite omitted.] Writ or process directed to the sheriff or other proper officer, requiring him to notify the person named that an action has been commenced against him in the court from where the process issues, and that he is required to appear, on a day named and answer the complaint in such action."

"Verification. Confirmation of correctness, truth, or authenticity, by affidavit, oath, or deposition." Affidavit of truth of matter stated and object of verification is to assure good faith in averments or statements of party."

"Voluntary. Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another's influence, spontaneous; acting of one's self. [Cites omitted.] Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation."

"Willful. Proceeding from a conscious motion of the will; voluntary; knowingly; deliberate. Intending the result which actually comes to pass; designed; intentional; purposeful; not accidental or involuntary."

"Witness, n. In general, one who, being present, personally sees or perceives a thing; a beholder, spectator, or eyewitness. ....A person whose declaration under oath (or affirmation) is received as evidence for any purpose, whether such declaration be made on oral examination or by deposition or affidavit. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1878. A person attesting genuineness of signature to document by adding his signature."

"Witness tampering. The Federal Victim and Witness Protection Act prohibits the intimidation and harassment of witnesses before they testify, as well as prohibiting retaliation, or threats of retaliation, against witnesses after they testify. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1512-1515."

5.5.8.2 Exegesis

The jurat of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Form 1040 reads in relevant part:

"Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct and complete." (Italics added.)

The U.S. Supreme Court in Garner v. United States, 424 U.S. 648 (1976) stated that:

"The information revealed in the preparation and filing of an income tax return is, for purposes of Fifth Amendment analysis, the testimony of a 'witness,' as that term is used herein."

Rule 603 of the Federal Rules of Evidence (Fed.R.Evid.) states:

"Before testifying, every witness shall be required to declare that he will testify truthfully, by oath or affirmation administered in a form calculated to awaken his conscience and impress his mind with his duty to do so." (Italics added.)

The jurat of Form 1040 establishes the premise here defended that the tax return to which the jurat refers is by law (26 U.S.C. §7206) intended to be voluntarily completed and signed under the penalties of perjury. This is a simple observation derived from the text of the jurat and the legal terms herein defined. Clearly, the self-assessment of income taxes by making a Form 1040 return under penalties of perjury is voluntary because the act of signing any affidavit or document that subjects its affiant to the penalties of perjury must by law be willful. Obviously, a coerced statement though by signed jurat purports it was made under penalties of perjury is nevertheless a fraudulent statement. It is not the rule of law or the payment of taxes that is here protested but a rule of intellectual tyranny invented by corrupt bureaucrats and judges who under color of law (such as 26 U.S.C. §§ 6702, 7203) penalize individuals when they fail or refuse--without being subpoenaed--to testify on Form 1040 and sign its decreed jurat that falsely purports that the form was made and signed willfully (the word means voluntarily) under penalties of perjury.

Thus, it cannot be overly emphasized that the lawful signing of the Form 1040 jurat is premised upon the "knowledge and belief" of the individual who willfully signs it and thereby certifies that he or she understands and agrees with the governmental prescribed information on the tax return to which the jurat refers. How many people can honestly state that they have read even one page of the Internal Revenue Code upon which their completed 1040 form is presumably based? The author has studied the tax code for over ten years and has discovered nothing in it that requires any person acting in his or her capacity as an individual to file a completed Form 1040 that must be signed under penalties of perjury. However, the author did discover a statute that prohibits or stops him from making and validating under penalties of perjury the information that the IRS commissioner states must appear on a Form 1040 tax return--that statute is 26 U.S.C. §7206.
Simply put, government is not free to dictate to individuals what "we the people" must believe in order to be able to make and verify under penalties of perjury a governmentally prescribed document that is based upon the term "gross income," as defined by Congress in § 61(a) of the tax code.

Moreover, the common law requires that an oath be meaningful to the witness who takes the oath and this principle underpins Rule 603 of the Fed.R.Evid. See U.S. v. Ward 973 F.2d. 730 (9th Cir. 1992). This principle is applicable to jurats as well, i.e., a jurat must be crafted so as to be meaningful to its potential affiant. Thus, an oath or jurat based upon a religious belief in an Almighty God as a test of an atheist's honesty makes no sense at all. Likewise, it is absurd and a corruption of law for the IRS and the courts to force individuals to declare "under penalties of perjury" that they owe taxes which they do not know and believe they owe. It must be obvious to all but the most obtuse or predisposed minds that a Form 1040 jurat that was signed under coercion but which purports it was signed under penalties of perjury is a fraudulent document. A statement or Form 1040 jurat signed because of coercion by a federal agency (i.e., the IRS) is no more valid than a confession that was beaten out of a person by the local police. Confessions and affidavits are defined as voluntary documents, and therefore no person acting in his or her own natural capacity may be logically or legally required to make or sign them, by whatever name they are called. The New York Times reported (July 5, 1995) that IRS Commissioner Margaret Milner Richardson said that "in IRS usage, the term 'voluntary compliance' referred to filling out tax forms, not to paying taxes." Having said that and if it reflects what Commissioner Richardson believes, why does she penalize individuals or have them prosecuted as criminals for not filling out tax forms? After explaining to an IRS agent why my knowledge and belief preclude me from conscientiously and legally signing the jurat of a 1988 Form 1040, the agent replied (a promise?) that if I would sign the jurat anyway, the IRS would not prosecute me for perjury. Now that's one for Ripley's Believe it or Not!

It is a rule of law that any doubt about the truth of a person's testimony given under oath or by affidavit is a question of fact for a jury to decide. The Supreme Court in Cheek v. United States, 498 U.S. 192 (1991), stated:

"Knowledge and belief are characteristically questions for the factfinder, in this case the jury." (See also United States v. Burton, 737 F.2d. 439 (5th Cir. 1984).

Thus, any question about whether testimony by affidavit is the truth is for a jury to decide unless the affiant waives this right. Where testimony of a relevant affidavit is not questioned, it must be accepted in evidence as factually true.

There are only two lawful ways for a person to testify before governmental bodies or agencies such as grand juries, the Internal Revenue Service, courts of law, etc. One way is by command, whether it be by subpoena, subpoena duces tecum or by direct command (order) of a court after the court has gained jurisdiction over a party through the operation of a summons. In all such cases the command must name or be directed to the specific person whose testimony is sought. Subpoenas are authoritative, legal commands to persons requiring them to testify as witnesses and subpoenas duces tecum are legal commands to persons requiring them to produce "books, papers and other things." The only other lawful way to testify or to produce "books, papers and other things" is to do so voluntarily.

Justice Hugo Black declared in U.S. v. Kahriger, 345 U.S. 22 (1953) that, "The United States has a system of taxation by confession." (Italics added). Of course compelled confessions are not legal under the Constitution which is why Congress mandated the inclusion of the jurat on Form 1040, thus informing the jurat's potential affiant that unless he/she knows and believes the governmentally defined and preordained answers to the form's prescribed questions are correct, complete and true, then the individual acting in his/her personal capacity may not be required to sign the jurat under any statute or regulation. Justice Black did not state the nature of the confession by which the self-assessment of income taxes is made but any legal confession must be "voluntary," Bram v. United States, 168 U.S. 532 (1897), and "the product of a rational intellect and a free will," Townsend v. Sain, 372 U.S. 293 (1963).

Moreover, the Supreme Court in Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960), admitted the nature of the tax return confession when it ruled that:

"Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint." (Italics added).

These are not idle words as the Court ruled in United States v. Mason, 412 U.S. 391 (1973), that under the doctrine of stare decisis

"the people have a right to rely upon the decisions of this Court and not be needlessly penalized for such reliance."
Clearly, the federal government’s coercing of individuals—through the use of fear, intimidation, threats of prison sentences and heavy penalties—to get them to complete and sign tax forms that falsely purport they were made and signed under penalties of perjury is as unconstitutional if not quite as brutal as policemen beating signed, involuntary confessions out of people. How valid or credible is testimony when given involuntarily to satisfy public officials and when based upon the tyranny of mind and/or body? Remembering that the Supreme Court in Garner (supra) stated that:

"The information revealed in the preparation and filing of an income tax return is, for purposes of Fifth Amendment analysis, the testimony of a 'witness,'"

It is obvious that absent an individual’s having been served a subpoena to testify on a Form 1040 or served a subpoena duces tecum to produce a Form 1040 tax return or ordered by a court to file one, the individual is under no legal compulsion or duty to do so. See also Wigmore on Evidence, McNaughton. rev., at 378, 379.

5.5.8.3 Conclusion

The making and signing under penalties of perjury of a Form 1040 return is dependent upon the "knowledge and belief" of its potential affiant and inasmuch as individuals under the First Amendment enjoy the rights to freedom of conscience, knowledge and belief and to the expression thereof, it is clear that the filing of a completed and legally validated Form 1040 return rests upon its voluntary subscription in "compliance with the tax code," of which § 7206 of the Internal Revenue Code is a part. The definition of perjury supports the proposition that the crime of perjury is based upon the willful assertion or affirmation—known to a witness to be false—of a fact, belief, or knowledge, made by the witness in a judicial proceeding such as an open court or by affidavit for potential presentation to courts as admissible evidence. The IRS coerces individuals by fear, intimidation, threats of penalties and criminal prosecution (and sometimes by implied promises not to prosecute them) to complete and sign prescribed, Form 1040 "taxation by confession" documents that euphemistically are called "self-assessed tax returns" under the ruse that they are voluntarily completed and signed and thereby subject their affiants to the penalties of perjury. This method of assessing and collecting taxes is a monumental fraud perpetrated upon the people under the guise of law; it is unconstitutional because it is fraudulent, if for no other reason. This deceptive practice is not the practice of law but of intellectual tyranny and witness tampering. When the government forces millions of individuals to file prescribed, Form 1040 testimony under a prescribed jurat that falsely purports that it was signed under penalties of perjury and such testimony is used against the individuals in courts of law that accept these coerced returns as certified evidence of what the individuals as witnesses "know and believe" (about a complex tax code that most of them have never read and about which even judges differ), can any reasonable person doubt the absurdity, the duplicity, the invalidity and the unconstitutionality of the Form 1040 involuntary confession of taxation?

5.5.9 1040 and Especially 1040NR Tax Forms Violate the Privacy Act and Therefore Need Not Be Submitted

The Privacy Act of 1974 and subsequent amendments places stringent requirements on all paper forms that the federal government produces and distributes to the public. Among the laws regarding privacy is Public Law 96-511, which states the following relative to forms provided to the public by the federal government:

"[It] requires all information requests of the public to display a control number, an expiration date, and indicate why the information is needed, how it will be used, and whether it is a voluntary or mandatory request. Requests which do not reflect a current OMB control number or fail to state why not, are ‘bootleg’ requests and may be ignored by the public."

If you examine the IRS Forms 1040 and 1040NR, they do NOT meet these criteria. Below is a summary of the problems with these forms as they relate to the Privacy Act of 1974:

5.5.9.1 IRS Form 1040

The Privacy Act statement on the 1040 Tax form is as follows:

Then on page 56 of the year 2000 1040 booklet, it says:

The IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, the Privacy Act of 1974, and Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 require that when we ask you for information we must first tell you our legal right to ask for the information, why we are asking for it, and how it will be used. We must also tell you what could happen if we do not receive it and whether your responsibility is voluntary, required to obtain a benefit, or mandatory under the law.

This notice applies to all papers you file with us, including this tax return. It also applies to any questions we need to ask you so we can complete, correct, or proves your return; figure your tax; and collect tax, interest, or penalties.

Our legal right to ask for information is Internal Revenue Code sections 6001, 6011, and 6012(a) and their regulations. They say that you must file a return or statement with us for any tax you are liable for. Your response is mandatory under these sections [but only if you owe tax]. Code section 6109 requires that you provide your social security number or individual identification number on what you file. This is so we know who you are, and can process your return and other papers. You must fill in all parts of the tax form that apply to you. But you do not have to check the boxes for the Presidential Election Campaign Fund or for authorizing the IRS to discuss your return with the paid preparer shown. You also do not have to provide your daytime phone number.

You are not required to provide the information requested on a form that is subject to the Paperwork Reduction Act unless the form displays a valid OMB control number. Books or records relating to a form or its instructions must be retained as long as their contents may become material in the administration of the Internal Revenue law.

We ask for tax return information to carry out the tax laws of the United States. We need it to figure out and collect the right amount of tax.

If you do not file a return, do not provide the information we ask for, or provide fraudulent information, you may be charged penalties and be subject to criminal prosecution. We may also have to disallow the exemptions, exclusions, credits, deductions, or adjustments shown on the tax return. This could make the tax higher or delay any refund. Interest may be charged.

Generally, tax returns and return information are confidential, as stated in Code section 6103. However, Code section 6103 allows or requires the Internal Revenue Service to disclose or give the information shown on your tax return to others as described in the Code. For example, we may disclose your tax information to the Department of Justice, to enforce the tax laws, both civil and criminal, and to cities, states, the District of Columbia, U.S. commonwealths or possessions, and certain foreign governments to carry out their tax laws. We may disclose your tax information to the Department of Treasury and contractors for tax administration purposes; and to other persons as necessary to obtain information which we cannot get in any other way in order to determine the amount of or to collect the tax you owe. We may disclose your tax information to the Comptroller General of the United States to permit the Comptroller General to review the Internal Revenue Service. We may also disclose your tax information to Committees of Congress; Federal, state, and local child support agencies; and to other Federal agencies for the purposes of determining entitlement for benefits or the eligibility for and the repayment of loans.

Please keep this notice with your records. It may help you if we ask for other information. If you have questions about the rules for filing and giving information, please call or visit any Internal Revenue Service office.

As we point out in section 5.6.1, if you examine the entire Internal Revenue Code, you will not find a single statute making anyone liable to pay a tax under Subtitle A, Income taxes. So why didn’t the IRS in the Privacy Act notice above just come out and say don’t have to file the return because there is not statute making you liable? Instead, they say you must file the form for any tax “you are liable for”, which is NONE! That means the form is voluntary and not mandatory, but they couldn’t say that, because then no one would ever pay their taxes. This is part of their crafty deception that perpetuates fraud on a massive scale against the American public.

The 1040 form itself that comes inside the booklet that contains the above statement does not have a valid expiration date. The IRS also doesn’t state on this form:

1. What the definition of “person” is. Because the income tax, according to the Supreme Court and the Congressional Research Service, is an indirect excise tax, then only those entities in receipt of U.S. government privileges are liable for the tax. In this case, these “persons” are Corporation or Partnership registered in the District of Columbia or “public officers” of the United States Government.
2. That human beings who do not meet the above definition of “person” need not fill out the tax form! The government is so aware of this that they deleted the definition of person originally pointed to in 4 U.S.C. Sec. 110(a). This section of the code, even to this day, points to a nonexistent 26 U.S.C. §3797, which formerly defined the term “person”!

3. That human beings have a Fifth Amendment right to not provide any of the information requested and cannot be penalized for doing so in any way. One cannot be penalized, fined, or taxed for exercising rights guaranteed by the U.S. constitution.

4. That you do not have to provide an SSN if you are not liable for tax. Therefore, if you are applying for a refund of all amounts paid, you need not provide an SSN and can remove it from all the W-2’s and 1099 forms you get so as not to incriminate yourself.

5.5.9.2 IRS Form 1040NR

On page 18 of the year 2000 1040NR booklet, it says the following:

Disclosure and Paperwork Reduction Act Notice

The IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 requires that we tell you the conditions under which return information may be disclosed to any party outside the Internal Revenue Service. We ask for the information on this form to carry out the Internal Revenue laws of the United States. You are required to give us the information. We need the information to ensure that you are complying with these laws and to allow us to figure and collect the right amount of tax.

This notice applies to all papers you file with us, including this tax return. It also applies to any questions we need to ask you so we can complete, correct, or process your return; figure your tax; and collect tax, interest, or penalties.

You are not required to provide the information requested on a form that is subject to the Paperwork Reduction Act unless the form displays a valid OMB control number. Books or records relating to a form or its instructions must be retained as long as their contents may become material in the administration of any Internal Revenue law.

Generally, tax returns and return information are confidential, as required by section 6103. However, section 6103 allows or requires the Internal Revenue Service to disclose or give the information you write on your tax return to others as described in the Code. For example, we may disclose your tax information to the Department of Justice, to enforce the tax laws, both civil and criminal, and to cities, states, the District of Columbia, U.S. commonwealths or possessions, and certain foreign governments to carry out their tax laws. We may disclose your tax information to the Department of Treasury and contractors for tax administration purposes; and to other persons as necessary to obtain information that we cannot get in any other way in order to determine the amount of or to collect the tax you owe. We may disclose your tax information to the Comptroller General of the United States to permit the Comptroller General to review the Internal Revenue Service. We may also disclose your tax information to Committees of Congress; Federal, state, and local child support agencies; and to other Federal agencies for purposes of determining entitlement for benefits or the eligibility for an the repayment of loans.

Keep this notice with your records. It may help you if we ask you for other information. If you have any questions about the rules for filing and giving information, call or visit any Internal Revenue Service office.

It’s very obvious that the privacy notice on this booklet is far less complete than the 1040 form. Based on the above and the content of the 1040NR form itself, we conclude that:

1. 1040NR form:
   1.1. Does NOT have any kind of privacy act notice.
   1.2. Does NOT have an expiration date.
   1.3. Does NOT state whether the form is voluntary or mandatory.

2. Booklet:
   2.1. Does not even mention the Privacy Act of 1974. At least the 1040 booklet mentioned this act.

Clearly, this form violates the Privacy Act of 1974 and is “bogus” and may be ignored by the public because under the circumstances, the federal government has absolutely no jurisdiction. According to Public Law 96-511, this form may be disregarded. We have to ask ourselves based on these conclusions:

The answer is that if they told the truth, the form would be indicated as voluntary and not mandatory for persons domiciled in the 50 Union states of the United States of America. If they did that, NO ONE would fill it out and their empire and house of cards would crumble! So instead, they blatantly violated the Privacy Act of 1974 and Public Law 96-511 and counted on the fact that most people filling out the form wouldn’t notice the violation. Why? Because most of the people who fill out this form are foreigners from other countries who don’t know our taxing statutes! Pretty sneaky, huh? That’s how the IRS operates and it’s EVIL.

5-580

Based on analysis of the code sections cited by the IRS, here is a summary of our conclusions:

1. If you aren’t liable to pay income tax, like most people, then:
   1.1. You don’t have to submit a tax return.
   1.2. You aren’t required to provide your SSN on your return. The only persons required to provide SSN’s with their return are employers who are withholding, and not individuals, as indicated in 26 U.S.C. section 6011.
   1.3. You aren’t required to keep records.
   1.4. You aren’t required to use the forms prescribed by the IRS.
2. The 1040NR tax form totally violates the Privacy Act of 1974 and the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 and is a bogus form that Public Law 96-511 says you can disregard and not file. For instance, the 1040NR form doesn’t have a Privacy Act notice, doesn’t have an expiration date, and the booklet doesn’t even mention the Privacy Act.
3. The 1040 tax form violates Public Law 96-511 and is bogus and that law says we can disregard the form and not use it. For instance, it does not have a valid expiration date, which can be no more than three years from the date of publication.
4. If you want examples of U.S. Government forms that DO meet all the requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974 and the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980, then you are encouraged to visit the Income Tax Freedom Forms and Instructions area of our website at http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/FormsInstr.htm and click on “View Evidence” in the upper left corner of the screen and go down to the bottom of the left scroll area under sections 13 and 14.

In closing, what you need to understand is that you must be liable for tax in order for the requirement to file the return to be mandatory. However, the IRS Privacy Act Notice for form 1040 above does not say this. It tries to create an impression that everyone is liable with convoluted illogic, but doesn’t specifically say every American is liable because that would be a lie. It also doesn’t say what the definition of “person” is and this definition is pivotal to understanding whether you are a “person” who is liable. They want you to be fearful and confused about whether you are a person liable so they can extort money out of you. However, as we said before, “persons”, in this case, are those entities and individuals who are in receipt of U.S. government privileges because the income tax is an indirect excise tax. Such persons include ONLY public officers of the U.S. government, U.S. registered corporations and partnerships, DISC (Domestic International Sales Corporations), and FSC (Foreign Sales Corporations). Even the Congressional Research Service, in its Report 97-59A (which Congressmen frequently quote and distribute to constituents in answer to their tax questions and concerns), admits that the income tax is an indirect excise tax, which means that it is a tax on government granted privileges against businesses and corporations and not individuals. This report appears on our website at:

Because of what we learned in this section, you now have some very powerful arguments you can make when you file your “statement” every year to satisfy the requirements of 26 U.S.C. 6011(a), which we recommend. We know that you aren’t a person who is liable, but we also know that the IRS is incompetent and needs to be reminded regularly of our nonliability so they don’t, in their ignorance, mount an assault on our person and property in their mistaken belief that we are liable. After you get out of the tax system and stop paying income taxes by following the recommendations in chapter 3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, we recommend filing an annual statement in order to stay out of trouble. That statement should mention that the form (1040 or 1040NR) that the IRS may mistakenly allege you are required to file is “bogus” in accordance with Public Law 96-511 and that you are therefore allowed to disregard it and submit a statement (indicated in 26 U.S.C. §6011(a)) attesting to that fact and that you are a person who is not liable for the income tax and documenting your good faith reasons for your belief, which probably will come out of this chapter of the book.

5.5.10 If You Don’t File, the IRS Can’t File a Substitute Return For You Under 26 U.S.C. §6020 (b)

26 U.S.C. §6020 says the following about returns prepared by the Secretary of the Treasury:

Subitle F - Procedure and Administration

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship

http://famguardian.org/
So you can see that once again, the IRS and the Secretary of the Treasury HAVE to rely on the tax payer’s self-assessment in order to establish a tax liability. Agents do not have delegated authority to prepare a tax form on behalf of an American without the signature of the person. This is clearly shown on their Pocket Commission (see IRM Section [1.16.4] 3.1 through [1.16.4] 3.2). Their pocket commission must indicate that they have Enforcement commission (the last letter of the serial number of the pocket commission must be “E”) in order to complete a 23C Assessment form, for instance, and none of the revenue officers associated with Subtitles A and C have such commissions. Revenue officer must also have a Delegation Order showing their authority specifically to sign the IRS Form 23C and/or the 1040. No revenue officers who administer Subtitles A and C have such delegation orders and are acting outside their lawful authority to sign such forms. You should demand a copy of their Delegation Order and their Pocket Commission if any agent tries to exceed their authority by signing a return for you or a 23C Assessment form.

A “Substitute for Return (SFR)” is a tax return prepared under the authority of law by the Internal Revenue Service on behalf of an Americans who refuse to file returns and which creates a tax liability. Section 5.1.11.6.8 of the Internal Revenue Manual describes the authority of the Internal Revenue Service to execute Substitute for Returns. Below is the content of that section:

From the above, we can see that forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1040NR, 1041, and 1120 do NOT appear, meaning that the Internal Revenue Service has no lawful delegated authority to execute SFR’s against Americans under 26 U.S.C. §6020 of the Internal Revenue Code for personal income taxes found in Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. This means that if you don’t complete and sign and submit an income tax form yourself and thereby assess yourself with a tax liability, no one in the government can do it without your consent or permission. Likewise, they can’t AMEND an assessment that you do on yourself either. What they will do is PROPOSE an amendment and give you a time limit to respond, and then assume you agree if you fail to respond, but if you indicate on the original return that they may not amend it, then they are screwed and can’t do anything except assume the liability you indicate, which hopefully will be zero! This very situation explains why even the government says our income tax system is based on “voluntary compliance”.

The We the People Truth in Taxation Hearing held on 27-28 February 2002 featured an Ex IRS agent named Mr. John Turner, who was a former collection officer for ten years, agreeing precisely with the above conclusions by answering a series of questions under oath related to his training as a revenue officer. He showed his actual IRS 6020(b) Training Course Materials as a revenue officer, which clearly showed that he did not have the authority to execute substitute for returns for IRS Forms 1040, 1040EZ, 1040A, 1040NR, 1041, or 1120. You can view the series of questions he answered and the evidence consisting of his revenue officer training materials on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section_13.htm

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section_13.htm
In addition to the above significant conclusions, most revenue officers also have Delegation Orders that define which forms they are authorized to sign by law. The IRS simply does not issue delegation orders authorizing any revenue officer to sign or prepare SFRs for taxes associated with forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1040NR, 1041, and 1120. When the IRS does prepare SFR’s for an individual, they typically do not sign the form. It is well-established in the federal courts that a tax return that is not signed is not a valid tax return and does not satisfy the requirement to file a return.

Assessment authority of revenue officers to prepare SFRs are described in 26 U.S.C. §6201 and the regulation which implements this section says the following. Note that the regulation is an “interpretive” and not a “legislative” regulation, which means that it can’t be applied to the income tax “imposed” by section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. If you want to know about the different types of regulations, you can review section 3.15.2 earlier again:

As we covered earlier in section 5.4.15, the IRS has no legal authority to assess you with an income tax “liability”. The reason is because the only form they can use to do so is the 1040, 1040NR, and/or 2555 under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6020(b), and this section along with its implementing regulations found in 26 CFR §301.6201-1(a)(2) clearly shows that the only thing the district director can do is make assessments of taxes collected by stamp but NOT for personal income taxes coming under Subtitles A and C. Notice that this regulation does NOT give the revenue officer authority to estimate tax nor sign a return or list on behalf of a person, or it would have said so. Subtitles A and C personal income taxes must instead appear on a tax return, and the 1040, 2555, or 1040NR are the only things that qualify as legitimate returns upon which to base an assessment of Subtitle A and C personal income taxes. 26 CFR §301.6201-1(a)(1) says the taxes assessed by the district director MUST be “disclosed on a return or list”. Even the title says that: “TAXES SHOWN ON RETURN”. If the agent has no Delegation Order or delegated authority to prepare such a return, then he is acting outside his lawful delegated authority and can be prosecuted for violation of 26 U.S.C. §7214! The General Accounting Office (GAO) published a surprising audit report, report number GAO/GGD-00-60R on the IRS Substitute for Return program. This report confirms that Substitute For Returns are not really returns! The report says, and I quote:

"[IRS] Customer Service Division official commented on the phrase ‘Substitute for Return.’ They asked us to emphasize that even though the program is commonly referred to as the SFR program, no actual tax return is

You know what that means, folks? If the IRS doesn’t prepare an actual return as required above in order to create a valid self-assessment, then they pull it out of their ass and then falsify their IDRS computer system IMF records by putting the system in manual override mode and creating a bogus backdated and fraudulent assessment so the assessment will occur before the expired Assessment Statute Expiration Date (ASED). You can confirm this if you FOIA your complete unsanitized master file for the years in question. It’s financial terrorism and extortion, folks and these criminals should be locked up in jail and have the key thrown away for doing it! Our politicians look the other way because they want your money so bad that they condone extortion to get it. Below is a direct link to the GAO report if you would like to read it for yourself on our website:

5.6 Why We Aren’t Liable to Pay Income Tax

"GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT (Reuters, New York): The government announced today that it is changing its emblem to a condom because it more clearly reflects the government’s political stance. A condom stands up to inflation, halts production, destroys the next generation, protects a bunch of pricks, and gives you a sense of security while it’s actually screwing you."

[Anonymous]

"It could probably be shown by facts and figures that the only distinctly native American criminal class is Congress."

[Mark Twain]

"There is no art which one government sooner learns of another, than that of draining money from the pockets of the people."

This section will show clearly why we aren’t liable to pay income taxes using only the I.R. codes themselves and not the IRS Publications.

5.6.1 There’s No Statute Making Anyone Liable to Pay Subtitle A Income Taxes!

The word “liable” or “liability” is the only term that establishes a legal “duty” to pay a tax. The first and only positive law federal taxing statute that has ever imposed such a legal “duty” was section 29 of the Revenue Act of 1894, which said in pertinent part:

“Sec. 29. That it shall be the duty of all persons of lawful age having an income of more than three thousand five hundred dollars for the taxable year, computed on the basis herein prescribed, to make and render a list or return, on or before the day provided by law, in such form and manner as may be directed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to the collector or a deputy collector of the district in which they reside, of the amount of their income, gains, and profits, as aforesaid;...”

Notice the phrase “it shall be the duty of all persons of lawful age”. You can read this law direct from the Statutes at Large on our website at:

The above positive law was declared unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895) because it attempted to institute a direct tax within states of the Union in stark violation of Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution. That case caught the Congress red-handed trying to violate the Constitution and slapped them on the wrist for putting their hands in the cookie jar. Since that time, the Congress has never since even attempted to institute any positive law federal taxing statute that included a “legal duty” or “liability” for natural persons (people) to pay a direct tax in states of the Union. The closest they have ever come was to create a “code” that “looks” like it is a law and “looks” like it creates a liability, but in fact does not because it cannot without violating the Constitution.

If you search the current edition of the Internal Revenue Code you will find that there is currently no section within the entire Internal Revenue Code, Subtitles A and C, which makes most natural persons “liable” or establishes a legal “duty” for the payment of the taxes imposed under section 1! That section “imposes” a tax but never makes anyone liable. The only liability statute we could find pertaining to Subtitle A of the I.R.C. was 26 U.S.C. §1461, but this pertains to withholding agents, and not to the average American. Why? Because Subtitle A income taxes on all persons, natural or corporate, are voluntary and always have been since long before the Pollock case. The IRS Form 1040 confirms this. Look at the line that says what you owe the government. Note that it says “Amount you Owe” and not “amount you are liable for”.

Liability is a crucial component of nearly everything that relates to income tax enforcement and every other area of law. Before any enforcement action may be undertaken, a legal “liability” must first be demonstrated by the moving party, which means that the government must first produce a valid assessment executed under the authority of a positive law, and we already said earlier in section 5.4.15 that IRS does not have the authority to do an assessment for Subtitle A income taxes because only you as the sovereign and the “volunteer” can do that on yourself. Here are a few legal aspects of enforcement that have “liability” as a prerequisite:

1. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) entitled “Definitions” prescribes that a “taxpayer” is anyone who is “subject to” any internal revenue tax. “Subject to” means “liable for”. Since no one who does not work as a “public officers” of the United States government can be made “liable” for taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, then no private individual domiciled in a state of the Union who is not a “public officer” of the United States government can be a “taxpayer” unless they consensually volunteer to be. Being deceived into volunteering by using a repealed or obfuscated “code” or an abuse of legal process as a propaganda vehicle does not qualify as lawful informed consent, but instead amounts to duress.

2. 26 U.S.C. §6001 entitled “Records” only requires persons who are “liable” to keep records in order to properly comply with the provisions of the internal revenue code.

3. 26 U.S.C. §7601 entitled “Canvass of districts for taxable persons and objects” authorizes agents to canvass the “district” for persons “liable” for the tax. Without a liability demonstrated beforehand, they can’t go looking for either you or your assets.

4. 26 U.S.C. §7602 entitled “Examination of books and witnesses” authorizes summons only for the purpose of “determining the liability of any person for any internal revenue tax”. Without a demonstrated liability before the summons, they can’t hold the summons!

5. 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) entitled “Levy and distraint” authorizes levies only upon persons who are “liable”. Without a demonstrated liability, no levies may be made.

6. 26 U.S.C. §6700 entitled “Abusive tax shelters” makes it a crime to offer abusive tax shelters if these shelters are offered to “taxpayers” with an existing tax liability that they want to reduce by purchasing an investment that will give them a write-off. The government can’t prove you are offering “abusive tax shelters” if they can’t prove that the person you were offering them to was “liable” for the tax, and therefore a “taxpayer”. Remember, a tax shelter is defined as follows:

    tax shelter n(1952): a strategy, investment, or tax code provision that reduces one’s tax liability.

Anything that is “voluntary” simply can’t be enforced, collected, or assessed. Not only this, but penalties for fraud or inaccurate returns cannot be instituted without an existing “liability”, as revealed in 26 U.S.C. §6662(a) and 26 U.S.C. §6663(a).

5-585

(a) Imposition of penalty

If this section applies to any portion of an underpayment of tax required to be shown on a return, there shall be added to the tax an amount equal to 20 percent of the portion of the underpayment to which this section applies.

If you aren’t legally “liable” for a tax to begin with and only file zero return or a one cent return, then you can’t be penalized for doing so! That is why a natural person cannot be assessed by the IRS, cannot be penalized for nonpayment, and cannot legally have his property forcibly removed from him for nonpayment. Furthermore, subtitles A and C are the only “taxes” (really they are technically “donations”, but the government calls them “taxes”) in the I.R.C. which don’t make the subjects “liable”. All other types of taxes in the Internal Revenue Code specifically do the following in the Internal Revenue Code:

1. Make the individual specifically “liable” for the payment of taxes and state “shall be paid”. Examples:
   1.1. 26 U.S.C. §4374
   1.2. 26 U.S.C. §4401(c)
   1.3. 26 U.S.C. §5005
   1.4. 26 U.S.C. §5043
   1.5. 26 U.S.C. §5703

2. Require the individual to keep records about his liability. Examples of other types of taxes that do require records:
   2.1. 26 U.S.C. §4403
   2.2. 26 U.S.C. §5114
   2.3. 26 U.S.C. §5124
   2.4. 26 U.S.C. §5741

3. Subject him or her to penalties for nonpayment. Examples:
   3.1. 26 U.S.C. Subtitle F, Sections 6671 through 6715 address assessable penalties.
   3.2. There are no implementing regulations or entries in any of the parallel tables of authorities (see http://www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/parallel/parallel_table.html) that map any of the penalties above to specific sections in 26 U.S.C. Subtitles A and C, nor are there any cross-references from Subtitles A and C that point to penalties in Subtitle F.

Without a legal liability, the IRS cannot institute collection, but they do so illegally anyway, and it’s up to you to learn how they do it so you can fight it!

26 U.S.C. §1 is the section that the IRS says imposes the income tax. Here is an excerpt from that section:

United States Code
TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE
Subtitle A - Income Taxes
CHAPTER 1 - NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES
Subchapter A - Determination of Tax Liability PART I - TAX ON INDIVIDUALS

Sec. 1. Tax imposed

(a) Married individuals filing joint returns and surviving spouses

There is hereby imposed on the taxable income of—

The question is:

Does the word “imposed” mean “liable”?

Incidentally, did you notice we used “mean” instead of “include” above…because the government just loves to abuse this word to illegally expand their jurisdiction! Here is the definition of the word “impose” from Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition:

Impose: To levy or exact as by authority; to lay as a burden, tax, duty, or charge.
Exaction. The wrongful act of an officer or other person in compelling payment of a fee or reward for his services, under color of his official authority, where no payment is due. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 537]

Extortion. The obtaining of property from another induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official right. 18 U.S.C.A. § 871 et seq.; § 1951. A person is guilty of theft by extortion if he purposely obtains property of another by threatening to: (1) inflict bodily injury on anyone or commit any other criminal offense; or (2) accuse anyone of a criminal offense; or (3) expose any secret tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt or ridicule, or to impair his credit or business repute; or (4) take or withhold action as an official, or cause an official to take or withhold action; or (5) bring about or continue a strike, boycott or other collective unofficial action, if the property is not demanded or received for the benefit of the group in whose interest the actor purports to act; or (6) testify or provide information or withhold testimony or information with respect to another's legal claim or defense; or (7) inflict any other harm which would not benefit the actor. Model Penal Code, § 224.4.

See also Blackmail; Hobbs Act; Loan Sharking; Shakedown. With respect to Larceny by extortion, see Larceny. Compare Coercion [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 585]

Amazing how brazen these lawyer criminals in the District of Criminals are, huh? Nothing in there about liability! And the definition of the word “levy” out of that same legal dictionary on p. 907 says:

Levy. v.: To assess; raise; execute; exact; tax; collect; gather; take up; seize. Thus, to levy (assess, exact, raise, or collect) a tax; to levy (raise or set up) a nuisance; to levy (acknowledge) a fine; to levy (inaugurate) war; to levy an execution, i.e., to levy or collect a sum of money on an execution.

Here is what the federal courts say about the requirements to create a statutory liability before an obligation to pay can be established:

“...liability for taxation must clearly appear[ from statute imposing tax].” [Higley v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 69 F.2d. 160 (1934)]

“...While Congress might have the power to place such a personal liability upon trust beneficiaries who did not renounce the trust, yet it would require clear expression of such intent, and it cannot be spelled out from language (as that here) which can be given an entirely natural and useful meaning and application excluding such intent.” [Higley v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 69 F.2d. 160 (1934)]

“A tax is a legal imposition, exclusively of statutory origin (37 Cyc. 724, 725), and, naturally, liability to taxation must be read in statute, or it does not exist.” [Bente v. Bugbee, 137 A. 552, 103 N.J. Law. 608 (1927)]

“...the taxpayer must be liable for the tax. Tax liability is a condition precedent to the demand. Merely demanding payment, even repeatedly, does not cause liability.” [Terry v. Bothke, 713 F.2d. 1405, at 1414 (1983)]

Can you collect a tax that no one is liable for? You certainly can, if you can find enough ignorant Americans and fool or coerce them into believing that they are “taxpayers”! Do you see the words “liable” or “liability” used anywhere in the above two definitions or anywhere in 26 U.S.C. §1? We don’t...and if you aren’t liable, then you don’t have to pay!

When you search electronically through the entire 9,500 pages of the Internal Revenue Code like we did, you will indeed find the word “liability” used for every kind of tax OTHER than personal income taxes, but not for any of the taxes on individuals found in Subtitles A or C. When a person is made liable, the code explicitly says “shall be liable”, “shall be paid” and “shall keep records”, etc, but nowhere is this stated for personal income taxes in Subtitles A or C. Here are just a few examples where persons are explicitly made “liable” for payment of a tax that was also “imposed” elsewhere in the code:

26 U.S.C. §4374: Liability for tax: “...shall be paid...”

26 U.S.C. §4401(c) Persons liable for tax: “…wagers shall be liable for and shall pay...”
That’s right: The personal income taxes mentioned in the following subtitles NOWHERE use the word “liable” or “liability”, so you can’t be required to pay, which is why they also don’t say “liable” or “shall pay” anywhere in the code for these taxes on natural persons anywhere in:

- Subtitle A: Income Taxes
- Subtitle C: Employment Taxes

A favorite trick of the IRS when the above fact is pointed out is to cite 26 CFR §1.1-1 and show that the implementing regulation for the statute uses the phrase “are liable to”:

26 CFR §1.1-1

(b) Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax.

In general, all citizens of the United States, wherever resident, and all resident alien individuals are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States. Pursuant to section 876, a nonresident alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year is, except as provided in section 933 with respect to Puerto Rican source income, subject to taxation in the same manner as a resident alien individual. As to tax on nonresident alien individuals, see sections 871 and 877.

Did you get that? 26 U.S.C. §1 didn’t use the word “liable” but the implementing regulation did, which is clearly illegal and violates the concept described in the Spreckles v. C.I.R. case below, which says:

“To the extent that regulations implement the statute, they have the force and effect of law. The regulation implements the statute and cannot vitiate or change the statute.” [Spreckles v. C.I.R., 119 F.2d, 667]

What the Treasury did to try to illegally expand their jurisdiction, in a clear demonstration of conflict of interest and a violation of the Code of Ethics for Government employees we discussed in section 2.1, was create a hocus-pocus vulnerability by writing an illegal regulation in 26 CFR §1.1-1(b) to implement 26 U.S.C. §1 and use the word “liable” in the regulation!
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Sneaky bastards! Remember that the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to write regulations that interpret and implement the Internal Revenue Code under 26 U.S.C. §7805, but the Secretary has no delegated authority to expand or enlarge or modify the original language or jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code section he is implementing and enforcing! Why? Because the Congress is the only legislative body authorized by the Constitution, and no one in the Executive branch, including the Treasury, has any delegated authority to legislate.

[United States v. Levy, 533 F.2d. 969 (1976)]

Therefore, 26 CFR §1.1-1(b) is a regulation that is null and void and fraudulent on its face insofar as its imposition of an otherwise nonexistent liability for the payment of Subtitle A income taxes. If you were to investigate this matter further, I’d be willing to bet money that the Secretary of Treasury who approved this regulations was a lame duck and knew he was on the way out of office and probably his last official act was to approve this regulation. That was the kind of scam that got the Sixteenth Amendment passed by the lame duck Secretary of State Philander Knox, who perjured himself by saying that the Sixteenth Amendment had been properly ratified by the required ¾ of the states.

One of our readers responded to this section with the following statement:

Family Guardian,

“The current 26 U.S.C. §1 comes from Section 11 of the 1939 code, without any significant change occurring (according to Congress). The old Section 11 said that the tax shall be "levied, collected, and PAID" upon the net income of individuals. While I think it was stupid of them to reword it without stating the liability there, the underlying law (the Statutes at Large) shows it, so 1.1-1 is correct. Congress also in Sections 6012 and 6151 show that one who receives "gross income" must file a return, and the one required to file the return "shall pay such tax." It's not in Subtitle A, but there's no requirement that it has to be, since the section says it applies "when a return of tax is required UNDER THIS TITLE" (not subtitle). Why do you not consider 6151 to be a liability clause?"

Larken Rose
http://www.taxableincome.net/

Here was part of our response to that claim:

Larken,

1. I looked up the implementing regulations applying 6151 to Subtitle A income taxes in Section 1. 26 CFR §1.6151 clearly shows that “taxpayers” should pay the amount of tax shown on the return, but it doesn’t say they are required to pay any tax that they didn’t assess against themself VOLUNTARILY. The only case they have to pay taxes they didn’t voluntarily assess is under section 6014, which allows the TAXPAYER to ELECT to allow the IRS to compute his tax with his permission.

That's why you can't be made liable to pay a tax that you didn’t assess against yourself voluntarily. If you refuse to file a return or refuse to claim any gross income by filling in zeros on your return, then 26 USC §6201 clearly shows that the IRS may not involuntary assess you a liability! If you look at the Parallel Table of Authorities, ALL of the taxes to which 6151 applies relate ONLY to Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms under Title 27. Look for yourself!:

http://www4.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/usc-cfr.cgi/26/6151

See section 5.4.5 of the Great IRS Hoax for further details.

2. 26 U.S.C. §6151 and 26 U.S.C. §6012 are NOT liability statutes. 6151 says you shall pay any tax shown on a return (that you completed VOLUNTARILY) and 6012 says you must "make a return" for any subtitle A taxable gross income you have. Since the term "make a return" doesn't say "file a return" or even who to file it WITH, then one can satisfy this requirement by filling out a tax return (called "making a return") and filing it in one's file cabinet! One place that the word "file" is used is in the title of 26 U.S.C. §7203, and 26 U.S.C. §7806 says the title has no force or effect. The only other place "file" is used is in 6151, which only applies to Title 27
The code or regulations for Subtitle A income taxes therefore has to say WHO to file the return WITH and mention “liable to file with the Secretary of the Treasury”, which it doesn’t. It does for Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms taxes, but not for Subtitle A income taxes. See section 3.9.11 of my Great IRS Hoax book for further details on this. The code COULDN’T impose a requirement to file a return because it would violate the Fifth Amendment so they played games with words, as usual. I know this is picking nits, but that is what the code itself does and especially what Mr. Roginsky of the IRS did during his friendly interview with you!

Misunderstandings on your part about the issues discussed above is why you attract busy IRS bees to your honeypot. The IRS picks their battles carefully, and like the lion, hits the weakest parts of the herd, who are usually hobbling at the end of the procession with less than a full deck of cards. I’m not trying to criticize you, however, and simply want to help you by keeping you out of trouble.

Your friend,

Family Guardian

To give you just one example in real life that illustrates the lack of liability for Income Taxes, if employment taxes are indeed enforced “taxes” rather than “donations”, then why:

1. Do you have to complete a W-4 giving the government permission to take your money under Subtitle C, Employment taxes? If it is a tax, they don’t need your permission, do they?

2. Are Employment taxes classified by the IRS as gifts by assigning them to Tax Class 1? See section 5.6.8 later on this subject.

Something is fishy here, isn’t it? And why do they call it a “tax” if you aren’t “liable”? Shouldn’t our dishonest government call it a “donation”? You be the judge!

The other question we should be asking ourselves is: “Who is the income tax imposed on?” 26 U.S.C. §1 uses the term “Individuals”, but what does that mean? The answer is found in 26 CFR §1.1-1(a):

> 26 CFR Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

(a) General rule.

(1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual.

The tax is “imposed” on “citizens or residents of the United States” and nonresident aliens described in 871(b) and 877(b), but we know that “United States” as used here means the federal zone or the federal United States, so the tax doesn’t apply to us. That is the only logical conclusion we can reach based on the constitutional limitations on direct taxation found in Article 1, Section 9 (1:9:4), Clause 4 and 1:2:3 of the U.S. Constitution!

“The right to tax and regulate the national citizenship is an inherent right under the rule of the Law of Nations, which is part of the law of the United States, as described in Article I, Section 8, Clause 17.” The Lusitania, 251 F.715, 732.

“This jurisdiction extends to citizens of the United States, wherever resident, for the exercise of the privileges and immunities and protections of [federal] citizenship.” [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47, 44 S.Ct. 447, 11 Virginia Law Review, 607 (1924) ]

So once again, if we aren’t “U.S. citizens” or nonresident aliens with income associated with a “trade or business” in the federal United States, then we aren’t liable for income taxes!

> 26 CFR §31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen.

(b) ...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.
If we aren’t “U.S. citizens” but we were born in United States the country on nonfederal land, then we are “nationals” and nonresident aliens. As we will point out later, most of us are born as nonresident aliens and “nationals” (see 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)) because we are born outside the federal zone but inside the 50 Union states. The legal profession has done their best to hide this fact over the years by redefining some key terms or removing important definitions entirely from the legal dictionary. We talk about this later, in section 6.10.1.

Now when the IRS tries to do any enforcement action for income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code and they try to call someone in for an audit, they don’t have a leg to stand on. All you have to do is show them the statute that gives them the authority to call the audit, from 26 U.S.C. §7601:

Title 26 > Subtitle F > Chapter 78 > Subchapter A > Sec. 7601.
Sec. 7601. - Canvass of districts for taxable persons and objects
  (a) General rule

The Secretary shall, to the extent he deems it practicable, cause officers or employees of the Treasury Department to proceed, from time to time, through each internal revenue district and inquire after and concerning all persons therein who may be liable to pay any internal revenue tax, and all persons owning or having the care and management of any objects with respect to which any tax is imposed.

So the only thing the IRS can go looking for inside their “district”, which encompasses only areas within the federal zone that are within the outer boundaries of their region, are “persons therein who may be liable to pay any internal revenue tax”. Without a liability statute, the IRS agent has no authority to call you into his office to ask about taxes he thinks you owe. Once again, “liability” is a prerequisite in order for enforcement action to be warranted, and since “liability” is nowhere defined in the IRC for Subtitle A individual income taxes, then it isn’t a tax but a “donation”. This is a very good fact to bring up at your next IRS audit, folks! Now if you don’t help him when he calls you in for an audit because you point out that he can’t prove you are liable, then he may try to illegally levy your pay. Once again, he’s violating the “code” (not “law”, but “code”) because look at what the levy statutes says, 26 U.S.C. §6331(a):

Title 26 > Subtitle F > Chapter 64 > Subchapter D > Part II > Sec. 6331.
Sec. 6331. - Levy and distraint
  (a) Authority of Secretary

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

Once again, notice that the prerequisite for levy and distraint above is that the person must be liable, and so the frustrated IRS agent can’t legally levy your pay either, without subjecting himself to criminal liability under 26 U.S.C. §7433 and 26 U.S.C. §7214!

5.6.2 Your earnings aren’t taxable because it is “notes” and “obligations” of the U.S. government

The power of Congress to coin money is found in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 5 of the U.S. Constitution:

U.S. Constitution
Article 1, Section 8, Clause 5

The Congress shall have Power To. . .

To coin Money, regulate the Value thereof, and of foreign Coin, and fix the Standard of Weights and Measures

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
The above power is not the origin for printing Federal Reserve Notes. Those notes are printed under the authority of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 2 of the U.S. Constitution:

U.S. Constitution
Article 1, Section 8, Clause 2

The Congress shall have Power To...

To borrow Money on the credit of the United States;

The “money” you think you carry around in your pocket isn’t money at all, but a debt instrument or obligation borrowed from a PRIVATE banking consortium deceptively called the “Federal Reserve” pursuant to Article 1, Section 8, Clause 2 of the Constitution. You will note that the top of each bill says “Federal Reserve Note”. The “Federal Reserve”, in fact, is about as “federal” as “Federal Express”. Here is how Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth edition defines “money” on page 1005:

Money: In usual and ordinary acceptation it means coins and paper currency used as circulating medium of exchange, and does not embrace notes, bonds, evidences of debt, or other personal or real estate. Lane v. Railey, 280 Ky. 319, 133 S.W.2d. 74, 79, 81.

Here is what the law says about this subject in 12 U.S.C. §411:

TITLE 12 > CHAPTER 3 > SUBCHAPTER XII > Sec. 411.
Sec. 411. - Issuance to reserve banks; nature of obligation; redemption

Federal reserve notes, to be issued at the discretion of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System for the purpose of making advances to Federal reserve banks through the Federal reserve agents as hereinafter set forth and for no other purpose, are authorized. The said notes shall be obligations of the United States and shall be receivable by all national and member banks and Federal reserve banks and for all taxes, customs, and other public dues. They shall be redeemed in lawful money on demand at the Treasury Department of the United States, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, or at any Federal Reserve bank.

You can search the entire U.S. Code as we have and NOWHERE will you find anyplace where Federal Reserve Notes are defined or identified as “dollars” as used in the Constitution. Therefore, you cannot lawfully conclude that they are equivalent. A Congressman wrote the Federal Reserve Board and they wrote back to admit that there is NOT definition for what a “dollar” is! See the amazing truth for yourself:

Ogilvie Letter, SEDM Exhibit #06.001

But wait a minute! The law says that obligations of the U.S. government are not taxable in 31 U.S.C. §3124!

TITLE 31 > SUBTITLE III > CHAPTER 31 > SUBCHAPTER II > Sec. 3124.
Sec. 3124. - Exemption from taxation

(a) Stocks and obligations of the United States Government are exempt from taxation by a State or political subdivision of a State. The exemption applies to each form of taxation that would require the obligation, the interest on the obligation, or both, to be considered in computing a tax, except:

(1) a nondiscriminatory franchise tax or another nonproperty tax instead of a franchise tax, imposed on a corporation; and

(2) an estate or inheritance tax.
(b) The tax status of interest on obligations and dividends, earnings, or other income from evidences of ownership issued by the Government or an agency and the tax treatment of gain and loss from the disposition of those obligations and evidences of ownership is decided under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 1 et seq.). An obligation that the Federal Housing Administration had agreed, under a contract made before March 1, 1941, to issue at a future date, has the tax exemption privileges provided by the authorizing law at the time of the contract. This subsection does not apply to obligations and evidences of ownership issued by the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, or a department, agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision of the District, territory, or possession.

Therefore, your Federal Reserve Notes (FRN’s) are not taxable by federal State governments, because they aren’t really lawful money, but debt obligations, or the equivalent of corporate government bonds! For more interesting reading, we refer you to the Legal Tender Cases, Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884).

“Under the power to borrow money on the credit of the United States, and to issue circulating notes for the money borrowed, [Congress’] power to define the quality and force of those notes as currency is as broad as the like power over a metallic currency under the power to coin money and to regulate the value thereof. Under the two powers, taken together, Congress is authorized to establish a national currency, either in coin or in paper, and to make that currency lawful money for all purposes, as regards the national government or private individuals. . . . (Emphasis added)”

Here is what one federal court said when one American claimed his FRN’s weren’t lawful money:

“Congress has delegated the power to establish this national currency which is lawful money to the Federal Reserve System. 12 U.S.C. §411. Congress has made the Federal Reserve note the measure of value in our monetary system, 12 U.S.C. § 412 (1968), and has defined Federal Reserve notes as legal tender for taxes, 31 U.S.C. §392 (1965). Taxpayers’ attempt to devalue the Federal Reserve notes they received as income is, therefore, not lawful under the laws of the United States.”

[Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (1978)]

5.6.3 Constitutional Constraints on Federal Taxing Power

While the current I.R. code and implementing regulations document the limited application of the federal income tax, it is important to explain the reason why such a limitation exists. Without an explanation of why the code is as it is, the conclusion may be unbelievable to some (regardless of the actual evidence). Certainly the limitation was not due to Congress not wanting to tax all income. Without some obstacle to Congress’ power, the tax which most people now believe exists (a tax on the income of most Americans) would certainly have been imposed.

According to the Supreme Court, the broad and general wording which Congress used to define “gross income” was intended to tax all income within their power to tax.

“This Court has frequently stated that this language [defining “gross income”] was used by Congress to exert in this field the full measure of its taxing power.”

[Commissioner v. Glenshaw Class Co., 348 U.S. 426 (1955)]

This ruling is speaking specifically of Section 22(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939, which is the predecessor to the current 26 U.S.C. §61. Congress has stated that the scope of “gross income” did not change when the law was rearranged and worded. (It should be mentioned that the current tax code is basically just the income tax of 1913, but with many amendments over the years adding, removing, rewording, and renumbering various sections. The fundamental nature and origin of the tax remains intact.)

The general language of the definition of “gross income” (past and present) may give an initial impression of an unlimited tax on the income of every individual. However, the meaning of a statute passed by Congress is limited to those matters which the Constitution puts under federal jurisdiction.

“It is elementary law that every statute is to be read in the light of the constitution. However broad and general its language, it cannot be interpreted as extending beyond those matters which it was within the constitutional power of the legislature to reach.”

[McCulough v. Com. Of Virginia, 172 U.S. 102 (1898)]

(Notice that this is not some radical decision, but is considered “elementary law.”)
In other words, a statute may be more restricted that its general wording suggests. The above case goes on to say that constitutional restrictions are to be assumed when reading a statute (state or federal), even though they are not stated.

“So, although general language was introduced into the statute of 1871, it is not to be read as reaching to matters in respect to which the legislature had no constitutional power, but only as to those matters within its control. And, if there were, as it seems there were, certain special taxes and dues, which, under the existing provisions of the state constitution, could not be affected by legislative action, the statute is to be read as though it in terms excluded them from its operation.”

So a federal statute is to be read as though it specifically excludes matters which the Constitution does not put under federal jurisdiction. So while, as the Supreme Court said, Congress intended to use the “full measure of its taxing power” by using such a generally-worded definition of “gross income,” the Supreme Court also admits that the income tax “cannot be applied to any income which Congress has no power to tax” [William E. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]. So the general wording must be interpreted in light of the Constitutional limits on Congress’ power. But this could pose a problem for the average American. How is he to know what the Constitutional limits are on Congress’ power (when even federal judges disagree with each other on the matter)?

As mentioned at the beginning of this report, the Secretary of the Treasury is empowered (by statute) to implement and interpret the law. When the Treasury regulations are published in the Federal Register, that becomes the official notice to the public of what the law requires. Therefore, while the statutes may use general language (which might at first glance seem to include matters outside of federal jurisdiction), the regulations must give specifics.

Though it is phrased somewhat differently than the current 26 U.S.C. §61, the definition of “gross income” found in Section 22(a) of the 1939 Code appears all-encompassing. The regulations under the 1939 Code, however, are very telling. (The term “net income” was used back then, which would later become “taxable income.”)

“Sec. 29.21-1. Meaning of net income. The tax imposed by chapter 1 is upon income. Neither income exempted by statute or fundamental law... enter into the computation of net income as defined by section 21.”

The term “fundamental law” refers to the Constitution (as countless court rulings show). While the general wording of the statutes makes no such reference, here the regulations imply that some income not exempted by statute is nonetheless exempt from taxation under the Constitution. Note the distinction between income exempted by statute, and income exempted by the Constitution. This occurs again later in the same section:

“(b) Gross income, meaning income (in the broad sense) less income which is by statutory provision or otherwise exempt from the tax imposed by chapter 1. (See section 22)”

Again, the regulations are admitting that some things not exempted by statute are nonetheless exempt from federal taxation. The above citation refers us to Section 22 (of the 1939 Code) for the meaning of “gross income.” The regulations under that section begin as follows:

“Sec. 29.22(a)-1. What included in gross income. Gross income includes in general [items of income listed] derived from any source whatever, unless exempt from tax by law. (See section 22(b) and 116.)”

This refers the reader to Section 22(b) to learn what income is “exempt from tax.” After saying that certain items are specifically exempted by statute, the regulations under section 22(b) (referred to in the previous citation) state:

“No other items are exempt from gross income except (1) those items of income which are, under the Constitution, not taxable by the Federal Government, (2) those items of income which are exempt from tax on income under the provisions of any Act of Congress still in effect; and (3) the income exempted under the provisions of section 116.”

Again the regulations explicitly state that some income is not constitutionally taxable, even though it is not specifically exempted by any statute passed by Congress. The statutes need not mention this, because (as shown above), the Constitutional limitations are to be assumed when reading any statute. But because the regulations must give specifics, the fact that some income not exempt by statute is exempted by the Constitution is specifically stated in the regulations. (Many tax professionals are at a loss to explain this; they are unable to identify anything which is not taxable under the constitution, but which is not exempted by statute.)
QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: What types of income not exempted by statute are nonetheless, under the Constitution, not taxable by the federal government?

5.6.4 Exempt Income

The above issue of Constitutional limits on Congress’ taxing power is not intended to dispute the constitutionality of the income tax. In fact, the opinion of this author, the readers, and even the courts regarding the question of taxing jurisdiction ends up being irrelevant in this case. The statutes of Congress, together with the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury (which must also be approved by Congress), show that they believe their jurisdiction to tax incomes was limited to individuals involved in international and foreign commerce.

(“International commerce” means trade which crosses country borders, such as income from within the federal United States*/federal zone going to nonresident aliens. “Foreign commerce” means trade which happens entirely outside of the United States of America, such as a U.S. citizen working and getting paid abroad, or in a federal possession.)

As discussed above, the regulations under 22(a) of the 1939 Code show that the meaning of “gross income” does not include income which is exempt by statute, or other income which is “under the Constitution, not taxable by the Federal Government.” But, as stated before, the regulations must specifically inform the public of what is required, rather than leaving people to guess at what is Constitutionally taxable. The following is the first paragraph of the 1945 regulations under the section of statutes defining “gross income”:

"39.22(a)-1 What included in gross income (a) Gross income includes in general [items of income listed] derived from any source whatever, unless exempt from tax by law. See sections 22(b) and 116. [The regulations under the cited section states that some income not exempted by statute is "under the Constitution, not taxable by the Federal Government"] In general, income [not "gross income"] is the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, provided it be understood to include profit gained through a sale or conversion of capital assets. Profits of citizens, residents, or domestic corporations derived from sales in foreign commerce must be included in their gross income; but special provisions are made for nonresident aliens and foreign corporations by sections 211 to 238, inclusive, and, in certain cases, by section 251, for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within possessions of the United States. Income may be in the form of cash or of property."

Keeping in mind the matter of taxing jurisdiction, it becomes clear that the Secretary of the Treasury in these regulations was informing the public of which matters are constitutionally taxable by the federal government. This list of taxable activities is completely absent from 22(a) of the 1939 statutes. As the Supreme Court has stated, “the statute is to be read as though it in terms exclude[s]” matters not within the constitutional power of the government to tax. At the same time, the regulations must give specifics to the public of what the law requires, and here they do so. Not surprisingly, the list of taxable activities in these regulations matches precisely those matters which the Constitution puts under federal jurisdiction (international and foreign commerce, and federal possessions).

Anyone claiming that this list of taxable activities is not exclusive (claiming instead that other types of income are also taxable) encounters a logical problem. One must then claim that the regulations specifically say that some income not exempt by statute is exempt under the Constitution, but that those regulations never give any indication as to what income is meant. If this list is not the explanation of what is constitutionally taxable, then no further explanation seems to exist (which would violate the requirement that the regulations specifically state what the law requires).

In addition, one would be hard pressed to explain why these regulations bother to specifically point out these taxable activities (when the statutes do not), if this is not a complete list of what the Secretary believed to be constitutionally taxable.

While the regulations specifically mention the Constitutional limitations, and the limits are to be assumed when reading the statutes, this is not to say that the statutes give no indication of the limited nature of the tax. While the general statutory definition of “gross income” by itself may be misleading, there is plenty of evidence in the statutes that shows that Congress knew the limits of its power, and stayed within those bounds. Most notably, the entire structure and contents of Subchapter N (“Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States”) indicates that it is about international and foreign commerce.

5.6.5 The Definition of “income” for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code

5-595

Have you ever closely examined block 1 of the W-2 form that your employer sends you at the end of every year? The block is labeled “Wages, tips, other compensation”. Have you ever wondered why this block isn’t labeled “income”? After all, if you correspond with or talk with the revenue agents at the IRS, they will try to make you believe that everything you make is “income”, so why don’t they just call it that on the form? Did you ever notice that they will NEVER put in writing with their signature on it that the amount in block 1 is “income” and wonder why? The answer to these intriguing questions are found in this section and they will surprise you indeed! One of the reasons is that neither your employer nor the government can lawfully call what you make “income” without committing blatant fraud and making themselves criminally liable in the process!

Amazing as it may sound, the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code also never defines the word “income” in the context of a person domiciled in a state of the Union! To wit:

1. 26 U.S.C. §643(b) defines the term “income”, but only in the context of the estate of a deceased person domiciled within the federal zone under Subtitle B, but not in the context of any tax documented under Subtitle A. Below is that definition:

   TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter J > PART I > Subpart A > § 643

   § 643. Definitions applicable to subparts A, B, C, and D

   (b) Income For purposes of this subpart and subparts B, C, and D, the term “income”, when not preceded by the words “taxable”, “distributable net”, “undistributed net”, or “gross”, means the amount of income of the estate or trust for the taxable year determined under the terms of the governing instrument and applicable local law. Items of gross income constituting extraordinary dividends or taxable stock dividends which the fiduciary, acting in good faith, determines to be allocable to corpus under the terms of the governing instrument and applicable local law shall not be considered income.

   As we learned earlier in section 5.1.11, the Internal Revenue Code serves a dual purpose. Subtitles A through C only apply to federal employees domiciliaries of the District of Columbia. Subtitles D and E apply throughout the states (mostly but not exclusively). From the very foundations of this country, the founders bestowed upon Congress no limitations as to the right to institute estate taxes within the District of Columbia and territories. This conclusion is based on the ruling of the Supreme Court in the case of Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900), which explains the history of estate taxes very thoroughly.

2. Under Subtitle A, the IRS defines the phrase “gross income” in 26 U.S.C. §61 and 26 U.S.C. §872 but it never tells you that “gross income” must also meet the Constitutional definition of “income” defined by the Supreme Court to be applied to the “items of gross income” appearing in that section. The older version of the codes and regulations used to do that (see 26 CFR §39.22(b)-1 (1956), for instance) but the new version was obfuscated to disguise it.

On many occasions, and especially during examinations or summons or depositions, IRS agents and DOJ lawyers will ask people “how much income did you have during taxable year _____?” As an American domiciled in the 50 Union states, the correct answer is “that depends how you define ‘income’. I didn’t have any ‘GROSS income’, and the true definition of ‘income’ in my case is that defined in I.R.C. section 901.” If you look in that section, the title of the section is “Sec. 901. Taxes of foreign countries and of possessions of United States”. As we described earlier in section 5.2.5, everything outside of federal territories and possessions of the United States* federal zone is “foreign” with respect to the I.R.C., and therefore each of the 50 Union states are considered “foreign countries” with respect to the Internal Revenue Code, as we talked about in section 5.3.5 earlier. This conclusion forms the basis for why the correct form to file for Americans born in the federal zone and who are living overseas is IRS Form 2555. If you look over I.R.C. section 901, the income of Americans domiciled in the nonfederal areas simply isn’t listed as being taxable within that section! You can therefore legitimately answer the auditor or revenue agent during the examination that your “gross income” and your “taxable income” are both a “big fat zero.” One of our readers (Wayne Bentson) used this technique during a deposition against the IRS and reported that afterward he overheard two IRS revenue agents whispering to each other “He knows!”, after which they promptly ended the deposition! Even more interesting is that the very same sources of “gross income” enumerated in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f) and applying to both sources within and sources without the “[federal] United States” are mentioned in this section 901 (FSC, DISC, etc).

To reiterate; the tax authorized under the original U.S. Constitution has not changed except as to separate the source of "income" from the income itself permitting the collection of an indirect (excise) tax on income by leaving the source for items of gross income for the recipient (wages, salaries, fees for service, and first time commissions) free of tax (Brushaber, supra.) despite how some politicians misinterpret the 16th Amendment.

NOTE: The Brushaber court referred to an earlier case, Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust Co., 158 U.S. 601 (1895) which declared the Income Tax Act of 1894 unconstitutional, as it's effect would have been to leave the burden of the tax to be born by professions, trades, employments, or vocations; and in that way, what was intended as a tax on capital would remain, in substance, a tax on occupations and labor. This result, the court held, could NOT have been contemplated by Congress.

According to one federal court:

"The general term "income" is not defined in the Internal Revenue Code."

[U.S. v. Ballard, 535 F.2d. 400(8th Cir, 1976)]

Of course, we now know based on an examination of 26 U.S.C. §643(b) above that this conclusion is wrong based on the I.R.C. of today, but this may have been true when the ruling occurred in 1976. The U.S. Supreme Court has also ruled that Congress may not make its own definition of “income” in Eisner v. Maconber, 252 U.S. 189, 207, 40 S.C. 189, 9 A.L.R. 1570 (1920):

"In order, therefore, that the [apportionment] clauses cited from article I [§2, cl. 3 and §9, cl. 4] of the Constitution may have proper force and effect ... [I]t becomes essential to distinguish between what is an what is not 'income',... according to truth and substance, without regard to form. Congress cannot by any definition it may adopt conclude the matter, since it cannot by legislation alter the Constitution, from which alone, it derives its power to legislate, and within those limitations alone that power can be lawfully exercised... [pg. 207]...After examining dictionaries in common use we find little to add to the succinct definition adopted in two cases arising under the Corporation Tax Act of 1909, Stratton’s Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 414, 34 S. Sup.Ct. 136, 140 [58 L.Ed. 285] and Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S. Sup.Ct. 467, 469, 62 L.Ed. 1054..."

[emphasis added]

It is important to point out that the above ruling was made in the context of the Constitution and the states of the Union. Congress has always had the authority to declare the meaning of “income” in the context of the federal zone, but must observe the limitations of the Constitution when attempting to collect taxes in states of the Union. So what is “income”? Here are some definitions direct from the U.S. Supreme Court as cited in one of the above-mentioned cases:

"...Whatever difficulty there may be about a precise scientific definition of 'income,' it imports, as used here, something entirely distinct from principal or capital either as a subject of taxation or as a measure of the tax; conveying rather the idea of gain or increase arising from corporate activities."

[Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918)]

Has the IRS been treating you as a corporation all these years? When people see this, they say things like:

"That can’t be right. What’s going on here?"

If you already read sections 4.1 and 5.1.1 earlier, you would understand why this is the case. For those of you who haven’t, keep reading and we will clarify. Here is the other cite defining income mentioned in the Eisner ruling, from Stratton’s Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 414, 58 L.Ed. 285, 34 Sup.Ct. 136 (1913):

"This court had decided in the Pollock Case that the income tax law of 1894 amounted in effect to a direct tax upon property, and was invalid because not apportioned according to populations, as prescribed by the Constitution. The act of 1909 avoided this difficulty by imposing not an income tax, but an excise tax upon the conduct of business in a corporate capacity, measuring, however, the amount of tax by the income of the corporation...Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107, 55 L.Ed. 389, 31 Sup.Ct.Rep. 342, Ann. Cas."

The case cited above in Stratton’s, Flint v. Stone, is very enlightening on exactly what type of activity or source of income is being taxed and who has to pay the tax.
“The Corporation Tax is not a direct tax within the enumeration provision of the Constitution, but is an impost or excise which Congress [220 U.S. 107] has power to impose under Art. 1, § 8, cl. 1, of the Constitution. Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601, distinguished.

“Indirect taxation includes a tax on business done in a corporate capacity; the difference between it and direct taxation imposed on property because of its ownership is substantial, and not merely nominal.

“Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities within the country, upon licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges; the requirement to pay such taxes involves the exercise of the privilege, and if business is not done in the manner described, no tax is payable.

“The only limitations on the power of Congress to levy excise taxes are that they must be for the public welfare and must be uniform throughout the United States; they do not have to be apportioned.

“Courts may not add any limitations on the power of Congress to impose excise taxes to that of uniformity, which was deemed sufficient by those who framed and adopted the Constitution.

“The revenues of the United States must be obtained from the same territory, and the same people, and its excise taxes collected from the same activities, as are also reached by the states to support their local governments, and this fact must be considered in determining whether there are any implied limitations on the federal power to tax because of the sovereignty of the states over matters within their exclusive jurisdiction.

“Enactments of Congress levying taxes are, as are other laws of the federal government acting within constitutional authority, the supreme law of the land.

“Business activities such as those enumerated in the Corporation Tax Law are not beyond the excise taxing power of Congress because executed under franchises created by the states.

“The power of Congress to raise revenue is essential to national existence, and cannot be impaired or limited by individuals incorporating and acting under state authority. The mere fact that business is transacted pursuant to state authority creating private corporations does not exempt it from the power of Congress to levy excise laws upon the privilege of so doing.

“The exemption from federal taxation of the means and instrumentalities employed in carrying on the governmental operations of the states does not extend to state agencies and instrumentalities used for carrying on business of a private character. South Carolina v. United States, 199 U.S. 437. 220 U.S. 111

“The constitutional limitation of uniformity in excise taxes does not require equal application of the tax to all coming within its operation, but is limited to geographical uniformity throughout the United States. Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41.” [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

So what they are saying above in Flint is that in order to have “income” as Constitutionally defined, one must be a corporation earning “profit” from a privileged activity or source that is subject to federal excise taxes. This applies equally to both federal and state corporations, but only as provided by statute. The key is that the only taxable activities or sources for federal income taxes are all related to foreign commerce, which is the only “privileged” type of commerce coming under federal jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of the U.S. Constitution. Foreign commerce is the “privileged” activity that is subject to the federal excise tax because foreign commerce is subject only to federal regulation and not state regulation.

“The States, after they formed the Union, continued to have the same range of taxing power which they had before, barring only duties affecting exports, imports, and on tonnage. Congress, on the other hand, to lay taxes in order ‘to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States’, Art. 1, Sec. 8, U.S.C.A.Const., can reach every person and every dollar in the land with due regard to Constitutional limitations as to the method of laying taxes.”[Graves v. People of State of New York, 306 U.S. 466 (1939)]

The legal definition of “duty” confirms that it is a an excise tax on imports:

“Duty...denotes a tax or impost due to the government upon the importation or exportation of goods. See 19 U.S.C.A. See also Customs; Customs duties; Tariff; Toll; Tonnage-duty.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 565]
The fact that foreign commerce is a privileged activity that comes exclusively under federal jurisdiction is confirmed by examining 26 U.S.C. §7001, which requires that all such foreign commerce activities of legal fictions called “persons” [which in fact are corporations] be licensed by the federal government:

Under the current Internal Revenue Code, excise taxes under Subtitles D and E are the only such foreign commerce activities subject to legitimate federal excise taxes on “income”. Under subtitles A and C, the only taxable activities are foreign commerce of corporations and the only persons subject to the jurisdiction of the code are corporate officers, but because there is no liability statute anywhere in these subtitles, then income taxes under Subtitle A and Employment taxes under Subtitle C are not really “taxes” as legally defined, but more properly “donations”, and are voluntary. We covered this subject more thoroughly earlier in section 5.1.8. The only biological persons who can define earnings or monies as taxable under the Internal Revenue Code are those who “volunteer” to call it so, because the federal government isn’t authorized in the Constitution to define it as other than “corporate profit” from foreign commerce, according to the Supreme Court in Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920). Incidentally, there are many who might be tempted to say that the ruling of the Supreme Court in Flint v. Stone Tracy above is irrelevant and overruled because it was made before the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913, which most contemporary politicians say is what authorized the income tax. However, this is a simply not true because the Supreme Court later ruled in Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916) that the Sixteenth Amendment “conferred no new powers of taxation.”

The above findings are completely consistent with our analysis found in section 5.1.8, where we concluded that Subtitle A Income taxes are indirect excise taxes on federal privileges. In the instant case above, the privilege is status as a corporation involved in foreign commerce:

"Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politic or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."

[Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]
The people in receipt of taxable federal corporate “privileges” are the officers of the corporation, who in this case are the “public officers” of the corporation working as Congressmen, the President, judges, and appointees of the President!

26 U.S.C. §7701

(a) DEFINITIONS

(26) The term "trade or business" includes the performance of the functions of a public office.

26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2)-GRADUATED RATE OF TAX...

“(2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME. —In determining taxable income...gross income includes ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a TRADE OR BUSINESS within the United States.”

Following is a definition of “public office”:

"Public Office, pursuant to Black’s Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:

Essential characteristics of a ‘public office’ are:

(6) Authority conferred by law,
(7) Fixed tenure of office, and
(8) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.

Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function'.

Essential elements to establish public position as ‘public office’ are:

(a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
(b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
(c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
(d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
(e) Position must have some permanency."

The section below shows the only persons from whom unpaid taxes can be collected, and note that it is federal “public officers” or instrumentalities of the federal corporation known as the U.S. government, who are in receipt of taxable privileges:

26 U.S.C., Subchapter D - Seizure of Property for Collection of Taxes
Sec. 6331. Levy and distraint

(a) Authority of Secretary

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

(b) Seizure and sale of property

The term "levy" as used in this title includes the power of distraint and seizure by any means. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (e), a levy shall extend only to property possessed and obligations existing at the time thereof. In any case in which the Secretary may levy upon property or rights to property, he may seize and sell such property or rights to property (whether real or personal, tangible or intangible).

And the definition of “employee” confirms that these people against whom collection can be instituted are really just elected or appointed officers of the federal corporation known as the U.S. government:

26 CFR §31.3401(c ) Employee,...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."

The above are the ONLY entities against whom collection actions can be instituted, and this is a reflection of the fact that the income tax is really just an embodiment or the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939! Essentially, taxes under Subtitle A are part of the terms of the federal employment agreement that public officers voluntarily accept as a condition of employment. Section 5.6.10 expands upon this point. When you file a form 1040, you are in effect electing to treat your income as "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States" which is the equivalent of saying that you want to be treated as a "public officer" of the U.S. government whose income is taxable under the indirect excise tax found in Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code!

To extend this federal corporation metaphor even further, the debt instruments or "stocks" issued by this federal corporation known as the U.S. government are U.S. dollars! See the following cite right from the Supreme Court on this subject, where someone challenged the constitutionality of paper money in preference to gold-backed currency:

"Under the power to borrow money on the credit of the United States, and to issue circulating notes for the money borrowed, [Congress'] power to define the quality and force of those notes as currency is as broad as the like power over a metallic currency under the power to coin money and to regulate the value thereof. Under the two powers, taken together, Congress is authorized to establish a national currency, either in coin or in paper, and to make that currency lawful money for all purposes, as regards the national government or private individuals..." . . . (Emphasis added)

There you have it. The paper money you carry around is "stock" in the federal corporation called the “U.S. government” and that government wants to make you a "stockholder" and an officer of that corporation in receipt of federal privileges so they can tax those privileges using the Subtitle A income tax! We know, however, that they can’t legitimately do this because the result would be unavoidable financial slavery:

"Legislature...cannot name something to be a taxable privilege unless it is first a privilege [Taxation West Key 53]...The Right to receive income or earnings is a right belonging to every person and realization and receipt of income, is therefore, not a privilege that can be taxed." [Taxation West Key 533-Jack Cole Co. v. MacFarland, 357 S.W.2d. 453, Tenn.

"The obligation to pay an excise tax is based upon the voluntary action of the person taxed in performing the act, enjoying the privilege, or engaging in the occupation which is the subject of the excise, and the element of absolute and unavoidable demand is lacking."

/People ex. rel. Arty Gen. v. Naglee, 1 Cal. 232, Bank of Commerce & T. Co. v. Senter, 149 Tenn. 441, 381 S.W. 144/

Thank God we live in a free country, because our greedy government certainly has pushed us as far in the direction of socialism as they could since the income tax was introduced in 1913 and as it has been perfected over the last 70 or so years, haven’t they? To see this federal corporation metaphor for the U.S. government extended even further, we refer you to section 4.7 for a fascinating look at the two faces of our federal government: democratic socialism vs. capitalist republic. This section is well worth your time to read and study.

You don’t, however, have to believe us that “income” can only be defined by the U.S. Constitution as federal corporate profit. Look in section 3.11.11.1, which talks about the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment. That section has the entire speech of President Taft given before Congress on June 16, 1909 for the purpose of introducing the Sixteenth Amendment for ratification. Here is an excerpt from that speech:

I therefore recommend to the Congress that both Houses, by a two-thirds vote, shall propose an amendment to the Constitution conferring the power to levy an income tax upon the National Government without apportionment among the States in proportion to population.

Second, the decision in the Pollock case left power in the National Government to levy an excise tax, which accomplishes the same purpose as a corporation income tax and is free from certain objections urged to the proposed income tax measure.

I therefore recommend an amendment to the tariff bill imposing upon all corporations and joint stock companies for profit, except national banks (otherwise taxed), savings banks, and building and loan associations, an excise tax measured by 2 per cent on the net income of such corporations. This is an excise tax upon the privilege of doing business as an artificial entity and of freedom from a general partnership liability enjoyed by those who own the stock. [Emphasis added] I am informed that a 2 per cent tax of this character would bring into the Treasury of the United States not less than $25,000,000.

The decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Spreckels Sugar Refining Company against McClain (192 U.S., 397), seems clearly to establish the principle that such a tax as this is an excise tax upon privilege and not a direct tax on property, and is within the federal power without apportionment according to population. The tax on net income is preferable to one proportionate to a percentage of the gross receipts, because it is a tax upon success and not failure. It imposes a burden at the source of the income at a time when the corporation is well able to pay and when collection is easy.

Here are some additional U.S. Supreme Court cites further defining “income” that clarify our assertions:

“Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed.”

“As repeatedly pointed out by this court, the Corporation Tax Law of 1909, imposed an excise or privilege tax, and not in any sense, a tax upon property or upon income merely as income. It was enacted in view of the decision of Pollock v. Farmer’s Loan & T. Co., 157 U.S. 429, 29 L.Ed. 759, 15 Sup. St. Rep. 673, 158 U.S. 601, 39 L.Ed. 1108, 15 Sup.Ct.Rep. 912, which held the income tax provisions of a previous law to be unconstitutional because amounting in effect to a direct tax upon property within the meaning of the Constitution, and because not apportioned in the manner required by that instrument.”

[Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 16-17 (1916)]

“We must reject in this case, as we have rejected in cases arising under the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (Doyle, Collector, v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 38 Sup.Ct. 467, 62 L.Ed.--), the broad contention submitted on behalf of the government that all receipts—everything that comes in—are income within the proper definition of the term ‘gross income,’ and that the entire proceeds of a conversion of capital assets, in whatever form and under whatever circumstances accomplished, should be treated as gross income. Certainly the term ‘income’ has no broader meaning in the 1913 act than in that of 1909 (see Stratton’s Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 416, 417 S., 34 Sup.Ct. 136), and for the present purpose we assume there is not difference in its meaning as used in the two acts.”
[Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330, 335, 38 S.Ct. 540 (1918)]

“... the definition of income approved by the Court is:

‘The gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, provided it be understood to include profits gained through sale or conversion of capital assets.’

Eisner, supra.

“Income within the meaning of the 16th Amendment and the Revenue Act means, gain ... and in such connection gain means profit ... proceeding from property severed from capital, however invested or employed and coming in, received or drawn by the taxpayer for his separate use, benefit and disposal”

The Court ruled similarly in Goodrich v. Edwards, 255 U.S. 527 (1921) and in 1969, the Court ruled in Conner v. U.S., 303 F.Sup. 1187, that:

“Whatever may constitute income, therefore must have the essential feature of gain to the recipient. This was true when the 16th Amendment became effective, it was true at the time of Eisner v. Macomber, supra, it was true under sect. 22(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1938, and it is likewise true under sect. 61(a) of the I.R.S. Code of 1954. If there is not gain, there is not income ... Congress has taxed INCOME and not compensation.”

And here is more evidence that earnings from labor are not “income”:

“... one does not derive income by rendering services and charging for them.”
[Edwards v. Keith, 231 F. 110 (1916)]

Even at the state level, we find courts following the lead of the U.S. Supreme Court:

“There is a clear distinction between profit and wages or compensation for labor. Compensation for labor cannot be regarded as profit within the meaning of the law.”
[Oliver v. Halstead, 196 Va. 992, 86 S.E.2d. 858 (1955)]

and:

"Reasonable compensation for labor or services rendered is not profit."
[Laureldale Cemetery Assoc. v. Matthews, 345 Pa. 239, 47 A.2d. 277, 280 (1946)]

Clearly, then, we have firmly established based on the above cites from the Supreme Court that:

1. Congress has no authority to redefine the meaning of income. The Constitution is the only thing that can define it.
2. Any attempt by Congress to redefine the meaning of income in the Internal Revenue Code can safely be disregarded if it is inconsistent with the above definitions by the Constitution and the U.S. Supreme Court.
3. Income taxes authorized by the Sixteenth Amendment starting in 1913 are and always have been indirect excise taxes only on state or federal corporations involved in foreign commerce.
4. The tax is not on income, it is a tax on gain or profit derived from the sale or conversion of federal (not state) corporate assets and the amount of tax is computed based on the amount of gain (income).
5. Because the income tax is an indirect excise tax and all excise taxes are taxes on privileges, the tax must be paid by the federal corporation to the entity granting the privilege. A state-chartered corporation would also pay income tax to the federal government, but only on profits derived from foreign commerce, which is the only aspect of commerce that the federal government is granted with the jurisdiction to regulate and tax under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution. A federally-chartered corporation would NOT pay income tax to a state unless it physically operates within the state.
6. The U.S. government is classified as a federal corporation. This can be confirmed by examining 28 U.S.C. §3002, we find:

United States Code
TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
CHAPTER 176 - FEDERAL DEBT COLLECTION PROCEDURE
SUBCHAPTER A - DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS
Sec. 3002, Definitions
(15) "United States" means -
(A) a Federal corporation;
(B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or
(C) an instrumentality of the United States.

7. Regardless of what any circuit court says about the meaning of income, the U.S. Supreme Court’s rulings above supersede all circuit courts. This finding agrees with the Internal Revenue Manual:

Internal Revenue Manual
4.10.7.2.9.8 (05-14-1999)
Importance of Court Decisions
1. “Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.
2. Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.
3. Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers.”
The findings above are entirely consistent with the taxable sources listed as taxable in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f), which are all either income earned by Americans living overseas or income from federally chartered corporate activities. How do we apply what we have just learned? Let’s apply it to the Treasury Regulations, the I.R.C. (Internal Revenue Code) and the I.R.M. (Internal Revenue Manual).

Since the Rules contained in the Internal Revenue Manual, even if codified in the Code of Federal Regulations, do not have the force and effect of law (U.S. v. Horne, [C.A. Me. 1983] 714 F.2d. 206) and the power to promulgate regulations does not include the power to broaden or narrow the meaning of statutory provisions beyond what Congress intended (Abbot, Procter & Paine v. U.S., [1965] 344 F.2d. 333, 170 Cl.Ct. 408) and regulations cannot do what Congress itself is without power to do; they must conform to the Constitution (C.I.R. v. Van Vorst, [C.C.A. 1932] 59 F.2d. 677).

Since the above cases are the indisputable law with respect to what is or is not income, we find the word "income" does not mean all monies that come into the possession of an individual, which is called “gross receipts”, but rather profit or gain FROM the money a [federal] corporate “person” (a legal fiction denoting a corporation) takes in, such as interest, stock dividends, profit from an employee's labors. All of these constraints on the definition of “income” result from the apportionment clauses found in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution. None of the income of most individuals falls in the category of “income” defined by the Supreme Court, and therefore such “income” cannot be taxable “gross income” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §61. This means that a natural person’s wages, which are compensation for his labor, are not taxable because such a tax would amount to an unconstitutional direct tax on property (labor). With no taxable “income”, you are not liable to file a return. These conclusions are confirmed by the Supreme Court, which said on the subject:

"Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will…"

Now let’s look at the history behind this analysis to see if it corroborates our findings. In 1909, Congress enacted the federal corporation excise tax and sent to the states for ratification the proposed income tax amendment. The measure of that excise after a $5,000 deduction, on the privilege of doing business as a corporation, was income from whatever source derived, including rents and interest on real and personal property. When the excise was upheld by the Supreme Court in Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911), the court suggested a neat tax avoidance device: just don’t operate as a corporation.

You know what happened to the federal corporation excise tax? It was repealed after Flint. Do you suppose this was a chance happening or a well orchestrated plan to force an income tax on Americans? Following Flint, Congress lost no time in plugging this proffered loophole. The Tariff Act of 1913, also known as the Federal Income Tax Law, repealed the corporate excise tax and imposed the individual income tax on corporations instead. This little ploy helped keep the "what’s income" controversy pot boiling for decades. Chief Justice White would effectively keep a lid on any "income revelations" until his death in 1921. Recall that Chief Justice White was the dissenting opinion in Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co. which declared the first direct income tax unconstitutional. Chief Justice Taft, the former President who had appointed White as Chief Justice, then took over after White. Taft was even more dedicated to expanding the income tax than White, even though they were both in the same camp. Recall that Taft proposed the Sixteenth Amendment while serving as President and also the one whose Secretary of State Philander(er) Knox fraudulently ratified it.

What value or purpose does the 16th Amendment have? The Sixteenth Amendment is a dodge, a subterfuge and it worked. After its ratification, everyone in the country was poised to receive and accept an income tax from the Congress. There was popular support for an income tax on the rich. Everyone knew it was coming and everyone who wasn’t rich wanted it. Practically, no one thought they would ever be lucky enough to have to pay an income tax. Even though the amendment conferred no new taxing powers upon Congress according to the Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining, Congress and members of the executive branch have systematically been trying to deceive people into thinking that the Amendment created a new type of tax on people, which is a blatant fraud. Write your Congressman or woman and ask them why you have to pay income tax and this is the kind of LIES that they will tell you in their letter. We have a copy of such a response from our Congressperson.

Congress had passed a similar income tax during the Civil War. The Civil War taxing acts contained a section that imposed a requirement to keep track of any money earned. What good does it do to fool people into believing that something called “income” is being taxed if no one has any? The IRS is very open about their Civil War history. The IRS admits they sent agents out to make up assessment lists of those who were believed to owe a tax. If a person didn’t sign up for the tax right away there was a 50% penalty. What I never expect them to admit is that these agents were outside their area of their territorial jurisdiction and that the Constitution never empowered Congress to collect the equivalent of direct taxes within the borders of states of the union on land that is not part of the federal zone.

The income tax they were collecting was one based on the exercise of general police powers which Congress only had in the District of Columbia, federal enclaves inside the states, and the territories. Even in those areas it was a direct tax that had to be apportioned. That problem was resolved by making the tax a "forced" voluntary tax. How such a tax could be fully implemented will be the subject of this entire document.

The Sixteenth Amendment gives Congress the power to enact an excise tax, but Congress created an income tax that wasn’t an excise. Rather than name an excisable activity Congress created the magic words “taxable income”. The Congress then created a voluntary self-assessment taxation system based on “taxable income”. Such a taxation system depended completely on the power to exercise the police power. Congress had the police power in the seat of government and the territories. The U.S. Supreme Court would then cite some old cases to seemingly find the new income tax to be constitutional, with the aid of the chief advocate and creator of the Sixteenth Amendment, who was President Taft, who also served in the Supreme Court as chief justice for 9 years after he had his hand-picked Secretary of State, Philander (philanderer?) Knox fraudulently claim in 1913 that the Sixteenth Amendment had been properly ratified by the required ¾ of the states.

If you would like to learn more about the definition of “income”, we refer you to a very in depth study of the subject in an excellent book by Phil Hart entitled Constitutional Income available at:

Phil provides both in his book and on his website an interesting summary of his research regarding the Constitutional meaning of “income” which he calls “10 Key Facts”, which we now repeat here for your benefit as follows:

- Fact #1: "In examining the history of the debate and ratification of the 16th Amendment, this book will show that there is no evidence upon which the government can rely for their claim that the American People desired to have their wages and salaries taxed. No evidence can be found in the law journals of the time, not in the journals on political economy or economics, not in the Congressional Record nor other Congressional documents, nor in any of the newspapers of record of the time. In other words, the government's position that wages and salaries equals income within the meaning of the 16th Amendment is "wholly without foundation."" Phil Hart, Constitutional Income: Do You Have Any? page 10, (Alpine Press, 2001).

- Fact #2: A tax on wages payable by the wage earner is a Capitation Tax. So says the premier authority on the issue, Adam Smith author of the timeless work Wealth of Nations. See ibid. pp. 141-145.

- Fact #3: Capitation Taxes are direct taxes and are required by the Constitution to be apportioned among the 50 Union states. The 16th Amendment had nothing to do with Capitation Taxes. Ibid. pp. 250 - 253.

- Fact #4: In the few hours just prior to the Senate's passage of the 16th Amendment the morning of July 5, 1909, the Senate twice by vote rejected two separate proposals to include direct taxes within the authority of the 16th Amendment. Ibid. pages 193-200.

- Fact #5: In briefs and argument before the Supreme Court in the case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, both Brushaber and the Government claimed that the 16th Amendment provided for a direct tax exempted from the Constitutional apportionment rule. The High Court called this claim an "erroneous assumption...wholly without foundation." Ibid. pp. 204-210.

- Fact #6: Just weeks after the Brushaber Case was decided, Mr. Stanton, in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co. again claimed (35 times) that the 16th Amendment created a new class of constitutional tax, that being a direct tax exempted from the apportionment rule. The High Court said in this case that the 16th Amendment created "no new tax." Ibid. pp. 212-220.
Fact #7: In the Stanton and Brushaber Cases, the Supreme Court ruled correctly by excluding direct taxes from the 16th Amendment. The intent of the American People and that of Congress was never to directly tax the American People, but only to tax income severed from accumulated wealth. Ibid. pp. 244 - 270.

Fact #8: When the Supreme Court stated in the Eisner, Stanton, and Doyle Cases that "Income may be derived from capital, or labor or from both combined" all these cases dealt with corporations and had nothing to do with the "Are wages income?" question. Ibid. pp. 239-244 and 272-274.

Fact #9: The genesis of the 16th Amendment was the income tax plank of the Democrat Party's Presidential Platform of 1908 which clearly reveals the intent of that Amendment:

"We favor an income tax as part of our revenue system, and we urge the submission of a constitutional amendment specifically authorizing Congress to levy and collect a tax upon individual and corporate incomes, to the end that wealth may bear its proportional share of the burdens of the federal government." Ibid. p. 48.

Fact #10: There is not, and never has been, any delegation of authority from We the People to the government for the collection of an unapportioned direct tax on the wages and salaries of the American People. It has been a maxim of English Law since the Magna Carta of 1215, that the People must consent to all taxation. We are being taxed without our Consent!" Ibid. p. 278.

Here is a table adapted and expanded from page 120 of Phil’s book which we believe is entirely accurate. It shows under what circumstances Congress has the Constitutional authority to define the word “income” within the contexts of the Statutes at Large or the U.S. Code:

NOTES:
1. The word “income” as used above is defined in its constitutional sense.
2. “Government employees” as used above include only “public officers” of the United States government.
3. For the purposes of the above table, “nationals” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) who are domiciled in the 50 union states and “nonresident aliens” are legally equivalent.

5.6.6 “Gross Income”

A detailed understanding of the meaning of the term “gross income” is crucial to understanding the income tax enforcement fraud. This section is devoted exclusively to that topic.

According to 26 U.S.C. §63, “taxable income” means “gross income” minus deductions:

\[ \text{TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter B > PART I > Sec. 63.} \]
\[ \text{Sec. 63. - Taxable income defined} \]
\[ \text{(a) In general} \]
\[ \text{Except as provided in subsection (b), for purposes of this subtitle, the term "taxable income" means gross income minus the deductions allowed by this chapter (other than the standard deduction).} \]

To have “taxable income”, one must first have “gross income”. “Gross income” is then defined as follows:

\[ \text{TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART II > Subpart A > Sec. 872.} \]
\[ \text{Sec. 872. - Gross income} \]
\[ \text{(a) General rule} \]
\[ \text{In the case of a nonresident alien individual, except where the context clearly indicates otherwise, gross income includes only -} \]
\[ \text{(1) gross income which is derived from sources within the United States [ the federal zone] and which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States [ federal zone], and} \]
\[ \text{(2) gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States [ federal zone].} \]

26 U.S.C. §61 defines “classes of gross income” but 26 U.S.C. §872 is the only section that actually defines which “individuals” can earn “gross income”. Notice that this definition of “gross income” is found in Subpart A of the I.R.C., which is entitled “Nonresident aliens”. This is consistent with the definition of “individual” as being either an “alien” or “nonresident alien” as we revealed later in section 5.5.4 and in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )3. As we said in that section, the 1040 form is intended only for “resident aliens” and for “U.S. citizens”. The 1040NR form is intended for “nonresident aliens”. This is consistent with the definition of “withholding agent”, who is responsible for withholding on:

Another interesting fact is that the only “individuals” who are subject to withholding are “nonresident aliens”, from (26 U.S.C. §1441). If you search the entire Internal Revenue Code, you will not find any definition of “gross income” that applies to any type of “individual” other than a “nonresident alien”. This implies that “U.S. citizens” who do not work for the federal government are incapable of earning “gross income” and confirms that they are not the specific and singular “individual” mentioned in 26 U.S.C. §1 upon whom Subtitle A personal income taxes are “imposed”. Yes, the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §1 at 26 CFR §1.1-1 do mention “citizens”, but if there is no definition of “gross income” anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code that connects the earnings of these natural persons to the income tax by calling their earnings “gross income”, then it’s meaningless to even mention them. The reason they are mentioned at all in this regulations is because corporations are legally “citizens”, and the Supreme Court has never defined “income” as meaning anything but corporate profit in the context of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. Furthermore, since the underlying statute that 26 CFR §1.1-1 implements doesn’t mention “citizens”, then neither can the regulation, so it’s illegal for the Secretary of the Treasury to even mention “U.S. citizens” in this regulation!

“When enacting §7206(1) Congress undoubtedly knew that the Secretary of the Treasury is empowered to prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of the internal revenue laws, so long as they carry into effect the will of Congress as expressed by the statutes. Such regulations have the force of law. The Secretary, however, does not have the power to make law. Dixon v. United States, supra.”

[United States v. Levy, 533 F.2d. 969 (1976)]

If you look in the Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) at the link below, you will find that the only persons they say are “U.S. nationals” are those persons domiciled in outlying territories of the United States government. Since we established in chapter 4 that “nationals” are “nonresident aliens” for the purposes of I.R.C. Subtitle A income taxes, then from the erroneous perception of the POM, the only people who are “nonresident aliens” in the entire country (United States*) are domiciled in Swains Island and American Samoa!

RS 02001.010 United States Nationals

A. INTRODUCTION

Most of the agreements include one or more provisions that determine a worker’s coverage based on his or her nationality.

B. DEFINITION

A U.S. national is a U.S. citizen or a person who, although not a U.S. citizen, owes permanent allegiance to the United States. The only persons who are U.S. nationals but not U.S. citizens are American Samoans and natives of Swains Island.

Anyone born in the 50 states of the Union can technically also be a “national” or “national of the United States” if they correct (not expatriate) government records describing their citizenship status to correctly reflect exactly what they already are to become a non-privileged person and obtain a “Certificate of non-citizen national status” as provided for under 8 U.S.C. §1452. From the perspective of the above unofficial publication, however, our “silly” servants think that the only place that “non-citizen nationals”, and therefore “nonresident aliens” live is in U.S. territories and possessions. We showed in section 4.8 that these “territories” are not covered by the Bill of Rights and therefore may be subjected to direct taxes without apportionment, which is why the only natural persons who receive “gross income” as defined in the I.R.C. are “nonresident aliens” domiciled in territories of the United States who are employed as “public officers” of the United States government. This is confirmed by examining the 1954 code version of 26 U.S.C. §931:

Sec. 931. INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES [provided in part]

(a) General rule.
There are two types of “gross income”:

1. “Income” of corporations involved in foreign and international commerce, as described in the previous section. This “income” is defined as “corporate profit” by the U.S. supreme Court, as revealed later in section 5.6.5, which is the next section. The “sources” for this type of income are described in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f) and include or mean only corporate profit from Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC’s) and Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC’s), as revealed later in section 5.6.10.

2. Earnings of “public officers” of the United States government. These earnings come from the salaries of “public officers” of the United States government, which are called “personal services” (see section 3.12.1.16) and which are effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States (see section 3.12.1.22). “Trade or business” is then defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”. 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) also says that this type of income must be earned by a “nonresident alien” or else it is not “gross income”. Anyone else who earning monies that are not connected with political office in the United States government, according to 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1), it is not subject to Subtitle A income tax. 26 U.S.C. §872(a)(1) says this type of “gross income” can also come from other sources “within” the United States government. This type of “gross income” is described and detailed later in section 5.6.10, entitled “The Public Officer Kickback Position”. Recall that the President, Representatives, and Senators must all be “Citizens of the United States” under the Constitution. They are the ONLY people who indeed hold “public office” in the United States government, other than appointees of the president, and these are the people who are identified as “nonresident aliens” in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1). This reinforces our definition of “nonresident alien” and provides a nice prelude to the description of the Nonresident Alien Position beginning later in section 5.6.13. For all of these public officers, declaring their earnings from political office as “gross income” is essentially considered an implied obligation of their employment agreement. It is an undocumented requirement to hold political office that all office holders, who are our “leaders” must maintain the fiction of the federal income tax by filing their income tax return every year and making it into a major media event. If they don’t, the Ponzi scheme will collapse and their federal pension will be adversely affected.

The previous section talks about the first type of “gross income”, which is what the Supreme Court calls “corporate profit” and which is earned by corporations. As we stated at the beginning of that section, you must earn “income” as legally defined before you can earn “gross income”, so technically, your compensation as a private person must meet both of the above requirements in order to be “gross income”. Because the Supreme Court has ruled repeatedly that the income tax is and always has been an indirect tax, then it can’t be on natural persons.76 That is why there can’t be a liability statute in the context of natural persons under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. We’ll now therefore devote the remainder of this section to talking about the second type of “gross income” above, which is in the context of the specific type of 76 See the previous section.

“individual” mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code. This “individual” is a “public officer” of the United States government only. You can confirm this by looking at who levy and distraint may be instituted against in 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) for the collection of this tax, which is a “public officer” or instrumentality of the U.S. government:

Section 6331. Levy and distraint.

(a) Authority of Secretary.

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

The term “gross income” was first introduced and used in the Revenue Act of 1918. Here is the definition from that Act:

Sec. 213. That for the purposes of this title...the term “gross income”-

(a) Includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service (including the case of the President of the United States, the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States, and all other officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, the compensation received as such), of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever...

In the above, the term “personal service” is defined as labor in connection with a “trade or business”, which is then defined as the holding of a public office. See 26 CFR §1.162-7, and pay special attention to the phrase “trade or business”, which means “public office”.

The I.R.C. only tells half the story on “gross income” and could easily deceive the average American into believing that the money they make is “gross income”. The place where the fraud of the income tax becomes abundantly obvious is in the implementing regulations found in 26 CFR. The Federal Register Act, found in 44 U.S.C. Chapter 15, says in 44 U.S.C. §1505(a) that every document which has “general applicability and legal effect” must be published in the Federal Register. This means that anything which will apply to the public at large must be published in the Federal Register. This includes any law which imposes a penalty or enforcement authority on the public at large.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

(1) Presidential proclamations and Executive orders, except those not having general applicability and legal effect or effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof;

(2) documents or classes of documents that the President may determine from time to time have general applicability and legal effect, and

(3) documents or classes of documents that may be required so to be published by Act of Congress.

For the purposes of this chapter every document or order which prescribes a penalty has general applicability and legal effect.

Laws which impose penalties on the public at large are called “Public Laws” or “general laws”. Laws which impose penalties on specific classes or groups of citizens only and not on everyone are referred to as “special law”.

“special law. One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law. A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A "special law" relates to either particular persons, places, or things to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass'n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or to a special locality. Board of County Com'rs of Lemu County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361, 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public law.”

For instance, laws that only apply to federal “employees” are not required to be published in the Federal Register under the Federal Register Act. Refer to section 2.5.4.17 or the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005, where a table is provided of enforcement statutes and their corresponding implementing regulations and show that all enforcement authorities under the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A have no implementing regulations. This confirms that the I.R.C. is “special law” that only applies to federal “public officers” and “employees”.

The Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A can therefore best be described as special law which applies only to federal “public officers” and corporations domiciled in or residing in the federal zone or who are receiving federal payments. Our deceitful government has done its best to disguise this fact over the years but the truth still remains in the Internal Revenue Code and 26 CFR for those who want to see it, albeit in obfuscated form.

There are lots of ways to prove this as it pertains to “individuals”. For instance, the definition of “person” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1) refers not to “all individuals”, but to “an individual”:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.

Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof -

(1) Person

The term "person" shall be construed to mean and include [throughout the Internal Revenue Code] an individual, a trust, estate, partnership, association, company or corporation.

This means that there is a very specific type of “individual” referred to in the I.R.C. which is further defined elsewhere and it is for us to determine what the characteristics of this “individual” are. This individual, as you will find out later, is a person contracted with or employed with the U.S. and holding “public office”, which is the excise taxable activity one must be engaged in order to earn “gross income”.

Another way to show that the Internal Revenue Code is “special law” is by referring to it as a “Act of Congress”. All Acts of Congress are applicable only inside the federal zone by default.
"A canon of construction which teaches that of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States." U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949)

And here is a very revealing definition of “territory” from the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) legal encyclopedia:

§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

"The word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under act of congress."

"While the term 'territory' is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of a territory, and 'territories of the' United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the United States exercises dominion, the word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization, has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and the term 'territory' or 'territories' does not necessarily include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under acts of congress. The term 'territories' has been defined to be political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term 'territory' is not a description of a definable area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which it is, more or less temporarily, invested.

"Territories' or 'territory' as including 'state' or 'states.' While the term 'territories of the' United States may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution and in ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

"As used in this title, the term 'territories' generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states."

There are very few exceptions to this general rule and we list them all in section 5.6.9 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008. Here is the definition of the limitation of Congress’ criminal jurisdiction, for instance:

TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
Sec. 4001 - Limitation on detention; control of prisons
(a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of Congress.

The civil jurisdiction of the District Courts of the United States is the same as above in most cases. The older version of Rule 54(c ) of Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure reveals where Acts of Congress apply:

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession.

Therefore, “Acts of Congress” are only applicable inside the federal zone and nowhere else by default. Therefore, in order to be subject to any kind of penalty or collection or enforcement action, you must reside in the federal zone and there must be an implementing regulation found in 26 CFR which authorizes the enforcement action per the Federal Register Act, 44 U.S.C. Chapter 15. We devote a great deal of study to the need for implementing regulations in section 3.15 and later in sections 5.4.17 and 5.4.18, so we won’t repeat ourself here again.

Another way to show that the Internal Revenue Code is special law is to describe it as a type of “police power”. Police powers are reserved entirely to the states under the Tenth Amendment. The only jurisdiction the feds have within states comes from the commerce clause of the Constitution found in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3. The power of taxation directly on individuals is a police power. The purpose of “police powers” and the role of our state governments is to protect the public health, safety, and morals of the people within their jurisdiction. To the extent that they allow the federal government to impose direct taxes on the general population, which amount to involuntary servitude and slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, is the extent to which they have abdicated their role to protect their respective citizens. It is precisely this conflict of interest that results from direct taxes which explains why virtually every country in the world that implements an income tax follows the following simple model:

"Aliens at home, citizens abroad."

In the context of the above, the “aliens” are “residents” in the I.R.C. and are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). The “citizens” are “U.S. citizens” born in the District of Columbia or a federal territory and excluding those born in states of the Union. “Abroad” means in a country outside of one of the states of the Union. You can investigate this matter further earlier in section 4.9.

So from many different angles, we have shown that the only “individuals” who earn “gross income” are “public officers” of the United States government and that the income tax that most people falsely “believe” they are obligated to pay only applies inside the federal zone and abroad. Even within the federal zone, the tax is still entirely voluntary because there is no liability statute.

Because the word “tax” excludes all “voluntarily” paid amounts, as we showed earlier in section 5.1.8, then technically it amounts to fraud to even call it a “tax” in the context of biological people, even if you are a “public officer” of the United States government. The result of all this analysis is that all amounts you pay the federal government under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code as an income “tax” amount to “donations”, and therefore you can fill in any amount on your tax return for “income” and not commit fraud. All you are saying is that this is the amount you “elect” or “volunteer” or “designate” to be subject to Subtitle A federal income “taxes”. You have to qualify and explain what you are doing on your return and its attachments for such a case, but this is a perfectly legal way to submit a tax return as a natural person. All you have to do is explain on an attachment to the return the following, and make sure the return reads “Not valid without the attached statement, ___ pages, with my signature”:

1. You are not a “public officer” or federal “employee”.
2. You are not a “transferee” for government property under 26 U.S.C. §6091.
3. There are no implementing regulations authorizing any kind of “enforcement” action as it pertains to Subtitle A income taxes, and this includes assessment, collection, record keeping, or penalties.
4. The IRS is not an enforcement agency but an administrative agency, because it does not fall under the authority of the Undersecretary for Enforcement within the Treasury department. This is confirmed by the pocket commission of the agent processing your return, who has an administrative rather than enforcement pocket commission.
5. There is no liability statute so the “tax” is “voluntary”. This agrees with the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court in Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960)

For further details on using this approach, refer to the following sections:

2. Section 5.3.1 entitled “Taxpayer” v. ‘Nontaxpayer’.
3. Our sample federal income tax filing attachment found in section 2.9.1 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
4. “Request Income Tax Refunds for the Current Year and the Past Two Years”, section 2.5.4.12 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

We have taken the time to summarize how to compute “gross income” and “taxable income” based on the statutes and regulations discussed in this section and elsewhere. The results are summarized in the tables below. We have one table for each type of entity:

1. Natural persons
2. Corporations

For each table below, we have given you the equivalent of a spreadsheet format and showed you how to compute “taxable income”. The items in brackets “[ ]” indicate where to go in the law to learn what goes in that block. For instance, column 5, row 2 lists “[26 U.S.C. §61(a)(1)]” as the place to go to find out where “gross income” is defined for “public officers” of the United States government. If you wanted to make a worksheet out of this for your reuse, just remove the bracketed content of each cell under column 5, leaving an empty cell to fill in your amount and do computations. After this table, we will give you an example and show you how to use this table. Note that these examples ONLY apply to Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. Other types of taxes, such as excise taxes on imported oil or gasoline, are likely to be very different. The fact that you earn “gross income” or “taxable income” doesn’t necessarily imply that you owe a tax, because as we pointed out earlier in section 5.6.1, you must first be “liable” for the tax in order to be a “taxpayer” who has a legal duty to pay the tax.

Let’s apply the above table to a specific situation. Let’s say that you are a Congressman who decides to volunteer to pay income tax. There is no statute making you liable to pay the tax but you decide to volunteer to be a “taxpayer” because you’ll never join the good-old boy club and be a Presidential Candidate unless you pretend like you have to pay income tax. Your salary is paid by the federal government, which originates from sources within the federal “United States” and it is $150,000/year. You also have investments in your home state from a business and profit from these amounts to $50,000 for the year and is from sources without the federal “United States”. You also had $10,000 in business travel expenses from your job as a Congressman. You name is Strom Thurmond and you also collect Social Security in the amount of $1,500/month for a total of 18,000 per year. Here is the table above filled in with the data from this example.

NOTES ON ABOVE TABLE:

1. There is no “gross income” associated with activities occurring without the federal “United States”. This is because 26 CFR §1.862-1(b) states that all earnings or profit from without the federal “United States” must use 26 CFR §1.861-8(f) for computing gross income, and this section only deals with sources within the federal “United States”. This means, effectively, that no income from sources without the federal “United States” can be classified as “gross income” because it does not originate from within the federal “United States”.
5.6.7 You Don’t Earn “Wages” Under Subtitle C Unless you Volunteer on a W-4

"Every man has a property in his own person. This nobody has any right to but himself. The labor of his body and the work of his hands are properly his."

[John Locke, 1690]

A very hot topic in the tax honesty movement is the concept of the taxability of “wages”. Many people argue that “wages” received by natural persons (people) are not taxable. Like all legal issues, we must ensure in making such a statement that we know whether we mean “wages” as legally defined or wages in the more common and general sense because the two are not the same. On this subject of the taxability of the fruit of a man’s labor, the Supreme Court has said:

“Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted: and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will…”

In common usage, the “fruit of a man’s labor” and “wages” are thought to be equivalent. However, the definitions of terms used within the Internal Revenue Code are such that “wages” means something entirely different than common usage. It is strictly true that “wages” are taxable under subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code, but “wages” as defined in 26 CFR §31.3401(a) can be taxable only when received by those who volunteer by submitting a W-4 form. We’ll explain that later in this section.

Most people dig themselves a deep hole and literally jump into it by never bothering to distinguish between the layman’s definition of “wages” and the legal definition, and we must be very careful in all our communications to distinguish which of these two definitions we are referring to. If you haven’t figured this out by now, we emphasize repeatedly throughout this book that “presumptions” will get you into a heap of trouble in the legal field and that they are also a sin condemned in the Bible that you ought to avoid.77 We therefore need to be VERY explicit in defining the terms we use in the legal realm in every context they are used or we will get into BIG trouble because our government opponents will try to use false “presumption” as a weapon against us during litigation. In this book, we keep the legal version of words in quotes and the layman’s version without quotes so it is especially clear which of the two definitions we are using. If you try to claim that “wages” aren’t taxable on your tax return and refuse to list them, however, your claim will most often be disallowed by the IRS because you argued the wrong point. Why is that? We’ll explain.

The term “Wages” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401 as follows. Pay particular attention to the words “employee” and “trade or business”:

(a) Wages

For purposes of this chapter, the term "wages" means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer, including the cash value of all remuneration (including benefits) paid in any medium other than cash; except that such term shall not include remuneration paid -

[...]

(4) for service not in the course of the employer's trade or business performed in any calendar quarter by an employee, unless the cash remuneration paid for such service is $50 or more and such service is performed by an individual who is regularly employed by such employer to perform such service. For purposes of this paragraph, an individual shall be deemed to be regularly employed by an employer during a calendar quarter only if -

(A) on each of some 24 days during such quarter such individual performs for such employer for some portion of the day service not in the course of the employer's trade or business; or

(B) such individual was regularly employed (as determined under subparagraph (A)) by such employer in the performance of such service during the preceding calendar quarter; or

(5) for services by a citizen or resident of the United States for a foreign government or an international organization; or

(6) for such services, performed by a nonresident alien individual, as may be designated by regulations prescribed by the Secretary; or

(7) Repealed. Pub. L. 89-809, title I, Sec. 103(k), Nov. 13, 1966, 80 Stat. 1554)

77 See Numbers 15:30 and section 2.8.2 earlier.
(A) for services for an employer (other than the United States or any agency thereof) -
(i) performed by a citizen of the United States if, at the time of the payment of such remuneration, it is reasonable to believe that such remuneration will be excluded from gross income under section 911; or
(ii) performed in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by such a citizen if, at the time of the payment of such remuneration, the employer is required by the law of any foreign country or possession of the United States to withhold income tax upon such remuneration; or
(B) for services for an employer (other than the United States or any agency thereof) performed by a citizen of the United States within a possession of the United States (other than Puerto Rico), if it is reasonable to believe that at least 80 percent of the remuneration to be paid to the employee by such employer during the calendar year will be for such services; or
(C) for services for an employer (other than the United States or any agency thereof) performed by a citizen of the United States within Puerto Rico, if it is reasonable to believe that during the entire calendar year the employee will be a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico; or
(D) for services for the United States (or any agency thereof) performed by a citizen of the United States within a possession of the United States to the extent the United States (or such agency) withholds taxes on such remuneration pursuant to an agreement with such possession; or
(9) for services performed by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry or by a member of a religious order in the exercise of duties required by such order; or

(1) for services not in the course of the employer’s trade or business, to the extent paid in any medium other than cash; or
(12) to, or on behalf of, an employee or his beneficiary -
(A) from or to a trust described in section 401(a) which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) at the time of such payment unless such payment is made to an employee of the trust as remuneration for services rendered to such employee and not as a beneficiary of the trust; or
(B) under or to an annuity plan which, at the time of such payment, is a plan described in section 403(a); or
(C) for a payment described in section 402(h)(1) and (2) if, at the time of such payment, it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be entitled to an exclusion under such section for payment; or
(D) under an arrangement to which section 408(p) applies; or
(13) pursuant to any provision of law other than section 5(c) or 6(1) of the Peace Corps Act, for service performed as a volunteer or volunteer leader within the meaning of such Act; or
(14) in the form of group-term life insurance on the life of an employee; or
(15) to or on behalf of an employee if (and to the extent that) at the time of the payment of such remuneration it is reasonable to believe that a corresponding deduction is allowable under section 217 (determined without regard to section 274(n)); or
(16) (A) as tips in any medium other than cash; (B) as cash tips to an employee in any calendar month in the course of his employment by an employer unless the amount of such cash tips is $20 or more; [1]
[...]

The first thing we notice about the above is that the “employee” cannot earn “wages” if he or she:

1. Is NOT a “public office” in the U.S. government as defined above. See 26 U.S.C. §3401(a) and 26 U.S.C. §6041.
2. Is working for a “employer” who is not engaged in a “trade or business” and remuneration is received in other than cash. A “trade or business” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office” in the U.S. government and not expanded elsewhere to include anything else. See 26 U.S.C. §3401(a)(11).
3. Is not regularly or permanently employed and is only a “temp”. See 26 U.S.C. §3401(a)(4) above.
5. Receives the payment other than U.S. dollars. For instance, payments in gold bullion are not “wages”. See 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(11)-1(a).

The key to deciphering this lawyer speak above (does anyone trust lawyers?) is to realize the definition of “employee”, as follows:

26 CFR §31.3401(c) Employee: „...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof," or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation.”

Therefore, we can’t be an “employee” unless we work for the U.S. government as a “public officer”, and such government officers cannot earn “wages” under 26 U.S.C. §3401(a) UNLESS they are NOT elected or appointed “public officials”.

If we work for a private, nonfederal employer outside of the federal zone, we therefore:

1. Cannot be an “employee” as defined above in the regulations.

   IRM 5.14.10.2 (09-30-2004)
   Payroll Deduction Agreements

2. Private employers, states, and political subdivisions are not required to enter into payroll deduction agreements. Taxpayers should determine whether their employers will accept and process executed agreements before agreements are submitted for approval or finalized.

2. Cannot be involved in “employment” as defined in the Internal Revenue Code:

   26 CFR §31.3121(d)-2 Who are employers

   (c) Although a person may be an employer under this section, services performed in his employ may be of such a nature, or performed under such circumstances, as not to constitute employment (see §31.3121(b)–3).

   Title 26: Internal Revenue
   PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
   Subpart B—Federal Insurance Contributions Act (Chapter 21, Internal Revenue Code of 1954)
   General Provisions
   § 31.3121(b)-3 Employment: services performed after 1954

   (a) In general. Whether services performed after 1954 constitute employment is determined in accordance with the provisions of section 3121(b).

   (b) Services performed within the United States [District of Columbia]. Services performed after 1954 within the United States (see §31.3121(e)–1) by an employee for his employer, unless specifically excepted by section 3121(b), constitute employment. With respect to services performed within the United States, the place where the contract of service is entered into is immaterial. The citizenship or residence of the employee or of the employer also is immaterial except to the extent provided in any specific exception from employment. Thus, the employee and the employer may be citizens and residents of a foreign country and the contract of service may be entered into in a foreign country, and yet, if the employee under such contract performs services within the United States, there may be to that extent employment.

3. Cannot earn “wages” as legally defined.

4. Cannot have anything reported in the “wages” block on a W-2 and that block must read “0” for “wages, tips, and other compensation”.

So how do our public dis-servants turn “compensation for labor” into something that fits the legal definition “wages” above so it can be taxed? Once again, you have to dig deep into the regulations to find the secret:

   26 CFR Sec. 31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements.

   (a) IN GENERAL. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p).

References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (Section 31.3401(a)-3).
(b) REMUNERATION FOR SERVICES.

(1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the amounts referred to in in paragraph (a) of this section include any remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer which, without regard to this section, does not constitute wages under section 3401(a). For example, remuneration for services performed by an agricultural worker or a domestic worker in a private home (amounts which are specifically excluded from the definition of wages by section 3401(a)(2) and (3), respectively) are amounts with respect to which a voluntary withholding agreement may be entered into under section 3402(p). See Sections 31.3401(c)-1 and 31.3401(d)-1 for the definitions of "employee" and "employer".

So the bottom line is, if you fill out a W-4 and request voluntary withholding, even though you don’t fit the legal definition of an “employee”, then you consent to treat your earnings as “wages” as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(a) which are subject to tax under the I.R.C. Subtitle C! That’s why we also don’t recommend filling out W-4 Exempts and instead prefer to use the W-8 form.

IMPORTANT: NEVER, EVER fill out and submit a W-4 to change your withholding with your private employer. It’s the WRONG form! The Correct form is the W-8 or W-8BEN form. The following resource is helpful for directions on how to fill out this form:

http://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/W-8BEN/AboutIRSFormW-8BEN.htm

The W-8 or W-8BEN forms have the following advantages that the W-4 form does not enjoy:

1. You identify yourself as a “nonresident alien” by submitting the form. That means you are “nonresident” to the federal “United States” and therefore are outside of federal jurisdiction. Consequently, the form doesn’t need to be sent to the IRS automatically like the Exempt W-4, so you aren’t putting yourself on report by submitting it.
2. You do not identify yourself as a federal “employee” when you submit the form.
3. The IRS cannot penalize you for making tax deductions zero with this form. This is because once again, you are outside of their jurisdiction, and the IRS can’t affect anything outside of federal jurisdiction.
4. The form is not sent to the IRS when you submit it. It says that right on the form.
5. Unlike the W-4 Exempt, the form does not expire every February and have to be resubmitted annually. Instead, it is good for three years.

At law, labor is property. In fact, the Supreme Court in Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884) has identified labor as man's most precious property. Therefore, the exchange of one's labor as a private employee (one who does not work for the federal government as a “public officer”) for wages (not “wages” as defined in the I.R.C., but just wages in the conventional sense) or salary (which are also property) is considered by law to be an exchange of properties of equal value in which there is NO gain or profit for the person who performed the labor. Their employer can derive profit, but a natural person cannot profit from wages. Such a property exchange of equal value cannot therefore be taxed because there is no profit or gain. The below statute makes the above assertions very clear:

United States Code
TITLE 15 - COMMERCE AND TRADE
CHAPTER 1 - MONOPOLIES AND COMBINATIONS IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE
Sec. 17. Antitrust laws not applicable to labor organizations

The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce....

Based on the above, it’s reasonable to ask:

“The federal government derives most of its authority to reach into the states based on the so called ‘commerce clause’, which is found in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution. This is the section of the Constitution which empowers Congress to regulate and tax foreign commerce, and if labor and the wages (in a common sense and not in the context of the internal revenue code) or property that result from that labor inside the sovereign 50 Union states cannot be a commodity or article of commerce, then where does the federal government derive its power to tax earnings from labor?”

The answer is, they have no power to impose an involuntary or mandatory tax on the earnings of private, non-federal businesses inside the sovereign 50 Union states and never have! Read my lips again, and you can trust these lips, unlike those of lying politicians and the IRS who are on the take:
"The federal government has no lawful authority delegated from the U.S. constitution to impose a mandatory/involuntary tax on earnings outside of the federal United States and in the sovereign 50 Union states. Doing so is clearly illegal, and that is why there is no statute anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code making anyone liable to pay Subtitle A income taxes. As we explain in section 5.9, just about the whole constitution would have to be destroyed in order to make direct taxes on labor legal. So that we aren’t misquoted, the term “wages” as used in this quotation is not that defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401, but rather the wages of private, nonfederal employers.”

Therefore, one who works in an ordinary occupation for a private, non-federal employer is not a recipient of any “privilege” granted by government and is therefore not involved in an excise taxable activity, because he is merely exercising his constitutionally guaranteed right to work and earn a living. Under Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution, you have a right to contract, and that right extends to exchanging your labor for money, and the government may not interfere with that right to contract by stealing a portion of the monies exchanged because if they did, they would be violating that right. Courts have repeatedly ruled that no tax may be placed upon the exercise of rights. The reasoning of the founders and our courts was sensible. If the exercise of rights could be taxed, government could destroy them by excessive rates of taxation. Only “corporate profit” from importation of goods from outside the country is subject to a mandatory/enforced tax as per the U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 and natural people don’t earn this kind of “profit”. This kind of activity, by the way, is a privileged activity under 26 U.S.C. §7001 for which all corporations involved must be “licensed”. It must be licensed because it is simultaneously subject to regulation and taxation by the federal government. The taxes paid under this corporate “license” are used to fund the cost of regulation and may not be used for more than that purpose.

When we are thinking about income taxes, we need to think very clearly. The Subtitles A and C income tax is an indirect excise tax. The Internal Revenue Code applies uniformly:

- Throughout the 50 Union states under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution for Subtitle D taxes (see the Definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. Section 4612)
- Only within the federal zone and abroad for Subtitles A and C income taxes (see the Definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9)) under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 of the Constitution.

Consequently, we have to be very clear in our minds about the following three issues
Table 5-51: Critical questions with answers

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Question</th>
<th>Answer</th>
</tr>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>WHAT kind of tax is the income tax?</td>
<td>It is an indirect excise tax.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WHO is the subject of the tax (what is the definition of “person” and “individual” in the meaning of the tax code)?</td>
<td>“Income” as Constitutionally defined ONLY as coming from corporations involved in foreign commerce. See: • Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) • 26 CFR §6671-1(b) in section 5.4.16. Natural persons and “individuals” can “volunteer” to make their income taxable but there is no law that requires them to. A natural person can only earn “gross income” if two criteria are met: 1. They consent to be treated as a “taxpayer” who is therefore “subject to” the Internal Revenue Code AND 2. They identify the earnings that they want to subject to taxation as “effectively connected with a trade or business” as required under 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WHAT is the definition of “income”?</td>
<td>The Supreme Court ruled in Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) that Congress nor the Internal Revenue Code itself CANNOT define “income”, and it neither even tries to. Only the Constitution can define “income”. Income is defined as “corporate profit” from corporations involved in the privilege of conducting foreign commerce. Before you can have “gross income” you must have “income” and it must derive from taxable sources identified in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f). See sections 5.6.5 and 5.7.6.5 for further details on this subject.</td>

It took us almost a year to document and fully discover the implications of the above very simple table. Unless we are very clear in our thinking in answering the above questions, we will cloud the application of the tax code, confuse the IRS, and they will disallow our claim! Please therefore keep this table utmost in your mind in all your dealings with the IRS.

Many people also try to argue with the IRS that their wages are not taxable, without clarifying what they mean by “wages” or whether they fit the description of “person” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1) or “individual”, which isn’t defined in the code but is defined in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c ). It is very common for the IRS to disallow claims for refund from people who try to argue that their wages aren’t taxable, however, and it’s the wrong point to argue with the IRS that will get you in trouble every time! You will get in trouble because your W-2 contains a lie in block 2 saying that you earned “wages” and you never refuted that evidence and clarified that you are not an “employee” and never consented or volunteered to participate in the revenue system. Have you ever wondered why 26 U.S.C. §61 does not list “wages” as a type of taxable income? Instead, they try to confuse the issue with the following statement in that section identified as taxable: “Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, fringe benefits, and similar items;”. There is a very good reason why they didn’t just come out and say “wages are taxable”. This is a result of the following analysis and conclusions:

1. An agreement between a private employer and a private employee is a contract. Neither the states nor the federal government are allowed under the Constitution to interfere with the right to contract, or to directly reduce the compensation received by the private employee by the private employer except by a court order, which is a requirement of the Fifth Amendment. See Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution:

   Article 1, Section 10

   No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.
2. The Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 and the devious redefinition of “gross income”78

When Congress revised the 1939 Internal Revenue Code came out with the 1954 code, they removed the specific mention of wages as being taxable. Why would Congress REMOVE wages from the list of items of gross income if they wanted it to be taxable? Here is the redefinition:

1.1 26 U.S.C. §22(a) entitled “Gross income(a) General definition” states:

   Gross income” includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal services…

1.2 26 U.S.C. Section 61(a)(1), entitled “Gross income defined”, says the following:

   Except as otherwise provided in this subtitle, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:

   (1) Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, fringe benefits, and similar items.

The above changes were based on the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, which was passed after the 1939 code revision. The Act, which has never been repealed, was extremely significant because it amends and redefines the words “gross income” [not “income”] which is the basis for calculating “taxable income,” to include ONLY “compensation for services” (as public servants) earned by officers and employees of a State. As will be later documented, in statutory construction of the word “including” means “only” and cannot be expanded to add other elements not within the exact “meaning of the definition.” The meaning here is “government employees” and can’t be expanded to also include “private sector employees.”

“Wages” and “Compensation for personal services” are ONLY earned by public employees. This is why the Government rightfully argues “Wages are Gross Income.” According to their definition of “wages”, they’re right, but also according to their definition of “employee”, you don’t earn “wages”! However, by such definition, compensation for labor in the private sector is not “wages” and is not “compensation for personal services” unless you fill out a voluntary withholding agreement (W-4). Here is the definition of “personal services”, and note that “trade or business” in that definition means the holding of a public office:

26 CFR Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.

(b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.

Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual’s capacity as an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).

Elected and appointed government employees are considered to be public servants, exercising “official privileges”, while employed. According to a Freedom of Information Act response in our possession, the income tax is applicable to those who chose to make themselves liable by entering into contracts with the U.S. Government. Also, such paychecks come from the District of Columbia, giving them compensation “effectively connected to” a federal area (from “within the United States” under 26 U.S.C. §861) under exclusive federal United States jurisdiction.

3. Labor is property relative to natural persons, as ruled by the U.S. supreme Court in 1883 in the case of Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884). We repeat that ruling here for your benefit:

"Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their..."

---

faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment...It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IS HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOABLE..."

This is easy to see, because if labor had no value or wasn’t property or something they could acquire, then people wouldn’t be willing to pay for it!

4. Receipt of earnings in connection with personal labor by a natural person constitutes an equal exchange of one type of property for another: Labor exchanged for money.

5. Since the income tax is a tax on profit, and since receipt of wages by natural persons who don’t work for the federal government is an equal exchange of property, there can be no “profit” involved, and therefore no tax on wages as income. However, money received by corporations (involved in foreign commerce) in exchange for labor of their employees is taxable after the cost of producing the labor is deducted to arrive at corporate profit. This conclusion is supported by the following cites:

"Income within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment and the Revenue Act, means 'gain'... and in such connection 'Gain' means profit...proceeding from property, severed from capital, however invested or employed, and coming in, received, or drawn by the taxpayer, for his separate use, benefit and disposal..."
[Stapler v. U.S., 21 F.Supp. 737 AT 739]

"There is a clear distinction between 'profit' and 'wages', or a compensation for labor. Compensation for labor (wages) cannot be regarded as profit within the meaning of the law. The word 'profit', as ordinarily used, means the gain made upon any business or investment -- a different thing altogether from the mere compensation for labor."
[Oliver v. Halstead, 86 S.E.2nd. 859]

"After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not authorize or support the tax in question. " (A tax on salary)
[Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245]

"The phraseology of form 1040 is somewhat obscure .... But it matters little what it does mean; the statute and the statute alone determines what is income to be taxed. It taxes only income "derived" from many different sources; one does not "derive income" by rendering services and charging for them... IRS cannot enlarge the scope of the statute."
[Edwards v. Keith, 231 F. 110, 113]

"The 16th Amendment does not authorize laying of an income tax upon one person for the income derived solely from another:
[wages]
[McCutchin v. Commissioner of IRS, 159 F.2d. 472 (1947)]

"Treasury regulations can add nothing to income as defined by Congress."
[Blatt Co. v U.S., 59 S.Ct. 186]

"Tips are gifts and therefore are not taxable."
[Olk v. United States, February 18, 1975, Las Vegas, Nevada]

"Property acquired by gift is excluded from gross income."
[Commissioner of IRS v. Duberstein, 80 S.Ct. 1190]

"Decided cases have made the distinction between wages and income and have refused to equate the two."

"Constitutionally the only thing that can be taxed by Congress is "income." And the tax actually imposed by Congress has been on net income as distinct from gross income. THE TAX IS NOT, NEVER HAS BEEN, AND COULD NOT CONSTITUTIONALLY BE UPON "GROSS RECEIPTS" ...
[Anderson Oldsmobile, Inc. v. Hofferbert, 102 F.Supp. 902]
...whatever may constitute income, therefore, must have the essential feature of gain to the recipient. This was true at the time of Eisner V. Macomber, it was true under section 22(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1938, and it is likewise true under Section 61(a) of the IRS code of 1954. If there is not gain, there is not income.

[Conner v U.S., 303 F.Supp. 1187 Federal District Court, Houston, never overruled]

"Income" has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909, in the Sixteenth Amendment and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed...."

"The conclusion reached in the Pollock Case did not in any degree involve holding that income taxes generically and necessarily came within the class of direct taxes on property, but on the contrary recognized the fact that taxation on income was in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such..."

[Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1]

"An income tax is neither a property tax nor a tax on occupations of common right, but is an EXCISE tax...The legislature may declare as 'privileged' and tax as such for state revenue, those pursuits not matters of common right, but it has no power to declare as a 'privilege' and tax for revenue purposes, occupations that are of common right."

[Sims v. Ahrens, 271 S.W. 720]

"...the definition of 'income' approved by this court is: The gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, provided it be understood to include profits gained through sale or conversion of capital assets."

"Reasonable compensation for labor or services rendered is not profit"

[Laureldale Cemetery Assoc. v. Matthews, 345 Pa. 239]

"Income is realized gain."

[Schuster v. Helvering, 121 F 2nd 643]

6. A tax on natural persons as a percentage of income (not “gross income”, but “income”) from labor earnings amounts to slavery and violates the 13th Amendment, which outlawed slavery. For instance, if your marginal tax rate is 28% and you erroneously treat your wages as income, then you are a slave for the first 28% of the year. There is no other way to look at it. The only thing necessary to make you a complete slave would be for the combined sum of the State and Federal taxes on income to consume 100% of your wages! That will happen some day, we predict, if somewhere along the line people don’t wake up and protest the unjust income tax we have now! Even the press agrees with this view of income taxes, because the newspapers frequently talk about “tax freedom day”, which is the first day of the year in which the country as a whole quits working for the government and starts making money only for themselves. The implication is that everything before that is “slavery.” Every year, tax freedom day gets later, and right now, we spend the first four months of the year as slaves to the government. This happens because the government raises tax rates and will continue to do so because people don’t protest. However, a tax on corporate profits derived from wages is perfectly legal, ethical and moral.

7. It is not within the power of the government to impose a mandatory tax on the exercise of an occupation of common right, or natural right, or on the receipt and/or realization of the earnings received from the exercise of such a right. The Income Tax is an excise tax. To be legally required to pay an excise tax, a “person” must be involved in the exercise of a taxable privilege*. Most citizens in the course of supporting themselves are exercising no privileges upon which an excise tax could be imposed by law.

*Privilege:  “A particular benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class beyond the common advantages of their citizens...”

[Black’s Law Dictionary–Sixth Edition]

*Privilege:  “An advantage possessed by an individual or a class of persons, which is not possessed by others which exists by operation of law or by virtue of a license, franchise, grant or other permission...”

[Ballentine’s Law Dictionary]

“That the right to...accept employment as a laborer for hire is a fundamental right, is inherent in every free citizen, and is indisputable...”
“The conclusion reached in the Pollock case...recognized the fact that taxation on income was, in its nature, an excise...”

EXCISES: “Excises are taxes laid upon...licenses to pursue certain [regulated] occupations and upon corporate privileges: the requirement to pay such taxes involves the exercise of privilege...Conceding the power of Congress to tax the business activities of private corporations, the tax must be measured by some standard...It is, therefore, well settled by the decisions of this court that when the sovereign authority has exercised the right to tax a legitimate subject of taxation as an exercise of a franchise or privilege, it is no objection that the measure of taxation is income...”

“The obligation to pay an excise is based upon the voluntary action of the person taxed in performing the act, enjoying the privilege, or engaging in the occupation which is the subject of the excise, and the element of absolute and unavoidable demand is lacking.”

“The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is an artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual’s right to live and own property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed.”

“Legislature...cannot name something to be a taxable privilege unless it is first a privilege.” [Taxation West Key 43]...“The right to receive income or earnings is a right belonging to every person and realization and receipt of income is therefore not a ‘privilege’, that can be taxed.” [Taxation West Key 933] - Jack Cole Co. v. MacFarland, 337 S.E. 2d 453, Tenn.

We said earlier that the income tax is a tax on corporate profit. How come “employees” of the federal government can have their wages taxed? The reason is because the U.S. government is a federal corporation! That’s right. In 1871, the District of Columbia became a Municipal Corporation, which also made them a federal corporation. “Employees” of that corporation then were in receipt of “profit” from the federal corporation! We have an article on our website that explains this conclusion completely below:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/16Amend/SpecialLaw/16thAmendIRCIrrelevant.htm

Let’s tie together what we have learned about taxability of “wages” with a couple of fictitious examples to make the application of this knowledge crystal clear in your mind:
Let’s say the “person” in question is a federal corporation called “Kelley Girl”, which is a “temp agency” that farms out its employees to third parties. In effect, they sell labor for profit. The third parties they sell the labor to are located outside the United States and these parties reimburse them with “wages” for that labor. Because Kelly Girl flies their employees outside the United States to service their clients, they are involved in foreign commerce that comes under federal jurisdiction. Kelly Girl, in turn, deducts the cost of the labor to pay their employees wages and benefits. The difference between what third parties pay them for the labor and what they pay their employees is corporate profit derived from wages, or “compensation for services” as described in 26 U.S.C. §61(a)(1). That corporate profit is taxable under the Internal Revenue Code.

EXAMPLE 2: You

Now let’s say the “person” in question is a natural person and not a corporation. It is you! You sell your labor to third parties and receive “wages” or “compensation for personal services” in return. That money does fit the description of “gross income” defined in 26 U.S.C. section 61(a)(1) but it does not meet the definition of “income” as corporate profit since you are not a corporation (see Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920)). Because the income tax is an excise or privilege tax and you are not an entity in receipt of taxable federal privileges, and because you do not have “income”, then you cannot have “gross income”. On your tax return, you would fill in “0” for your taxable income on your return and pay NO TAX on that income.

Now isn’t that interesting? Can you believe you have been fooled for so long? Why don’t they teach this stuff in our public schools? Could it be because the government funds them and they don’t want you knowing that you don’t have to pay taxes on wages? We think so! That is why we advocate getting your children out of the public schools as quickly as possible and why we advocate school vouchers. If we try to claim on our tax return that “wages” are not taxable and identify ourselves as a “natural person”, as we did, the IRS came back with the following nonsense on their form letter 105C:

“The claim is based on your view that wages and salary don’t constitute taxable income. The U.S. Tax Court and other federal courts have rejected this argument repeatedly and have held that wages and salary are taxable income reportable at the full amount received.”

Nonsense! Did you notice that:

1. They didn’t cite any cases?
2. They didn’t cite any laws?
3. They violated their own Internal Revenue Manual, which states that they cannot apply Tax Court cases or any cases other than the Supreme Court against more than one taxpayer?

“Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.

Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.

Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers.”

[IRM 4.10.7.2.9.8 (05/14/99)]

So what kind of nonsense is this? This is an abuse of case law and a fraud if we ever saw one, but that is the kind of double-speak you can expect from the deceitful beast and monster we the people have allowed to evolve in the form of the IRS.
What do the state taxing authorities say about the taxability of wages? Here is what the California Franchise Tax Board (FTB) said in their response to a past Affidavit Request for Refund which contained as the last element a claim that wages are not taxable. The letter number was FTB 4619MEO (NEW 8-1999):

Compensation received in whatever form, including wages for services, constitutes taxable income

[Lonsdale v. Commissioner, 661 F.2d. 71 (5th Cir. 1981)]

We then examined this case using VersusLaw (http://www.versuslaw.com). Here is what it said:

As nearly as we can tell from their pro se brief, these arguments are two, or possibly three, in number. The first category of contentions may be summarized as that the United States Constitution forbids taxation of compensation received for personal services. This is so, appellants first argue, because the exchange of services for money is a zero-sum transaction, the value of the wages being exactly that of the labor exchanged for them and hence containing no element of profit. This contention is meritless. The Constitution grants Congress power to tax "incomes, from whatever source derived ...." U.S.Const. amend. XVI. Exercising this power, Congress has defined income as including compensation for services. 26 U.S.C. §61(a)(1). Broadly speaking, that definition covers all "accessions to wealth." See Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 431, 75 S.Ct. 473, 477, 99 L.Ed. 483 (1955). This definition is clearly within the power to tax "incomes" granted by the sixteenth amendment.

Appellants next seem to argue, in reliance on Pollock v. Farmers Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673, 39 L.Ed. 759 (1895), and other authority, that, so understood, the income tax is a direct one that must be apportioned among the several states. U.S.Const. art. I, sec. 2. This requirement was eliminated by the sixteenth amendment.

Finally, appellants argue that the seventh amendment to the Constitution entitles them to a jury trial in their case. That amendment, however, extends only to "suits at common law ...." This is not such a suit. Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (5th Cir. 1978).

Appellants' contentions are stale ones, long settled against them. As such they are frivolous. Bending over backwards, in indulgence of appellants' pro se status, we today forbear the sanctions of Rule 38, Fed.R.App.P. We publish this opinion as notice to future litigants that the continued advancing of these long-defunct arguments invites such sanctions, however.

AFFIRMED.

If you want more information on Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co. cited above, we refer you to sections 5.7.6.4 and 5.7.6.11.7, where we concluded that the case was shortsighted and ignored taxable sources in 26 U.S.C. §861 and §862. Did you notice that they cited the weakest possible case to establish the taxability of wages and did not repeat the foundation of the appellants arguments? The appellant was a pro se litigant (defending himself without the aid of a lawyer) who probably had a weak defense or explanation of the issues. This is a very common approach for the government: If the case is appealed, the appellate court will pick the person with the weakest legal defense and poorest explanation of the issues, and make it into the equivalent of law without even examining all the issues in depth. Then they will cite that case in the future ad infinitum without ever in the future fully examining the foundational issues. In effect, one hasty person who can’t afford legal counsel destroys a good argument for the rest of the tax freedom community because of corrupt judges like judges Gee, Garza, and Tate who heard this case. Not only that, but look at all the people who this poor pro se was fighting against:

Do you detect that this was a battle of wits with an unarmed man? Other interesting conclusions in the above Lonsdale cite are:

"This requirement [of apportionment of direct taxes] was eliminated by the Sixteenth Amendment."

This is an obvious fraud because the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) that:

"...by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed."

This finding has never been overruled, and yet the Lonsdale case above completely ignored it. What kind of Alice in Wonderland fairytale illogic is this? If the Sixteenth Amendment conferred “no new powers of taxation” then how could it eliminate the apportionment requirement as cited above? That is why we say that more crime occurs in federal courtrooms than anywhere else in the country! If you want more proof of this kind of judicial corruption, read section 6.6, where we talk about the “judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax”. It will really open your eyes.

5.6.8 \textbf{Employment Withholding Taxes are Gifts to the U.S. Government!}

That’s right! If you examine a copy of IRS Publication 6209 available on our website, which shows you how to decode your Individual Master File (IMF), you will find out that employment withholding taxes that you pay after you fill out a W-4 with your employer are assigned to Tax Class 5, which is classified as “Estate and Gift Taxes”. Income taxes, on the other hand, are listed as tax class 2. Even more interesting, is that IRS Publication 6209, also called the “ADP/IDRS Manual” on their website, used to indicate what the various Tax Classes were, but when people found out that employment taxes were gifts and got outraged and litigated to get their money back, the IRS conveniently:

1. Removed the identification of Tax Classes from IRS Publication 6209, thus making it difficult to impossible for the average individual to figure out or prove in court that employment taxes are gifts.
2. Classified Publication 6209 on every page at the bottom as “For Official Use Only”, which is a code word for “Don’t Let This Get In The Hands of Those Taxpayer Bastards or They Will Sue us in Court!”.
3. Eventually removed the document entirely from their website and classified the entire document as “For Official Use Only” so that it cannot be disclosed to the public.

After all the difficulty raised by the embarrassing information exposed in this publication, the IRS subsequently restored the list of tax classes to the beginning of Chapter 4 of the 6209 Document 6209 on about June of 2002. The above types of shenanigans by the IRS are only the tip of the iceberg and provide compelling proof that getting the IRS to tell the WHOLE truth is like trying to get someone into a dentists office so you can pull their teeth out! Chapter 4 of this manual is available on our website below and the tax class table is listed on pages 4-1 and 4-2:

\url{http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/6209Manual/toc.htm}

The IRS, by the way, used to offer this document on their website but after we started referring to it in this book, they mysteriously removed it on March 17, 2003 to cover evidence of their wrongdoing. Below is a summary of that table, and keep in mind that the Tax Class is the third digit of any Document Locator Number (DLN) that you can request from your Individual Master File (IMF) using the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request:

Doesn’t this kind of sly treachery and deception make you even a tiny bit mad? If I.R.C. Subtitle A really were mandatory, don’t you think that the W-2 would be listed as tax class 2? Instead, the employment taxes you pay are gifts to the government and then, in their guilt, they try to hide this fact from you by obfuscating Publication 6209 and classifying it as “For Official Use Only” so it doesn’t get into your hands! It is precisely this kind of treachery and deception that is the reason we like to say:

“The U.S. Government is so protective of the truth about income taxes that they have to surround it with a bodyguard of lies.”

[S. Jackson]

Incidentally, if you want to get a copy of IRS Publication 6209, it doesn’t appear on their Document 7130 which lists all of their forms and publications. You may also not be able to obtain it under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) because they simply do not want you to have it. Consequently, we have posted it on our website below:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/6209Manual/toc.htm

5.6.9 The Deficiency Notices the IRS Sends To Individuals are Actually Intended for Businesses!

The IRS Document 6209 describes how to decode both your IRS Individual Master File (IMF) as well as the notices sent out by the IRS. You can obtain an electronic version of this manual from our website at the address below:

Chapter 9, section .01, on page 9-1 of the 1998 version of the IRS Document 6209 is entitled “Notices and Notice Codes” indicates the following:

Computer generated notices and letters of inquiry are mailed to taxpayers in connection with tax returns for BMF, IMF, and IRAF. Computer paragraph (CP) numbers (3-digit number for BMF AND IRAF, 2-digit number for IMF) are located in the upper left corner of the notices and letters.

By way of explanation, BMF means “Business Master File” and “IMF” means Individual Master File. Businesses should therefore never get any CP notice with a two digit code and Individuals should never get any CP notice with a three digit code, and if this requirement is violated, then this is a strong indication of one of the two likely problems, in descending order of likelihood:

1. Your IMF has been deliberately falsified by the dishonest IRS agent or agents who have been handling your returns in order to create a fraudulent tax liability by making you into a business rather than an individual. The type of business they make you into is usually an excise taxable corporation.
2. There has been an accidental data entry error.
When an individual has either not filed a return or has not paid taxes or penalties that the IRS says they owe, they will typically receive a CP deficiency notice from the IRS with a three digit code. For instance, a series of four letters, CP-501 through CP-504 are sent out prior to initiating collection activity against an alleged taxpayer. Notice that the number part of the form letter is a three digit code, which the above citation from the IRS Document 6209 says is for businesses and not individuals. Individuals should never receive such notices because we all know that the income tax is voluntary and cannot apply to individuals since there is no statute creating a liability in all of Subtitle A of the I.R.C. The only reason it applies to businesses is because the businesses are associated with taxes found in Title 27, which is for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. The IRS and the BATF share the same computer system and at one time were part of the same agency! BATF taxes are indeed mandatory and can be enforced with penalties and seizures and collection activity. Even worse, the IRS itself, in the Treasury Organization Chart at the below web address from the Department of the Treasury, is clearly shown as NOT being an enforcement agency, since it does not fall under the Under Secretary for Enforcement!

There are two types of commissions IRS employees can get: Enforcement and Non-enforcement (also called Administrative). The type of commission they get is clearly shown on their Pocket Commission. See the following address for more information about pocket commissions, which takes you to the Internal Revenue Manual Section [1.16.4] 3.7 (also called section 1.16.4.3.7):

Only IRS employees who have Enforcement Pocket Commissions can institute enforcement activities, including assessment, collection, liens, levies, and summons. But guess what: none of the IRS employees who institute enforcement actions on individuals have enforcement commissions! They just pretend like they do and hope you won’t notice or ask about their Pocket Commissions—it’s a big bluff! That explains statements like the following:

"In a recent conversation with an official at the Internal Revenue Service, I was amazed when he told me that 'If the taxpayers of this country ever discover that the IRS operates on 90% bluff the entire system will collapse' ".

[Henry Bellmon, Senator (1969)]

We have a sample FOIA request in section 2.11.12 of the following, which allows you to find out what kind of commission they have if you want to find out.

What typically happens is that when a person sends in their first 1040 tax return assessing themselves with a liability they really don’t have and can’t have under law, the IRS agent processing the return has to fabricate a liability. Otherwise, he would have to send your return and your money back and politely tell you that you aren’t liable for tax. What agent or person from the government would be honest enough to do that?

The only way the corrupt IRS agent can fabricate such a liability is to lie to their AIMS computer by telling it that the person indicated on the tax return is a business rather than an individual. Beyond that point and at any time in the future, that person is erroneously presumed by the IRS computers to be a business who is liable to pay tax and file returns. No kidding! The only way you can get the IRS off your back after you erroneously assess yourself with a liability is to point out to them that you are not a business and that you:

- Want any Business Master File (BMF) records they maintain on you expunged and amended to reflect your correct status as an individual. You will need to provide them with a notarized Affidavit in order to do this.
- Want them to provide proof that you are a business if they continue to insist that you are. You can refute their evidence by providing them with a copy of your birth certificate.

Doing the above should hopefully stop the threatening collection and/or deficiency notices for taxes you were never liable for.

5.6.10 Public Officer Kickback Position
As near as we can tell, this position was first articulated by Frank Kowalik in his marvelous book entitled IRS Humbug: IRS Weapons of Enslavement, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991, by Universalistic Publishers. This is an excellent book that is copiously and meticulously researched and which we highly recommend. It is the second most important book in our tax library, as a matter of fact, being second only to the book In Their Own Words listed in section 8.2 of this book. You don’t hear much about his book in the tax freedom community but we believe it deserves a lot more acclaim than it gets. You can order this book from:

http://amazon.com

Frank builds his research on the content of section 5.4.1 earlier, in which we proved that taxes on labor amount to slavery. We could find no errors in the evidence or logic used in Frank’s book and we agree 100% with everything that he says in his book. The book fills in a lot of holes in the research of other authors along with a rare glimpse at a real-life legal battle that he went through to show how the government maliciously prosecuted him for following the Internal Revenue Code and thereby violated his due process rights, his dignity, and committed treason against the Constitution.

What Frank Kowalik proves in his IRS Humbug book using his exhaustive legal research is the following, which is a terse summary of his almost 360 page book:

1. Subtitle A income taxes, insofar as natural persons, is not a “tax” at all, but what he calls a “kickback” program for “public officers” of the United States government only. That is to say it is part of an implied employment agreement they voluntarily consent to when they accept political office. In that sense, it is a voluntary excise tax based on the acceptance of political privileges associated with public office. The tax does not apply to any type of federal employee other than “public officers of the U.S. government. We covered this earlier in sections 3.12.1.4 and 5.2.18.

2. Those people who have entered into this voluntary employment agreement are described in the Internal Revenue Code as being “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”. In this context, “United States” means the federal government. “trade or business” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the performance of the functions of a public office”. The only people who can be involved in a “trade or business” are those holding public office, and all of these people are mandated by the Constitution to serve in the District of Columbia as congressmen, judges, the President, and his appointed help. He traces the history of 26 U.S.C. §931 and other sections to prove this.

3. Everyone who does not ALREADY have a labor contract with the federal government is therefore not involved in a “trade or business” under Subtitle A, and therefore is not in receipt of federal excise-taxable “privileges”. As such, all of their assets are a “foreign estate” under the Internal Revenue Code as defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31)(A):

   Sec. 7701. - Definitions
   (a) (31) Foreign estate or trust
   (A) Foreign estate
   The term “foreign estate” means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitile A.

4. The very first kickback program began in 1862 as an outgrowth of desperation of Congress to fund the Civil War. He traces the enactments of Congress over more than a hundred years to show that the basic “kickback” approach started by Abraham Lincoln in 1862 has been perfected and expanded over the years to become extremely effective and very deceptive. The main method for expanding this illegal kickback program to apply to other than the “public officers” it was originally intended for has been the obfuscation of Title 26 of the U.S. Code and the willful, criminal, and treasonous participation of the federal judiciary in this scheme to expand federal jurisdiction beyond the clear limits of the Constitution.

5. Nothing we pay to the federal government is truly a “tax” as defined by the Supreme Court because taxes can only support the government and not the constituents. There are very few real “taxes” under the Internal Revenue Code, because most of the money is used for wealth transfer rather than to support only the government. In the context of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, the word “tax” really means “kickback”, and only applies to federal corporations, trusts, and domestic partnerships, where “domestic” means within the federal government or the “federal zone”. In fact, all of the entities listed under 26 U.S.C. §7701 fit the description of those connected to the federal government. Under the rule of statutory construction known as “ejusdem generis”, all of the entities listed below are of the same class or kind, and are entities in receipt of the federal privileges:

5.1. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a): “citizens” and “residents” of the United States

5.2. 26 U.S.C. §7701(b): domestic partnerships

5.3. 26 U.S.C. §7701(c): domestic corporations

5.4. 26 U.S.C. §7701(b): gross income that can be called “domestic income”

5.5. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30): United States Person. These are the only entities that need identifying number.

6. The Social Security Number identifies a constructive trust. Your labor builds the assets in the trust. The federal government is the trustee. This is consistent with our document below:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee

7. The public officer “kickback” scheme works as follows:

7.1. The federal government pays its “public officers” an additional amount above and beyond the pay they are supposed to get. In fact, if you look at the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 and various other revenue acts enacted over the years upon which Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue code were derived, the only natural persons who earn either “wages” or “gross income” as legally defined are these federal employees. See 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a). These federal employees are, in actuality, the only natural persons who can reasonably be classified as “individuals” within Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code.

7.2. The amount above the pay that these federal public officers are supposed to get is classified as “profit” or “income” of the United States government. We covered this earlier in sections 3.12.1.4, 3.12.1.22, and 5.2.18.

7.3. This “profit” or “income” is the income of a federal corporation, the United States (see 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A)), and the public officers receiving this “profit” or “income” are the “fiduciaries” under 26 U.S.C. §6903 who have been temporarily entrusted with property that actually belongs to the United States government. These custodians of U.S. property are classified as a “transferee” as defined in earlier versions of the code in 26 U.S.C. §6901. The current version of the code no longer contains the definition of “transferee” in section 6901 and has replaced that with “fiduciary” in 26 U.S.C. §6903 since Frank first wrote his book. However, if you submit an affidavit to tax court claiming NOT to be a “transferee” or “fiduciary” of U.S. government property under 26 U.S.C. §6902(b), then you cannot lawfully litigate your case in that court for Subtitle A income taxes.

7.4. The “taxpayer” in this scheme is not the public official or appointee who is receiving the monies, but instead is the paymaster or withholding agent who is paying the public officer, and indeed, 26 U.S.C. §1461 is the only section anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code that makes anyone liable for subtitle A income taxes, and that person is the person who is withholding from the pay of these public officers.

7.5. The jurisdiction the United States government within this kickback scheme is “in rem” jurisdiction, which means jurisdiction over the property but not the person. The property is the means by which they obtain jurisdiction over the person. This jurisdiction arises under Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution. We covered this earlier in section 1.5.

7.6. If taxes are not paid on the “profit” or “income” by the public officer, then the U.S. government has a legal right to administratively levy the wages of the public officer to recover their monies because of their “in rem” jurisdiction over these monies, which always were the property of the U.S. government, both before and after their receipt by the public officer. This act is perfectly constitutional and does not violate the Fifth Amendment rights of the public officer because he consented to such withholding and to being a fiduciary custodian of these excess monies as an implied part of his employment agreement with the United States government. However, the administrative levy, effected with a Notice of Levy, may only constitutionally be implemented within a federal agency under the Federal Payment Levy Program (FPLP). It may not be instituted against private employers.

7.7. The definition of “employee” found in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c ), 26 U.S.C. §6331(a), and 26 CFR §31.3401(c )-1 confirm that the only “employees” who are subject to Subtitles A or C income taxes are indeed elected or appointed officers of the United States government. In accordance with 4 U.S.C. §72, these officers can only reside in the District of Columbia, which is why the term “United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) means the District of Columbia only in the context of Subtitle A income taxes. We covered this earlier in section 5.2.12. It is also covered in section 2.5.4.21 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

7.8. The IRS’ administrative enforcement, including liens, levies, and assessments, become illegal if they are forced upon private citizens who are not public officers of the United States government, and especially if those private citizens are domiciled outside of the federal zone. In fact, if Subtitle A income taxes are enforced against private citizens, then they become a form of debt slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, 18 U.S.C. §1581, and 42 U.S.C. §1994.

7.9. The federal judiciary has become an accessory to this illegal kickback scheme, and he traces the history of at least three different Supreme Court rulings (Brushaber v. Union Pacific RR, 240 U.S. 1 (1916); Miles v. Graham, 268
U.S. 501 (1924); O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939)) to show how this kickback scheme has been expanded with the blessings and willing participation of no less than the U.S. Supreme Court, mainly through the error of omission rather than commission, to be misapplied by the IRS against private citizens who don’t work as public officials for the federal government.

8. Title 26 of the U.S. Code is not positive law because it was never enacted by Congress. Instead it is only prima facie evidence of law. The only real and positive law is found in the Statutes at Large, which are the direct enactments of Congress. The U.S. Codes are simply “codified” versions of the Statutes at Large, modified to make them more general and universal.

9. The main mechanism for illegally expanding the Public Officer Kickback program has been the obfuscation of the Internal Revenue Code over the years by the Congress in order to confuse and mislead both the public and the IRS who administers the tax code written by Congress. The deliberate and systematic abuse of the word “includes” has been pivotal in effecting this criminal fraud. The obfuscation is easily illustrated and revealed by comparing the Statutes at Large with 26 U.S.C. to show the legislative intent of the various sections of the U.S.C. The most obvious example of this would be to search for all the definitions of “gross income” found in the Statutes at Large and compare them with 26 U.S.C. §61 and 26 U.S.C. §861.

10. Since the first “kickback” scheme started in 1862, there has been a systematic attempt by Congress to expand its jurisdiction by obfuscating the U.S. Codes to make them hide the truth found in the Statutes at Large. He cites several examples where the Office of Legislative Counsel has abused its authority in writing and rewriting 26 U.S.C 26 to hide the truth about the limited applicability of the Subtitle A income tax.

11. The biggest improvement in this “kickback” scheme came in the Revenue Act of 1918, in which Congress first defined the term “gross income”. He shows several sections in the Statutes at Large that specifically define “gross income” to only mean the “wages” of public officers of the United States government. He shows that there has never been any statute in the Statutes at Large where “gross income” was ever defined to also encompass monies earned by private persons who don’t work for the federal government as public officers. This is a hot issue worth a very serious and diligent look by the freedom community, folks. In the coming months, we will research this and post the evidence on our website for all to see proving this point. In the meantime, a good place to start is the following link on our website: http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/HistoricalActs/HistFedIncTaxActs.htm

12. The objectivity of the Federal Judiciary has been compromised because judges are both paid by income taxes and are beholden to IRS extortion because they too participate in this “kickback” scheme. This has created a conflict of interest and a criminal class of judges in violation of 28 U.S.C. §455 and 28 U.S.C. §144. He says the stakes get higher every day for these corrupt judges because by exposing the fraud, they would bring terrible retribution upon their brethren in their own judiciary and in other branches of government. This makes them very reluctant to expose the fraud and leads them to prejudice the litigation of most tax freedom advocates. This also explains why so many cases these days go unpublished: they are part of a massive cover-up of judicial wrongdoing and violation of due process. This also explains why tape recording or video recording of tax trials is prohibited by law: It would increase the risk that these corrupt judges could be prosecuted for their fraud and violation of due process under the Constitution.

13. Those private Americans who choose to volunteer in this corrupt federal kickback program do not have a “tangible right” to force others to participate. The public is not injured or harmed in any way by the failure of certain individuals to “volunteer” to participate in this tax “scheme”. This matter was settled by the Supreme Court in the case of McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350 (1987).

14. The purpose of Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code is to facilitate an action in “replevin” against federal “employees” who are in temporary custody of federal property as “fiduciaries” and “transferees”.

“Replevin. An action whereby the owner or person entitled to repossession of goods or chattels may recover those goods or chattels from one who has wrongfully distrained or taken or who wrongfully detains such goods or chattels. Jim’s Furniture Mart, Inc. v. Harris, 42 Ill.App.3d 488, 1 Ill.Dec. 175, 176, 356 N.E.2d. 175, 176. Also refers to a provisional remedy that is an incident of a replevin action which allows the plaintiff at any time before judgment to take the disputed property from the defendant and hold the property pendent lite. Other names for replevin include Claim and Delivery, Detinue, Revendication, and Sequestration (q.v.).” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1299]

15. All funds conveyed to the federal government using tax withholding or a 1040 form are considered “gifts” and come under the provisions of 31 U.S.C. §321(d). All gifts are absolute, irrevocable transfers of property. As such, it doesn’t make sense to try to recover them from the government. The more appropriate approach is to recover them in a state court personally from a revenue agent.

16. The IRS Form 1040 tax return is legally considered a “contract of bailment” and is a deed for a “gift” to the federal government. It is also identified as such by Williston’s on Contracts, Vol. 9, Section 1040. The first edition of this book was published in 1933, right around the time that income taxes were first introduced, and the section number is strategic. When you fill out a form 1040, you as the bailee are conveying property back to the federal government that always was theirs. The implied contract under which the bailment is made is the employment agreement governing federal “employees”.

17. Under 26 U.S.C. §4000 (1939 tax code), revenue agents are considered “entrepreneurs” and not employees.

Title 26, Internal Revenue Code (1939 Code)
Sec. 4000. Appointment

The Commissioner may, whenever in his judgment the necessities of the service so require, employ competent agents, who shall be known and designated as internal revenue agents, and, except as provided for in this title, no general or special agent or inspector of the Treasury Department in connection with internal revenue, by whatever designation he may be known, shall be appointed, commissioned, or employed.

You can read this statute yourself at:

IRS agents are nothing but “informers” and “consultants” who have no enforcement powers. The IRS Commissioner can hire anyone he wants as an IRS agent but they can’t be considered employees. Therefore, they are independently and personally liable as “consultants” for everything they do, and that liability cannot be transferred to the U.S. government.

18. Involuntary servitude or peonage, which is debt slavery, is prohibited under the Thirteenth Amendment. It is prohibited to be done by:

18.1. Private individuals, as revealed by the Supreme Court in the Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905).

19. The Internal Revenue Code doesn’t apply at all to most Americans. Therefore, when we are tangling with the IRS, we should never rely on anything from that code because it doesn’t apply to us. Only “taxpayers” are supposed to use the IRC and your average American is a “nontaxpayer”.

20. Stay away from the declaring you are a “nonresident alien” because the government is good at using it for slandering people using in front of juries using presumption. Combs in N.C. used the “nonresident alien” approach and was slammed with it.

20.1. Citizenship has nothing to do with tax liability.
20.2. The important thing is whether you have a labor contract with the federal government. If you do, then you have income “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” which is includable in “gross income”.
20.3. Frank Kowalik said he studied the “nonresident alien” position for six months trying to understand it, but he couldn’t. He says it is too confusing and prejudices juries. Instead, he mistakenly thinks that anyone who works for the federal government falls into the category of “citizens or residents” of the United States. He wasn’t aware of the definition of “nonresident alien” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), which identifies a “nonresident alien” as someone who is neither a “citizen” nor a “resident” of the United States. He also mistakenly thinks that “nonresident aliens” are also “U.S. persons” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).
20.4. Don’t debate the Nonresident Alien Position with Frank, because he can’t be rational about it and won’t discuss the basis of his beliefs using the law. He says “That position won’t work in court with juries and that’s all I need to know about it to stay away from it.” Then he turns around and contradicts himself by saying that everyone should write “Foreign estate as described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31)” on the back of every check they endorse and cash. This section identifies him as a nonresident alien, and yet he disagrees with those who use this position. This aspect of his position is clearly irrational.

21. Frank also says to stay away from the 861 Position because it is too confusing to present to juries. It should not be used as the core of a person’s defense. He says “nontaxpayers” shouldn’t be citing any part of the I.R.C. in their defense, and we agree.

22. As we investigated his claims, we were appalled that there was no online source for historical Statutes at Large provided by the government for dates after 1873. Only the last few five or so years are available online, and for others you have to go to a Federal Depository library or pay for an expensive online legal research service (such as Lexis-Nexis or Westlaw.com) costing $150/month or more in order to examine older Statutes at Large. We believe that this omission is deliberate because Congress doesn’t want their fraud and conspiracy exposed by you reading the REAL code and thereby understanding their very limited jurisdiction. Frank implies but does not explicitly say that the term “includes” is indeed used as a term of limitation and not enlargement. We will cover this issue later in section 5.10.1. See also the following for the evidence:

http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/amlaw/lawhome.html

23. Frank Kowalik uses his own history of litigation to powerfully illustrate how Subtitle A income “taxes” are indeed “voluntary” for the average American and how the federal judiciary is colluding with the IRS in illegally enforcing what should be a voluntary federal donation program.

The big question arises under the Public Officer Kickback Position of how, precisely, the federal government has made us all at least “appear” as federal “employees” or “public officers”. Understanding how this is done is key to understanding how we become parties obligated to participate in the kickback scheme. The secret is as follows, which was related to us by a dedicated researcher who has been studying this specific subject for over 8 years as follows:

1. The IRS Form W-4 is what identifies you as a federal “employee” in the upper left corner. The term “employee” is defined in 26 CFR §31.3401(c) -1 as only an elected or appointed officer of the United States government. Therefore, signing this form under penalty of perjury and submitting it provides admissible evidence that we are a federal “employee”.

2. Most federal benefit programs administered within the states and outside of federal jurisdiction can be lawfully and constitutionally administered if offered ONLY to federal “employees”. Such benefit programs may NOT be provided to private citizens, because there is no Constitutional authority for doing so. For instance, 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(13) says that all those who are “entitled” to receive federal benefits are considered “federal personnel”.

3. Social Security is described as an “entitlement” and fits the criteria above to make all those who participate into federal “employees” or “federal personnel”. The problem is that by law, Congress is only authorized to offer it to those who maintain a domicile in the federal zone, which excludes persons domiciled in states of the Union. The Constitution does not authorize them to offer it to people in the states, so it cannot be an entitlement for anyone domiciled in the states. If you file the 1040NR and maintain your status as a nonresident alien and a “national” but not a “citizen”, then you therefore aren’t legally entitled to receive such a benefit by law. You therefore can’t lawfully be described as “federal personnel” nor have your rights adversely affected without the need for implementing regulations.

4. The First Annual Report of the Social Security Board of 1936 describes the activity upon which the Individual Income Tax is based. Page 20 says:

"Title VII of the Social Security Act imposes an income tax on the employees covered by the old-age benefits sections. . . .".

Therefore, those who participate in Social Security also become the proper subject for the federal income tax under Subtitle A.

5. Social Security is a welfare agreement, Steward Machine Co. v. Davis, 301 U.S. 548 (1937). Welfare is a grantor trust agreement. Trust agreements stay valid as long as they are agreed upon by voice (or written act) or action (use). Grantor trusts can be collapsed via revesting title by the grantor, Blackstone's Commentaries, Volume 1, Chapter 18. The Social Security "totalization agreement" makes you "Federal personnel" pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §552(a)(13), retirement benefits eligibility.

6. When you entered into a grantor trust agreement with the United States (Attorney General), 50 USC Appendix 12, paragraph 4, you exchanged those unalienable Rights for privileges just like Esau exchanged his birth right with Jacob for a bowl of pottage. The U.S. Attorney General is the trustee, 28 U.S.C. §§581 and 582, Assistant United States trustees (a) The Attorney General may appoint one or more assistant United States trustees in any region when the public interest so requires. (b) Each assistant United States trustee is subject to removal by the Attorney General. [As last amended Oct. 27, 1986, Pub.L. 99-554, Title I, § 111(d), 100 Stat. 3091.]
The weak point of the above techniques is that Congress may not enact a positive law within the states of the Union because they have no legislative authority there.

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”

Consequently, the feds need our help to circumvent this limitation imposed by the Constitution. The way they did this was:

1. To write all the benefit program statutes so that they only apply to federal “employees” and to “U.S. persons”, which are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) as citizens or residents born in or residing within exclusive federal jurisdiction in the federal zone.
2. Then they obfuscated the definition of “United States” on their forms and government publications to deceive us into admitting that we live within exclusive federal jurisdiction in the federal zone and thereby admit that we are statutory “U.S. persons”.
3. To add in the regulations at 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a) that the W-4 is an agreement or contract. This makes you party to the contract and therefore subject to federal jurisdiction no matter where you are. Both you and the federal government have the right to contract and no state or court can interfere with your right to contract or the enforcement of the rights resulting from the contract. This allowed them to exceed the boundaries of the territorial jurisdiction and bring you within the jurisdiction of federal courts under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the contract. It also allowed them to regulate your life without the need to pass implementing regulations, because 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2) says they don’t need implementing regulations in the case of either federal contracts or federal employees.

This is an obvious fraud in most cases that anyone with a minimal legal education would recognize that the federal government willfully over looks in order to obtain jurisdiction over you and transform you into a “taxpayer”. Once we know how this fraud works, all we have to do is correct our paperwork to remove their jurisdiction, and we document how to do this in the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008.

We don’t like to speculate and we avoid it like the plague throughout this book. However, on this occasion, we would like to delve into some intriguing theorizing that may be useful to illustrate how to address an argument you are likely to hear some misguided employee of the IRS or DOJ make some day. The argument goes something like this:

“If the government is paying you money, even if they are paying you your own money back that you overpaid in taxes, then don’t you effectively become an ‘employee’ of that government? If you are receiving federal public assistance such as Social Security, Welfare, AFDC, or the like, then can’t you also be considered an “employee” of the federal government for the same reason? What they expect you to do as an ‘employee’ is pay your taxes and subject yourself to laws and jurisdiction that you wouldn’t otherwise voluntarily subject yourself to, right? Because of this, don’t you think that the ‘Public Officer Kickback Position’ described in this section may apply to all such Americans who are in the ‘privileged’ position of receiving federal payments?”

We aren’t making the above up, because we actually heard someone ask this question, so it’s a realistic question! Here is a summary of our response, which you can use as additional ammunition against the government if they try to argue that you are an “employee” as defined in the I.R.C.:

1. Your position is frivolous.
2. The only “employees” that Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A income taxes apply to are public officers of the United States government engaged in a “trade or business” as identified in 26 U.S.C. §6331(a), 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), 26 U.S.C. §3401(c), and 26 CFR §31.3401(c)-1.
3. When the federal government pays you money, in most cases they are paying money back to you that came from you and not a right. Not only that, but we also showed earlier in section 4.3.14 that the U.S. Supreme Court in Helvering v. Davis, 301 U.S. 619 (1937) and Flemming v. Nestor, 363 U.S. 603 (1960) declared that Social Security (and by implication all other government social programs!) are NOT insurance and are NOT a contract. If the receipt of benefits is not contractual or a right of the recipient, then why should the receipt of taxes by the government from your wages in order to pay for such benefits be considered either a right by the government or contractual?

5. Even if none of the other arguments above applied, the U.S. government still wouldn’t have lawful authority to collect taxes in the states of the Union because:

5.1. The federal government has no police powers inside states of the union.

5.2. The federal government has no territorial jurisdiction under the Internal Revenue Code or the Title 18 criminal code.

5.3. Remember that the Constitution establishes a federal government of limited and enumerated powers and under the Tenth Amendment, all powers not delegated by the Constitution are reserved to the states and the people. The Constitution does not explicitly or even indirectly authorize the federal government to treat you as “public officer” of the U.S. government or the money you make as “income” as constitutionally defined. Therefore, they simply can’t do that which they have no delegated authority to do, even if you are willing to volunteer as their accomplice and help them by paying a tax you don’t owe.

5.4. The federal government has no authority to exercise its power to contract in order to subvert or escape the limitations imposed by the federal Constitution. Therefore, it cannot form private contracts with people in the states to provide social insurance, because this authority is not conferred by the Constitution and it would be usurping authority and sovereignty from the people and the states and thereby violating the Ninth and Tenth Amendments:

“State officials [for private citizens, for that matter] thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in the Constitution.”

Finally, if you would like to look at some of the historical milestones that show the development of the “Federal Employee Kickback” scheme, refer to the following sections in Chapter 6:

• Section 6.5.21: 1862: First Tax on “officers” of the U.S. Government
• Section 6.9.11: 1915: Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, 240 U.S. 1
• Section 6.5.16: 1918: “Gross income” first defined in the Revenue Act of 1918
• Section 6.9.10: 1924: Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501
• Section 6.5.15: 1932: Revenue Act of 1932 imposes first excise tax on federal judges and public officers
• Section 6.9.9: 1938: O’Malley v. Woodrough, 207 U.S. 277
• Section 6.5.9: 1986: Cover-Up of 1986- Obfuscation of IRC Section 931

5.6.11 You don’t have any taxable sources of income

As we pointed out at the beginning of this chapter in sections 5.1.6 through 5.1.8, the federal income tax under Subtitle A is and always has been an indirect excise tax upon privileged activities, according to both the Congress and the U.S. Supreme Court. There has never been a claim otherwise by these two source that we are aware of. The federal district courts appear confused about this issue and have contradicted the Supreme Court (and even themselves) several times, in violation of stare decisis, but their rulings are irrelevant to those not within federal jurisdiction anyway, which includes most Americans. Now if I.R.C. Subtitle A describes an indirect excise upon privileges, then it is a tax on privileged or licensed “activities”, and not on “items of income” listed within 26 U.S.C. §§861 or 862. But the government has tried to confuse the issue and divert attention away from this aspect of the income tax by the following means:

1. Most of the sections within the current IRC deliberately don’t even mention “taxable activities” because if people understood this, they wouldn’t owe anything. Older versions of the code very clearly described the taxable activities but the current version is totally obfuscated to disguise this fact. Our public dis-servants have had over 80 years to perfect their willful fraud, and it has become harder and harder as they did their dirty work to discover the true nature of the federal income tax as an indirect excise tax.

2. The IRS has completely removed mention of the “taxable activities” and “subjects of taxation” from all of its publications.

3. The only remaining mention of excise “taxable activities” we could find is within an obfuscated section of the Treasury regulations found at 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1). The IRS and DOJ have recently attacked and persecuted all those who relied on this list of “taxable activities” in order to determine whether their income is “gross income”, in order to divert attention away from the nature of Subtitle A as an indirect excise tax.
As we read through the code to try to discover what is “taxable” and what is includible in “gross income”, we must narrow our search down to include only activities that are privileged and therefore excise taxable. Within I.R.C. Subtitle A, there are only two types of privileged, and therefore excise taxable, activities. These are:

1. “foreign commerce” within states of the Union, which is privileged and licensed under 26 U.S.C. §7001. Jurisdiction over foreign commerce within the states is bestowed by Constitution Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3. This taxable activity is identified in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1).
2. “trade or business”. Defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) to mean “the functions of a public office” in a government entity under exclusive federal jurisdiction. The “license” is the oath that all office holders must take before they may serve. This is also called “effectively connected income” or simply “ECI”. See the next section for details on this.

It should also be pointed out here that jurisdiction of the federal government within the states, under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 of the Constitution is ONLY granted in the case of excise taxes relating to foreign commerce mentioned under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3. The federal government has no jurisdiction over any other subject matter of taxation derived from the Constitution, because the Constitution only grants the federal government jurisdiction over affairs EXTERNAL to the states of the Union, including imports and interstate commerce. See section 5.2.3 earlier. If it ain’t in the Constitution, then the feds can’t do it in the states. Period. The Ninth and Tenth Amendments make that clear. All excise taxes are voluntary, because if you don’t want to pay the tax, then you don’t “volunteer” to engage in the privileged or licensed commercial activity that is the subject of the tax. If the IRS attempts to collect a tax from you, then the questions you must resolve with them are:

1. What activity is subject to tax? Show them the table in section 5.1.6 and ask them which type of tax they are trying to collect and ask them what is the “subject of” the tax. Neither 26 U.S.C. §61 nor 26 U.S.C. §861 describe or enumerate only “taxable activities” that are proper constitutional “subjects of tax” as shown in the table. Therefore, one must go to 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1) to see the activities. If they don’t want to use that section as the list of activities subject to tax, then ask them where else you can find the taxable activities, because I.R.C. sections 61 and 861 don’t list of privileged taxable activities under the Constitution.
2. What admissible evidence do you have that I am engaged in such an activity? Reports of a payment documented on a form 1099 does not reveal any connection to a “taxable activity”. On what basis are you “presuming” that I am engaged in a “taxable activity”? Being a “citizen” isn’t a privileged activity, so what privilege is being exercised so that I may know how to avoid this tax? Without the ability to avoid the tax and the activity that is taxed, you are instituting slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment and enforcing a Direct tax within states of the Union that is a violation of Constitution Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 and Article 1, Section 9. Clause 4.
3. What license or privilege did I apply for and receive from the government in order to justify being subject to this alleged “tax”?

The answer to the above questions in the case of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, which the IRS would give you if they could be honest without hurting the municipal donation program for the District of Columbia that they administer, is the following:

1. It is a “privilege” to live within exclusive/plenary federal jurisdiction. EVERYTHING inside the federal zone is a privilege because the area is not covered by the Bill of Rights and you have absolutely NO rights. The only sovereign inside the federal zone is Congress and the Executive branch, not the people who live there. There is no Constitution within the federal zone between its inhabitants and the national government, because the people don’t have sovereignty. It is a dictatorship and oligarchy, not a Republic. You are entitled to nothing and you are living on the king’s feudal plantation. Pay up and worship your new king, slave, or we’ll plunder ALL your property!
2. All people who file an IRS Form W-4 are “assumed” to live within the District of Columbia and be federal “employees” who are public officers. It says that in the upper left corner of the W-4 and the definition of “employee” in 26 CFR §1.3401(c)-1 confirms who these “employees” are. You signed this form under penalty of perjury so we have court-admissible evidence that you are a privileged public official and a federal “employee”. If you either filed an IRS Form 1040 or claimed itemized deductions on your return, then you also effectively admitted under penalty of perjury that your income is connected with a privileged public office in the U.S. government, which is what a “trade or business” is. Under these circumstances:
   2.1. You are in receipt of the “privilege” of deductions on your return and a lower, graduated rate of tax.
   2.2. We don’t need implementing regulations to enforce against you, because you consented to be treated as a federal “employee” and 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) says no implementing regulations are required.
2.3. The federal government has jurisdiction over you no matter where you are, because you consented to be treated as one of its “employees”. Governments have always had full jurisdiction over their own employees, even outside of their borders and territory.

3. If you have a federal ID number such as an SSN or TIN, then you are registered as being in receipt of a federal excise taxable privilege. That privilege is participation in the welfare program called Social Security. It is a privilege to not have to take responsibility for your own financial security when you get older, and you will pay dearly for that privilege. We are going to rape and pillage 50% of your income for that privilege. Even though the Social Security tax is only 7.5%, we do the collection and enforcement for the Social Security program and we are going to abuse the information we have about you as a way to plunder even more “loot” from your estate using our dastardly automated paper terrorism program called IDRS. Since the acceptance of an SSN creates a presumption that you are a statutory “U.S. person” and you never rebutted that presumption, then we’re going to treat you like a federal resident (alien) whoring on the federal plantation who has no rights. Bend over and get used to being screwed, and don’t expect us to give you any help with leaving the federal plantation or taking off those chains. We are going to make you and your property captive and make you a slave of your own apathy and ignorance.

“The hand of the diligent will rule, but the lazy man will be put to forced labor [slavery]!.”

[Prov. 12:24, Bible, NKJV]

4. Since you put an SSN on a tax return, you consented to use that number as a “substitute” TIN. There is no law requiring “nonresident aliens” who do not live or work in the District of Columbia to use an SSN in place of a TIN. 26 U.S.C. §6109(d) says that the SSN “shall” be used, but this statute doesn’t apply to anything but public officers of the United States government working in the District of Columbia. When you as a “nonresident alien” and “nontaxpayer” not subject to federal jurisdiction provided that number, you consented to do that which no law requires you to do. You colluded with use to exceed the bounds of the Constitution, and so we are partners in crime. Therefore, you consented to be treated as an alien, since the IRS can only issue TINs to aliens under 26 CFR §301.6109-1(d)(3), no matter what your real status is. You are on the same footing as people from other countries domiciled in the federal zone as far as tax purposes go. Such a person is referred to as a “resident” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). Since you didn’t attach a form 2555 to the 1040 form that you mistakenly filed, then you agreed to be treated as an alien. “U.S. citizens” living abroad are also aliens in the context of treaties with foreign countries. Either way then, whether you file a 1040 as an alien or a 1040 plus a 2555 as a statutory “U.S. citizen” abroad, you are still treated by us as an “alien” with NO RIGHTS.

Now lets examine the IRS’ own publications to see if we can confirm the above conclusions. IRS Publication 519 entitled Tax Guide for Aliens describes the tax status of “aliens” and “nonresident aliens”. The year 2000 booklet available at:

has a very useful table describing taxable sources on page 11 entitled “Summary of Source Rules for Income of Nonresident Aliens”. This table applies not only to “aliens” and “nonresident aliens”, but also to “U.S. citizens” as well. The reason is because “U.S. citizens” living abroad in a foreign country come under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code by virtue of the fact that they are treated as “aliens” under the provisions of an income tax treaty with a foreign country. Ordinarily, we don’t trust any IRS publications because the IRS says in I.R.M §4.10.7.2.8 that you can’t rely on them. However, we believe based on our own thorough research of the I.R.C. that the table is accurate. We therefore repeat it below for your benefit and to aid the discussion. Please be astutely aware of the definitions of important “words of art” used in the table below as you read such as the following:

1. “United States” is defined earlier in section 5.2.12 to mean only the District of Columbia under the Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code.
2. “foreign” is defined earlier in section 5.2.14 to mean outside the “United States” (federal zone). It is not defined in the I.R.C. because the government doesn’t want you to know what it means.
3. “wages” are defined earlier in section 5.6.7 as earnings from labor of a federal “employee” who has consented or volunteered to become a “taxpayer” under the provisions of 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3, by submitting a form W-4 authorizing withholding. Without submitting this form or submitting it under duress makes him a “nontaxpayer” who does not earn “wages”. Since the term “employee” is defined in 26 CFR §31.3401(c )-1 as a person holding public office, then “wages” are connected to the taxable activity called a “trade or business”.

4. “personal services” is defined earlier in section 3.12.1.22 as work in connection with “the functions of a public office” in the United States government, which is called a “trade or business” throughout the I.R.C. This is confirmed by examining 26 CFR §1.162-7(a), 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i), and 26 CFR §1.469-9(b)(4). See also: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/PersonalServices.htm.

We have italicized and underlined the above “words of art” in the table below to help you in reading the table. We have also added a new column to the IRS’ table identifying exactly the excise “taxable activity” that must occur for the item of income to be taxable.

Exceptions include:

a) Dividends paid by a U.S. corporation are foreign source if the corporation elects the Puerto Rico economic activity credit or possessions tax credit.

b) Part of a dividend paid by a foreign corporation is U.S. source if at least 25% of the corporation’s gross income is effected connected with a U.S. trade or business for the 3 tax years before the year in which the dividends are declared.

Next, we will show you a table that summarizes the above rules and discussion geographically, to show taxable source rules and requirements based on the location where your source of income came from and your citizenship status. Some of the information appearing here comes from section 5.11, where we talk about income taxes within territories and possessions of the United States. We have broken the table down into three groups of rows relating to a particular citizenship status. The four columns on the right relate to the “situs” for imposing the tax, which is the combination of the excise taxable activity occurring within a specific region enumerated in the code. The top three rows of the table describe certain characteristics of each of the five “situses” identified across the top. This table is intended to help you compute your taxable income by adding up all the income from specific excise taxable activities in each of the five distinct types of jurisdictions within our society.

NOTE(S):

1. Territories and possessions typically have their own local income taxes that replace, not supplement, the federal income tax.
2. This table assumes that the “taxpayer” is not involved in a “trade or business” anywhere except in the District of Columbia.
3. The IRS is the tax collection agency exclusively for the District of Columbia. Treasury Order 150-02 reveals that the only remaining Internal Revenue District is in the District of Columbia.
4. Taxes on “foreign commerce” are taxes on imports but not exports coming under Constitution Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3. The U.S. Constitution prohibits taxes on exports from states of the Union under Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5. These types of taxes are also called “excises, duties, and imposts”. Most of these taxes are listed under Subtitle D of the Internal Revenue Code and are licensed under 26 U.S.C. §7001. An example is the tax on petroleum imported into the 50 states imposed under 26 U.S.C. §4611. Note that the term “United States”, in the context of imported petroleum taxes is specifically defined in 26 U.S.C. §4612(a)(4)(A) as “The term ‘United States’ means the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, any possession of the United States, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.”
The most notable conclusion one can draw from the above table is that if you don’t live in the District of Columbia and do not elect to connect your earnings to a “trade or business” within the “United States” (D.C.), then you can’t earn “gross income”. Without “gross income”, you do not meet the minimum requirement for filing a return found in 26 U.S.C. §6012. Therefore, you are in effect:

1. A “nontaxpayer” and not a “taxpayer”. This means every reference in the I.R.C. or the Internal Revenue Manual which imposes an obligation upon a “taxpayer” doesn’t apply to you.
2. Not subject to any of the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.
3. Are not subject to withholding on any payments you receive.
4. If any money was withheld from your pay by either a business or a financial institution, then you are due for a refund of all withholding.
5. Cannot file an IRS Form 1040, because EVERYTHING that goes on that form is treated as “effectively connected with a trade or business”. That form is for “aliens”, and not “nonresident aliens”, as we showed in section 5.5.2 earlier.
6. Cannot lawfully have any CTR’s, or Currency Transaction Reports, prepared against you by any financial institution. See 31 CFR §103.30(d)(2), which excludes these reports for persons not engaged in a “trade or business”.
9. “foreign” with respect to the Internal Revenue Code because you live outside the “United States” and do not have any earnings from within the “United States” that are connected with a “trade or business”.

The term “foreign estate” means an estate the income of which, from sources without the [federal] United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

10. Not liable for most state income taxes, because all of them usually have as a prerequisite that you must have reportable income on a federal return before you can be subject to state income tax.
11. An “individual” who does not earn “gross income” because earned outside the District of Columbia, which is called “sources without the United States” in the I.R.C.:

IRS Publication 519, Year 2000 edition also has an enlightening section on p. 14 entitled “Services Performed for Foreign Employer” which confirms the above conclusions. Here is what it says. Once again, we have boldfaced and underlined the “words of art” to draw special attention to them:

Services Performed for Foreign Employer

If you were paid by a foreign employer, your U.S. source income may be exempt from U.S. tax, but only if you meet one of the situations discussed next.
Employees of foreign persons, organizations, or offices. If three conditions exist, income for personal services performed in the United States as a nonresident alien is not considered to be from U.S. sources and is tax exempt. If you do not meet all three conditions, your income from personal services performed in the United States is U.S. source income and is taxed according to the rules in chapter 4.

The three conditions are:

1) You perform personal services as an employee of or under a contract with a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in a trade or business in the United States, or you work for an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or possession of the United States by a U.S., corporation, a U.S. partnership, or a U.S. citizen or resident.

2) You perform these services while you are a nonresident alien temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods of not more than a total of 90 days during the tax year, and

3) Your pay for these services is not more than $3,000.

If your pay for these services is more than $3,000, the entire amount is income from a trade or business within the United States. To find if your pay is more than $3,000, do not include any amounts you get from your employer for advances or reimbursements of business travel expenses, if you were required to and did account to your employer for those expenses. If the advances or reimbursements are more than your expenses, include the excess in your pay for these services.

A day means a calendar day during any part of which you are physically present in the United States.

Now, we will take the above deceptive excerpt from Publication 519 and translate it from legalese into common English using the I.R.C. definitions into something that really reveals the whole truth to make it’s meaning crystal clear and consistent with what we have learned throughout the rest of this chapter. We have taken the “words of art” and put their definitions in brackets after the words. As you read the below, replace the item in brackets for the underlined word it precedes. This will blow your mind, folks!:

Services Performed for Foreign [outside the District of Columbia] Employer

If you were paid by a foreign employer [an employer outside the District of Columbia], your U.S. [District of Columbia] source income may be exempt from U.S. [District of Columbia] tax, but only if you meet one of the situations discussed next.

Employees of foreign persons [persons born outside the federal zone], organizations, or offices [in foreign countries or states of the Union]. If three conditions exist, income [federal payments] for personal services [labor in connection with a public office] performed in the United States [District of Columbia] as a nonresident alien is not considered to be from U.S. [District of Columbia] sources and is tax [donation] exempt. If you do not meet all three conditions, your income from personal services performed in the United States [District of Columbia] is U.S. [District of Columbia] source income [federal payments] and is taxed [subject to donation] according to the rules in chapter 4.

The three conditions are:

1) You perform personal services as an employee of or under a contract with a nonresident alien individual, foreign [outside the District of Columbia] partnership, or foreign [outside the District of Columbia] corporation, not engaged in a trade or business [public office] in the United States [District of Columbia]; or you work for an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country [including a state of the Union] or possession of the United States by a U.S. [District of Columbia registered] corporation [and excluding state registered corporations], a U.S. [District of Columbia] partnership, or a U.S. citizen [person born in the District of Columbia or a territory] or resident [alien];

2) You perform these services while you are a nonresident alien temporarily present in the United States [District of Columbia] for a period or periods of not more than a total of 90 days during the tax [donation] year, and

3) Your pay for these services is not more than $3,000.

If your pay for these services is more than $3,000, the entire amount is income from a trade or business [public office] within the United States [District of Columbia]. To find if your pay is more than $3,000, do not include... any amounts you get from your employer for advances or reimbursements of business travel expenses, if you were required to and did account to your employer for those expenses. If the advances or reimbursements are more than your expenses, include the excess in your pay for these services.

A day means a calendar day during any part of which you are physically present in the United States [District of Columbia].

Mind blowing, how deceptive the IRS publications are, isn’t it? No wonder the IRS says you can’t depend on them in IRM
Section 4.10.7.2.8!

This approach is pretty simple, huh? The simplicity of this approach, by the way, far exceeds that of the 861 Position advocates described later in section 5.6.21, which is why we don’t recommend using the 861 Position during litigation.
Those who argue the 861 Position live within and cite the I.R.C., which is irrelevant to the average American because they are “nontaxpayers” not subject to the I.R.C. to begin with. Why? Because most Americans are “nationals” and not “citizens” under federal law and “nonresident aliens” with no income “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” and all of whose sources of income are from outside the federal “United States”:

Income Subject to Tax

Income from sources outside the United States that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States is not taxable if you receive it while you are a nonresident alien. The income is not taxable even if you earned it while you were a resident alien or if you became a resident alien or a U.S. citizen after receiving it and before the end of the year.

[IRS Publication 519, Year 2000, p. 26]

All that citing the I.R.C. does is help the government to demonstrate that you are subject to it and a party to it, and we sincerely believe this is a VERY BIG MISTAKE! We showed earlier in sections 5.4.1 through 5.4.6.4 that the I.R.C. is effectively a private contract and not a positive law, so citing it just proves you are party to the contract and consent to be bound by it. It is precisely this kind of BIG oversight by proponents of the 861 Position such as Larken Rose that will eventually be their downfall. This also explains why, for instance, the ONLY proponents of tax honesty who are still out there to offer you materials and solutions are those who know what a “nontaxpayer” is and who only help “nontaxpayers”.
This is no accident, folks. All the other tax honesty advocates who don’t understand the “nontaxpayer” and “nonresident alien” issue have had injunctions placed against them and were shut down long ago as easy targets by the federal mafia. If you want your freedom back, you’re going to have to get educated and stick with simple, solid, arguments that are supportable with lots of evidence that juries can understand and believe.

Instead of citing the code and using the complicated 861 Position, it’s much better to stick to the simple issues of jurisdiction and cite only the Supreme Court and the code as your authority and the whole house of cards will fall down simply and easily. Both you and a jury can easily understand this approach without ever looking at the Treasury regulations or talking about “positive law” or other complicated subjects. It’s simple and easy to defend and it depends on only a handful of very simple definitions that are not subject to misinterpretation by an informed jury. The only caveat with using this approach is that the IRS will try to use the word “includes” as a way to stretch the meaning of the code to fit their position, and we show how to fight this unscrupulous and dishonest tactic and deception later in chapter 8.

5.6.12 The “trade or business” scam

"The taxpayer-- that's someone who works for the federal government but doesn't have to take the civil service examination."
[President Ronald W. Reagan]

"In the matter of taxation, every privilege is an injustice."
[Voltaire]

"The more you want [privileges], the more the world can hurt you."
[Confucius]

As we explained earlier in section 5.3.2 and the preceding section, one must be engaged in a “trade or business”, which is defined as “the functions of a public office”, within the statutory but not constitutional “United States”, which is defined as federal territory, in order to earn “gross income”. This is because:
1. The income tax under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is an indirect excise tax, as the Supreme Court pointed out repeatedly. See section 5.1.6 earlier for details. The “subject of” all indirect excise taxes are voluntary “taxable activities” that are privileged and in many cases licensed. The tax may only be instituted by the agency or government entity that issues the license or bestows the privilege to the person who volunteers to be the “licensee”, and the tax is only enforceable within the legislative jurisdiction of the taxing entity. The “privileged activity” in this case of the federal income tax under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is that of holding “public office” in the U.S. Government. A “public office” is therefore the only excise taxable activity that a biological person can involve themselves in that will make them the subject of the municipal donation program for the District of Columbia called the Internal Revenue Code.

2. According to 4 U.S.C. §72, all "public offices" may be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, except as "expressly provided by law". That is why the “United States” is defined in Subtitle A of the I.R.C. as federal territory in Subtitle F, Sec. 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). There is also no provision of law which authorizes "public offices" outside the District of Columbia other than 48 U.S.C. §1612, and therefore, the I.R.C. Subtitle A Income tax upon "public offices" can apply nowhere outside the District of Columbia other than the Virgin Islands. This is also consistent with the definition of "U.S. sources" found in 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), which identifies all earnings originating from the "United States" as "effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business".

3. “Income” has the meaning it was given in the Constitution, which is “gain and profit” in connection with an excise taxable activity. Congress is forbidden to define the word “income” because the Constitution defines it. This was pointed out by several rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court, including Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920); So. Pacific v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330 (1918); Merchant’s Loan & Trust Co. v. Smietanka, 255 U.S. 509 (1921). Where there is no “taxable activity”, there can be no “taxable income”. We covered this earlier in section 5.6.5 if you want more detail.

4. Because all “taxpayers” under Subtitle A of the I.R.C. are “public officers” who work for a federal corporation called the “United States” (see 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A)), then they are acting as an “officer or employee of a federal corporation” and they:

   4.1. Are the proper subject of the penalty statutes, as defined under 26 U.S.C. §6671(b). This is true even though the Constitution prohibits “Bills of Attainder” in Article 1, Section 10, because the penalty isn’t on the natural person, but upon the “office” or “agency” he volunteered to maintain in the process of declaring that he has “taxable income”.

   4.2. May have the code enforced against you without implementing regulations as required by 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) and 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2)

   4.3. Are the proper subject for the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, which identify officers of corporations as the only "persons" within 26 U.S.C. §7343.

5. Earnings not connected with a “trade or business” under 26 U.S.C. §871(b) and 26 U.S.C. §864 and not originating from the statutory “United States” (federal territory), which is what “United States” is defined as:

   5.1. Are identified as part of a “foreign estate” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31). A foreign estate is outside the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and not includible in gross income either, based on the definition of “foreign estate”, BECAUSE it is not connected with a “trade or business”.

   5.2. Are not includable as “gross income” if paid by a nonresident alien. See 26 U.S.C. §864(b)(1)(A). Remember: We showed earlier in sections 5.2.14 and 5.6.13 that states of the union are “foreign countries” with respect to the Internal Revenue Code and all of their inhabitants are "nonresident aliens".

This means one must be engaged in a “public office” in the District of Columbia in order to earn “gross income” as a human being. Statutory and not ordinary “gross income” that meets this criteria is described in the code simply as “income effectively connected with a trade or business from sources within the United States”. This is confirmed by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), which says that an estate that is in no way connected with a “trade or business” and whose sources of income are outside the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory) may not have its earnings identified as statutory “gross income” and is a “foreign estate”, which means it is not subject in any way to the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code:

A Foreign estate or trust

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)  Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship  http://famguardian.org/
The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States [under 26 U.S.C. §871(a)] which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States [under 26 U.S.C. §871(b) and 26 U.S.C. §864], is not includable in gross income under subtitle A.

These critical facts are very carefully concealed by the IRS in their publications to hide the true nature of the income tax and instead to make it appear as an “unapportioned direct tax” upon persons domiciled in states of the Union. If the American people understood on a large scale:

1. That the I.R.C. Subtitle A income tax was an “excise tax” upon privileged "taxable activities" only.
2. Exactly what activity was being taxed.
3. That the IRS has no jurisdiction within states of the Union against anyone who does not sign a private agreement with the government by submitting a W-4 or a 1040 tax return.

...then they would exit the tax system en masse by simply avoiding the activity. All excise taxes are "avoidable" by avoiding the taxed activity, and therefore they are completely "voluntary". Therefore, the IRS and our public dis-servants have a vested interest in hiding and concealing the true nature of the income tax as an “excise tax” in order to maintain revenues from the income tax. They sold the truth and your liberty to Satan for 20 pieces of silver. Some things never change, do they?

“For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil, for which some have strayed from the faith in their greediness, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.”
[1 Tim. 6:10, Bible, NKJV]

In this section, we will demonstrate all the evidence we can find that supports these conclusions, and also show you how the IRS, with the implicit approval and collusion of Congress and the Treasury Dept, has tried to do the following within their deceptive publications:

1. Taken great pains to hide and obfuscate the fact that Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is an indirect excise tax upon licensed, privileged activities. They have done this by burying the sordid truth deep in regulations that they hope people will never read and which have been carefully obfuscated over the years to make them virtually unintelligible for the average American.
2. Confuse the meaning of the term “trade or business” in their publications so that everyone thinks they meet this criteria.
3. Create a false and unsupportable presumption that all people and all earnings within states of the Union are connected with a “trade or business in the United States”.
4. Create the illusion and deception that IRC Subtitle A describes a direct, unapportioned tax upon natural persons that cannot be avoided or shifted. Once IRS can establish the false presumption Subtitle A as a direct unapportioned tax, then they:
   4.1. Can label those who choose not to volunteer as “frivolous” or worst yet, penalize them for filing an accurate return reflecting no “gross income” because not connected to a “trade or business”.
   4.2. Have a way to exploit the false presumption and ignorance of juries to claim that those who avoid paying or filing are lawbreakers, even though they broke no laws and exercised their constitutionally protected choice not to volunteer to connect their earnings to a “trade or business”.
   4.3. Have an excuse to ignore those who complain that private employers are forcing them to sign and submit W-4 withholding agreements under duress, or be denied employment. Instead, they have a presumptuous and mistaken excuse to say that it isn’t voluntary and that everyone must submit the form, when in fact, the regulations at 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1 clearly show otherwise.

If you read the IRS' Civil and Criminal Actions website at the address below, you will see that ALL of their propaganda in fact focuses on the above goals, as we predicted:

http://www.irs.gov/compliance/enforcement/article/0,,id=119332,00.html

The IRS warned us it was going to try to deceive us by stating in its own Internal Revenue Manual that you can't rely upon any of its own publications. The federal courts warned us that the IRS was going to do this by telling us that we can't rely upon the phone or oral advice of anyone in the IRS, even if they signed their recommendation under penalty of perjury! Why didn’t we listen to any of these warnings? See the surprising truth for yourself.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t LIABLE to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

We must, however, remember what the Supreme Court said about false presumptions:

"The power to create [false] presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions."

5.6.12.1 Introduction

...We must be engaged in a “trade or business”, which is defined as “the functions of a public office”, within the statutory but not constitutional “United States”, which is defined as federal territory, in order to earn “gross income”. The only exception to this is nonresident aliens with income from the statutory “United States” (federal territory) under 26 U.S.C. §871(a). This is because:

1. The income tax under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is an indirect excise tax, as the Supreme Court pointed out repeatedly. See section 5.1.6 for details. The “subject of” all indirect excise taxes are voluntary “taxable activities” that are privileged and in many cases licensed. The tax may only be instituted by the agency or government entity that issues the license or bestows the privilege to the person who volunteers to be the “licensee”, and the tax is only enforceable within the legislative jurisdiction of the taxing entity. The “privileged activity” in this case of the federal income tax under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is that of holding “public office” in the U.S. Government. A “public office” is therefore the only excise taxable activity that a biological person can involve themselves in that will make them subject to the municipal donation program for the District of Columbia called the Internal Revenue Code.

2. According to 4 U.S.C. §72, all “public offices” may be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, except as “expressly provided by law”. That is why the “United States” is defined in Subtitle A of the I.R.C. as federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). There is also no provision of law which authorizes “public offices” outside the District of Columbia other than 48 U.S.C. §1612, and therefore, the I.R.C. Subtitle A Income tax upon “public offices” can apply nowhere outside the District of Columbia other than the Virgin Islands. This is also consistent with the definition of “U.S. sources” found in 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), which identifies all earnings originating from the “United States” as “effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business”.

3. “Income” has the meaning it was given in the Constitution, which is “gain and profit” in connection with an excise taxable activity. Congress is forbidden to define the word “income” because the Constitution defines it. This was pointed out by several rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court, including Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920); So. Pacific v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330 (1918); Merchant’s Loan & Trust Co. v. Smietanka, 255 U.S. 509 (1921). Where there is no “taxable activity”, there can be no “taxable income”. This is covered in section 5.6.5 if you want more detail.

4. Because all “taxpayers” under Subtitle A of the I.R.C. are “public officers” who work for a federal corporation called the “United States” (see 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A)), then they are acting as an “officer or employee of a federal corporation” and they:

4.1. Are the proper subject of the penalty statutes, as defined under 26 U.S.C. §6671(b). This is true even though the Constitution prohibits “Bills of Attainder” in Article 1, Section 10, because the penalty isn’t on the natural person, but upon the “office” or “agency” he volunteered to maintain in the process of declaring that he has “taxable income”.

4.2. May have the code enforced against you without implementing regulations as required by 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) and 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2)

4.3. Are the proper subject for the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, which identify officers of corporations as the only "persons" within 26 U.S.C. §7343.

5. Earnings not connected with a “trade or business”:

5.1. Are identified as part of a “foreign estate” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31). A foreign estate is outside the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and not includable in gross income either, based on the definition of “foreign estate”, BECAUSE it is not connected with a “trade or business”.

5.2. Are not includable as “gross income” if paid by a nonresident alien. See 26 U.S.C. §864(b)(1)(A). Remember: Sections 5.2.12.1.1 and 5.6.13 that states of the union are "foreign countries" with respect to the Internal Revenue Code and all of their inhabitants are "nonresident aliens".
This means one must be engaged in a “public office” in the District of Columbia in order to earn “gross income” as a human being. Statutory and not ordinary “gross income” that meets this criteria is described in the code simply as “income effectively connected with a trade or business from sources within the United States”. This is confirmed by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), which says that an estate that is in no way connected with a “trade or business” and whose sources of income are outside the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory) may not have its earnings identified as statutory “gross income” and is a “foreign estate”, which means it is not subject in any way to the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701 - Definitions

(a)(31) Foreign estate or trust

(A) Foreign estate

The term “foreign estate” means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

Why did Congress HAVE to place the tax upon an activity called a “public office” in the United States government?

Because:

1. The government can only pass civil laws to regulate its own public officers, territory, franchises, and property. The ability to regulate the PRIVATE conduct of the public at large is “repugnant to the constitution”, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court. See the following for proof:

   Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. The Thirteenth Amendment outlaws involuntary servitude EVERYWHERE, including on federal territory. It does not and cannot outlaw VOLUNTARY servitude. The only way they can tax your labor without instituting slavery is for you to volunteer for public office franchise in the government. See the following for proof:

   How the Government Defrauds You Out of Legitimate Deductions for the Market Value of Your Labor, Form #05.026
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. Congress has no legislative jurisdiction within states of the Union, which are “foreign states” that are sovereign, but they have jurisdiction over anyone that contracts with them wherever they are. Hence, Congress instituted a franchise that functions as a contract that they can enforce anywhere the contractors are found. See the following for proof:

   Debitum et contractus non sunt nullius loci.
   Debit and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

   Locus contractus regit actum.
   The place of the contract [franchise agreement, in this case] governs the act.
   [Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856;]

   “It is generally conceded that a franchise is the subject of a contract between the grantor and the grantee, and that it does in fact constitute a contract when the requisite element of a consideration is present.”
   Conversely, a franchise granted without consideration is not a contract binding upon the state, franchisee, or pseudo-franchisee.80  “

These critical facts are very carefully concealed by the IRS in their publications to hide the true nature of the income tax and instead to make it appear as an “unapportioned direct tax” upon persons domiciled in states of the Union. If the American people understood on a large scale:

1. That the I.R.C. Subtitle A income tax was an “excise tax” upon privileged “taxable activities” only.
2. Exactly what activity was being taxed.
3. That the IRS has no jurisdiction within states of the Union against anyone who does not sign a private agreement with the government by submitting a W-4 or a 1040 tax return.
4. That one must be domiciled on federal territory as a statutory “citizen” or “resident” before they can lawfully engage in the activity.
5. That the law specifically forbids the activity to be exercised outside the District of Columbia per 4 U.S.C. §72 or within a state of the Union.
6. That it is a CRIME for most Americans to engage in the activity pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §912.

...then they would exit the tax system en masse by simply avoiding the activity. All excise taxes are “avoidable” by avoiding the taxed activity, and therefore they are completely “voluntary”. Therefore, the IRS and our public dis-servants have a vested interest in hiding and concealing the true nature of the income tax as an “excise tax” in order to maintain revenues unlawfully collected from the income tax. They sold the truth and your liberty to Satan for 20 pieces of silver. Some things never change, do they?

The IRS warned us it was going to try to deceive us by stating in its own Internal Revenue Manual that you can't rely upon any of its own publications. The federal courts warned us that the IRS was going to do this by telling us that we can't rely upon the phone or oral advice of anyone in the IRS, even if they signed their recommendation under penalty of perjury!

Why didn't we listen to any of these warnings? See the surprising truth for yourself:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

We must, however, remember what the Supreme Court said about false presumptions:

"The power to create [false] presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions,"

5.6.12.2 Proof that IRC Subtitle A is an Excise tax on activities in connection with a “trade or business”

We’ll start off with a definition of “trade or business”:

26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)

"The term 'trade or business' includes [is limited to] the performance of the functions of a public office."

We know that the IRS likes to point to the word “includes” in the above definition and state that it is an “expansive” definition that does not exclude the common meaning of the term. We must remember, however, that there is an important principle of statutory construction which states that anything not mentioned in a law, statute, code, or regulation is “excluded by implication”, which means that all things not connected to a “public office” are excluded from the definition of “trade or business” by implication:

"When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term's ordinary meaning," Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) (“It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term”); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 (“As a rule, ‘a definition which declares what a term “means” . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated’”); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute reads "as a whole," post at 998 (530 U.S. 943 (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition: That definition does not include the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary."

[Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]

"Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other provisions or effects are excluded.”

Therefore, the definition of the term “trade or business”, says what it means and means what it says. The Supreme Court has said many times that words used in a law or statute are to be given their ordinary and plain meaning and are to be restricted to the clear language found in the code itself. If you would like an exhaustive analysis of the meaning of the word “includes” within the Internal Revenue Code, please refer to our free pamphlet available on the internet at:

Meaning of the Words “includes” and “including”
The only time in the I.R.C. where the term “trade or business” can mean anything other than what it is defined above to mean is in places where there a regional definition that overrides the general or default definition found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) above. Below is the only example of that within the I.R.C., which is intended to be used only in the context of “self employment”:

26 U.S.C. §1402 Definitions

(c) Trade or business

The term "trade or business", when used with reference to self-employment income or net earnings from self-employment, shall have the same meaning as when used in section 162 (relating to trade or business expenses), except that such term shall not include:

(1) the performance of the functions of a public office, other than the functions of a public office of a State or a political subdivision thereof with respect to fees received in any period in which the functions are performed in a position compensated solely on a fee basis and in which such functions are not covered under an agreement entered into by such State and the Commissioner of Social Security pursuant to section 218 of the Social Security Act;

(2) the performance of service by an individual as an employee, other than:

(A) service described in section 3121(b)(14)(B) performed by an individual who has attained the age of 18,

(B) service described in section 3121(b)(16),

(C) service described in section 3121(b)(11), (12), or (15) performed in the United States (as defined in section 3121(e)(2)) by a citizen of the United States, except service which constitutes "employment" under section 3121(y),

(D) service described in paragraph (4) of this subsection,

(E) service performed by an individual as an employee of a State or a political subdivision thereof in a position compensated solely on a fee basis with respect to fees received in any period in which such service is not covered under an agreement entered into by such State and the Commissioner of Social Security pursuant to section 218 of the Social Security Act,

(F) service described in section 3121(b) (20), and

(G) service described in section 3121(b)(8)(B);

(3) the performance of service by an individual as an employee or employee representative as defined in section 3231;

(4) the performance of service by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry or by a member of a religious order in the exercise of duties required by such order;

(5) the performance of service by an individual in the exercise of his profession as a Christian Science practitioner; or

(6) the performance of service by an individual during the period for which an exemption under subsection (g) is effective with respect to him. The provisions of paragraph (4) or (5) shall not apply to service (other than service performed by a member of a religious order who has taken a vow of poverty as a member of such order) performed by an individual unless an exemption under subsection (e) is effective with respect to him.

So we look up the definition in 26 U.S.C. §162 and here is what it says:
There shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including –

(1) a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered;

So in other words, in the context of “self employment” ONLY, the term “trade or business” excludes public offices in the District of Columbia and only includes those of federal territories and possessions, which are called “States” within the I.R.C. This is because the default definition in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) includes ALL public offices everywhere within federal jurisdiction, whereas those public offices in the District of Columbia are specifically not mentioned by the above definition. When the authors of U.S. Code in the Office of Law Revision Counsel of the House of Representatives wants to confuse and mislead the American people, they will write the code in such a way as to use a double-negative, whereby they define what the new definition of “trade or business” excludes, and then don’t include public offices in the District of Columbia but include all other types of political offices under federal jurisdiction. Therefore, for self employment context ONLY, “trade or business” has a different meaning than the default definition in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) and has been overridden to exclude public offices in the District of Columbia but include all other types of public offices otherwise within federal jurisdiction.

Government franchises and the excise taxes that implement them such as the “trade or business” franchise are commonly called by any of the following names to disguise the nature of the transaction:

1. “public right”.
2. “publici juris”.
3. “privilege”.
4. “excise taxable privilege”.
5. “public office”.
6. “Congressionally created right”.

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the income tax was an excise tax indirectly when they held the following:

“The distinction between public rights and private rights has not been definitively explained in our precedents. Nor is it necessary to do so in the present cases, for it suffices to observe that a matter of public rights must at a minimum arise “between the government and others.” Ex parte Bakelite Corp., supra, at 45. In contrast, “the liability of one individual to another under the law as defined,” Crowell v. Benson, supra, at 51, 52 S.Ct., at 292, is a matter of private rights. Our precedents clearly establish that only controversies in the former category may be removed from Art. III courts and delegated to legislative courts or administrative agencies for their determination. See Atlas Roofing Co. v. Occupational Safety and Health Review Comm’n, 430 U.S. 442, 450, n. 7, 97 S.Ct. 1261, 1266, n. 7, 51 L.Ed.2d. 464 (1977); Crowell v. Benson, supra, 285 U.S., at 56-57, 52 S.Ct., at 292. See also Katz, Federal Legislative Courts, 43 Harv.L.Rev. 894, 917-918 (1930). FN24 Private-rights disputes, on the other hand, lie at the core of the historically recognized judicial power.”

Although Crowell and Raddatz do not explicitly distinguish between rights created by Congress and other rights, such a distinction underlies in part Crowell’s and Raddatz’ recognition of a critical difference between rights created by federal statute and rights recognized by the Constitution. Moreover, such a distinction seems to us to be necessary in light of the delicate accommodations required by the principle of separation of powers reflected in Art. III. The constitutional system of checks and balances is designed to guard against “encroachment or aggrandizement” by Congress at the expense of the other branches of government. Buckley

81 Crowell v. Benson, 285 U.S. 22, 52 S.Ct. 285, 76 L.Ed. 598 (1932), attempted to catalog some of the matters that fall within the public-rights doctrine:

“Familiar illustrations of administrative agencies created for the determination of such matters are found in connection with the exercise of the congressional power as to interstate and foreign commerce, taxation, immigration, the public lands, public health, the facilities of the post office, pensions and payments to veterans.” Id., at 51, 52 S.Ct., at 292 (footnote omitted).

82 Congress cannot “withdraw from [Art. III] judicial cognizance any matter which, from its nature, is the subject of a suit at the common law, or in equity, or admiralty.” Murray’s Lessee v. Hoboken Land & Improvement Co., 18 How. 272, 284 (1856) (emphasis added). It is thus clear that the presence of the United States as a proper party to the proceeding is a necessary but not sufficient means of distinguishing “private rights” from “public rights.” And it is also clear that even with respect to matters that arguably fall within the scope of the “public rights” doctrine, the presumption is in favor of Art. III courts. See Glidden Co. v. Zdanok, 370 U.S., at 548-549, and n. 21, 85 S.Ct., at 1471-1472, and n. 21 (opinion of Harlan, J.). See also Currie, The Federal Courts and the American Law Institute, Part 1, 36 U.Chi.L.Rev. 1, 13-14, n. 67 (1968). Moreover, when Congress assigns these matters to administrative agencies, or to legislative courts, it has generally provided, and we have suggested that it may be required to provide, for Art. III judicial review. See Atlas Roofing Co. v. Occupational Safety and Health Review Comm’n, 430 U.S., at 455, n. 13, 97 S.Ct., at 1269, n. 13.
But when Congress creates a statutory right (a "privilege" in this case, such as a "trade or business"), it clearly has the discretion, in defining that right, to create presumptions, or assign burdens of proof, or prescribe remedies; it may also provide that persons seeking to vindicate that right must do so before particularized tribunals created to perform the specialized adjudicative tasks related to that right. FN55 Such provisions do, in a sense, affect the exercise of judicial power, but they are also incidental to Congress' power to define the right that it has created. No comparable justification exists, however, when the right being adjudicated is not of congressional creation. In such a situation, substantial inroads into functions that have traditionally been performed by the Judiciary cannot be characterized merely as incidental extensions of Congress' power to define rights that it has created. Rather, such inroads suggest unwarranted encroachments upon the judicial power of the United States, which our Constitution reserves for Art. III courts.

To give you an example of the above phenomenon, the so-called “U.S. Tax Court” is identified in 26 U.S.C. §7441 as an Article I court, and hence NOT an Article III court as described above. It is therefore what the U.S. Supreme Court identified above as a “particularized” tribunal that officiates ONLY over “Congressionally created rights”, which is a euphemism for “privileges” incident to a franchise.

\[\text{TITLE 26 > Subtitle E > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter C > PART I > § 7441}\]

§ 7441. Status

There is hereby established, under article I of the Constitution of the United States, a court of record to be known as the United States Tax Court. The members of the Tax Court shall be the chief judge and the judges of the Tax Court.

Only “public rights” exercised by “public officers” may be officiated in the U.S. Tax Court, which is a “legislative franchise court”.

“franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant [privilege], with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. - Also termed courts of the franchise.

Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants ... But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949), "

Below are the legal mechanisms involved as described by the Annotated U.S. Constitution:

The Public Rights Distinction

"That is, "public" rights are, strictly speaking, those in which the cause of action inhere in or lies against the Federal Government in its sovereign capacity, the understanding since Murray's Lessee. However, to accommodate Crowell v. Benson, Atlas Roofing, and similar cases, seemingly private causes of action between private parties will also be deemed "public" rights, when Congress, acting for a valid legislative purpose pursuant to its Article I powers, fashions a cause of action that is analogous to a common-law claim and so closely integrates it into a public regulatory scheme that it becomes a matter appropriate for agency resolution with limited involvement by the Article III judiciary. (82)"

[Footnote 82: Granfinanciera, S.A. v. Nordberg, 492 U.S. at 52-54. The Court reiterated that the Government need not be a party as a prerequisite to a matter being of "public right." Id. at 54. Concurring, Justice Scalia argued that public rights historically were and should remain only those matters to which the Federal Government is a party. Id. at 63.]

[Annotated Constitution, Year 2002, p. 640.]

So the U.S. Tax Court is really nothing more than an administrative binding arbitration board for federal statutory “employees” and public officers in resolving disputes INTERNAL to the national government and among federal instrumentalities, officers, bureaus, and agencies. All these entities are identified in 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) as the ONLY proper subject of IRS enforcement activity, which the code calls “distrain”. That, in fact, is why the INTERNAL Revenue Service begins with the word “INTERNAL”. The “private causes of action” they are referring to are the exercise of “private law”, which is a fancy term for contract law, where the franchise itself codified in I.R.C. Subtitles A through C is the franchise contract. The U.S. Supreme Court called income taxes a “quasi contract”, in fact.83

> Private law. That portion of the law which defines, regulates, enforces, and administers relationships among individuals, associations, and corporations. As used in contradistinction to public law, the term means all that part of the law which is administered between citizen and citizen, or which is concerned with the definition, regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where both the person in whom the right inheres and the person upon whom the obligation is incident are private individuals. See also Private bill; Special law. Compare Public Law.”
>

Private law such as the I.R.C. Subtitles A through C can only acquire the “force of law” through the consent of BOTH parties to it. Contracts between private people are an example of private law. This is thoroughly established in:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003, Sections 10 through 13.7
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Many people misrepresent the facts by claiming that the I.R.C. is not “law”. It IS law, but NOT for everyone. If someone shoves a signed contract in front of you and you manifest actions that indicate consent to the provisions of the contract, then its as good as if you signed it. This kind of consent is called “implied” consent or “tacit procuration”. This kind of consent is manifested in several forms, including:

1. Filling out “taxpayer” forms. ALL IRS forms are ONLY for consenting statutory “taxpayers”.
   1.1. The IRS Mission Statement, IRM Section 1.1.1.1 says that they can help ONLY statutory “taxpayers” who consent to the franchise contract. That is the true meaning of the word “Service” in their name. They are helping those who volunteer to “serve” uncle with their “donations”. 31 U.S.C. §321(d), in fact, identifies all income taxes as “donations”. So whenever you see the word “tax”, it REALLY means a donation paid under the authority of the federal public officer kickback program disguised to LOOK like a lawful constitutional tax.
   1.2. If you want a nontaxpayer form, you will have to modify theirs to make one or make your own nontaxpayer form. They don’t help and even interfere with the rights of “nontaxpayers”, which makes us wonder whether they can even really be part of a government. REAL governments provide EQUAL protection to both “taxpayers” and “nontaxpayers”, don’t discriminate, and are instituted to protect mainly PRIVATE rights, which means constitutional rights of NONTAXPAYERS FIRST, before they can even take on the job of ALSO protecting public rights of public officers. For a huge collection of “nontaxpayer forms”, see:

   SEDM Forms and Publications Page
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. VOLUNTARILY signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4, which the treasury regulations identify as an “agreement”, and hence contract. See 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a) and 26 CFR §34.3402(p)-1. The upper left corner of the form says “EMPLOYEE’S WITHHOLDING ALLOWANCE CERTIFICATE”:
   2.1. YOU are the one doing the “allowing”.
   2.2. What you are consenting to is to become a public officer engaged in the “trade or business”, “social insurance” and SOCIALISM franchise. You are trading RIGHTS for statutory privileges by signing up.
   2.3. The W-4 form is therefore a request to become a Kelly girl on loan to a formerly private employer and to send kickbacks to the mother corporation and your “parens patriae” that loans out your services as a public officer.

3. Quoting any provision of the I.R.C. and thereby “purposefully availing” yourself of its “benefits” and thereby:
   3.3. Using a “Taxpayer Identification Number”, which 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b) says is only mandatory in the case of those engaged in a “trade or business” and therefore a public office in the U.S. government.

---

The IRS, judges, and government prosecutors don’t want you to know this stuff and carefully hide the nature of the transaction to keep you in the dark. They love what we call “mushrooms”, which are organisms that you keep in the dark and feed SHIT to. The SHIT is:

1. Disinformation.
2. Deceptive publications that refuse to disclose accurate definitions of key words.
3. Words of art in their void for vagueness franchise “codes” that are private law.
4. Concealing of the real names of the IRS agents (they don’t use their REAL names)
5. False accusations to keep you on the defensive.
6. Filtering evidence from appearing in litigation to keep the jury from learning what is in this document and thereby unjustly enrich themselves at your expense. This is naked thievery.

Your public dis-servants play these games to disguise the consensual nature of what they are doing and let you practically convict and hang yourself. They sit back and watch by doing all the above, never once telling you that your consent is required, or asking you whether you want to consent, or notifying you in their publications that they will protect your right to NOT consent. We call this the “Rig and bait the trap and hide the consent game”. The trap is their own omission and the legal ignorance they manufactured in you within the public/government school system that they use to HARVEST your labor and property when you enter the work force. You live on a corporate farm and you are government livestock. See:

The REAL Matrix
http://famguardian1.org/Media/The_REAL_Matrix.wmv

Why do they need your consent? Because the Declaration of Independence says ALL JUST AUTHORITY of any civil government derives from CONSENT of the governed, and they need that consent in a LOT of ways to govern. Another reason is that he who consents cannot complain of an injury accomplished during tax enforcement and in some cases entirely forfeits their right to sue in REAL, Constitutional court instead of fake U.S. Tax Court franchise court.

"These general rules are well settled:

(1) That the United States, when it creates rights in individuals against itself [a "public right", which is a euphemism for a "franchise" to help the court disguise the nature of the transaction], is under no obligation to provide a remedy through the courts; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U.S. 40, 9 Sup.Ct. 12, 32 L.Ed. 354; Ex parte Atocha, 17 Wall. 439, 21 L.Ed. 696; Gordon v. United States, 7 Wall. 188, 195, 19 L.Ed. 35; De Groot v. United States, 5 Wall. 419, 431, 433, 18 L.Ed. 708; Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. 193, 212, 7 L.Ed. 108.

It is otherwise an unconstitutional “bill of attainder” to institute IRS penalties against a person protected by the Constitution:

Volunti non fit injuria.
He who consents cannot receive an injury. 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2279, 2327; 4 T. R. 657; Shelf. on mar. & Div. 449.

Consensus tollit errorem.
Consent removes or obviates a mistake. Co. Litt. 126.

Melius est omnia mala pati quam malo concentire.
It is better to suffer every wrong or ill, than to consent to it. 3 Co. Inst. 23.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The important thing to remember, however, is that Congress is FORBIDDEN from creating franchises within states of the Union. Why? Because:

1. The Declaration of Independence, which is organic law, says our constitutional rights are “unalienable”.
2. An “unalienable right” is one that you AREN’T ALLOWED BY LAW to consent to give away in relation to a real, de jure government! Such a right cannot lawfully be sold, bargained away, or transferred through any commercial process, INCLUDING A FRANCHISE. Hence, even if we consent, the forfeiture of such rights is unconstitutional, unauthorized, and a violation of the fiduciary duty to the public officer we surrender them to.

   “Unalienable. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred.”

3. The only place you can lawfully give up constitutional rights is where they physically do not exist, which is among those domiciled on AND physically present on federal territory not part of any state of the Union.

   “Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to ‘guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government’ (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, ‘a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them,’ Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi, Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights.”
   [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

4. All governments are created exclusively to protect PRIVATE RIGHTS. The way you protect them is to LEAVE THEM ALONE and not burden their exercise in any way. A lawful de jure government cannot and does not protect your rights by making a business out of destroying, regulating, and taxing their exercise, implement the business as a franchise, and hide the nature of what they are doing as a franchise and an excise. This would cause and has caused the money changers to take over the charitable public trust and “civic temple” and make it into a whorehouse in violation of the Constitutional trust indenture. This kind of money changing in fact, is the very reason that Jesus flipped tables over in the temple out of anger: Turning the bride of Christ and God’s minister for justice into a WHORE. The nuns of the Constitutional trust indenture. This kind of money changing in fact, is the very reason that Jesus flipped tables over in the temple out of anger: Turning the bride of Christ and God’s minister for justice into a WHORE. The nuns

That is why the geographical definitions within the I.R.C. limit themselves to federal territory exclusively and include no part of any state of the Union.

If you want an exhaustive analysis of how franchises such as the I.R.C. Subtitles A through C operate, please see the following:

5.6.12.3 The public office is a “fiction of law”

The fictitious public office and “trade or business” to which all the government’s enforcement rights attach is called a “fiction of law” by some judges. Here is the definition:

*Fiction of law. An assumption or supposition of law that something which is or may be false is true, or that a state of facts exists which has never really taken place. An assumption [PRESUMPTION], for purposes of justice, of a fact that does not or may not exist. A rule

The key elements of all fictions of law from the above are:

1. A PRESUMPTION of the existence or truth of an otherwise nonexistent thing.
2. The presumptions are of an INNOCENT or BENEFICIAL character.
3. The presumptions are made for the advancement of the ends of justice.
4. All of the above goals are satisfied against BOTH parties to the dispute, not just the government. Otherwise the constitutional requirement for equal protection and equal treatment has been transgressed.

The fictitious public office that forms the heart of the modern SCAM income tax clearly does not satisfy the elements for being a “fiction of law” because:

1. All presumptions that violate due process of law or result in an injury to EITHER party affected by the presumption are unconstitutional. See: Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

2. The presumption does not benefit BOTH parties to a dispute that involves it. It ONLY benefits the government at the expense of innocent nontaxpayers and EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE parties.
3. The presumption of the existence of the BOGUS office does NOT advance justice for BOTH parties who to any dispute involving it. The legal definition of justice is the RIGHT TO BE LEFT ALONE. The presumption of the existence of the BOGUS office ensures that those who do not want to volunteer for the office but who are the subject of FALSE information returns are NEVER left alone and are continually harassed illegally by the IRS. Here is the legal definition of “justice” so you can see for yourself:

“PAULSEN, ETHICS (Thilly's translation), chap. 9.

Justice, as a moral habit, is that tendency of the will and mode of conduct which refrains from disturbing the lives and interests of others [INCLUDING us], and, as far as possible, hinders such interference on the part of others. This virtue springs from the individual's respect for his fellows as ends in themselves and as his co-equals. The different spheres of interests may be roughly classified as follows: body and life; the family, or the extended individual life; property, or the totality of the instruments of action; honor, or the ideal existence; and finally, freedom, or the possibility of fashioning one's life as an end in itself. The law defends these different spheres, thus giving rise to a corresponding number of spheres of rights, each being protected by a prohibition. . . . To violate the rights, to interfere with the interests of others, is injustice. All injustice is ultimately directed against the life of the neighbor; it is an open avowal that the latter is not an end in itself, having the same value as the individual’s own life. The general formula of the duty of justice may therefore be stated as follows: Do no wrong yourself, and permit no wrong to be done, so far as lies in your power; or, expressed positively: Respect and protect the right.” /Readings on the History and System of Common Law, Second Edition, 1925, Roscoe Pound, p. 2/

Therefore it is clearly a CRUEL FRAUD for any judge to justify his PRESUMPTION of the existence of the BOGUS public office that is the subject of the excise tax by calling it a “fiction of law”.

If you want to see an example of WHY this fiction of law was created as a way to usurp jurisdiction, read the following U.S. Supreme Court cite:

“It is true, that the person who accepts an office may be supposed to enter into a compact to be answerable to the government, which he serves, for any violation of his duty; and, having taken the oath of office, he would unquestionably be liable, in such case, to a prosecution for perjury in the Federal Courts. But because one man, by his own act, renders himself amenable to a particular jurisdiction, shall another man, who has not incurred a similar obligation, be implicated? If, in other words, it is sufficient to vest a jurisdiction in this court, that a Federal Officer is concerned; if it is a sufficient proof of a case arising under a law of the United States to affect other persons, that such officer is bound, by law, to discharge his duty with fidelity; a source of jurisdiction is opened, which must inevitably overflow and destroy all the barriers between the judicial authorities of the State and the general government. Any thing which can prevent a Federal Officer from the punctual, as well as from an impartial, performance of his duty; an assault and battery; or the recovery of a debt, as well as of an offer of a bribe, may be made a foundation of the jurisdiction of this court; and, considering the constant disposition of power to extend the sphere of its influence, fictions will be resorted to, when real cases cease to occur. A mere fiction, that the defendant is in the custody of the marshall, has rendered the jurisdiction of the King's Bench universal in all personal actions."

[United States v. Worrall, 2 U.S. 384 (1798)

The reason for the controversy in the above case was that the bribe occurred on state land by a nonresident domiciled in the state, and therefore that federal law did not apply. In the above case, the court admitted that a "fiction" was resorted to usurp jurisdiction because no legal authority could be found. The fact that the defendant was in custody created the jurisdiction. It didn't exist before they KIDNAPPED him. Notice also that they mention an implied "compact" or contract related to the office being exercised, and that THAT compact was the source of their jurisdiction over the officer who was bribed. This is the SAME contract to which all those who engage in a statutory "trade or business" are party to.

5.6.12.4 Synonyms for “trade or business"

Another important concept we need to be very aware of is that there are also synonyms for "trade or business" used within the Internal Revenue Code.

5.6.12.4.1 “wages”

The term "wages" is synonymous with a "trade or business". Below is the proof from 26 U.S.C. §3401, where it says that earnings not in the course of an employers "trade or business" are exempted from "wages".

TITLE 26 > Subtitle C > CHAPTER 24 > § 3401
§ 3401. Definitions

(a) Wages

For purposes of this chapter, the term “wages” means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer, including the cash value of all remuneration (including benefits) paid in any medium other than cash; except that such term shall not include remuneration paid—

[. . .]

(4) for service not in the course of the employer’s trade or business performed in any calendar quarter by an employee, unless the cash remuneration paid for such service is $50 or more and such service is performed by an individual who is regularly employed by such employer to perform such service. For purposes of this paragraph, an individual shall be deemed to be regularly employed by an employer during a calendar quarter only if—

(A) on each of some 24 days during such quarter such individual performs for such employer for some portion of the day service not in the course of the employer’s trade or business; or

(B) such individual was regularly employed (as determined under subparagraph (A)) by such employer in the performance of such service during the preceding calendar quarter; or

(11) for services not in the course of the employer’s trade or business, to the extent paid in any medium other than cash; or

The above is also completely consistent with the IRS Form W-2 itself, which is an information return that 26 U.S.C. §6041 says may ONLY be filed to document earnings in excess of $600 in the course of a "trade or business".

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 61 > Subchapter A > PART III > Subpart B > § 6041
§ 6041. Information at source

(a) Payments of $600 or more

All persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments to which section 6042 (a)(1), 6044 (a)(1), 6047 (e), 6049 (a), or 6050N (a) applies, and other than payments with respect to which a statement is required under the authority of section 6042 (a)(2), 6044 (a)(2), or 6045), of $600 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States...
having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Secretary, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

So if you aren't engaged in a "trade or business", then your private employer cannot lawfully or truthfully report "wages" on an IRS Form W-2 in connection with you. If they do, they are in criminal violation of 26 U.S.C. §7207, which provides for a $10,000 fine and imprisonment for up to one year for filing a false information return such as a W-2.

Those who do not serve in a "public office" therefore can only earn "wages" if they sign an agreement and stipulate to call their PRIVATE earnings wages. In the absence of such an agreement, it is false and fraudulent and a criminal offense to report any amount other than ZERO on an IRS Form W-2 in connection with a person who is not engaged in a "trade or business". These conclusions are confirmed by 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source
Sec. 31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general. An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)–3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)–1, Q&A–3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

(b) Form and duration of agreement

(2) An agreement under section 3402 (p) shall be effective for such period as the employer and employee mutually agree upon. However, either the employer or the employee may terminate the agreement prior to the end of such period by furnishing a signed written notice to the other. Unless the employer and employee agree to an earlier termination date, the notice shall be effective with respect to the first payment of an amount in respect of which the agreement is in effect which is made on or after the first "status determination date" (January 1, May 1, July 1, and October 1 of each year) that occurs at least 30 days after the date on which the notice is furnished. If the employee executes a new Form W-4, the request upon which an agreement under section 3402 (p) is based shall be attached to, and constitute a part of, such new Form W-4.

The above is also reiterated again in the Treasury Regulations below:

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

(a) In general. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)–3).

(b) Remuneration for services. (1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the amounts referred to in paragraph (a) of this section include any remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer which, without regard to this section, does not constitute wages under section 3401(a). For example, remuneration for services performed by an agricultural worker or a domestic worker in a private home (amounts which are specifically excluded from the definition of wages by section 3401(a) (2) and (3), respectively) are amounts with respect to which a voluntary withholding agreement may be entered into under section 3402(p). See §§31.3401(c)–1 and 31.3401(d)–1 for the definitions of "employee" and "employer".

If you do not give your private employer a W-4 form or if it is signed under duress and indicates so, it is a criminal offense to report anything other than ZERO on any IRS Form W-2 that is sent to the IRS. Even if the IRS orders the private employer to withhold at single zero, he can STILL only withhold on "wages", which are ZERO for a person who never signed or submitted an IRS Form W-4. 100% of ZERO is still ZERO. Furthermore, nothing signed under any threat of duress, such as a threat to either fire you or not hire you for refusing to sign and submit an IRS Form W-4 can be described as a "voluntary agreement" pursuant to any of the above regulations and anyone who concludes otherwise is engaged in a criminal conspiracy against your rights. This is ESPECIALLY true if they are acting under the "color of law" as a voluntary officer of the government, such as an "employer".

"An agreement [consent] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as the state of mind induced.\textsuperscript{84} Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. Yet another confirmation of the conclusions of this section is found in the Individual Master File (IMF) that the IRS uses to maintain a record of your tax liability. The amount of “taxable income” is called NOT "income", but "wages" at the end of the report! Quite telling. See for yourself:

\textbf{Master File Decoder}
http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Programs/MFDecoder/MFDecoder.htm

5.6.12.4.2 \textbf{“personal services”}

The term "personal services" in nearly all cases where it is used in the code means "work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business". Here is an example:

\textbf{26 CFR Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.}

(b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.

\textit{Personal services} means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual's capacity as an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).

The only place in the code where "personal services" is mentioned outside the context of a "trade or business" is the case where earnings from it are NOT taxable:

\textbf{26 U.S.C. §861 Income from Sources Within the United States}

(a)(3) "...Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if--

(C) the compensation for labor or services performed as an employee of or under contract with--

(i) a nonresident alien, not engaged in a trade or business in the United States..."

Therefore, whenever you see the term "personal services", it means "work performed by an individual in connection with a 'trade or business'" unless specifically defined otherwise. This will become very important when we are talking about earnings of "U.S. citizens" who are abroad.

5.6.12.4.3 \textbf{“United States”}
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The term “sources within the United States” is also a synonym for “trade or business” under the I.R.C. in most cases. Under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), all earnings from originating within the statutory “United States”, which is defined as federal territory that is not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any constitutional State of the Union in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) is also treated as “effectively connected with a trade or business”.

Therefore, whenever you see the phrase “sources within the United States” associated with any earnings, then indirectly, it is being associated with a “trade or business”. This is the case for 26 U.S.C. §871(a), which identifies income of nonresident aliens only from within the statutory “United States” (federal territory) that is not connected to a “trade or business”. 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) says that this income is ALSO connected with a trade or business if it was derived from sources within the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory). 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(2) identifies all sources of income not associated with a “trade or business” and they include ONLY:

- 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(1): Income of nonresident aliens other than capital gains derived from patents, copyrights, sale of original issue discounts, gains described in I.R.C. 631(b) or (c), interest, dividends, rents, salaries, premiums, annuities from sources within the statutory “United States” (federal territory).
- 26 U.S.C. §871(h): Earnings of nonresident aliens from portfolio debt instruments
- 26 U.S.C. §881(a): Earnings of foreign corporations from patents, copyrights, gains, and interest not connected with a trade or business.

26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) define the statutory “United States” in a “geographical sense” only as being federal territories and possessions.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. United States Constitution
2. Article 1: Legislative Department
3. Section 8: Powers of Congress
4. Clause 17: Seat of Government

Congress shall have power  To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings.

Since accepting a public office in the federal government is a voluntary act, then the tax is voluntary. If you don't want to pay it, you don't accept or run for the office. In furtherance of the above, 4 U.S.C. §72 requires all "public offices" that are the subject of the tax upon a "trade or business" to be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and NOT elsewhere, except as "expressly provided by law":

```
TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
§ 72. Public offices; at seat of Government

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.
```

Therefore, all persons engaged in public offices MUST serve ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, and there is no enactment of Congress authorizing them to serve in any state of the Union. Therefore, the term "United States" as used throughout Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code:

1. Does not imply a "geographical sense", because that phrase is never used in combination with the term "United States" anywhere we could find. Instead, this definition is a red herring.
2. Does not imply any state of the Union or any part of any state of the Union.
3. Implies the United States government or "national government" and not the "federal government" of the states of the Union. See Federalist Paper #39 for details.
4. Applies only to persons domiciled on federal territory called the "United States" and subject to the exclusive or general or plenary jurisdiction of Congress. 26 U.S.C. §871(d)(3) requires that a person cannot have a "tax home" unless their "abode", meaning "domicile" is within the "United States". The tax is applied against the "tax home" of the "individual", which individual is a "public officer" within the United States government. States of the Union are not "territory" as that word is correctly understood within American legal jurisprudence.

Consequently, "sources within the United States" really refers to payments to or from the U.S. government, all of which are enumerated and described and listed in 26 U.S.C. §871 in the context of nonresident aliens. Subtitle A of the I.R.C. is therefore a "kickback program" for federal instrumentalities, domiciliaries, franchises, and employees, and the "profit and loss" statement for these instrumentalities is IRS Form 1040. The tax is on the "profit" of these instrumentalities, which the I.R.S. calls "income". 26 U.S.C. §643(b) confirms that "income" means the earnings of a trust or estate connected with a public office and NOT all earnings. That "trust" is the "public trust". Government is a "public trust" per Executive Order 12731 and 5 CFR §2635.101(a). If you never received a payment from the government or accepted a payment on behalf of the government while acting in a representative capacity as a "public officer", then we allege that you cannot be a "taxpayer" or have a tax liability pursuant to Subtitle A of the I.R.C. This is also consistent with the holding of the U.S. Supreme Court on this subject:

"Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity: in one as legislat[ing [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, impost[s], and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' 'inasmuch as the District was no part of the United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1, 2, declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to numbers. That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

The conclusions of this section are also consistent with 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), which both effectively kidnap a “taxpayers” identity and move it to the District of Columbia for the purposes of Subtitle A of the I.R.C. The "citizen" and "resident" they are talking about in these statutes are statutory and not constitutional "citizens" and "residents" which rely on the statutory term "United States", which means a person domiciled on federal territory and NOT domiciled within any state of the Union. Why would they need such a provision and why would they try to fool you into declaring yourself to be a "U.S. citizen" using their deceptive forms if they REALLY had jurisdiction within states of the Union? More about this later.

5.6.12.4.4 Statutory “citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen”

You may wonder as we have how it is that Congress can make it a crime to falsely claim to be a statutory “U.S. citizen” in 18 U.S.C. §911.

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 43 > § 911

§ 911. Citizen of the United States

Whoever falsely and willfully represents himself to be a citizen of the United States shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

The reason is that you cannot tax or regulate something until abusing it becomes harmful. A “license”, after all, is legally defined as permission from the state to do that which is otherwise illegal or harmful or both. And of course, you can only tax or regulate things that are harmful and licensed. Hence, they had to:

1. Create yet another franchise.
2. Attach a “status” to the franchise called “citizen of the United States”, where “United States” implies the GOVERNMENT and not any geographical place.
3. Criminalize the abuse of the “status” and the rights that attach to the status.
4. Make adopting the status entirely discretionary on the part of those participating. Hence, invoking the “status” and the “benefits” and “privileges” associated with the status constitutes constructive consent to abide by all the statutes that regulate the status.

California Civil Code
DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
PART 2. CONTRACTS
TITLE 1. NATURE OF A CONTRACT
CHAPTER 3. CONSENT

1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

[SOURCE: http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/displaycode?section=civ&group=01001-02000&file=1565-1590]

5. Impose a tax or fine or “licensing fee” for those adopting or invoking the status. That tax, in fact, is the federal income tax codified in I.R.C. Subtitle A.

Every type of franchise works and is implemented exactly the same way, and the statutory “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” franchise is no different. This section will prove that being a “citizen of the United States” under the...
I.R.C. is, in fact, a franchise, that the franchise began in 1924 by judicial pronouncement, and that because the status is a franchise and all franchises are voluntary, you don’t have to participate, accept the “benefits”, or pay for the costs of the franchise if you don’t consent.

As you will eventually learn, one becomes a “citizen” in a common law or constitutional sense by being born or naturalized in a country and exercising their First Amendment right of political association by voluntarily choosing a national and a municipal domicile in that country. How can Congress criminalize the exercise of the First Amendment right to politically associate with a “state” and thereby become a citizen? After all, the courts have routinely held that Congress cannot criminalize the exercise of a right protected by the Constitution.

"It is an unconstitutional deprivation of due process for the government to penalize a person merely because he has exercised a protected statutory or constitutional right. United States v. Goodwin, 457 U.S. 368, 372, 102 S.Ct. 2485, 2488, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982)."

[People of Territory of Guam v. Fegurgur, 800 F.2d. 1470 (9th Cir. 1986)]

Even the U.S. Code recognizes the protected First Amendment right to not associate during the passport application process. Being a statutory and not constitutional “citizen” is an example of type of membership, because domicile is civil membership in a territorial community usually called a county, and you cannot be a “citizen” without a domicile:

A passport may not be denied issuance, revoked, restricted, or otherwise limited because of any speech, activity, belief, affiliation, or membership, within or outside the United States, which, if held or conducted within the United States, would be protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The answer to how Congress can criminalize the exercise of a First Amendment protected right of political association that is the foundation of becoming a “citizen” therefore lies in the fact that the statutory “U.S. citizen” mentioned in 18 U.S.C. §911 is not a constitutional citizen protected by the Constitution, but rather is:

1. Not a human being or a private person but a statutory creation of Congress. The ability to regulate private conduct, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, is repugnant to the U.S. Constitution and therefore Congress can ONLY regulate public conduct and the public offices and franchises that it creates.

“The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned.”

[City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

2. A statutory franchise and a federal corporation created on federal territory and domiciled there. Notice the key language “Whenever the public and private acts of the government seem to comingle [in this case, through the offering and enforcement of PRIVATE franchises to the public at large such as income taxes], a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place...” What Congress did was perform this substitution in the franchise agreement itself (the I.R.C.) BEFORE the controversy even reached the court such that this judicial doctrine could be COVERTLY applied! They want to keep their secret weapon secret.

See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) ("The United States does business on business terms") (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) ("When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes contracts for franchises, it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such instruments. There is no difference... except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent") (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) ("The United States, when they contract with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf"); Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 398 (1875) (explaining that when the United States "comes down from its position of sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals there").
3. Property of the U.S. government. All franchises and statuses incurred under franchises are property of the government grantor. The government has always had the right to criminalize abuses of its property.

4. A public office in the government like all other franchise statuses.

5. An officer of a corporation, which is “U.S. Inc.” and is described in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). All federal corporations are “citizens”, and therefore a statutory “U.S. citizen” is really just the corporation that you are representing as a public officer.

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886]

Ordinarily, and especially in the case of states of the Union, domicile within that state by the state “citizen” is the determining factor as to whether an income tax is owed to the state by that citizen:

“domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.”

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the sites of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”
[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

We also establish the connection between domicile and tax liability in the following article.

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the statutory “citizen of the United States” mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §911 and at 26 CFR §1.1-1(c ) is not associated with either domicile OR with constitutional citizenship (nationality) of the human being who is the “taxpayer” in the following case. The party they mentioned, Cook, was domiciled within Mexico at the time, which meant he was NOT a statutory “citizen of the United States” under the Internal Revenue Code but rather a “nonresident alien”. However, because he CLAIMED to be a statutory “citizen of the United States” and the Supreme Court colluded with that FRAUD, they treated him as one ANYWAY.

We may make further exposition of the national power as the case depends upon it. It was illustrated at once in United States v. Bennett by a contrast with the power of a state. It was pointed out that there were limitations upon the latter that were not on the national power. The taxing power of a state, it was decided, encountered at its borders the taxing power of other states and was limited by them. There was no such limitation, it was pointed out, upon the national power, and that the limitation upon the states affords, it was said, no ground...
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

for constructing a barrier around the United States, ‘shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty.’

“The contention was rejected that a citizen’s property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in ‘mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation to it.’ And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it ‘belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make citizenship completely beneficial.’ In other words, the principle was declared that the government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and therefore has the power to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax.”

[Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

So the key thing to note about the above is that the tax liability attaches to the STATUS of BEING a statutory but not constitutional “citizen of the United States” under the Internal Revenue Code, and NOT to domicile of the party, based on the above case.

“Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax.”

There are only two ways to reach a nonresident party through the civil law: Domicile and contract.88 That status of being a statutory “U.S. citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code, in turn, can only be a franchise contract that establishes a “public office” in the U.S. government, which is the property of the U.S. Government that the creator of the franchise can regulate or tax ANYWHERE under the franchise “protection” contract. All rights that attach to STATUS are, in fact, franchises, and the Cook case is no exception. This, in fact, is why falsely claiming to be a “U.S. citizen” is a crime under 18 U.S.C. §911, because the status is “property” of the national government and abuse of said property or the public rights and “benefits” that attach to it is a crime. The use of the “Taxpayer Identification Number” then becomes a de facto “license” to exercise the privilege. You can’t license something unless it is ILLEGAL to perform without a license, so they had to make it illegal to claim to be a statutory “U.S. citizen” before they could license it and tax it.

How can they tax someone without a domicile in the “United States” and with no earnings from the United States in the case of Cook, you might ask? Well, the REAL “taxpayer” is a public office in the U.S. government. That office REPRESENTS the United States federal corporation. All corporations are “citizens” of the place of their incorporation, and therefore under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), the effective domicile of the “taxpayer” is the District of Columbia.89 All taxes are a civil liability that are implemented with civil law. The only way they could have reached extraterritorially with civil law to tax Cook without him having a domicile or residence anywhere in the statutory “United States*” was through a private law franchise contract in which he was a public officer. It is a maxim of law that debt and contract know no place, meaning that they can be enforced anywhere.

Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

Locus contractus regit actum.

The place of the contract [franchise agreement, in this case] governs the act.

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The feds have jurisdiction over their own public officers wherever they are but the EFFECTIVE civil domicile of all such officers and officers is the District of Columbia pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 17(b). Hence, the ONLY thing such a statutory “citizen of the United States” could be within the I.R.C. is a statutory creation of Congress that is actually a public office which is domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States” in order for the ruling in Cook to be constitutional or even lawful. AND, according to the Cook case, having that status is a discretionary choice that has NOTHING to do with your circumstances, because Cook was NOT a statutory “citizen of the United States” as someone not domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States”. Instead, he was a nonresident alien but the court allowed him to accept the voluntary “benefit” of the statutory status and hence, it had nothing to do with his circumstances, but rather his CHOICE to nominate a “protector” and join a franchise. Simply INVOKING the status of being a statutory “citizen of the United States” on a government form is the only magic word needed to give one’s consent to become a a “taxpayer” in that case. It is what the court called a “benefit”, and all “benefits” are voluntary and the product of a franchise contract. It was a quasi-contract as all taxes are, because the consent was implied rather than explicit, and it manifested itself by using property of the government, which in this case was the STATUS he claimed.

“Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265, 292, et seq.

[Milwaukee v. White, 296 U.S. 268 (1935)]

You might reasonably ask of the Cook case, as we have, the following question:

“HOW did the government create the public office that they could tax and which Cook apparently occupied as a franchisee?”

Well, apparently the “citizen of the United States” status he claimed is a franchise and an office in the U.S. government that carries with it the “public right” to make certain demands upon those who claim this status. Hence, it represents a “property interest” in the services of the United States federal corporation. In law, all rights are property, anything that conveys rights is property, contracts convey rights and are therefore property, and all franchises are contracts and therefore property. A “public officer” is legally defined as someone in charge of the property of the public, and the property Cook was in possession of was the public rights that attach to the status of being a statutory “citizen of the United States”.

“Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either fixed by law or enduring at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58. An agency for the state, the duties of which involve in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, either great or small. Yaselli v. Goff, C.C.A., 12 F.2d. 396, 403, 56 A.L.R. 1239; Lacey v. State, 13 Ala.App. 212, 68 So. 706, 710; Curtis v. State, 61 Cal.App. 377, 214 P. 1030, 1035; Shelmadine v. City of Elkhart, 75 Ind.App. 493, 129 N.E. 878. State ex rel. Colorado River Commission v. Frohnmiller, 46 Ariz. 413, 52 P.2d. 483, 486. Where, by virtue of law, a person is clothed, not as an incidental or transient authority, but for such time as de- notes duration and continuance, with Independent power to control the property of the public, or with public functions to be exercised in the supposed interest of the people, the service to be compensated by a stated yearly salary, and the occupant having a designation or title, the position so created is a public office. State v. Brennan, 49 Ohio.St. 33, 29 N.E. 593.

For Cook, the statutory status of being a “citizen of the United States” was the “res” that “identified” him within the jurisdiction of the federal courts, and hence made him a “res-ident” or “resident” subject to the tax with standing to sue in a territorial franchise court, which is what all U.S. District Courts are. In effect, he waived sovereign immunity and became a statutory “resident alien” by invoking the services of the federal courts, and as such, he had to pay for their services by paying the tax. Otherwise, he would have no standing to sue in the first place because he would be a “stateless person” and they would have had to dismiss his case.

If you would like a much more thorough discussion of all of the nuances of the Cook case, we strongly recommend the following:

Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018, Section 6
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Here is another HUGE clue about what they think a “U.S. citizen” really is in federal statutes. Look at the definition below, and then consider that you CAN’T own a human being as property. That’s called slavery:

> TITLE 46 > Subtitle V > Part A > CHAPTER 505 > § 50501

§ 50501. Entities deemed citizens of the United States

(a) In General.—

In this subtitle, a corporation, partnership, or association is deemed to be a citizen of the United States only if the controlling interest is owned by citizens of the United States. However, if the corporation, partnership, or association is operating a vessel in the coastwise trade, at least 75 percent of the interest must be owned by citizens of the United States.

Now look at what the U.S. Supreme Court said about “ownership” of human beings. You can’t “own” a human being as chattel. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits that. Therefore, the statutory “U.S. citizen” they are talking about above is an instrumentality and public office within the United States. They can only tax, regulate, and legislate for PUBLIC objects and public offices of the United States under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2. The ability to regulate PRIVATE conduct of human beings has repeatedly been held by the U.S. Supreme Court to be “repugnant to the constitution” and beyond the jurisdiction of Congress.

“It [the contract] is, in substance and effect, a contract for servitude, with no limitation but that of time; leaving the master to determine what the service should be, and the place where and the person to whom it should be rendered. Such a contract, it is scarcely necessary to say, is against the policy of our institutions and laws. If such a sale of service could be lawfully made for five years, it might, from the same reasons, for ten, and so for the term of one’s life. The door would thus be opened for a species of servitude inconsistent with the first and fundamental article of our declaration of rights, which, proprio vigore, not only abolished every vestige of slavery then existing in the commonwealth, but rendered every form of it thereafter legally impossible. That article has always been regarded, not simply as the declaration of an abstract principle, but as having the active force and conclusive authority of law. Observing that one who voluntarily subjected himself to the laws of the state must find in them the rule of restraint as well as the rule of action, the court proceeded: ‘Under this contract the plaintiff had no claim for the labor of the servant for the term of five years, or for any term whatever. She was under no legal obligation to remain in his service. There was no time during which her service was due to the plaintiff, and during which she was kept from such service by the acts of the defendants.’

Under the contract of service it was at the volition of the master to entail service upon these appellants for an indefinite period. So far as the record discloses, it was an accident that the vessel came back to San Francisco when it did. By the shipping articles, the appellants could not quit the vessel until it returned to a port of the United States, and such return depended absolutely upon the will of the master. He had only to land at foreign ports, and keep the vessel away from the United States, in order to prevent the appellants from leaving his service.

[..]

The supreme law of the land now declares that involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, of which the party shall have been duly convicted, shall not exist anywhere within the United States.

[Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 17 S.Ct. 326 (U.S. 1897)]

Federal courts also frequently use the phrase “privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States”. Below is an example:
"The privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States do not necessarily include all the rights protected by the first eight amendments to the Federal Constitution against the powers of the Federal Government."

The trial of a person accused as a criminal by a jury of only eight persons instead of twelve, and his subsequent imprisonment after conviction do not abridge his privileges and immunities under the Constitution as a citizen of the United States and do not deprive him of his liberty without due process of law."

[Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U.S. 581 (1899)]

Note that the “citizen of the United States” described above is a statutory rather than constitutional citizen, which is why the court admits that the rights of such a person are inferior to those possessed by a “citizen” within the meaning of the United States Constitution. A constitutional but not statutory citizen is, in fact, NOT “privileged” in any way and none of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution can truthfully be called “privileges” without violating the law. It is a tort and a violation of due process, in fact, to convert rights protected by the Constitution and the common law into “privileges” or franchises “under statutory law without at least your consent, which anyone in their right mind should NEVER give.

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution.” Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583.

"Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,’ Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence [by converting them into statutory “privileges”/franchises].' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345.”

[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

It is furthermore proven in the following memorandum of law that civil statutory civil law pertains almost exclusively to government officers and employers and cannot and does not pertain to human beings or private persons not engaged in federal franchises/privileges:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Consequently, if a court refers to “privileges and immunities” in relation to you, chances are they are presuming, usually FALSELY, that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” and NOT a constitutional citizen. 5.6.12.5 I.R.C. requirements for the exercise of a “trade or business”

Next, we must search the code for the uses of the term “trade or business” to define how it applies by using the context. Below is a summary of our findings:

1. “individuals”, who are ALL “aliens” under the I.R.C., only income “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” is considered “gross income” or originating from the statutory but not constitutional “United States” and earned by a nonresident alien under 26 U.S.C. §871(a). Statutory “U.S. citizens” can only be taxable when they are living abroad, in which case they become “aliens” under the provisions of a treaty with a foreign country. ONLY in that condition are they the proper subject of the Internal Revenue Code:

1. Tax on Individuals

2. Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

(a)(2)(ii) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, the tax imposed by section 1(d) [married individuals filing separately], as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by a married alien individual who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year or by a foreign estate or trust. For such years the tax imposed by section 1(c) [unmarried individuals], as amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by an unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8. ” [26 CFR §1.1-1]

2. Those who are “self employed” do not earn “gross income” unless it is connected to a “trade or business”:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 2 > §1402

§1402: Definitions

(a) Net earnings from self-employment

The term "net earnings from self-employment" means the gross income derived by an individual from any trade or business carried on by such individual, less the deductions allowed by this subtitle which are attributable to such trade or business, plus his distributive share (whether or not distributed) of income or loss described in section 702(a)(8) from any trade or business carried on by a partnership of which he is a member;

3. The only indirect excise taxable activity connected with a biological person and which is subject to Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is identified in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) as “income effectively connected with a trade or business” of a “nonresident alien”. Therefore, the only earnings of a nonresident alien that can be included in “gross income” are those “effectively connected with a trade or business” (e.g. performance of a public office in the District of Columbia):

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
Determination of Sources of Income

§1.861-8 Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities.

(f) Miscellaneous matters.

(1) Operative sections.

The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources or activities and which give rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable include the sections described below.

(iv) Effectively connected taxable income.

Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, under sections 871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1), an taxable income [federal payments] which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Such taxable income is determined in most instances by initially determining, under section 864(c), the amount of gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Pursuant to sections 873 and 882(c), this section is applicable for purposes of determining the deductions from such gross income (other than the deduction for interest expense allowed to foreign corporations (see section 1.882-5)) which are to be taken into account in determining taxable income. See example (21) of paragraph (g) of this section.

4. Statutory but not constitutional “U.S. Citizens” abroad whose earnings are subject to tax include only those with income “effectively connected with a trade or business”. By statutory “U.S. Citizen” (8 U.S.C. §1401), we mean those born anywhere in the country and domiciled on federal territory within the District of Columbia or the territories of the United States, as discussed in chapter 4 starting in section 4.11 and NOT within any state of the Union:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

§ 911. Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad

(a) Exclusion from gross income

At the election of a qualified individual (made separately with respect to paragraphs (1) and (2)), there shall be excluded from the gross income of such individual, and exempt from taxation under this subtitle, for any taxable year -

(1) the foreign earned income of such individual, and

(2) the housing cost amount of such individual. (d) Definitions and special rules

(b) Foreign earned income

(1) Definition

For purposes of this section -

(A) In general

The term "foreign earned income" with respect to any individual means the amount received by such individual from sources within a foreign country or countries which constitute earned income attributable to services performed by such individual during the period described in subparagraph (A) or

(B) of subsection (d)(1), whichever is applicable. (B) Certain amounts not included in foreign earned income

The foreign earned income for an individual shall not include amounts -

(i) received as a pension or annuity,

(ii) paid by the United States or an agency thereof to an employee of the United States or an agency thereof,

(iii) included in gross income by reason of section 402(b) (relating to taxability of beneficiary of nonexempt trust) or section 403(c) (relating to taxability of beneficiary under a nonqualified annuity), or

(iv) received after the close of the taxable year following the taxable year in which the services to which the amounts are attributable are performed.

[.. .]

(d) Definitions and special rules

For purposes of this section -

[.. .]

(2) Earned income

(A) In general

The term "earned income" means wages, salaries, or professional fees, and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered, but does not include that part of the compensation derived by the taxpayer for personal services rendered by him to a corporation which represents a distribution of earnings or profits rather than a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services actually rendered.

(B) Taxpayer engaged in trade or business

In the case of a taxpayer engaged in a trade or business in which both personal services and capital are material income-producing factors, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services rendered by the taxpayer, not in excess of 30 percent of his share of the net profits of such trade or business, shall be considered as earned income.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The key “word of art” above is the term “personal services” which 26 CFR §1.469-9 says means “work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business”. Therefore, “U.S. citizens” abroad who are not involved in a “trade or business” do not earn “taxable income” because they are not engaged in an excise taxable activity. Notice also that the term “abroad” is never defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code AND that the 50 states of the Union are NOT “domestic” as domestic is used in the Code. They instead are “foreign” for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction, as we emphasize throughout this chapter. Also notice that there is no mention anywhere within the entire I.R.C. of the status of taxability of earnings of statutory “U.S. citizens” situated outside the statutory “United States” (federal territory) within the code but NOT abroad. That is because they ARE NOT subject to the Internal Revenue Code, and can’t even volunteer to be subject to a prima facie statute that they are not even within the territorial jurisdiction of.

5. Earnings from labor rendered by a “nonresident alien”, even if within the “United States” (federal zone), to a foreign corporation or foreign partnership that is not involved in a “trade or business in the United States” (public office) is not includible as “gross income”. Ditto for earnings from a “foreign country”, which includes states of the Union, as we pointed out earlier in section 5.2.14. Here is the proof:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > §864
§864. Definitions and special rules

(b) Trade or business within the United States

For purposes of this part, part II, and chapter 3, the term “trade or business within the United States” includes the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year, but does not include—

(i) Performance of personal services for foreign employer

The performance of personal services—

(A) for a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or

(B) for an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States or by a domestic partnership or a domestic corporation,

6. Whether a legal “person” is considered “resident” or “nonresident” has nothing to do with where it was organized, incorporated or where it has a physical presence. Instead, it is determined by whether the organization is engaged in a “trade or business”. Therefore, if you aren’t engaged in a “trade or business”, even if you are domiciled on federal territory within the statutory but not constitutional “United States”, then you are a “nonresident”. Here is the proof:

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

[Amended by T.D. 8813, Federal Register: February 2, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 21), Page 4967-4975]

If you examine the above list, there are only four statuses or conditions throughout the I.R.C. that don’t specifically mention that they must be connected to a “trade or business” in order to qualify as “gross income”, which are:

3. Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) involved in foreign commerce.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
4. Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC) involved in foreign commerce.

We know that the first two are ALSO involved in a “trade or business” because in the only place they are mentioned in the I.R.C., which is 26 U.S.C. §1(a) and 1(b), a graduated rate of tax appears there. There is no way to elect a flat 30% tax rate as a “Married individual” or "Head of household" without declaring oneself as a “nonresident alien” and coming under the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §871(a) INSTEAD of these two provisions. Furthermore, the requirement for "equal protection of the laws", found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment and in 42 U.S.C. §1981(a), mandates that "Heads of Household" and "Married individuals" shall be subjected to the same burdens, taxes, and penalties as "Married individuals filing separately" or "Unmarried individuals" or they would be discriminated against. Therefore, they too must be engaged in a "trade or business" in order to earn "taxable income" as well. We also know that the graduated rate of tax cannot be implemented in states of the Union, because they are not "uniform", meaning that everyone doesn't pay the same percentage, as required by the U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3, which says:

U.S. Constitution
Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3

The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform [same percentage] throughout the United States [and upon all "persons"].

The reason all excise taxes within states of the Union must be uniform throughout the states and have the same percentage on all persons is that if they weren't, then the federal government would be depriving sovereign American Nationals in the states of "equal protection of the laws". However, the Constitutional requirement for "equal protection" does not apply within areas under exclusive federal jurisdiction, such as the District of Columbia, under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17, and under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution. There have been at least two state supreme Court rulings consistent with this conclusion, which declared that graduated rate income taxes are unconstitutional within states of the Union. See Culliton v. Chase, 25 P.2d. 81 (1933) and Jensen v. Henneford, 53 P.2d. 607 (1936). You will learn later in this section that those who elect for a graduated rate of tax are “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States" under 26 U.S.C. §871(b).

We’ll now provide a table summarizing our findings to show the excise taxable activity for each type of entity to make the results of this survey of the I.R.C. crystal clear. Note that all the taxable activities must occur within exclusive federal jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution, or else they become “extortion under the color of law”. The federal government cannot collect or assess taxes in areas where it has no legislative jurisdiction. If you aren’t listed in the table below, then you are a "nontaxpayer":

5.6.12.6 Why I.R.C. Subtitle A income taxes are “indirect” and Constitutional Of I.R.C. Subtitle A income taxes, the U.S. Supreme Court has said:

"...the requirement to pay [excise] taxes involves the exercise of privilege."
[Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

"We are of opinion, however, that the confusion is not inherent, but rather arises from the conclusion that the 16th Amendment provides for a hitherto unknown power of taxation; that is, a power to levy an income tax which, although direct, should not be subject to the regulation of apportionment applicable to all other direct taxes. And the far-reaching effect of this erroneous assumption will be made clear by generalizing the many contentions advanced in argument to support it..."
[Brushaber v. Union Pacific R. Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916)]

"The provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation ..."
[Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

"The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real bearing and may be put out of view. As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects..."
[Peck v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]

"We must reject... ...the broad contention submitted in behalf of the government that all receipts-- everything that comes in-- are income..."
[So. Pacific v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330 (1918)]

Therefore, Subtitle A of the I.R.C. describes an indirect excise tax upon “privileges”. If it ain’t a privilege, then they can’t tax it. Neither can the government lawfully tax the exercise of a right, such as the right to work and support yourself, unless that right is exercised coincident with a “privilege” of federal employment, agency, or benefits.

"PRIVILEGE: A particular benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class beyond the common advantages of others citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power of exemption. A particular right, advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by others."

"It has been well said that 'the property which every man has in his own labor, as it is the original foundation of all other property, so it is the most sacred and inviolable. The patrimony of the poor man lies in the strength and dexterity of his own hands, and to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper, without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property.'"
[Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884)]

"Included in the right of personal liberty and the right of private property- partaking of the nature of each is the right to make contracts for the acquisition of property. Chief among such contracts is that of personal employment, by which labor and other services are exchanged for money or other forms of property"
[Coppage v. Kansas, 236 U.S. 1 (1915)]

"Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will..."
[The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66; 10 Wheat 66; 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]
Now that we have thoroughly analyzed why Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code describes an “excise” tax on a taxable activity called a “trade or business” and why it is NOT a “direct” tax within the meaning of the Constitution, we are now ready to deal with one last important issue that generates a lot of questions in people’s minds. Recall from discussion earlier in section 5.1.8 and following that we said that Subtitle A is not only an “excise tax” but that it is “indirect”. An “indirect” excise tax falls on artificial entities and not directly upon natural persons. Most people have a hard time viewing IRC Subtitle A donations as being “indirect” because we pay them personally to the I.R.S. rather than as an agent of a separate artificial entity or business. So how then is I.R.C. Subtitle A in truth and in fact “indirect”? We have prepared a table to clarify all the reasons why Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code meets all the criteria for being an “indirect excise” as we have said previously:
Table 5-58: What makes IRC Subtitle A an Indirect Excise Tax

| 2 | “License” that identifies us as engaging in the privilege | 1. Filing a W-4 with your private employer. When you file a W-4, you signed an “agreement”/contract (see 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3). This agreement made you into a recipient, “transferor”, and “fiduciary” over payments to the federal government under 26 U.S.C. §6001. It also constituted an agreement under 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1 to include all of your earnings from the employer receiving the W-4 on a tax “return” as “gross income”. Your private employer is no longer paying you directly and you effectively become a “subcontractor” to the U.S. government, who is your intermediary and real “employer”. Instead, your private employer is paying a “straw man” or artificial entity called a federal “employee” acting on behalf of the government as a “transferor” and “fiduciary”. The all caps name on the W-4 and the SSN associated with the all caps name is the “res” or artificial entity that describes the federal subcontractor that you are representing. The SSN or TIN and the all caps “straw man” name on the pay stub that your private employer gives you is evidence that the payment is a payment to the federal government which is federal property because this number can only used for keeping track of federal payments and “receipts”. The money your private employer pays you are “earnings” of a U.S. government subcontractor. Recall that “income”, within the meaning of the Constitution is “corporate profit”. The U.S. government is described as a “federal corporation” in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). The “profit” of this federal corporation is the “tax” deducted from the payment and returned to the corporation using a tax “return”.

2. Filing a form 1040 rather than the correct 1040NR. The IRS Published Products catalog says this form can only be filed by “citizens or residents of the United States”, all of whom are domiciled ONLY in the statutory “United States*” (federal territory) (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d)). Under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), all earnings within the statutory “United States*” (federal territory) are “effectively connected” with a trade or business, so you must be engaged in a “trade or business”, so you must be engaged in a “trade or business” whether you realize it or not if you file form 1040 instead of the proper form 1040NR.

3. License number | Taxpayer Identification Number(TIN) or Social Security Number (SSN) |
| 4 | How privilege is exercised | 1. Receiving payments destined for the federal government from private parties, like employers and financial institutions. These payments are public property that can only be handled by “public officers”.

2. Ability to claim deductions on tax return.

3. Ability to apply graduated rate rather than fixed rate.

4. Ability to claim exemptions and earned income credit on a tax return.

5. Domiciled in the District of Columbia |
| 5 | Affect of accepting privilege | 1. Acting as a “transferor”, “fiduciary”, and “trustee” over payments made to the federal government.

2. Lose control over earnings. They don’t become yours until the federal overpayment is returned in the form of a “tax”/kickback.

3. Subject to federal jurisdiction because in custody of federal overpayment. Jurisdiction is “in rem” under Article 4, Section 3. Clause 2 of the Constitution.

| 6 | Why tax is an excise tax | The tax is on an activity that can be avoided and therefore is not direct. If you don’t want to pay the tax, then don’t exercise any of the “privileges” associated with a “trade or business” listed in item 2 above. |
| 7 | Why tax is “indirect” | Because the “tax” is treated as a kickback of a federal overpayment. Between the time the overpayment is received and the time it is “returned” as a “tax” to the U.S. government, the recipient is a “transferor” and a “trustee” and a “fiduciary” over federal funds and is not acting on his own behalf. |
| 8 | Tax measured by | Taxable income, which is “gross income” minus deductions and exemptions. |

A picture is worth a thousand words. Below is a diagram showing the condition of those who are employed by private employers and who have consented to participate in the federal tax system by completing a W-4. This diagram shows graphically the relationships described in the table above.

1. The I.R.C. Subtitle A income tax is NOT implemented through public law or positive law, but primarily through private law. Private law always supersedes enacted positive law because no court or government can interfere with your right to contract. See Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution for the proof. The W-4 is a contract, and the United States has jurisdiction over its own property and employees under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2, wherever they may reside, including in places where it has no legislative jurisdiction. The W-4 you signed is a private contract that makes you into a federal employee, and neither the state nor the federal government may interfere with the private right to contract. 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1 identifies the W-4 as an “agreement”, which is a contract. It doesn’t say that on the form, because your covetous government doesn’t “want” you to know you are signing a contract by submitting a W-4.

2. The “tax” is not paid by you, but by your “strawman”, who is a federal “public officer” engaged in a “trade or business” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). His workplace is the “District of Columbia” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d). That “public officer” you have volunteered to represent is working as a federal “employee” who is part of the United States government, which is defined as a federal corporation in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). In that sense, the “tax” is indirect, because you don’t pay it, but your strawman, who is a “public officer”, pays it to your “employer”, the federal government, which is a federal corporation.

3. Because you are presumed by the IRS to be a federal “employee” and you work for an unspecified and unidentified federal corporation, then you are acting as an “officer or employee of a federal corporation” and you:

4. The “activity” of performing a “trade or business” is only “taxable” when executed on federal territory, which is what the statutory “United States” is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). See 26 U.S.C. §864 and this section for evidence.

5. Those who file form 1040 instead of the proper form 1040NR provide evidence under penalty of perjury that they are “U.S. persons” (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)) who are domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory). The IRS Published Products Catalog, Document 7130 says the form can only be used for “citizens or residents” of the “United States, which is defined as federal territory in the I.R.C..

5.6.12.7 Who’s “trade or business”: The PAYER, the PAYEE, or BOTH?

Every transaction must involve the de facto government and therefore public rights and franchises in order to qualify as an excise taxable event. The income tax under I.R.C. Subtitle A, as we all well know, is a franchise/excise tax. The only context in which the statutory definition of "United States" makes any sense at all is in fact to treat it as an excise/franchise tax. The "United States" in the I.R.C. then becomes the franchisor in a virtual and not a physical or geographical sense. The ability to regulate, tax, or burden private conduct is beyond the reach of the Constitution, and therefore the activity must involve public juris and public rights to be taxable.

"The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."

/City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)/

Every transaction involving the government has two parties: The payer and the payee. That is why the tax is upon both "trade or business" earnings and "U.S. source" earnings: The payer is always a public office in the government and the recipient is either a resident alien individual or a nonresident alien "individual" receiving payments from this "U.S. source" if the transaction is taxable to EITHER party. This is made clear by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), which says that the transaction is not "gross income" and is "foreign" and beyond the jurisdiction of the I.R.C. if it does not involve one of these two aspects, meaning if it does not involve a public officer payer or an "individual" recipient:

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(31) Foreign estate or trust

(A) Foreign estate The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the Whenever a taxable payment occurs, an information return is filed usually by the payer, who in law must always be treated as a public officer in the government, meaning a “source within the United States” (government, not geographical USA). 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) says that the information return can only be filed in connection with a "trade or business", meaning that at least one end of the transaction must involve a public officer in the government.

Our job is to figure out WHICH end of the transaction is a public officer, because that is the only one subject to the code and therefore a "taxpayer". The PAYOR can be a public officer and therefore a "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) while the PAYEE can be a nonresident and a "nontaxpayer". It makes no sense to report a transaction or withhold, in fact, if the PAYEE is not a “taxpayer”.

26 U.S.C. §6041 gives us a clue to the puzzle: it says the PAYER must file the information return and is engaged in a "trade or business", but it doesn't say that the PAYEE ALSO is involved in a "trade or business" as a public officer. Therefore, as a bare minimum every transaction involves a PAYER who is a public officer and therefore a "taxpayer" engaged in a "trade or business". We still don't yet know how the PAYEE would be treated in such a transaction, but as a bare minimum, we know that it is in receipt of "U.S. source" income from a public officer within the "United States" government. Some clues, though:

1. Congress only has jurisdiction over PUBLIC activity. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate private conduct is "repugnant to the Constitution". The constitution exists, in fact, to keep private conduct beyond the reach of the government. Consequently, BOTH parties to the transaction must be acting in a public capacity as public officers and therefore "taxpayers".
2. If the PAYER was a public officer and a "taxpayer" but the PAYEE was not, then the I.R.C. would be injuring private parties and interfering with the right to contract of both parties by imposing duties above and beyond the contract between them. The Constitution was created to protect your right to contract, and therefore they can't tax or withhold within such a transaction. Frank Kowalik in his wonderful book "IRS Humbug" analyzes this aspect of all such payments and agrees with us on this point.
3. 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) uses the phrase "another person" to refer to the payee. so the PAYEE obviously must also be a "taxpayer" and a "person" subject to the code in order for the reporting to occur. Furthermore, if the recipient were NOT such a "person", they would have no liability and therefore would also not be subject to withholding. Withholding is only required for "taxpayers".

An example of payment that would not be taxable or reportable is one made to a nonresident who is not an alien or an "individual". This would be the case with those in the military who file nonresident alien withholding paperwork such as the Form W-8BEN, who modify block 3 of the form to indicate that they are "nonresident" but not "individuals", and who are enlisted rather than commissioned officers. When the transaction involves only one "taxpayer", the code does NOT create a liability to report against the withholding agent because the recipient is not a "person" (or "another person" as referred to in 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) and 26 U.S.C. §1461) as a nonresident. The code is civil law that is not enforceable against nonresidents. All civil law attaches to the choice of domicile of the parties and cannot operate beyond the territory of the law making power unless:
1. A contract or franchise extends its reach beyond the territory of the sovereign. That franchise or contract, if it is a GOVERNMENT contract, however, CANNOT operate within a state of the Union protected by the Constitution because the rights of those domiciled there are “unalienable”, which means that they can’t be sold, transferred, or bargained away through any commercial process. Franchises such as a “trade or business” are commercial processes and contracts.

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, -“[Declaration of Independence]

2. It operates on a domiciliary temporarily abroad but not within a state of the Union under 26 U.S.C. §911.

26 U.S.C. §1461 makes the PAYER liable to deduct and withhold payment to another "person" but a nonresident cannot be a "person" within the meaning of this civil provision because all civil law attaches to one’s choice of domicile:

The foregoing considerations would lead, in case of doubt, to a construction of any statute as intended to be confined in its operation and effect to the territorial limits over which the lawmaker has general and legitimate power. 'All legislation is prima facie territorial.' Ex parte Blain, L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 527, 528; State v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 499; People v. Merrill, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 590, 596. Words having universal scope, such as 'every contract in restraint of trade,' 'every person who shall monopolize,' etc., will be taken, as a matter of course, to mean only everyone subject to such legislation, not all that the legislator subsequently may be able to catch. In the case of the present statute, the improbability of the United States attempting to make acts done in Panama or Costa Rica criminal is obvious, yet the law begins by making criminal the acts for which it gives a right to sue. We think it entirely plain that what the defendant did in Panama or Costa Rica is not within the scope of the statute so far as the present suit is concerned. Other objections of a serious nature are urged, but need not be discussed.

The phrase "general or legitimate power" imply "general and exclusive jurisdiction", not subject matter jurisdiction. The feds only have general jurisdiction within federal territory. In a state, they have limited and subject matter jurisdiction ONLY and NOT general jurisdiction. That is not to say that they don't have jurisdiction over ALL PEOPLE within a state. They always have jurisdiction over those domiciled on federal territory, regardless of where they are situated, including in a state, but they don't have such jurisdiction within a state of those domiciled outside of federal territory and who therefore are not statutory "U.S. citizens", "U.S. residents", and "U.S. persons". The following article emphasizes this point, but is FLAT OUT WRONG in concluding that District Courts in the States of the Union are Article III courts. They have NEVER been given this power. The only thing they can or do is officiate over are Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 franchises such as income taxes, Social Security, etc. and crimes committed on federal territory where they enjoy general jurisdiction. The What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012 proves this with thousands of pages of evidence.

Conflicts in a Nutshell

§22 Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Because of our federal system, in which more than 50 sovereigns function within the framework of a national sovereign, the federal court structure is unique in that its principal trial court, the U.S. District Court, is a court of limited rather than general jurisdiction. The state is left to supply the "general" court. The federal constitution permits Congress to confer on federal courts of its creation only such jurisdiction as is outlined in section 2 of Article III. Hence the source of these federal limitations is the constitution itself.
Even within the federal system, however, one can find courts of general jurisdiction. Areas within the jurisdiction of the United States that lack their own sovereignity, and thus a court system of their own, must depend on the federal legislature for a complete court system: the District of Columbia and the few remaining territories of the United States are in this category. For them, Congress has the power (from Article I of the constitution for the District and from Article IV of the constitution for the territories) to create courts of general jurisdiction. But Congress has no such power with respect to the states, for which reason all of the federal courts sitting within the states, including the district courts, must trace their powers to those within the limits of Article III and are hence courts of "limited" jurisdiction.

This is one reason why issues of subject matter jurisdiction arise more frequently in the federal system than in state courts. Another is that for a variety of reasons, federal jurisdiction is often preferred by a plaintiff who has a choice of forums. Taken together, this means that more cases near the subject matter jurisdiction borderline appear in the federal than in the state courts.

One of the major sources of federal subject matter jurisdiction is the diversity of citizenship of the parties. It authorizes federal suit even though the dispute involves no issues of federal law. The statute that authorizes this jurisdiction, however (28 U.S.C.A. 1332), requires that there be more than $75,000 in controversy. A plaintiff near that figure and who wants federal jurisdiction will try for it, while a defendant who prefers that the state courts hear the case may try to get it dismissed from federal court on the ground that it can't support a judgment for more than $75,000.

Another major source of federal jurisdiction is that the case "arises under" federal law, the phrase the constitution itself uses (Article III, §2). Unless it so arises, there is no subject matter jurisdiction under this caption, and whether it does or does not is often the subject of a dispute between the parties to a federal action.

For these and other reasons, the study of "subject matter" jurisdiction is a more extensive one in federal than in state practice. Indeed, a law school course on federal courts is likely to be devoted in the main to subject matter jurisdiction, with a correspondingly similar time allotment left for mere procedure, rather the reverse of what usually occurs in a course studying the state courts.

So there are two criteria: The PAYER and the PAYEE must BOTH be "persons" and therefore "taxpayers" within the I.R.C., which is civil law that attaches to their mutual domiciles, in order for either reporting or withholding to lawfully occur. If only the PAYER is a "person" but the payee is NOT, then the transaction is not "gross income" TO THE PAYEE.

The term "person" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c) to include "individuals", but "individual" in turn does not include statutory or constitutional "citizens" per 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3). Therefore, both the PAYER and the PAYEE MUST be aliens and not citizens engaged in privileged activities. See:

Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Online, Form #10.004, Cites by Topic: Individual http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/individual.htm

All of these games with "words of art" relating to Effectively Connected Income (ECI) are designed to disguise and confuse WHICH end of the transaction is a "taxpayer": the PAYER, the PAYEE, or BOTH. Statutes such as 26 U.S.C. §881(a), for instance, refer to the "recipient", meaning the PAYEE:

(1) interest (other than original issue discount as defined in section 1273), dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, and other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income,

(2) gains described in section 631 (b) or ( c),

(3) in the case of—

(3) Other income from sources within United States

All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

An amount can only be "received" by a PAYEE.

1. We already know the PAYER is a public officer and a "taxpayer" and therefore a "person" under the I.R.C. because 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) admitted he/she/it had to be engaged in a “trade or business” in order to report the transaction.

2. 26 U.S.C. §1461 also said that the PAYER is only liable if BOTH ends of the transaction are "persons" and therefore "taxpayers". A "nonresident" would NOT be subject to the code and therefore NOT a "person", "individual", or "taxpayer". See: Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

3. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) also says that when NEITHER the PAYER nor the PAYEE are engaged in public office ("trade or business") and the payment does not originate from "sources within the United States", meaning the de facto government, then the transaction isn't taxable.

26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) at first glance might appear to confuse this explanation, but in fact it doesn’t. It implies that “sources within the United States” and “trade or business” are synonymous when in fact they aren’t the same for BOTH parties to the transaction:

There is no contradiction because the PAYER is ALWAYS a public officer and therefore a "U.S. source" and a "taxpayer" on one side of the coin while the PAYEE can be a nonresident and yet also not a "taxpayer", "individual", or "person" on the other side of the same coin. Everyone serving in a public office within the U.S. government is, by definition, a "source within the United States" if they are making a payment to someone else in their official capacity. Once again: EVERY TRANSACTION has two ends, and it depends which end you are looking at. You need to be VERY clear from the language which end it is and what you are looking for, because the language will try to confuse the ends to make it look like EVERYONE is a "taxpayer", "individual", and therefore "person". Clues to which end of the transaction they are talking about:

1. PAYER: Words used would be "paid", "making payment".

2. PAYEE: Words used would be "received", "amount received".

Another fact is also important that people like Pete Hendrickson chronically overlook. Yes, an information return always involves a "trade or business" because 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) says so. However, does it ALSO imply or require or impute that the PAYEE is engaged in a "trade or business"? A worthy exercise would be to go through all the instruction forms for information returns and the IRS publications to see what they say about WHICH ends of the transaction must be engaged in a "trade or business". We did a cursory look and they almost always talk to the FILER of the information return and use the phrase "YOUR trade or business", as though they are implying that the PAYER is the ONLY one engaged in the public office.

How then, does the PAYEE become involved in a "trade or business" if the information return doesn't imply it? Below are the MAIN techniques:

1. Taking deductions under 26 U.S.C. §162, all of which require those taking them to be engaged in a "trade or business". See section 5.6.12.15.1 later

2. Using a RESIDENT tax form, the 1040. The "United States" that a person is a "resident" (alien) in relation to is the GOVERNMENT, and not the geographical USA. The "United States" one is a "resident" of is the government, and the "person" who is the resident is the public office within the government, and not the human being filling the office. See section 5.6.12.15.4 later

3. Using government de facto license numbers such as SSNs and TINs. 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b) says that these numbers are only required by those engaged in a "trade or business" and who are "U.S. persons", meaning people domiciled on federal territory that is not part of any state of the Union. See section 5.6.12.15.3 later and also the following:

To summarize the findings of this section:

1. The language within the I.R.C. surrounding the use of the word “trade or business” is very deliberately and cunningly trying to confuse you about which end of the transaction is the public officer and therefore the "taxpayer" because they want you to assume EVERYONE is a "taxpayer", "person", and "individual". If they were more honest, they would have referred directly to the words "PAYER" and "PAYEE".

2. Every transaction has TWO parties, a PAYER, and a PAYEE.

2.1. The PAYER is always a public officer and a "taxpayer", and therefore a "person" and "U.S. person" (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) ) subject to federal law. A "public office" making payments to a nonresident, for instance, is a "U.S. source" and the PAYER is a "trade or business" but the payee is NOT. Some Payers unlawfully compel the nonresident to "elect" themself into public office by compelling them to procure and use an identifying numbers before they will make the payment. This is a criminal violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(a)(8) and 18 U.S.C. §912 and causes perjury on the Forms SS-5, W-7, and W-9 in the case of a nonresident domiciled in a state of the union who does not ALREADY occupy a public office BEFORE they made application for the number.

2.2. The PAYEE most often is, in reality, a nonresident who is neither a “person”, “individual”, nor "taxpayer” but who wrongfully thinks they are because of the deliberate and calculated confusion in the code you point out.

3. Everything the PAYEE receives from the PAYER is, by definition, "U.S. source income" because the "U.S." means the government, and not the geographical sense. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) is a red herring, because it uses the phrase "geographical sense", but nowhere is the “geographical sense” of the word ever expressly invoked throughout the entire 9500 page Internal Revenue Code.

3.1. The payment is ECI IN RELATION TO THE PAYER while also being. . .

3.2. "U.S. source" and NOT ECI in relation to a PAYEE who is NOT engaged in a "trade or business" or who is nonresident.

3.3. It is only taxable, reportable, or subject to withholding if BOTH the PAYER and the PAYEE are "persons", "U.S. persons", and "taxpayers" domiciled on federal territory. It isn't taxable if either end of the transaction is a nonresident and therefore not a "person", "individual", or "taxpayer". Domicile is the origin of the liability for tax. That is why there are so many statutes mentioned in the Nonresident Alien position booklet that say that nonresidents don't earn reportable income. This is made clear below:

5.6.12.8 Willful government deception in connection with a “trade or business”

It's pretty obvious that your public servants don't want you to know about this "trade or business" scam, because then the gravy train of plunder and their welfare check would have to stop and they would have to get a REAL job. What steps have they taken to obfuscate the truth about this very important issue? Here is a brief summary of their dishonest techniques:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. They made it “appear” in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) that income not connected with a “trade or business” from within the “United States” was subject to mandatory 30% tax. However:

   1.1. 26 CFR §1.871-7(d)(2)(ii) says that the nonresident alien must be present in the United States for 183 days out of the year or more in order to be subject to the taxes on sale or exchange of capital assets, in which case he isn’t a nonresident alien anymore by the "presence test". Quite a scam, huh?

   1.2. 26 CFR §1.871-7(b)(1) says that the following types of income from within the District of Columbia are taxable to “nonresident alien individuals” not engaged in a "trade or business": "interest, dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, and emoluments, but other items of fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, or income are also subject to the tax, as, for instance, royalties, including royalties for the use of patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, and other like property". The Classification Act of 1923, 42 Stat. 1988, then defines all these types of income as being from the federal government only. See our article on this fraud: The Classification Act of 1923, section 6.5.16 later.

2. They never explicitly state the simple truth anywhere in any IRS publication that we could find that if you aren’t involved in a “trade or business” within the “United States” as a “person” who has a domicile there (such as a statutory "U.S. citizen" or "resident alien"), then you don’t earn “gross income” and are a “nontaxpayer” not subject to the I.R.C. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) are the only places that make this fact very clear, but it isn’t simply and explicitly explained anywhere else in the code or regulations, and these sections are something that could easily be overlooked by the average American.

3. They did not directly state the excise taxable activities subject to tax in a single, simple list anywhere within the Internal Revenue Code. Instead, they left that statement to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury, which he did in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1). This section of regulations is one that few people read or refer to, and therefore they have kept the truth out of plain view of most tax professionals.

4. Those who have read and understand 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1) and who raise it in litigation have been persecuted and slandered by the IRS and corrupted federal judges and falsely called “frivolous” without justifying why it is frivolous. However, they are the frivolous ones because no federal judge that we know of has ever or would ever deal in their ruling directly with the issue of the “excise taxable activities” identified in 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1) because they would have to admit that:

4.1. Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is an indirect excise tax.

4.2. People and property within states of the Union are not the proper subject of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code.

4.3. The only “taxable activities” under the I.R.C. are either public offices in the United States government or “foreign commerce” of federally registered corporations.

4.4. Natural persons can only be involved in a “taxable activity” if they hold a public office in the United States government or a federal territory or possession, or are acting in the capacity as an officer of a federally chartered corporation that is involved in foreign commerce licensed under 26 U.S.C. §7001. Remember: The way an activity becomes excise taxable is the issuance of a “license”. Requesting a “license” or accepting a government “privilege” is the essence of how a person volunteers to pay an excise tax.

Now, let’s look at some of the devious ways that the IRS creates false presumptions to deceive people domiciled in the states of the Union into admitting under penalty of perjury on the wrong tax return, the 1040, that they are involved in a “trade or business” and that they are subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction, even though we know that neither is true. We refer you to IRS Publication 519, Year 2000 version, which says starting on p. 17:

The 30% Tax

Tax at a 30% (or lower treaty) rate applies to certain items of income or gains from U.S. sources but only if the items are not effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business.

Fixed or Determinable Income

The 30% (or lower treaty) rate applies to the gross amount of U.S. source fixed or determinable annual or periodic gains, profits, or income

Social Security Benefits
A nonresident alien must include 85% of any U.S. social security benefit (and the social security equivalent part of a tier 1 railroad retirement benefit) in U.S. source fixed or determinable annual or periodic income. This income is exempt under some tax treaties. See Table 1 in Publication 901, U.S. Tax Treaties, for a list of treaties that exempt U.S. social security benefits from U.S. tax.

Well, first of all, the above statement is misleading, because they never defined the word “income” and the Supreme Court said in Eisner v. Macomber that the Congress can’t define it and that ONLY the Constitution can define it, so they can’t write any law authorizing the IRS to define it either! So what “income” are they talking about here? The only thing the Supreme Court has ever defined “income” to mean was profit from a corporation involved in foreign commerce, as we pointed out earlier in section 5.6.5. Why didn’t they mention this? Because they don’t want you to know!

Secondly, the only thing that it can be talking about is earnings not connected with a “trade or business” described in 26 U.S.C. §871(a), which is the only place the 30% tax rate appears. Those earnings can only relate to payments originating from “sources within the United States” earned by “nonresident alien individuals”, because that is what 26 U.S.C. §871 says. What are the items of income” that is subject to this 30% tax? These “items of income” are listed in 26 U.S.C. §§862(a) and 863(a). Most of these “items of income” are then elsewhere excluded, as we showed earlier in this section.

We showed, for instance that:

1. Those who are “nonresident aliens” but not “nonresident alien individuals” are nowhere mentioned as having any liability at all. This includes those domiciled in states of the Union who are not “aliens” and therefore not “individuals”. The liability to file a tax return described in 26 CFR §1.6012-1(b) only applies to “nonresident alien individuals”, not “nonresident aliens” who are NOT “individuals”. For further details, see section 5.6.13 and following later for details.

2. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31)(A) says that earnings not connected with a “trade or business” and not originating from the “United States” are a “foreign estate” not includible in “gross income”. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) defines this “United States” to mean the District of Columbia or federal statutory “State” (4 U.S.C. §110(d) ) but not a state of the Union. Such an estate, including the earnings of people who are part of such an estate, would be “not subject” to the tax but at the same time not “exempt”.

3. 26 U.S.C. §864(b)(1)(A) excludes earnings of “nonresident alien individuals” who are working for nonresident aliens, even though 26 U.S.C. §862(a)(3) would appear to create the false impression that such earnings are includible in “gross income”.

4. Self-employment income is not counted as “gross income” under 26 U.S.C. §1402 if it does not involve a “trade or business”.

5. Under 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv), only income “effectively connected with a trade or business” is includible in gross income for biological people.

So what is left after one excludes the earnings indicated in the above requirements because the party being taxed is a “national” and a “nonresident alien” who is not an “individual” or an alien and all of whose earnings are not “effectively connected with a trade or business” and originate outside the statutory “United States*” (federal territory)? CORPORATE PROFIT OF A FEDERAL AND NOT STATE CORPORATION INVOLVED IN FOREIGN COMMERCE! That’s what we already showed the Supreme Court said constituted “income” within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment:

"The grant of the power to lay and collect taxes [on foreign commerce within the states] is, like the power to regulate commerce, made in general terms, and has never been understood to interfere with the exercise of the same power by the State; and hence has been drawn an argument which has been applied to the question under consideration. But the two grants are not, it is conceived, similar in their terms or their nature. Although many of the powers formerly [22 U.S. 1, 199] exercised by the States, are transferred to the government of the Union, yet the State governments remain, and constitute a most important part of our system. The power of taxation is indispensable to their existence, and is a power which, in its own nature, is capable of residing in, and being exercised by, different authorities at the same time. We are accustomed to see it placed, for different purposes, in different hands. Taxation is the simple operation of taking small portions from a perpetually accumulating mass, susceptible of almost infinite division; and a power in one to take what is necessary for certain purposes, is not, in its nature, incompatible with a power in another to take what is necessary for other purposes. Congress is authorized to lay and collect taxes [on foreign commerce] only within the States, and to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax [internally] for the support of their own governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States [to tax INTERNALLY], an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States [to tax EXTERNALLY]. In imposing taxes for State purposes, they are not doing what Congress is empowered to do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within the exclusive province of the States. When, then, each government exercises the power of taxation, neither is exercising the power of the other. But, when a State proceeds to regulate commerce with foreign nations, or among the several States, it is exercising the very power that is granted to Congress, [22 U.S. 1, 200] and is doing the very thing which Congress is authorized to do. There is no analogy, then, between the power of taxation and the power of regulating commerce."

[26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1) lists all these taxable activities involving foreign commerce, and they all come under treaties or are connected with what is called a Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC) or a Foreign Sales Corporation (FSC): These weasels are slippery, aren’t they? What they are trying to do is make an exclusively municipal excise tax that only applies to federal territory “look” like it applies to everyone in the country by encrypting and hiding the truth using “words of art”. They contradict themselves in their own publication, because elsewhere, they admit that those who have income from outside the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory) that is not connected with “trade or business” don’t earn “gross income”:

Income Subject to Tax

Income from sources outside the United States that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States is not taxable if you receive it while you are a nonresident alien. The income is not taxable even if you earned it while you were a resident alien or if you became a resident alien or a U.S. citizen after receiving it and before the end of the year.

The above claim within IRS Publication 519 originates from 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), which we cited at the beginning of this article. What they are saying is that only earnings from within the statutory “United States” (federal territory) and which are not connected with a “trade or business” are subject to the 30% tax rate, and that the income must be earned by “nonresident alien individuals” who are aliens and not “nationals”, because citizens can’t be taxed at home and aliens and nonresident aliens are excluded. The only thing left is foreign “persons”, such as foreign corporations. If they simply commute daily to work there, they are "nonresident aliens" and therefore don't earn "gross income". Anything not connected with a “trade or business” that is earned outside of the statutory “United States” (federal territory) is therefore not includible as “gross income” at all. Anything earned inside the statutory “United States” (federal territory) in connection with a public office is includible in “gross income” at the graduated, instead of 30% rate. Even then, one must consent voluntarily to be a “taxpayer” because there is no statute making anyone liable in either the D.C. Code or the I.R.C. That process is done by submitting a form and assessing oneself with a liability even though there is none. Once they “volunteer” by filling out and submitting the WRONG form, the 1040 form, and become “subject to” the I.R.C., they become virtual inhabitants of the District of Columbia under the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d):
If they REALLY had jurisdiction in a state of the Union to tax, do you think they would need provisions like those above? Note also that what statutory “citizens and residents” have in common is a legal “domicile” in the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory) pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3). When a person domiciled in a state of the Union who is rightfully a “nonresident alien” NON-individual fills out and sends in a 1040 form, rather than the correct 1040NR form, they are assumed to be a “citizen or resident of the United States” and an “individual”, meaning a “resident alien” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). The “United States” in the context of Subtitle A of the I.R.C. means federal territory that is not part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any constitutional state of the Union. It is redefined in other titles to include the 50 states, but in Subtitle A, its definition is limited to that found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). Therefore, they are claiming that they are domiciled on federal territory within the statutory but not constitutional “United States”. Did you know that by submitting an IRS Form 1040, you were making a “voluntary election” to be treated as a domiciliary of the federal zone? They didn't tell you THAT in the IRS publications, now did they? Why not? Because they want to manufacture your legal ignorance in the public schools and then use their incomplete and deceptive publications to “harvest” the fruits of your ignorance. The Soviets called these people “Useful Idiots”. A fool and his money are soon parted. The public schools are the fool factory and the 1040 is the indenture that makes you into their willing, voluntary indentured slave. Below is what the IRS Published Products Catalog, Year 2003 says about the purpose of the form 1040:

Under I.R.C. §7701(a)(39) above, they then become the equivalent of “virtual inhabitants” of the District of Columbia. If we then look in the District of Columbia Code, we find that there isn’t a liability statute in that code either so the IRS still requires our consent to call us a “taxpayer” no matter which way you look at it. This is covered in much more detail in the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, Chapter 3, section 3.5.3 if you want to investigate further. We also know that kidnapping is highly illegal under 18 U.S.C. §1201, and that making us into a “virtual inhabitant” of anything is the equivalent of kidnapping if done without our consent. Therefore, indirectly we must conclude that anyone who does not have a domicile on federal territory in the statutory but not constitutional “United States” must volunteer or consent to be a “taxpayer” before their “res” or legal identity can be transported to the federal zone. That process of volunteering is done using the IRS Form 1040 and is done under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) for those who file as “nonresident aliens”.

It gets worse, folks. Let’s look at some of the deceit in IRS Publication 519 that tries to convince people falsely that they are involved in a “trade or business”, or tricks them into admitting they are in the process of pursuing the “privilege” of... having additional deductions. Below is what they say about how you can increase your deductions by claiming you are engaged in a “trade or business”, from p. 23 of the Year 2000 edition of IRS Publication 519:

Itemized Deductions

Nonresident aliens can claim some of the same itemized deductions that resident aliens can claim. However, nonresident aliens can claim itemized deductions only if they have income effectively connected with their U.S. trade or business.

Nonresident Aliens

You can deduct certain itemized deductions if you receive income effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business. These deductions include state and local income taxes, charitable contributions to U.S. organizations, casualty and theft losses, and miscellaneous deductions. Use Schedule A of Form 1040NR to claim itemized deductions.

If you are filing Form 1040NR–EZ, you can only claim a deduction for state or local income taxes. If you are claiming any other deduction, you must file Form 1040NR.

[IRS Publication 519, Year 2000, p. 23]

Why do they do the above? Well, those who know they have no effectively connected income and therefore have a zero tax liability don’t need deductions because they don’t owe anything! The only reason to pursue a deduction is because one has “gross income”, and few Americans we have ever met domiciled in the states even have “gross income”.

Later on, in this same IRS Publication 519, we see that the IRS tries to create a false “presumption” in their favor by trying to convince people they are usually involved in a “trade or business”. Notice that they never explicitly define what it means from the I.R.C, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”. As a matter of fact, if they DID explain this definition in their publication, boy would they ever have a LOT of explaining to do on their phone support line, so they conveniently leave it out. They don’t mention its real definition because that would render everything listed below as basically irrelevant and moot. The reader would simply throw Pub 519 in the trash at that point and conclude he is a “nontaxpayer”, so they instead tip toe around the definition and give examples without relating them to the legal definition in the I.R.C. Below is the IRS Publication 519, Year 2000 definition of “trade or Business in the United States” from pp. 15-16:

Trade or Business in the United States

Generally, you must be engaged in a trade or business during the tax year to be able to treat income received in that year as effectively connected with that trade or business. Whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States depends on the nature of your activities. The discussions that follow will help you determine whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

Personal Services

If you perform personal services in the United States [federal territory] at any time during the tax year, you usually are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

TIP: Certain compensation paid to a nonresident alien by a foreign employer is not included in gross income. For more information, see Services Performed for Foreign Employer in chapter 3.

Other Trade or Business Activities

Other examples of being engaged in a trade or business in the United States follow.

Students and trainees. You are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States if you are temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under a “F,” “J,” “M,” or “Q” visa. A nonresident alien temporarily present in the United States under a “J” visa includes a nonresident alien individual admitted to the United States as an exchange visitor under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961. The taxable part of any scholarship or fellowship grant that is U.S. source income is treated as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States.

Business operations. If you own and operate a business in the United States selling services, products, or merchandise, you are, with certain exceptions (not noted), engaged in a trade or business in the United States.
Partnerships. If you are a member of a partnership that at any time during the tax year is engaged in a trade or business in the United States, you are considered to be engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

Beneficiary of an estate or trust. If you are the beneficiary of an estate or trust that is engaged in a trade or business in the United States, you are treated as being engaged in the same trade or business.

Trading in stocks, securities, and commodities.

If your only U.S. business activity is trading in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a U.S. resident [alien] broker or other agent, you are not engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

For transactions in stocks or securities, this applies to any nonresident alien, including a dealer or broker in stocks and securities.

For transactions in commodities, this applies to commodities that are usually traded on an organized commodity exchange and to transactions that are usually carried out at such an exchange.

U.S. office or other fixed place of business at any time during the tax year through which, or by the direction of which, you carry out your transactions in stocks, securities, or commodities.

Trading for a nonresident alien’s own account. You are not engaged in a trade or business in the United States if trading for your own account in stocks, securities, or commodities is your only U.S. business activity.

This applies even if the trading takes place while you are present in the United States or is done by your employee or your broker or other agent.

This does not apply to trading for your own account if you are a dealer in stocks, securities, or commodities. This does not necessarily mean, however, that as a dealer you are considered to be engaged in a trade or business in the United States. Determine that based on the facts and circumstances in each case or under the rules given above in Trading in stocks, securities, and commodities.

Effectively Connected Income

If you are engaged in a U.S. trade or business, all income, gain, or loss for the tax year that you get from sources within the United States (other than certain investment income) is treated as effectively connected income. This applies whether or not there is any connection between the income and the trade or business being carried on in the United States during the tax year.

Two tests, described under Investment Income, determine whether certain items of investment income (such as interest, dividends, and royalties) are treated as effectively connected with that business.

In limited circumstances, some kinds of foreign source income may be treated as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. For a discussion of these rules, see Foreign Income, later.

[IRS Publication 519, Year 2000, pp. 15-16]

The first thing you notice is the statement: “Whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States depends on the nature of your activities”. That statement is a tacit admission that the income tax is in fact an indirect excise tax on activities. They also said:

“If you perform personal services in the United States [federal territory] at any time during the tax year, you usually are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States.”

Well, let's look at the definition of "personal services" used above to see what these weasels are up to:

26 CFR Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.

(b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.

Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual’s capacity as an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).
Notice that they used the word "means" instead of "includes" in the above definition and DID NOT confine the definition by stating "for the purposes of this section" or "for the purposes of this chapter". Instead, they provided an unambiguous universal definition of "personal services" which applies throughout the ENTIRE Internal Revenue Code and they indicated effectively that you aren't performing "personal services" UNLESS you are engaged in a "trade or business". So what they are doing when they say "If you perform personal services in the United States [federal territory] at any time during the tax year, you usually are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States." is effectively making a circular statement that confirms itself. This is called a "tautology", which is a word that is defined using itself. It's only purpose is self-serving deception. Can you see how insidious this deception and double-speak is? It's all designed to take attention away from the nature of the taxed activity so that people will think the tax is on the money instead of the activity, isn’t it? If they admitted that the income tax was an indirect excise tax on activities, they would dig a DEEP hole for themselves that would start an avalanche of people leaving the tax rolls. That is why they never come out and say EXACTLY what a "trade or business" is or how their explanation relates to the definition of a “trade or business” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), which describes it as a "public office". When the Joint Committee on Taxation published "public office" to fulfill their office? Furthermore, under federal law, it is a conflict of interest to maintain any private business activities outside the workplace that might jeopardize one's objectivity. But then later on p. 26 of the same publication, under “Dual Status Tax Year”, they finally admit the truth:

Income from sources outside the United States [federal territory] that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States is not taxable if you receive it while you are a nonresident alien. The income is not taxable even if you earned it while you were a resident alien or if you became a resident alien or a U.S. citizen after receiving it and before the end of the year.

[IRS Publication 519, Year 2000, p. 26]

An excellent way to confirm the conclusions of this section is to read the publications of the Joint Committee on Taxation. We would like to quote from JCT document 85-199 entitled “Explanation of Proposed Income Tax Treaty Between The United States and the United Kingdom”. You can get this publication at:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/JointComteeOnTax/85199-US-GB-TreatyExplan.pdf

Now the excerpt, from pp. 4-5 is VERY revealing. We boldface and underline the important portions to bring attention to them. We have also added bracketed material to amplify exactly what they mean based on discussion earlier in this chapter and based on the definitions of terms found in the Internal Revenue Code:

A. U.S. Tax Rules

The United States taxes U.S. citizens [people born anywhere in the country but domiciled on federal territory in the District of Columbia or territories but excluding those domiciled in constitutional states of the Union], residents [who are all "aliens"], and corporations [registered ONLY in the District of Columbia and EXCLUDING state-only corporations] on their worldwide income [connected with a "trade or business"], whether derived in the United States [federal territory] or abroad [outside the states of the Union]. The United States generally taxes nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations on all their income that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States (sometimes referred to as "effectively connected income"). The United States also taxes nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations on certain U.S.-source income that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business.

Income of a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States generally is subject to U.S. tax in the same manner and at the same rates as income of a U.S. person. Deductions are allowed to the extent that they are related to effectively connected income. A foreign corporation also is subject to a flat 30–percent branch profits tax on its "dividend equivalent amount," which is a measure of the effectively connected earnings and profits of the corporation that are removed in any year from the conduct of its U.S. trade or business. In addition, a foreign corporation is subject to a flat 30–percent branch-level excess interest tax on the excess of the amount of interest that is deducted by the foreign corporation in computing its effectively connected income over the amount of interest that is paid by its U.S. trade or business. U.S.-source fixed or determinable annual or periodical income of a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation (including, for example, interest, dividends, rents, royalties, salaries, and annuities) that is not effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business is subject to U.S. tax at a rate of 30 percent of the gross amount paid. Certain insurance premiums earned by a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation are subject to U.S. tax at a rate of 1 or 4 percent of the premiums. These taxes generally are collected by means of withholding.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Specific statutory exemptions from the 30-percent withholding tax are provided. For example, certain original issue discount and certain interest on deposits with banks or savings institutions are exempt from the 30-percent withholding tax. An exemption also is provided for certain interest paid on portfolio debt obligations. In addition, income of a foreign government or international organization from investments in U.S. securities is exempt from U.S. tax.

U.S.-source capital gains of a nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation that are not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business generally are exempt from U.S. tax, with two exceptions: (1) gains realized by a nonresident alien individual who is present in the United States [federal territory] for at least 183 days during the taxable year, and (2) certain gains from the disposition of interests in U.S. real property.

Rules are provided for the determination of the source of income. For example, interest and dividends paid by a U.S. citizen or resident or by a U.S. corporation generally are considered U.S.-source income. Conversely, dividends and interest paid by a foreign corporation generally are treated as foreign-source income. Special rules apply to treat as foreign-source income (in whole or in part) interest paid by certain U.S. corporations with foreign businesses and to treat as U.S.-source income (in whole or in part) dividends paid by certain foreign corporations with U.S. businesses. Rents and royalties paid for the use of property in the United States are considered U.S.-source income.

They basically admitted everything we just got through saying throughout the preceding discussion, folks! They are very cleverly hiding the taxable activity by referring to it as a “trade or business”, which is a “word of art”, and not defining which “U.S.” they are talking about or the fact that it only includes the District of Columbia. They also admitted the circumstances under which the 30% tax in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) applies. Recall that this section identified a 30% tax on nonresident alien income from sources inside the District of Columbia which is not connected with a “trade or business”. Well, they just explained that the tax is only paid by foreign corporations as an indirect tax upon income derived from a “trade or business”. Therefore, ALL income that is taxable under the I.R.C. Subtitle A derives exclusively from a “trade or business” and a “public office” in one way or another.

The first sentence of the above also tries to deceive the reader by saying that "U.S. citizens", "residents", and "corporations" are taxed on their "worldwide income" WITHOUT mentioning the requirement for being engaged in a "trade or business".

We know based on our earlier analysis, however, that under Subtitle A of the I.R.C., all natural persons who are "taxpayers" under the code, whether married, unmarried, heads of Household, etc. MUST be engaged in a "trade or business" in order to earn "taxable income". The taxable activity for international corporations is "foreign commerce" rather than the "trade or business" under other subtitles of the code, and the above tries to lump all of them together and thereby create an absolutely false presumption in the mind of the reader. Therefore, such a claim can ONLY apply to artificial entities engaged in foreign commerce under Subtitle D of the I.R.C. The only thing we didn't cover earlier was the difference in treatment between corporations and natural persons. In that scenario, under I.R.C. Subtitle D, these corporations are taxed on their worldwide income that derives from imports, which counts as "foreign commerce" under the constitution. These conclusions are supported by the Supreme Court, which said:

"The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."

[Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

5.6.12.9 Proving the government deception yourself

Another way to confirm the conclusions of this section is to look at older versions of the U.S. Code or Statutes at Large that show the definition of "gross income". Politicians of old were much more honest and direct than the weasels and thieves and traitors we have in office today, so their laws told the truth plainly. It wasn't until the socialists began to take over starting in 1913 and peaking with Franklin Roosevelt in 1930’s that the I.R.C. really started to show signs of willful deceit. Below are two very old definitions of "gross income" that show the truth plainly to prove our point. These versions did not use the "trade or business" trick so they had to state the truth plainly:

- 26 U.S.C.A. 954 (1928 code):

You can also look at our resource on “gross income”, which includes the above, at:

5.6.12.10 How nonresidents in states of the Union are deceived and coerced to enlist in the scam

What about those who are smart enough to avoid the “trade or business” scam by properly declaring their status as:

1. “nonresident aliens”
2. No income “effectively connected with a trade or business”
3. No sources of income inside the “United States” (District of Criminals)?

How does the IRS trap them? The IRS tricks them into volunteering into their jurisdiction using the IRS Form W-4. The regulations say that those who submit an IRS Form W-4:

1. MUST include all earnings listed on the W-2 as “gross income” on their tax return under 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1.
2. Are consenting to be bound by a private legal “contract” between you and the government under 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1. It doesn’t say that on the form, but the regulations tell the truth plainly. The form itself simply identifies itself as an “Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate” and nowhere uses the word “agreement” or “contract”. The reason it doesn’t is because the government doesn’t want you to know that you are signing a binding contract or that you have the choice NOT to sign or consent to it. This is obviously entrapment and does not constitute informed consent, but fraud.

Here is the regulation that proves this:

Title 26
CHAPTER I
SUBCHAPTER C
PART 31
Subpart E
Sec. 31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general. An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of Sec. 31.3401(a)-3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includable in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. (b) Form and duration of agreement. (1)(i) Except as provided in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, an employee who desires to enter into an agreement under section 3402(p) shall furnish his employer with Form W-4 (withholding exemption certificate) executed in accordance with the provisions of section 3402(f) and the regulations thereunder. The furnishing of such Form W-4 shall constitute a request for withholding.

Remember, however, that no law or court or government has the power to interfere with your right to contract. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court says on this subject:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

"Independent of these views, there are many considerations which lead to the conclusion that the power to impair contracts [either the Constitution or the Holy Bible], by direct action to that end, does not exist with the general [federal] government. In the first place, one of the objects of the Constitution, expressed in its preamble, was the establishment of justice, and what that meant in its relations to contracts is not left, as was justly said by the late Chief Justice, in Hébert v. Griswold, to inference or conjecture. As he observes, at the time the Constitution was undergoing discussion in the convention, the Congress of the Confederation was engaged in framing the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern Territory, in which certain articles of compact were established between the people of the original States and the people of the Territory, for the purpose, as expressed in the instrument, of extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, upon which the States, their laws and constitutions, were erected. By that ordinance it was declared, that, in the just preservation of rights and property, "no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said Territory, that shall, in any manner, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and without fraud previously formed." The same provision, adds the Chief Justice, found more condensed expression in the prohibition upon the States [in Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution] against impairing the obligation of contracts, which has ever been recognized as an efficient safeguard against injustice; and though the prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States, he expressed the opinion, speaking for himself and the majority of the court at the time, "that it was clear 'that those who framed and those who adopted the Constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of legislation, and that the justice which the Constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them to be compatible with legislation [or judicial precedent] of an opposite tendency,'" 8 Wall. 623. [99 U.S. 700, 765]. Similar views are found expressed in the opinions of other judges of this court." [Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

Neither states of the Union nor the federal government can therefore use their jurisdiction to protect you if you abuse your power to contract by signing a W-4 that gives away all your rights or sovereignty. Under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution, the federal government has jurisdiction over its own employees and property wherever they may be found, including in places where it otherwise has no legislative jurisdiction. Consequently, it has exclusive jurisdiction over all those who sign a W-4 wherever they may be found. The jurisdiction is "in rem" over all such "property".

In law, all rights are property. Anything that conveys rights is also property. Contracts convey rights and therefore are property. All franchises are contracts and therefore also are "property". A "trade or business"/"public office" is a franchise and therefore is also "property" within the meaning of Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. These facts are the ONLY reason why the United States District Courts, which were established pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution are even able to hear income tax cases: because they relate to federal franchises.

Sneaky, huh? That is why we repeatedly say DO NOT file form W-4’s to stop withholding with your private employer. Use ONLY the modified form W-8BEN, or you are asking for BIG trouble and walking right into their trap, folks! Below is a link that will show you how to fill out the W-8BEN properly, if you choose to use it.

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

Additional information beyond that above about how to handle tax withholding paperwork is also available in the following free book:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers, Form #09.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

A person domiciled in a state of the Union who has identified him or herself properly with their private employer as a “nonresident alien” (NRA) by filing the amended W-8BEN as we suggest, and who has had his earnings involuntarily withheld by his private employer is put into the unfortunate position of having to file a return to get the wrongfully withheld earnings back. Usually, they will incorrectly file the wrong form, the 1040, instead of the proper form 1040NR, and thereby make themselves effectively into a “resident alien”. This gives the IRS jurisdiction over them because they are then treated as maintaining a domicile in the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory). The IRS will then drag their feet refunding the wrongfully withheld earnings, forcing the NRA to take deductions and apply a graduated rate to reduce the withholding, which effectively forces them into perjuring themselves on a tax form just to get back the earnings that always were theirs to begin with.

5.6.12.11 False IRS presumptions that must be rebutted

How can we know if the IRS “thinks” or “presumes” we are involved in a “trade or business”? Here is how within the context of Subtitle A of the I.R.C.:

1. Only people who are engaged in a “trade or business” are subject to the graduated rate of tax of tax. See 26 U.S.C. §871(b).
2. All income from within federal territory, which is the “United States” under the I.R.C. section 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), must be treated as “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”, according to 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3). That’s right: it is a “privilege” under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) to simply “live” and earn “income” on federal territory. Here is what it says:

   TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > § 864
   §864. Definitions and special rules
   (c) Effectively connected income, etc.
   (3) Other income from sources within United States
   All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

3. Only people who are engaged in a “trade or business” can claim deductions on their “return”. Otherwise, they can't. See 26 U.S.C. §162 for proof.
4. Only people who are engaged in a “trade or business” can owe a tax and therefore be the target of a Substitute For Return (SFR), which is an assessment that in most cases is illegally executed by the IRS.
5. Only "Citizens" or "residents" who file a 1040 and put a nonzero amount for income can be connected to a "trade or business within the United States".
6. Only "Nonresident aliens" who file a 1040NR form and put a nonzero amount for “trade or business” income can be connected to a "trade or business" within the United States.
7. Only people who complete, voluntarily sign, and submit a W-4 and thereby identify themselves as federal "employees" can be connected to a "trade or business". 26 CFR §31.3401(c)-1 identifies all federal "employees" as "public officers". All "public officers" are by definition engaged in a "trade or business".
8. Those who receive Social Security Benefits. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(8) says that Social Security benefits received must be included in “gross income” from “sources within the United States”. Indirectly, they must also be saying that such earnings are to be treated as “effectively connected with a trade or business”, because 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) says that if these earnings were not connected with a “trade or business”, then they cannot be reported as “gross income” and are part of a “foreign estate” not subject to the code. 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(3), on the other hand, associates Social Security benefits received by "nonresident aliens" with OTHER than a "trade or business" and also makes them reportable and taxable as "gross income".

Those who avail themselves of any of the above government “privileges” are presumed to be “taxpayers” in the context of the activities above as far as the IRS is concerned. This doesn’t mean they are “taxpayers” for ALL their earnings, but only for those in which the above activities are undertaken. It’s a “privilege” to have deductions and pay a usually lower graduated rate of tax on earnings that are otherwise “taxable”. In effect, the government is exploiting people's ignorance and greed in the pursuit of exemptions or tax reductions they don’t need in order to transform "nontaxpayers" into "taxpayers". Here is how one Congressman described this kind of very devious exploitation:

“Objections to its [the income tax] renewal are long, loud, and general throughout the country. Those who pay are the exception, those who do not pay are millions; the whole moral force of the law is a dead letter. The honest man makes a true return; the dishonest hides and covers all he can to avoid this obnoxious tax. It has no moral force. This tax is unequal, perjury-provoking and crime encouraging, because it is a war with the right of a person to keep private and regulate his business affairs and financial matters. Deception, fraud, and fraud mark its progress everywhere in the process of collection. It creates curiosity, jealousy, and prejudice among the people. It makes the tax-gatherer a spy...The people demand that it shall not be renewed, but left to die a natural death and pass away into the future as pass away all the evils growing out of the Civil War."

[Congressional Globe, 41st Congress, 2d Session, 3993 (1870)]

Those “taxpayers” in receipt of taxable privileges or “nontaxpayers” who are too stupid to know that they don’t need to become a “taxpayer” in order to receive a “privilege” they don’t need should definitely pay for the “privilege” they are taking advantage of. Therefore, if you are a nonresident alien not engaged in a “trade or business” and any one of the above conditions applies to you, then the IRS is ASSUMING, usually wrongfully, that you are engaged in a “trade or business” or have income under 26 U.S.C. §871(a) originating from the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory) that is not connected with a “trade or business”. The great irony of this whole fraudulent federal “scheme” is that those who were otherwise “nontaxpayers” and never had any “gross income” to begin with, in effect were fooled by defective IRS publications and phone advice into:

1. Falsely believing that their income was “taxable” and that they were “taxpayers”.
2. Falsely believing that because they were “taxpayers” with “taxable income”, then they needed deductions to reduce their liability.
3. Volunteering to make themselves into “taxpayers” to procure federal “privileges” called “deductions” that they never needed to begin with, but which the IRS was too dishonest to remind them that they didn’t need. Once they took these deductions, they became “taxpayers” even if they weren’t before.

The Bible describes this GREAT deception and fraud as follows:

   "For thus says the LORD:
   "You have sold yourselves for nothing,
   And you shall be redeemed without money."
   [Isaiah 52:3, Bible, NKJV]

We call the above “government instituted slavery using privileges” or simply “privilege-induced slavery” earlier in section 4.3.12. Those with liberal arts degrees in business from prestigious but amoral or immoral universities might euphemistically refer to this devious brand of exploitation simply as “clever marketing”, but in the end, it amounts to deceit in commerce, which the Bible says is the gravest of sins which God hates most of all sins:

   "As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest; nor can he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for,

1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it; a blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren.

2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is pleased with those that are herein followers of him.

   [Matthew Henry’s Commentary on the Whole Bible; Henry, M., 1996, c1991, under Prov. 11:1]

5.6.12.12 Legal requirements for holding a “public office”?

The subject of exactly what constitutes a “public office” within the meaning described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) is not defined in any IRS publication we could find. The reason is quite clear: the “trade or business” scam is the Achilles heel of the IRS fraud and both the IRS and the Courts are loath to even talk about it because there is nothing they can defend themselves with other than unsubstantiated presumption created by the abuse of the word “includes” and certain key “words of art”. In the face of such overwhelming evidence of their own illegal and criminal mis-enforcement of the tax codes, silence or omission in either admitting it or prosecuting it can only be characterized as FRAUD on a massive scale, in fact:

“Silence can only be equated with fraud where there is a legal or moral duty to speak or where an inquiry left unanswered would be intentionally misleading.”
[U.S. v. Prudden, 424 F.2d. 1021 (5th Cir. 1970)]

“Silence can be equated with fraud where there is a legal or moral duty to speak, or where an inquiry left unanswered would be intentionally misleading. . . We cannot condone this shocking behavior by the IRS. Our revenue system is based on the good faith of the taxpayer and the taxpayers should be able to expect the same from the government in its enforcement and collection activities.”
[U.S. v. Tweel, 550 F.2d. 297, 299 (5th Cir. 1977)]

The “duty” the courts are talking about above is the fiduciary duty of all those serving in public offices in the government, and that fiduciary duty was created by the oath of office they took before they entered the office. Therefore, those who want to know how they could lawfully be classified as a “public office” will have to answer that question completely on their own, which is what we will attempt to do in this section.

We begin our search with a definition of “public office” from Black’s Dictionary:

“Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either fixed by law or enduring at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58. An agency for the state, the duties of which involve in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, either great or small. Yaselli v. Goff, C.C.A., 12 F.2d. 396, 403, 56 A.L.R. 1239; Lacey v. State, 13 Ala.App. 212, 68 So. 706, 710; Curtin v. State, 61 Cal.App. 377, 214 P. 1030, 1035; Shelmadine v. City of Elkhart, 75 Ind.App. 493, 129 N.E. 878. State ex rel. Colorado River Commission v. Frohmiller, 46 Ariz. 413, 52 P.2d. 483, 486. Where, by virtue of law, a person is clothed, not as an incidental or transient authority, but for such time as denotes duration and continuance, with independent power to control the property of the public, or with public functions to be exercised in the supposed interest of the people, the service to be compensated by a stated yearly salary, and the occupant having a designation or title, the position so created is a public office. State v. Brennan, 49 Ohio.St. 33. 29 N.E. 593.”

Black’s Law Dictionary Sixth Edition further clarifies the meaning of a “public office” below:

“Essential characteristics of a ‘public office’ are:
(1) Authority conferred by law,
(2) Fixed tenure of office, and
(3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.

Key element of such test is that “officer is carrying out a sovereign function. Spring v. Constantino, 168 Conn. 563, 362 A.2d. 871, 875. Essential elements to establish public position as ‘public office’ are:
Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position.
Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and Position must have some permanency.”

American Jurisprudence Legal Encyclopedia further clarifies what a “public office” is as follows:
Ordinary or common-law employees of the government also do not qualify as “public officers”:

“...the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves, and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy."

[63C Am.Jur.2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247]

"Ordinary or common-law employees of the government also do not qualify as “public officers”:

Based on the foregoing, one cannot be a “public officer” if:

1. There is not a statute or constitutional authority that specifically creates the office. All “public offices” can only be created through legislative authority.
2. Their duties are not specifically and exactly enumerated in some Act of Congress.
3. They have a boss or immediate supervisor. All duties must be performed INDEPENDENTLY.
4. They have anyone but the law and the courts to immediately supervise their activities.
5. They are serving as a “public officer” in a location NOT specifically authorized by the law. The law must create the office and specify exactly where it is to be exercised. 4 U.S.C. §72 says ALL public offices of the federal and national government MUST be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, except as expressly provided by law.
6. Their position does not carry with it some kind of fiduciary duty to the “public” which in turn is documented in and enforced by enacted law itself.
7. The beneficiary of their fiduciary duty is other than the “public”. Public service is a public trust, and the beneficiary of the trust is the public at large and not any one specific individual or group of individuals. See 5 CFR §2635.101(b) and Executive Order 12731.

All public officers must take an oath. The oath, in fact, is what creates the fiduciary duty that attaches to the office. This is confirmed by the definition of "public official" in Black’s Law Dictionary:

“Public official. A person who, upon being issued a commission, taking required oath, enters upon, for a fixed tenure, a position called an office where he or she exercises in his or her own right some of the attributes of sovereign he or she serves for benefit of public. Macy v. Heverin, 44 Md.App. 358, 408 A.2d. 1067, 1069. The holder of a public office though not all persons in public employment are public officials, because public official's position requires the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, whether great or small. Town of Arlington v. Bds. of Conciliation and Arbitration, Mass., 352 N.E.2d. 914. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

The oath for United States federal and state officials was prescribed in the very first enactment of Congress on March 4, 1789 as follows:

Statutes at Large, March 4, 1789
1 Stat. 23-24

SEC. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and [Home off] Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the oath or affirmation required by the sixth article of the Constitution of the United States, shall be administered in the form following, to wit: "I, A, B. do solemnly swear or affirm (as the case may be) that I will support the Constitution of the United States." The said oath or affirmation shall be administered within three days after the passing of this act, by any one member of the Senate, to the President of the Senate, and by him to all the members and to the secretary; and by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to all the members who have not taken a similar oath, by virtue of a particular resolution of the said House, and to the clerk; and in case of the absence of any member from the service of either House, at the time prescribed for taking the said oath or affirmation, the same shall be administered to such member, when he shall appear to take his seat.

SEC. 2. And it be further enacted, That at the first session of Congress after every general election of Representatives, the oath or affirmation aforesaid, shall be administered by any one member of the House of Representatives to the Speaker; and by him to all the members present, and to the clerk, previous to entering on any other business; and to the members who shall afterwards appear, previous to taking their seats. The President of the Senate for the time being, shall also administer the said oath or affirmation to each Senator who shall hereafter be elected, previous to his taking his seat: and in any future case of a President of the Senate, who shall not have taken the said oath or affirmation, the same shall be administered to him by any one of the members of the Senate.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the members of the several State legislatures, at the next sessions of the said legislatures, respectively, and all executive and judicial officers of the several States, who have been heretofore chosen or appointed, or who shall be chosen or appointed before the first day of August next, and who shall then be in office, shall, within one month thereafter, take the same oath or affirmation, except where they shall have taken it before; which may be administered by any person authorized by the law of the State, in which such office shall be holden, to administer oaths. And the members of the several State legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers of the several States, who shall be chosen or appointed after the said first day of August, shall, before they proceed to execute the duties of their respective offices, take the foregoing oath or affirmation, which shall be administered by the person or persons, who by the law of the State shall be authorized to administer the oath of office; and the person or persons so administering the oath hereby required... to be taken, shall cause a re- cord or certificate thereof to be made, in the same manner, as, by the law of the State, he or they shall be directed to record or certify the oath of office.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That all officers appointed, or hereafter to be appointed under the authority of the United States, shall, before they act in their respective offices, take the same oath or affirmation, which shall be administered by the person or persons who shall be authorized by law to administer to such officers their respective oaths of office; and such officers shall incur the same penalties in case of failure, as shall be imposed by law in case of failure in taking their respective oaths of office.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the secretary of the Senate, and the clerk of the House of Representatives for the time being, shall, at the time of taking the oath or affirmation aforesaid, each take an oath or affirmation in the words following, to wit: "I, A. B. secretary of the Senate, or clerk of the House of Representatives (as the case may be) of the United States of America, do solemnly swear or affirm, that I will truly and faithfully discharge the duties of my said office, to the best of my knowledge and abilities."

Based on the above, the following persons within the government are “public officers”:

1. Federal Officers:
   1.1. The President of the United States.
   1.2. Members of the House of Representatives.
   1.3. Members of the Senate.
   1.4. All appointed by the President of the United States.
   1.5. The secretary of the Senate.
   1.6. The clerk of the House of Representatives.
   1.7. All district, circuit, and supreme court justices.

2. State Officers:
   2.1. The governor of the state.
   2.2. Members of the House of Representatives.
   2.3. Members of the Senate.
   2.4. All district, circuit, and supreme court justices of the state.

At the federal level, all those engaged in the above “public offices” are statutorily identified in 5 U.S.C. §2105. Consistent with this section, what most people would regard as ordinary common law employees are not included in the definition.
Note the phrase “an officer AND an individual”:

Title 5 > Part III > Subpart A > Chapter 21 > § 2105
§ 2105. Employee

(a) For the purpose of this title, “employee”, except as otherwise provided by this section or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is—

(1) appointed in the civil service by one of the following acting in an official capacity—

(A) the President;
(B) a Member or Members of Congress, or the Congress;
(C) a member of a uniformed service;
(D) an individual who is an employee under this section;
(E) the head of a Government controlled corporation; or
(F) an adjutant general designated by the Secretary concerned under section 709 (c) of title 32;

(2) engaged in the performance of a Federal function under authority of law or an Executive act; and
(3) subject to the supervision of an individual named by paragraph (1) of this subsection while engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.

Within the military, only commissioned officers are “public officers”. Enlisted or NCOs (Non-Commissioned Officers) are not.

Those holding Federal or State public office, county or municipal office, under the Legislative, Executive or Judicial branch, including Court Officials, Judges, Prosecutors, Law Enforcement Department employees, Officers of the Court, and etc., before entering into these public offices, are required by the U.S. Constitution and statutory law to comply with 5
U.S.C. § 3331, “Oath of office.” State Officials are also required to meet this same obligation, according to State Constitutions and State statutory law.

Under Title 22 U.S.C., Foreign Relations and Intercourse, Section §611, a Public Official is considered a foreign agent. In order to hold public office, the candidate must file a true and complete registration statement with the State Attorney General as a foreign principle.

The Oath of Office requires the public officials in his/her foreign state capacity to uphold the constitutional form of government or face consequences, according to 10 U.S.C. §333, “Interference with State and Federal law”

The President, by using the militia or the armed forces, or both, or by any other means, shall take such measures as he considers necessary to suppress, in a State, any insurrection, domestic violence, unlawful combination, or conspiracy, if it—

(1) so hinders the execution of the laws of that State, and of the United States within the State, that any part or class of its people is deprived of a right, privilege, immunity, or protection named in the Constitution and secured by law, and the constituted authorities of that State are unable, fail, or refuse to protect that right, privilege, or immunity, or to give that protection; or

(2) opposes or obstructs the execution of the laws of the United States or impedes the course of justice under those laws.

In any situation covered by clause (1), the State shall be considered to have denied the equal protection of the laws secured by the Constitution.

Willful refusal action while serving in official capacity violates 18 U.S.C. §1918, “Disloyalty and asserting the right to strike against the Government”

Whoever violates the provision of 7311 of title 5 that an individual may not accept or hold a position in the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia if he—

(1) advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government;

(2) is a member of an organization that he knows advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government; shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year and a day, or both.

AND violates 18 U.S.C. §1346:

"For the purposes of this chapter, the term “scheme or artifice to defraud” includes a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services.

The “public offices” described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) within the definition of “trade or business” are ONLY public offices located in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere. To wit:

1. All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

2. The only provision of any act of Congress that we have been able to find which authorizes “public offices” outside the District of Columbia as expressly required by law above, is 48 U.S.C. §1612, which authorizes enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code within the U.S. Virgin Islands. To wit:
(a) Jurisdiction

The District Court of the Virgin Islands shall have the jurisdiction of a District Court of the United States, including, but not limited to, the diversity jurisdiction provided for in section 1332 of title 28 and that of a bankruptcy court of the United States. The District Court of the Virgin Islands shall have exclusive jurisdiction over all criminal and civil proceedings in the Virgin Islands with respect to the income tax laws applicable to the Virgin Islands, regardless of the degree of the offense or of the amount involved, except the ancillary laws relating to the income tax enacted by the legislature of the Virgin Islands. Any act or failure to act with respect to the income tax laws applicable to the Virgin Islands which would constitute a criminal offense described in chapter 75 of subtitle F of title 26 shall constitute an offense against the government of the Virgin Islands and may be prosecuted in the name of the government of the Virgin Islands by the appropriate officers thereof in the District Court of the Virgin Islands without the request or the consent of the United States attorney for the Virgin Islands, notwithstanding the provisions of section 1617 of this title.

There is NO PROVISION OF LAW which would similarly extend public offices or jurisdiction to enforce any provision of the Internal Revenue Code to any place within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union, because Congress enjoys NO LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION THERE.

"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 38 S.Ct. 329, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation." [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

"The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."

By law then, no “public office” may therefore be exercised OUTSIDE the District of Columbia except as “expressly provided by law”, including privileged or licensed activities such as a “trade or business”. This was also confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court in the License Tax Cases, when they said:

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

[License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

Since I.R.C. Subtitle A is a tax on “public offices”, which is called a “trade or business”, then the tax can only apply to those domiciled within the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory), wherever they are physically located to include states of the Union, but only if they are serving under oath in their official capacity as “public officers”.

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Another important point needs to be emphasized, which is that those working for the federal government, while on official duty, are representing a federal corporation called the “United States”, which is domiciled in the District of Columbia.

Title 28 - Judiciary and Judicial Procedure
Part VI - Particular Proceedings
Chapter 176 - Federal Debt Collection Procedure
Subchapter A - Definitions and General Provisions

Sec. 3002. Definitions
(15) “United States” means -
(A) a Federal corporation;
(B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or
(C) an instrumentality of the United States.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says that the capacity to sue and be sued civilly is based on one’s domicile:

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant: Capacity
(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:
(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual’s domicile;
(2) for a corporation [the “United States”, in this case, or its officers on official duty representing the corporation], by the law under which it was organized; and
(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state’s law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and
(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

Government employees, including “public officers”, while on official duty representing the federal corporation called the “United States”, maintain the character of the entity they represent and therefore have a legal domicile in the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory) within the context of their official duties. The Internal Revenue Code also reflects this fact in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d):

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
(39) Persons residing outside United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or
(B) enforcement of summons

(d) Citizens and residents outside the United States
If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Kidnapping and transporting the legal identity of a person domiciled outside the District of Columbia in a foreign state, which includes states of the Union, is illegal pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §1201. Therefore, the only people who can be legally and involuntarily “kidnapped” by the courts based on the above two provisions of statutory law are those who individually consent through private contract to act as “public officers” in the execution of their official duties. The fiduciary duty of these “public officers” is further defined in the I.R.C. as follows, and it is only by an oath of “public office” that this fiduciary duty can lawfully be created:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 68 > Subchapter B > PART I > § 6671

§ 6671. Rules for application of assessable penalties

(b) Person defined

The term “person”, as used in this subchapter, includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 75 > Subchapter D > § 7343

§ 7343. Definition of term “person”

The term “person” as used in this chapter includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

We remind our readers that there is no liability statute within Subtitle A of the I.R.C. that would create the duty documented above, and therefore the ONLY way it can be created is by the oath of office of the “public officers” who are the subject of the tax in question. This was thoroughly described in the following article:

There's No Statute Making Anyone Liable to Pay IRC Subtitle A Income Taxes
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/NoStatuteLiable.htm

The existence of fiduciary duty of “public officers” is therefore the ONLY lawful method by which anyone can be prosecuted for an “omission”, which is a thing they didn’t do that the law required them to do. It is otherwise illegal and unlawful to prosecute anyone under either common law or statutory law for a FAILURE to do something, such as a FAILURE TO FILE a tax return pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7203. Below is an example of where the government gets its authority to prosecute "taxpayers" for failure to file a tax return, in fact:

“I: DUTY TO ACCOUNT FOR PUBLIC FUNDS

§ 909. In general.- It is the duty of the public officer, like any other agent or trustee, although not declared by express statute, to faithfully account for and pay over to the proper authorities all moneys which may come into his hands upon the public account, and the performance of this duty may be enforced by proper actions against the officer himself, or against those who have become sureties for the faithful discharge of his duties.”

In addition to the above, every attorney admitted to practice law in any state or federal court is described as an “officer of the court”, and therefore ALSO is a “public officer”:

In English law. A public officer belonging to the superior courts of common law at Westminster, who conducted legal proceedings on behalf of others. called the solicitor to the solicitor in the courts of chancery, and the proctor of the admiralty, ecclesiastical, probate, and divorce courts. An attorney was almost invariably also a solicitor. It is now provided by the judicature act. 1873, 8 87.
The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The fact that public service is a "public trust" was also confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court, when it said: (7) Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Attorney and Client, §4

Executive Order 12731 and 5 CFR §2635.101(a) furthermore both indicate that "public service is a public trust":

Executive Order 12731

"Part I -- PRINCIPLES OF ETHICAL CONDUCT

"Section 101. Principles of Ethical Conduct. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each Federal employee shall respect and adhere to the fundamental principles of ethical service as implemented in regulations promulgated under sections 201 and 301 of this order:

"(a) Public service is a public trust, requiring employees to place loyalty to the Constitution, the laws, and ethical principles above private gain.

TITLE 5—ADMINISTRATIVE PERSONNEL
CHAPTER XVI—OFFICE OF GOVERNMENT ETHICS
PART 2635—STANDARDS OF ETHICAL CONDUCT FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH—Table of Contents
Subpart A—General Provisions
Sec. 2635.101 Basic obligation of public service.

(a) Public service is a public trust. Each employee has a responsibility to the United States Government and its citizens to place loyalty to the Constitution, laws and ethical principles above private gain. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each employee shall respect and adhere to the principles of ethical conduct set forth in this section, as well as the implementing standards contained in this part and in supplemental agency regulations.

The above provisions of law imply that everyone who works for the government is a "trustee" of "We the People", who are the sovereigns they serve in the public. In law, EVERY "trustee" is a "fiduciary" of the Beneficiary of the trust within which he serves:

"TRUSTEE. The person appointed, or required by law, to execute a trust; one in whom an estate, interest, or power is vested, under an express or implied agreement e.g. PRIVATE LAW or CONTRACT to administer or exercise it for the benefit or to the use of another called the cestui que trust. Pioneer Mining Co. v. Ty berg, 215 P. 2d 601, 508, L.R.A.1955B, 442; Kaehn v. St. Paul Co-op. Ass'n, 156 Minn. 113, 194 N.W. 112; Cutlett v. Hawthorne, 157 Va. 372, 161 S.E. 47, 48, Person who holds title to res and administers it for others' benefit. Reinecke v. Smith, Ill., 53 S.Ct. 570, 289 U.S. 172, 77 L.Ed. 1109. In a strict sense, a "trustee" is one'who holds the legal title to property for the benefit of another, while, in a broad sense, the term is sometimes applied to anyone standing in a fiduciary or confidential relation to another, such as agent, attorney, bailee, etc. State ex rel. Lee v. Sartorius, 344 Mo. 915, 130 S.W.2d, 547, 549, 550. "Trustee" is also used In a wide and perhaps inaccurate sense, to denote that a person has the duty of carrying out a transaction, in which he and another person are interested, in such manner as will be most for the benefit of the latter, and not in such a way that he himself might be tempted, for the sake of his personal advantage, to neglect the interests of the other. In this sense, directors of companies are said to be "trustees for the shareholders." Sweet. [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1684]

The fact that public service is a "public trust" was also confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court, when it said:

"Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property:

"And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions, are mutually obligatory."

[Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]
An example of someone who is NOT a “public officer” is a federal worker on duty and who is not required to take an oath. These people may think of themselves as employees in an ordinary and not statutory sense and even be called employees by their supervisor or employer, but in fact NOT be the statutory “employee” defined in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a). Remember that 5 U.S.C. §2105(a) defines a STATUTORY “employee” as “an officer and an individual” and you don’t become an “officer” in a statutory sense unless and until you take a Constitutional oath. Almost invariably, such workers also have some kind of immediate supervisor who manages and oversees and evaluates his activities pursuant to the position description drafted for the position he fills. He may be a “trustee” and he may have a “fiduciary duty” to the public as a “public servant,” but he isn’t an “officer” or “public officer” unless and until he takes an oath of office prescribed by law. A federal worker, however, can become a “public office” by virtue of any one or more of the following purposes that we are aware of so far:

1. Be elected to political office.
2. Being appointed to political office by the President or the governor of a state of the Union.

A “public office” is not limited to a human being. It can also extend to an entire entity such as a corporation. An example of an entity that is a “public office” in its entirety is a federally chartered bank, such as the original Bank of the United States described in Osborn v. United States, in which the U.S. Supreme Court identified the original and first Bank of the United States, a federally chartered bank corporation created by Congress, as a “public office”:

All the powers of the government must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with individuals. Can any public office be created, or does one exist, the performance of which may, with propriety, be assigned to this association [or trust], when incorporated? If such office exist, or can be created, then the company may be incorporated, that they may be appointed to execute such office. Is there any portion of the public business performed by individuals upon contracts, that this association could be employed to perform, with greater advantage and more safety to the public, than an individual contractor? If there be an employment of this nature, then may this company be incorporated to undertake it.

There is an employment of this nature. Nothing can be more essential to the fiscal concerns of the nation, than an agent of undoubted integrity and established credit, with whom the public moneys can, at all times, be safely deposited. Nothing can be of more importance to a government, than that there should be some capitalist in the country, who possesses the means of making advances of money to the government upon any exigency, and who is under a legal obligation to make such advances. For these purposes the association would be an agent peculiarly suitable and appropriate. [. . .]

The mere creation of a corporation, does not confer political power or political character. So this Court decided in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, already referred to. If I may be allowed to paraphrase the language of the Chief Justice, I would say, a bank incorporated, is no more a State instrument, than a natural person performing the same business would be. If, then, a natural person, engaged in the trade of banking, should contract with the government to receive the public money upon deposit, to transmit it from place to place, without charging for commission or difference of exchange, and to perform, when called upon, the duties of commissioner of loans, would not thereby become a public officer, how is it that this artificial being, created by law for the purpose of being employed by the government for the same purposes, should become a part of the civil government of the country? Is it because its existence, its capacities, its powers, are given by law? because the government has sold it a privilege [22 U.S. 738, 774] for a large sum of money, and has bargained with it to do certain things; is it, therefore, a part of the very government with which the contract is made?

If the Bank be constituted a public office, by the connexion between it and the government, it cannot be the mere legal franchise in which the office is vested; the individual stockholders must be the officers. Their character is not merged in the charter. This is the strong point of the Mayor and Commonalty v. Wood, upon which this Court ground their decision in the Bank v. Deveaux, and from which they say, that cause could not be distinguished. Thus, aliens may become public officers, and public duties are confided to those who owe no allegiance to the government, and who are even beyond its territorial limits.

With the privileges and perquisites of office, all individuals holding offices, ought to be subject to the disabilities of office. But if the Bank be a public office, and the individual stockholders public officers, this principle does not have a fair and just operation. The disabilities of office do not attach to the stockholders; for we find them every where holding public offices, even in the national Legislature, from which, if they be public officers, they are excluded by the constitution in express terms.

If the Bank be a public institution of such character as to be justly assimilated to the mint and the post office, then its charter may be amended, altered, or even abolished, at the discretion of the National Legislature. All public offices are created [22 U.S. 738, 775] purely for public purposes, and may, at any time, be modified.
in such manner as the public interest may require. Public corporations partake of the same character. So it is distinctly adjudged in Dartmouth College v. Woodward. In this point, each Judge who delivered an opinion concurred. By one of the Judges it is said, that 'public corporations are generally esteemed such as exist for public political purposes only, as towns, cities, parishes, and in many respects they are so, although they involve some private interests; but, strictly speaking, public corporations are such only as are founded by the government for public purposes, where the whole interest belongs also to the government. If, therefore, the foundation be private, though under the charter of the government, the corporation is private, however extensive the uses may be to which it is devoted, either by the bounty of the founder, or the nature and objects of the institution. For instance, a bank, created by the government for its own uses, whose stock is exclusively owned by the government, is, in the strictest sense, a public corporation. So, a hospital created and endowed by charity. But a bank, whose stock is owned by the public, is a private corporation, although it is erected by the government, and its objects and operations partake of a public nature. The same doctrine may be affirmed of insurance, canal, bridge, and turnpike companies. In all these cases, the uses may, in a certain sense, be called public, but the corporations are private; as much [22 U.S. 738, 776] so, indeed, as if the franchises were vested in a single person. [. . .]

In what sense is it an instrument of the government? and in what character is it employed as such? Do the government employ the faculty, the legal franchise, or do they employ the individuals upon whom it is conferred? and what is the nature of that employment? does it resemble the post office, or the mint, or the custom house, or the process of the federal Courts?

The post office is established by the general government. It is a public institution. The persons who perform its duties are public officers. No individual has, or can acquire, any property in it. For all the services performed, a compensation is paid out of the national treasury; and all the money received upon account of its operations, is public property. Surely there is no similitude between this institution, and an association who trade upon their own capital, for their own profit, and who have paid the government a million and a half of dollars for a legal character and name, in which to conduct their trade.

Again: the business conducted through the agency of the post office, is not in its nature a private business. It is of a public character, and the [22 U.S. 738, 786] charge of it is expressly conferred upon Congress by the constitution. The business is created by law, and is annihilated when the law is repealed. But the trade of banking is strictly a private concern. It exists and can be carried on without the aid of the national Legislature.
Nay, it is only under very special circumstances, that the national Legislature can so far interfere with it, as to facilitate its operations.

The post office executes the various duties assigned to it, by means of subordinate agents. The mails are opened and closed by persons invested with the character of public officers. But they are transported by individuals employed for that purpose, in their individual character, which employment is created by and founded in contract. To such contractors no official character is attached. These contractors supply horses, carriages, and whatever else is necessary for the transportation of the mails, upon their own account. The whole is engaged in the public service. The contractor, his horses, his carriage, his driver, are all in public employ. But this does not change their character. All that was private property before the contract was made, and before they were engaged in public employ, remain private property still. The horses and the carriages are liable to be taxed as other property, for every purpose for which property of the same character is taxed in the place where they are employed. The reason is plain: the contractor is employing his own means to promote his own private profit, and the tax collected is from the individual, though assessed upon the [22 U.S. 738, 787] means he uses to perform the public service. To tax the transportation of the mail, as such, would be taxing the operations of the government, which could not be allowed. But to tax the means by which this transportation is effected, so far as those means are private property, is allowable; because it abstracts nothing from the government; and because, the fact that an individual employs his private means in the service of the government, attaches to them no immunity whatever."

The record of the House of Representatives after the enactment of the first income tax during the Civil War in 1862, confirmed that the income tax was upon a “public office” and that even IRS agents, who are not “public officers” and who are not required to take an oath, are therefore exempt from the requirements of the revenue acts in place at the time. Read the amazing truth for yourself:

House of Representatives, Ex. Doc. 99, 1867

Below is an excerpt from that report proving our point. The Secretary of the Treasury at the time is comparing the federal tax liabilities of postal clerks to those of internal revenue clerks. At that time, the IRS was called the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue was established in 1862 as an emergency measure to fund the Civil War, which ended shortly thereafter, but the illegal enforcement of the revenue laws continued and expanded into the states over succeeding years:
Salary Tax Upon Clerks to Postmasters

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury in answer to a resolution of the House of the 12th of February, relative to salary tax upon clerks to postmasters, with the regulations of the department

Postmasters’ clerks are appointed by postmasters, and take the oaths of office prescribed in the 2d section of the act of July 2, 1862, and in the 2d section of the act of March 3, 1863.

Their salaries are not fixed in amount by law, but from time to time the Postmaster General fixes the amount, allotted to each postmaster for clerk hire, under the authority conferred upon him by tile ninth section of the act of June 5, 1836, and then the postmaster, as an agent for and in behalf of the United States, determines the salary to be paid to each of his clerks. These salaries are paid by the postmasters, acting as disbursing agents, from United States moneys advanced to them for this purpose, either directly from the Post Office Department in pursuance of appropriations made by law, or from the accruing revenues of their offices, under the instructions of the Postmaster General. The receipt of such clerks constitute vouchers in the accounts of the postmasters acting as disbursing agents in the settlements made with them by the Sixth Auditor. In the foregoing transactions the postmaster acts not as a principal, but as an agent of the United States, and the clerks are not in his private employment, but in the public employment of the United States. Such being the facts, these clerks are subjected to and required to account for and pay the salary tax, imposed by the one hundred and twenty-third section of the internal revenue act of June 30, 1864, as amended by the ninth section of the internal revenue act of July 13, 1866, upon payments for services to persons in the civil employment or service of the United States.

Copies of the regulations under which such salary taxes are withheld and paid into the treasury to the credit of internal revenue collection account are herewith transmitted, marked A, b, and C. Clerks to assessors of internal revenue [IRS agents] are appointed by the assessors. Neither law nor regulations require them to take an oath of office, because, as the law at present stands, they are not in the public service of the United States, through the agency of the assessor, but are in the private service of the assessor, as a principal, who employs them.

The salaries of such clerks are neither fixed in amount by law, nor are they regulated by any officer of the Treasury Department over the clerk hire of assessors is to prescribe a necessary and reasonable amount which shall not be exceeded in reimbursing the assessors for this item of their expenses.

No money is advanced by the United States for the payment of such salaries, nor do the assessors perform the duties of disbursing agents of the United States in paying their clerks. The entire amount allowed is paid directly to the assessor, and he is not accountable to the United States for its payment to his clerks, for the reason that he has paid them in advance, out of his own funds, and this is a reimbursement to him of such amount as the department decides to be reasonable. No salary tax is therefore collected, or required by the Treasury Department to be accounted for, or paid, on account of payments to the assessors’ clerks, as the United States pays no such clerks nor has them in its employ or service, and they do not come within the provisions of existing laws imposing such a tax.

Perhaps no better illustration of the difference between the status of postmasters’ clerks and that of assessors’ clerks can be given than the following: A postmaster became a defaulter, without paying his clerks; his successor received from the Postmaster General a new remittance for paying them; and if at any time, the clerks in a post office do not receive their salaries, by reason of the death, resignation or removal of a postmaster, the new appointee is authorized by the regulations of the Post Office Department to pay them out of the proceeds of the office; and should there be no funds in his hands belonging to the department, a draft is issued to place money in his hands for that purpose.

If an assessor had not paid his clerks, they would have no legal claim upon the treasury for their salaries. A discrimination is made between postmasters’ clerks and assessor’s clerks to the extent and for the reasons hereinbefore set forth.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

H. McCulloch, Secretary of the Treasury

[House of Representatives, Ex. Doc. 99, 1867, pp. 1-2]

Notice based on the above that revenue officers don’t take an oath, so they don’t have to pay the tax, while postal clerks take an oath, so they do. Therefore, the oath that creates the “public office” is the method by which the government manufactures “public officers”, “taxpayers”, and “sponsors” for its wasteful use or abuse of public monies. If you would like a whole BOOK full of reasons why the only "taxpayers" under the I.R.C. Subtitle A are "public officers", please see the following exhaustive analysis:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.12.13  De Facto Public Officers

Based on the previous section, we are now thoroughly familiar with all the legal requirements for:

1. How public offices are lawfully created.
2. The only places where they can lawfully be exercised.
3. The duties that attach to the public office.
4. The type of agency exercised by the public officer.
5. The relationship between the public office and the public officer.

What we didn’t cover in the previous section is what are all the legal consequences when someone performs the duties of a public office without satisfying all the legal requirements for lawfully occupying the office? In law, such a person is called a “de facto officer” and books have been written about the subject of the “de facto officer doctrine”. Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court held on the subject of “de facto officers”:

“None of the cases cited militates against the doctrine that, for the existence of a de facto officer, there must be an office de jure, although there may be loose expressions in some of the opinions, not called for by the facts, seeming against this view. Where no office legally exists, the pretended officer is merely a usurper, to whose acts no validity can be attached; and such, in our judgment, was the position of the commissioners of Shelby county, who undertook to act as the county court, which could be constitutionally held only by justices of the peace. Their right to discharge the duties of justices of the peace was never recognized by the justices, but from the outset was resisted by legal proceedings, which terminated in an adjudication that they were usurers, clothed with no authority or official function.”

As we have already established, all statutory “taxpayers” are public officers in the U.S. and not state government. This is exhaustively proven with evidence in:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

A person who fulfills the DUTIES of a statutory “taxpayer” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) without lawfully occupying a public office in the U.S. government BEFORE becoming a “taxpayer” would be a good example of a de facto public officer. Those who exercise the duties of a public officer without meeting all the requirements, from a legal perspective, are in fact committing the crime of impersonating a public officer.

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 43 > § 912
§ 912. Officer or employee of the United States

Whoever falsely assumes or pretends to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States or any department, agency or officer thereof, and acts as such, or in such pretended character demands or obtains any money, paper, document, or thing of value, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

What are some examples where a person would be impersonating a public officer unlawfully? Here are a few:

1. You elect or appoint yourself into public office by filling out a tax form without occupying said office BEFORE being a statutory “taxpayer”.
2. You serve in the office in a geographic place NOT expressly authorized by law. For instance, 4 U.S.C. §72 requires that ALL federal public offices MUST be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and NOT ELSEWHERE, unless expressly authorized by law.
3. A third party unilaterally ELECTS you into a public office by submitting an information return linking you to such a BOGUS office under the alleged but not actual authority of 26 U.S.C. §6041(a).
4. You occupy the public office without either expressly consenting to it IN WRITING or without even knowing you occupy such an office.

If a so-called “GOVERNMENT” is established in which:

1. The only kind of “citizens” or “residents” allowed are STATUTORY citizens and residents. CONSTITUTIONAL citizens or residents are either not recognized or allowed as a matter of policy and not law. . . . OR

2. All “citizens” and “residents” are compelled under duress to accept the duties of a public office or ANY kind of duties imposed by the government upon them. Remember, the Thirteenth Amendment forbids “involuntary servitude”, so if the government imposes any kind of duty or requires you to surrender private property of any kind by law, then they can only do so through the medium of a public office. . . . OR

3. Everyone is compelled to obey government statutory law. Remember, nearly all laws passed by government can and do regulate ONLY the government and not private people. See:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

. . . then you end up not only with a LOT of public officers, but a de facto GOVERNMENT as well. That government is thoroughly described in:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Even at the state level, it is a crime in every state of the Union to pretend to be a public officer of the state government who does not satisfy ALL of the legal requirements for occupying the public office. Below is an itemized list by jurisdiction of constitutional and statutory requirements that are violated by those who either impersonate a state public officer OR who serve simultaneously serve in BOTH a FEDERAL public office and a STATE public office AT THE SAME TIME. That’s right: When you either impersonate a state public officer OR serve in BOTH a FEDERAL public office and STATE public office AT THE SAME TIME, then you are committing a crime and have a financial conflict of interest and conflict of allegiance that can and should disqualify you from exercising or accepting the duties of the office:

5.6.12.14 How do ordinary government workers not holding “public office” become “taxpayers”?

A question we are asked frequently is whether ordinary government workers not otherwise engaged in a “public office” are “taxpayers” and how they become “taxpayers”. The answer is they aren’t unless they sign a contract to become a “public officer” called IRS Form W-4. The remainder of this section will explain why this is.

The previous section discussed the differences between a “public office” and “public employment” and clearly proved that they are NOT equivalent. Consequently, ordinary government workers or civil service employees are NOT “public officers” nor are they therefore engaged in the “trade or business” franchise and contract by default.

Earnings not connected to the “trade or business” and public office franchise are described in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) in the case of “nonresident aliens”. The following article proves that nonresident aliens not engaged in the “trade or business” franchise cannot earn “wages” unless they consent to do so by signing a contract called IRS Form W-4:

Nonresident Alien Position, Form #05.020, Section 12
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

I.R.C. Subtitle A is a franchise tax on public offices, which the I.R.C. calls a “trade or business”. “Public office” and “public employment” ARE NOT equivalent in law. Even for government workers, they don’t earn “wages” as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401 unless they are ALREADY public officers in the government BEFORE they sign the W-4. This is because:

1. If a government worker not engaged in a public office refuses to sign the W-4 and is not otherwise engaged in a “public office”, then they can’t lawfully become the subject of W-2 information returns and if they are filed with nonzero “wages”, they are FALSE in violation of 26 U.S.C. §7207 and 26 U.S.C. §7434.
2. It is “wages” which appear on IRS Form W-2 in block 1. This form connects the term “wages” to the “trade or business” franchise pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041(a).
3. 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(1) mentions “wages” as being taxable when not connected to the “trade or business” franchise and one can only earn “wages” if they consent under the W-4 contract/agreement.

TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
CHAPTER I--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
PART 31_EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE--Table of Contents

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

(a) In general.

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)–3).

(b) Remuneration for services.

(1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the amounts referred to in paragraph (a) of this section include any remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer which, without regard to this section, does not constitute wages under section 3401(a). For example, remuneration for services performed by an agricultural worker or a domestic worker in a private home (amounts which are specifically excluded from the definition of wages by section 3401(a) (2) and (3), respectively) are amounts with respect to which a voluntary withholding agreement may be entered into under section 3402(p). See §§31.3401(c)–1 and 31.3401(d)–1 for the definitions of “employee” and “employer”.

4. It is “wages” and NOT “all earnings”, “income”, or even “gross income” that appear in the IRS Individual Master File (IMF) as being taxable.

5. The income tax is upon “wages” but not even “public officers” earn “wages”.

6. It is “wages” which are the subject of I.R.C. Subtitle C withholding and constitute I.R.C. Subtitle A “gross income” because “wages” is the code word for earnings of those who elect to become “public officers” and thereby donate their private property earnings to a “public office”, a “public use”, and a “public purpose” and thereby subject them to taxation by signing the federal W-4 “public officer” job application and contract.

7. It is “wages” that 26 CFR §31.3401(p)-1 says become “gross income” and therefore “trade or business” income ONLY AFTER one signs the W-4.

8. It is for claiming that “wages” are not taxable that many tax protesters are properly sanctioned. See: Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 6.2

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
The W-4 form is being used to connect private earnings to “wages” as legally defined and the “trade or business”/“public office” franchise by all of the following mechanisms:

1. As a federal “election” form where you can elect yourself into public office within the government. You are the only voter in this “election”. Now do you know why the IRS calls it an “election” whenever you consent to something in the I.R.C. They aren’t lying!

2. As a permission form authorizing the filing of information returns connecting otherwise private persons to a public office and a “trade or business” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). If the W-2 is filed against a person who did NOT make such an election, then election fraud is occurring and the employer is committing the crime of impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912. Any withholdings against a person who did not submit the W-4 is a bribe to procure a public office in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §211.

http://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/html/usc...11----000-.html

3. To CREATE public offices in the U.S. government unlawfully rather than tax those already in existence.

4. As a way to create a franchise that turns private labor into public property by donating it to a public use and a public office.

   “Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,-'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;' and to secure,’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property for income which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”

5. As a way to make private workers into a Kelly Girls and contractors for the government engaged in a “public office”.

6. As a way to make you party to the franchise agreement codified in I.R.C. Subtitles A and C.

7. The SSN or TIN on the W-4 form is being used as a de facto “license” to act as a “public officer” in the U.S. government called a “taxpayer”. The IRS Form 1042-S Instructions say the SSN is only required for those engaged in a “trade or business”, which means a public office. The tax is on the office, not on the private person. The office is the “res” that is the subject of the tax and the use of the number is prima facie evidence of the existence of the “res”. All tax proceedings are “in rem” against the office, which is the only real “citizen”, “resident”, and “taxpayer”. The human being filling the office is not the “taxpayer”, but he is surety for the “taxpayer”. They don’t call the SSN or TIN a “license number” even though it is for all intents and purposes, because they don’t want to admit that they have no authority to license ANYTHING within a state of the Union:

   “But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize [e.g., LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.”

   [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 3 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

Please show us a case where the License Tax cases was overruled? It's still in force. The feds can't license ANYTHING within a state, including “public offices” and the “trade or business’ franchise that is being ILLEGALLY enforced within states of the Union at this time. To admit otherwise is to sanction a destruction of the separation of powers between the states and the federal government. There is NO PLACE within the I.R.C. that authorizes the CREATION of public offices using any tax form, and yet that is what the IRS is unlawfully using W-2, W-4, and 1040 forms for. 4 U.S.C. §72 says there MUST be a statute that authorizes the creation and exercise of such offices within a state in order for such public offices to be valid. Essentially what is happening is that the forms constitute an election to make you into a “resident agent” for an office that exists in the District of Columbia.

The existence of 26 U.S.C. §871(a) is a deception, because 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) says the property of those not engaged in the ‘trade or business' franchise is a foreign estate not subject to the I.R.C. One’s earnings are part of that “foreign estate”.

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)    Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship    http://famguardian.org/
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

26 U.S.C. §3401(a)(6) excludes earnings of “nonresident aliens” from “wages”, if regulations exist. Government workers who aren’t public officers therefore have the same protections as ordinary private industry workers who are nonresident aliens not engaged in the “trade or business” franchise. The only way a nonresident alien not otherwise engaged in the “trade or business” franchise can become subject is to sign the W-4 contract to:

1. Become engaged in the franchise and be eligible for “benefits” under the franchise agreement.
3. Make an election to become a “resident alien”.

Remember: Information returns are the only way the IRS could find out about the earnings of a government employee, and these returns can ONLY be filed against those engaged in the “trade or business” franchise or who elect to be using the W-4 agreement/contract. 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-(3)(a), 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1. How would the IRS find out about 871(a) income that is NOT connected with the “trade or business”? There is no information return that is NOT connected to a “trade or business” and it is a CRIME for a person not ALREADY engaged in a public office in the government BEFORE they signed the W-4 to impersonate a public officer or engage in the activities of a public office. 18 U.S.C. §912.

The income tax is upon the COINCIDENCE of DOMICILE within the jurisdiction AND being engaged in the “trade or business” franchise. The VOLUNTARY use of an identifying number connects you to BOTH of these prerequisites:

1. SSNs and TINs can only be issued to “U.S. persons”. 26 U.S.C. §6109(g), 26 CFR §301.6109-1(g), and 20 CFR §422.103(d).
2. The number is only MANDATORY for persons engaged in franchises. See IRS form 1042-s instructions AND section 10 of the following:

   About SSNs and TINs on Government Forms and Correspondence, Form #05.012
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

You can STILL be a government worker as a nonresident alien not engaged in a “trade or business”, not have a domicile on federal territory, and therefore STILL be a “foreign person” who is free and sovereign. The domicile and the protection it pays for is where the government’s authority comes from to collect the tax in the first place. It is a CIVIL liability and you aren’t subject to their CIVIL law without a domicile on federal territory, unless you contract with them to procure an identity or “res”, and thereby become a “res-ident”. When you contract with them, you create a “public office” in the government and become surety for the office you created using your signature. F.R.Civ.P. 17(b), 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) then changes the choice of law to the District of Columbia for all functions of the “public office” because now you are acting in a representative capacity on behalf of the federal corporation as such public officer.

On the subject of contracting with the government, the Bible forbids Christians from nominating a King or Protector above them, or from contracting with the pagan government:

“Do not walk in the [civil] statutes of your fathers [the heathens, by selecting a domicile or “residence” in their jurisdiction], nor observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols. I am the LORD your God: Walk in My statutes, keep My judgments, and do them; hallow My Sabbaths, and they will be a sign between Me and you, that you may know that I am the LORD your God.”
[Ezekial 20:10-20, Bible, NKJV]

[Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

“Therefore, my brethren, you also have become dead to the law [man’s law] through the body of Christ [by shifting your legal domicile to the God’s Kingdom], that you may be married to another—to Him who was raised from the dead, that we should bear fruit [as agents, fiduciaries, and trustees] to God. For when we were in the flesh, the sinful passions which were aroused by the law were at work in our members to bear fruit to death. But now we have been delivered from the law, having died to what we were held by, so that we should serve in the newness of the Spirit [and newness of the law, God’s law] and not in the oldness of the letter.”
[Rom. 7:4-6, Bible, NKJV]
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The government can’t lawfully force you to choose a domicile in their jurisdiction or to nominate a protector or become a “resident” if you are a “national” who was born in this country. They can force an alien born in another country to become a privileged “resident”, but the can’t force a “national” who is born here to become a “resident”, because they can’t lawfully compel a “citizen” under the constitution to suffer any of the disabilities of alienage without engaging in involuntary servitude and violation of constitutional rights. This is also confirmed by the definition of “residence” at 26 CFR §1.871-2, which only includes aliens and not “nonresident aliens”. If they did force you to choose a domicile or residence and thereby become a “taxpayer”, it would be a violation of the First Amendment prohibition against compelled association and the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude. It has always been lawful to refuse protection and refuse to be a domiciliary called a statutory “U.S. citizen”, “U.S. person”, or statutory “U.S. resident”, and to refuse to contract with them or accept any “benefits” that might give rise to a “quasi-contractual” obligation to pay for “social insurance”. See:

1. Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. The Government “Benefits” Scam, Form #05.040
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

As Frank Kowalik points out in his wonderful book, IRS Humbug, the income tax is a public officer kickback program disguised to “look” like a legitimate income tax. It's smoke and mirrors. To make it look like an income tax, they had to throw the “domicile” stuff into it, but the public officer status is still the foundation. That is why 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) says everything in the code is “foreign” that is not connected to the public office (“trade or business”) franchise. To be “foreign” means it is outside the jurisdiction of the franchise agreement because not consensually connected to it.

5.6.12.15 Methods for Connecting You to the Franchise

The following subsections describe the main methods by which entities and persons are connected to the “trade or business” franchise agreement codified in I.R.C. Subtitle A.

5.6.12.15.1 Reductions in Liability: Graduated Rate of Tax, Deductions, and Earned Income Credits

All attempts to reduce one’s assumed tax liability require the person filing the tax return to be engaged in the “trade or business” excise taxable franchise. This includes:

1. Applying the graduated rate of tax found in 26 U.S.C. §1. Without the graduated rate of tax, the flat 30% tax applies to “nonresident alien individuals” found in 26 U.S.C. §871(a). The Section 1 rate usually starts lower than 30%.
3. Taking “trade or business” deductions found in 26 U.S.C. §162:

   TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter B
   Part VI-Itemized deductions for Individuals and Corporations
   Sec. 162. - Trade or business expenses
   (a) In general
There shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including—

(1) a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered;

Why must you be engaged in a “trade or business” in order to reduce your liability as a “taxpayer”? Because this is a commercial “benefit” and only those who work for the government can receive any commercial benefit from the government. Otherwise, the government is abusing its taxing power to transfer wealth among private individuals:

To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. ‘A tax,’ says Webster’s Dictionary, ‘is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.’ ‘Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.’ Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John’s Church, 13 Pa. St., 104 says, very forcibly, ‘I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.’ See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y.; 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra.”

IRS Publication 519 confirms the above by saying the following:

Nonresident Aliens

You can claim deductions to figure your effectively connected taxable income. You generally cannot claim deductions related to income that is not connected with your U.S. business activities. Except for personal exemptions, and certain itemized deductions, discussed later, you can claim deductions only to the extent they are connected with your effectively connected income.

[IRS Publication 519, Year 2005, p. 24]

5.6.12.15.2 Information Returns

Information returns include but are not limited to IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, 1099, and 8300. Receipt of “trade or business” earnings is the basis for nearly all Information Returns processed by the IRS, which are reports documenting financial payments to government entities or officers. The requirement to file these reports is found at 26 U.S.C. §6041. The “person” they are referring to in the article is none other than a “public officer” in the government:

(a) Payments of $600 or more

All persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments to which section 6042 (a)(1), 6044 (a)(1), 6047 (e), 6049 (a), or 6050N (a) applies, and other than payments with respect to which a statement is required under the authority of section 6042 (a)(2), 6044 (a)(2), or 6045), of $600 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Secretary, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

In most cases, these reports are not only false, but fraudulent. Section 5.6.14 later documents how the IRS structures the handling of these reports in order to encourage the filing of false reports so as to maximize their revenues from unlawful activities. That section also appears on our website below:
This “trade or business” scam is found in other titles of the U.S. Code as well. For instance, in Title 31, which is the Money and Finance title, we did a search for the word “trade or business” and were very surprised by what we found there. You may know that when you try to withdraw $10,000 or more from a bank account, banks will insist on preparing what is called a “Currency Transaction Report”, or “CTR” documenting the withdrawal. This report is sent to the United States Treasury and inputted into the FINCEN computers at the Treasury. The report is used to catch money launderers and tax evaders who are handling large amounts of cash. Well, the only circumstance under which this report can lawfully be prepared is when the subject is engaged in a “trade or business”! Here is the section:

31 CFR 103.30(d)(2) General

(d) Exceptions to the reporting requirements of 31 U.S.C. 5331:

(2) Receipt of currency not in the course of the recipient's trade or business. The receipt of currency in excess of $10,000 by a person other than in the course of the person's trade or business is not reportable under 31 U.S.C. 5331.

The “trade or business” they are talking about is exactly the same one that appears in the Internal Revenue Code, folks!

Quite a scam, huh? Family Guardian wrote an article about this scam too, which you can read at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/MoneyBanking/IdentityTheft/FedTransReptnRequirements.htm
The "trade or business" requirement also extends to nearly all other types of payment reporting within the I.R.C. Here are just a few examples:

1. IRS Publication 334 entitled Tax Guide for Small Businesses, Year 2002, p. 12 says:

"Form 8300. You must file form 8300, Report of Cash Payments Over $10,000 Received in a Trade or Business, if you receive more than $10,000 in cash in one transaction, or two or more related business transactions. Cash includes U.S. and foreign coin and currency. It also includes certain monetary instruments such as cashier’s and traveler’s checks and money orders. Cash does not include a check drawn on an individual's personal account (personal check). For more information, see Publication 1544, Reporting Cash Payments Of Over $10,000 (Received in a Trade or Business)"

2. IRS Publication 583 entitled Starting a Business and Keeping Records, Rev. May 2002, p. 8 says:

"Form 1099-MISC. Use Form 1099-MISC, Miscellaneous Income, to report certain payments you make in your trade or business. These payments include the following..."

3. IRS Form 1099-MISC Instructions, 2005, p. 1 says:

"Trade or business reporting only. Report on Form 1099-MISC only when payments are made in the course of your trade or business. Personal payments are not reportable. You are engaged in a trade or business if you operate for gain or profit. However, nonprofit organizations are considered to be engaged in a trade or business and are subject to these reporting requirements. Nonprofit organizations subject to these reporting requirements include trusts of qualified pension or profit-sharing plans of employers, certain organizations exempt from tax under section 501(c) or (d), and farmers' cooperatives that are exempt from tax under section 521. Payments by federal, state, or local government agencies are also reportable."

4. Treasury Regulation 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(11)-1(a) says that those who are not engaged in a “trade or business” can earn no reportable income on a W-2:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source
§ 31.3401(a)(11)-1 Remuneration other than in cash for service not in the course of employer's trade or business.

(a) Remuneration paid in any medium other than cash for services not in the course of the employer's trade or business is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.

Cash remuneration includes checks and other monetary media of exchange. Remuneration paid in any medium other than cash, such as lodging, food, or other goods or commodities, for services not in the course of the employer's trade or business does not constitute wages. Remuneration paid in any medium other than cash for other types of services does not come within this exception from wages. For provisions relating to cash remuneration for service not in the course of employer's trade or business, see §31.3401(a)(4)-1.

5. Treasury Regulation 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(6)-1(b) says that remuneration earned outside the statutory “United States” (federal territory) is exempted from wages and not subject to withholding.

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source
§ 31.3401(a)(6)-1 Remuneration for services of nonresident alien individuals.

(b) Remuneration for services performed outside the United States.

Remuneration paid to a nonresident alien individual (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the United States is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.
How does the IRS trap "nontaxpayers" who are "nonresident aliens" who refuse to get identifying numbers or fill out a W-4? IRS Publication 515 shows how they do it, which is entitled Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities. That publication capitalizes on the confusion of private employers about the meaning of "United States" and "trade or business" by saying the following:

Income Not Effectively Connected

This section discusses the specific types of income that are subject to NRA withholding. The income codes contained in this section correspond to the income codes used on Form 1042-S (discussed later), and in most cases on Tables 1 and 2 found at the end of this publication.

You must withhold tax at the statutory rates shown in Chart C unless a reduced rate of exemption under a tax treaty applies. For U.S. source gross income that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business, the rate is usually 30%. Generally, you must withhold the tax at the time you pay the income to the foreign person. See "When to withhold under Withholding Agent, earlier." [IRS Publication 515, Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities, 2002, p. 14]

Three "words of art" are used above that we must pay particular attention to:

1. "U.S. source": Originating from within the “United States” federal corporation or federal territory.
2. "gross income": Payment qualifies as “gross income” within the meaning of 26 U.S.C. §61. The only payment not connected with a “trade or business” that are explicitly identified in the code as “gross income” is Social Security payments, under 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(8).

So what they are really saying is that if you are a nonresident alien not engaged in a trade or business who is receiving payments from the U.S. government in the form of Social Security, then these payments are subject to withholding of 30%, but ONLY if the party doing the withholding has explicitly been designated as a "withholding agent" by the Secretary as required under 26 U.S.C. §3501. We also know that private employers are NOT required to act as withholding agents, by the admission of the IRS’ own Internal Revenue Manual:

Internal Revenue Manual 5.14.10.2 (09-30-2004)

Payroll Deduction Agreements

2. Private employers, states, and political subdivisions are not required to enter into payroll deduction [withholding] agreements. Taxpayers should determine whether their employers will accept and process executed agreements before agreements are submitted for approval or finalized.

5.6.12.15.3 Government Identifying Numbers: SSN and TIN

Whenever you put a government issued identifying number on any document, you are implicitly establishing that you are engaged in the “trade or business” franchise. This fact is easily discerned by examining the following:

1. 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b) indicates that in the case of a foreign person, identifying numbers are only required if that person is engaged in a “trade or business” or if they made an election to be a “U.S. person”, meaning public officer in the government.

*Title 26—INTERNAL REVENUE

Information and Returns

Sec. 301.6109-1 Identifying numbers.

(b) Requirement to furnish one's own number—

(1) U.S. [GOVERNMENT] persons.

Every U.S. [Federal government public officer/person] who makes under this title a return, statement, or other document must furnish its own taxpayer identifying number as required by the forms and the accompanying instructions. A U.S. person whose number must be included on a document filed by another person must give the taxpayer identifying number so required to the other person on request.

For penalties for failure to supply taxpayer identifying numbers, see sections 6721 through 6724. For provisions dealing specifically with the duty of employees with respect to their social security numbers, see Sec.
3.6011(b)-2 (a) and (b) of this chapter (Employment Tax Regulations). For provisions dealing specifically with the duty of employers with respect to employer identification numbers, see Sec. 3.6011(b)-1 of this chapter (Employment Tax Regulations).

(2) Foreign persons.

The provisions of paragraph (b)(1) of this section regarding the furnishing of one's own number shall apply to the following foreign persons--

(i) A foreign person that has income effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business at any time during the taxable year;

(ii) A foreign person that has a U.S. office or place of business or a U.S. fiscal or paying agent at any time during the taxable year;

(iii) A nonresident alien treated as a resident under section 6013(g) or (h);

(iv) A foreign person that makes a return of tax (including income, estate, and gift tax returns), an amended return, or a refund claim under this title but excluding information returns, statements, or documents;

(v) A foreign person that makes an election under Sec. 301.7701-3(c);

(vi) A foreign person that furnishes a withholding certificate described in Sec. 1.1441-1(e)(2) or (3) of this chapter or Sec. 1.1441-5(c)(2)(iv) or (3)(iii) of this chapter to the extent required under Sec. 1.1441-1(e)(4)(vii) of this chapter;

(vii) A foreign person whose taxpayer identifying number is required to be furnished on any return, statement, or other document as required by the income tax regulations under section 897 or 1445. This paragraph (b)(2)(vii) applies as of November 3, 2003; and (viii) A foreign person that furnishes a withholding certificate described in Sec. 1.1446-1(c)(2) or (3) of this chapter whose taxpayer identification number is required to be furnished on any return, statement, or other document as required by the income tax regulations under section 1446. This paragraph (b)(2)(viii) shall apply to partnership taxable years beginning after May 18, 2005, or such earlier time as the regulations under Sec.

1.1446-1 through 1.1446-5 of this chapter apply by reason of an election under Sec. 1.1446-7 of this chapter.

1.1. The “U.S. person” they are describing in above is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) and it means a person in the “U.S.” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which means a government public officer. Everything that public officer makes that originates from the government is “trade or business” earnings. This is also confirmed by 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), which says that everything originating from the “U.S.” described is “trade or business” earnings.

1.2. Notice also that the “foreign person” described above is only required to provide the number if they are engaged in the “trade or business” franchise or if they made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h) to be treated as a resident alien. Such an election would be ILLEGAL for those who are nationals but not aliens, such as those domiciled in a state of the Union. Only foreign nationals can make such an election.

2. IRS Form 1042s Instructions, Year 2006, p. 14. What all of the circumstances below have in common is that they involve a “benefit” that is usually financial or tangible to the recipient, and therefore require a franchisee license number called a Taxpayer Identification Number:

Box 14, Recipient’s U.S. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN)

You must obtain a U.S. taxpayer identification number (TIN) for:

- Any recipient whose income is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States.

Note. For these recipients, exemption code 01 should be entered in box 6.

- Any foreign person claiming a reduced rate of, or exemption from, tax under a tax treaty between a foreign country and the United States, unless the income is an unexpected payment (as described in
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Regulations section 1.1441-6(g)) or consists of dividends and interest from stocks and debt obligations that are actively traded; dividends from any redeemable security issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (mutual fund); dividends, interest, or royalties from units of beneficial interest in a unit investment trust that are (or were, upon issuance) publicly offered and are registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Securities Act of 1933; and amounts paid with respect to loans of any of the above securities.

- Any nonresident alien individual claiming exemption from tax under section 871(f) for certain annuities received under qualified plans.
- A foreign organization claiming an exemption from tax solely because of its status as a tax-exempt organization under section 501(c) or as a private foundation.
- Any QI.
- Any WP or WT.
- Any nonresident alien individual claiming exemption from withholding on compensation for independent personal services [services connected with a “trade or business”].
- Any foreign grantor trust with five or fewer grantors.
- Any branch of a foreign bank or foreign insurance company that is treated as a U.S. person.

If a foreign person provides a TIN on a Form W-8, but is not required to do so, the withholding agent must include the TIN on Form 1042-S.

3. IRS Form 1040NR Instructions, Year 2007, p. 9. You can’t avail yourself of the “benefits” of the franchise without providing your franchise license number.

Line 7c, Column (2)

You must enter each dependent’s identifying number (SSN, ITIN, or adoption taxpayer identification number (ATIN)). If you do not enter the correct identifying number, at the time we process your return we may disallow the exemption claimed (such as the child tax credit) based on the dependent.

5.6.12.15.4 Domicile, residence, and Resident Tax Returns such as IRS Form 1040

The requirement to pay an income tax originates from the coincidence of one’s domicile along with the excise taxable activities they engage in within the place of domicile:

"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."

The above requirement of domicile is then found in 26 CFR §1.1-1(a) and is hidden within the words “citizen” and “resident”:

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE
CHAPTER I—INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
PART 1 INCOME TAXES—Table of Contents
Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

(a) General rule.

(1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual. For optional tax in the case of taxpayers with adjusted gross income of less than $10,000 (less than $3,000 for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1970) see section 3. The tax imposed is upon taxable income (determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from gross income). The tax is determined in accordance with the table contained in section 1. See subparagraph (2) of this paragraph for reference guides to the appropriate table for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1964, and before January 1, 1965, taxable years beginning after December 31, 1964, and before January 1, 1971, and taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970. In certain cases credits are allowed against the amount of the tax. See part IV (section 31 and following), subchapter A, chapter 1 of the Code. In general, the tax is payable upon the basis of returns rendered by persons liable therefor (subchapter A (sections 6001 and following), chapter 61 of the Code) or at the source of the income by withholding. For the computation of tax in the case of a joint return of a
What “citizens” and “residents” have in common is a legal domicile in the “United States”. Collectively, persons with a legal domicile within a jurisdiction are called “inhabitants” and “U.S. persons”:

NOTES:
1. “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 7701(a)(39), and 7408(d), and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

2. The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.

3. American nationals who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). See sections 4.11.2 of the Great IRS Hoax for details.

4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.

5. “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table

6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All “taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )(3), 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory “U.S. citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals” unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax treaty.

The term “United States” is then defined as federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and nowhere expressly extended to include states of the Union. This is the same “United States” within which EVERYTHING is presumed to be “trade or business” earnings, which implies that what they are really referring to is the “United States” federal corporation or government, and not the geographical United States:

\[\text{§864. Definitions and special rules}
\]

\begin{enumerate}
\item[(c)] Effectively connected income, etc.
\item[(3)] Other income from sources within United States \end{enumerate}

All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

A person who therefore is a “citizen” or “resident” within the I.R.C. and who therefore has a legal domicile in the “United States” is equivalent to either the government or a public officer representing the government. This is established in the memorandum of law below:

\begin{center}
Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
\end{center}

Therefore, whenever you file a “resident” tax form, such as form 1040, then you are indirectly admitting a legal domicile within the “United States” and all of your earnings are therefore presumed to be connected with the “trade or business” franchise pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §864(c )(3).

This is also confirmed by the IRS Form 1040 itself, because everything on the form is subject to “trade or business” deductions under 26 U.S.C. §162. Those not engaged in the “trade or business” franchise cannot lawfully take such deductions. Everything listed in the deduction against which a deduction is taken therefore effectively becomes “private property donated to a public use to procure the benefits of the trade or business franchise”. The deductions are the “benefit” or “privilege” of participating in the franchise and act essentially as employment compensation associated with the “public office”.

The Great | IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
The only way you can avoid participating in the “trade or business” franchise is to file a nonresident tax return, such as IRS Form 1040NR. Of this form, IRS Publication 519 says the following:

Income

All income for your period of residence and all income that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States for your period of nonresidence, after allowable deductions, is added and taxed at the rates that apply to U.S. citizens and residents. Income that is not connected with a trade or business in the United States for your period of nonresidence is subject to the flat 30% rate or lower treaty rate. You cannot take any deductions against this income.

[IRS Publication 519, Year 2005, p. 30]

In fact, it is participation in the franchise that effectively makes you a “resident” under the I.R.C. Whether a "person" is a "resident" or "nonresident" has NOTHING to do with the nationality or residence, but with whether it is engaged in a "trade or business":

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership.

Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

[TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605]

§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

Once you engage in commerce within the jurisdiction of the sovereign and consent to the franchise agreement:

1. You are deemed “resident” and “present” within the jurisdiction of the sovereign.

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.' " Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)). Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

(1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws; and (2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and (3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

2. Your legal identity moves to the District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(39) and 7408(d).

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701

§ 7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(39) Persons residing outside United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or

(B) enforcement of summons.

5.6.12.16 How to prevent being involuntarily or fraudulently connected to the “trade or business” franchise

Based on all the foregoing, if you are a “nonresident alien” not engaged in a “trade or business” under 26 U.S.C. §871(b) with no income from the U.S. Government or federal territory under 26 U.S.C. §871(a), then you aren’t even mentioned in the I.R.C. as a subject for any Internal Revenue tax and your estate is a “foreign estate” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31). Section 4.11 proves that nearly all Americans living in states of the Union are “nonresident aliens”, and so the above provision must apply to you, folks. Therefore, you are a “nonresident alien” with no “sources of income” connected with a public office in the District of Columbia and if you want to prevent being involuntarily connected with the “trade or business” franchise, then you:

1. Must refuse to sign IRS Form W-4 and instead use one of the following two forms:
   1.1. Amended version of IRS Form W-8BEN. See: About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
   1.2. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Must claim that you are not engaged in an excise taxable activity under the I.R.C. subtitle A.

3. Must claim that you don’t earn any “gross income”.

5. Must claim that you are a “nontaxpayer” not subject to the I.R.C. All portions within the I.R.C., IRS publications, and the Internal Revenue Manual that refer to “taxpayers” don’t refer to you and can safely be disregarded and disobeyed.

6. Must claim that you are not subject to withholding on any payments you receive if you earn no statutory “income” from federal territory in the statutory “United States” or are not engaged in a “trade or business”.

7. If any money was withheld from your pay by either a business or a financial institution, then you are due for a refund of all withholding and can lawfully ask for it back using the following form WITHOUT becoming a “taxpayer”:
   Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

8. Cannot lawfully file an IRS Form 1040, because EVERYTHING that goes on that form is treated as “effectively connected with a trade or business”. All entries on the form are subject to deductions and exemptions under 26 U.S.C. §162, which means EVERYTHING on the form is “trade or business” income. If you sign and submit this form, you are committing perjury under penalty of perjury. This is confirmed by examining 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(1), which says that all taxes imposed in I.R.C. Section 1 are connected with a "trade or business", and IRS Form 1040 is intended for those subject to this tax. The 1040 form is also for "aliens", and not "nonresident aliens", as was shown in section 5.5.3 of the Great IRS Hoax.

9. Cannot lawfully have Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs) filed against you by financial institutions, such as IRS Form 8300. If anyone mistakenly attempts to file these fraudulent reports against you, then use the remedy below. See IRS Publication 334 entitled Tax Guide for Small Businesses, p. 12 above:

   Demand for Verified Evidence of "Trade or Business" Activity: Currency Transaction Report (CTR), Form #04.008
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

10. Cannot lawfully allow IRS Form 1042-S to be filed against you because this form is ONLY for persons engaged in a "trade or business". If a company does erroneously file this form, you can lawfully correct it using the article below:

   Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1042-S, Form #04.003
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

11. Cannot lawfully allow IRS Form 1098 to be filed against you because this form is ONLY for persons engaged in a "trade or business". If a company does erroneously file this form, you can lawfully correct it using the article below:

   Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1098's, Form #04.004
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12. Cannot lawfully allow IRS Form 1099 to be filed against you because this form is ONLY for persons engaged in a "trade or business". See IRS Pub 583, Starting a Business and Keeping Records, p. 8 above. If a company does erroneously file this form, you can lawfully correct it using the article below:

   Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1099's, Form #04.005
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

13. Cannot lawfully allow having any earnings reported on a W-2. 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(11)-(a) says that those not engaged in a "trade or business" cannot earn reportable "wages". If wages are incorrectly reported by an ignorant private employer, you can and should correct them using the IRS Form 4852, as shown in the article at:

   Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2's, Form #04.006
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Keep all of the above fresh in your mind at all times as you decide how you are going to file in order to get all your ILLEGALLY STOLEN, I mean “withheld”, money back from an ignorant employer or financial institution who refuses to read and obey the "code" (not "law", but "code"). Also keep in mind that most of this section is entirely “academic masturbation”, as tax attorney Donald MacPherson colorfully calls it, because the Internal Revenue Code isn’t law for “nontaxpayers” anyway and can’t become law unless and until it is enacted into positive law. Therefore, the only people it pertains to are those who volunteer, and all these people are directly associated with the government as a federal “instrumentality” in some way.

5.6.12.17 Other important implications of the scam

Now that we completely understand how Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code works as an excise tax upon a voluntary and avoidable taxable activity called a "trade or business" within the statutory but not constitutional “United States” (federal territory), this explains the reason why proponents of the 861 Position described in section 5.7.5 later have been so vehemently hated and attacked by the government and the IRS. What they are doing, in most cases without even realizing it, is using the regulation at 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1) to draw attention to the fact that the federal income tax is in fact an excise tax, and that the "taxable activities" are all enumerated individually in this regulation and nowhere else in either the I.R.C. or the Treasury Regulations. This regulation also happens to be the only regulation that describes exactly how to apply earnings from each enumerated excise "taxable activity" to the process of computing one's tax liability. Is it any surprise that the government doesn't want evidence like this in the hands of people? This interferes with their "voluntary compliance" efforts and exposes their willful and malicious fraud for what it is, and this is why they don’t like it. This observation is the reason why most of the helpful examples contained within this regulation have been systematically removed over the years: to prevent people from correctly concluding that they aren’t engaged in foreign commerce or public office and therefore don’t owe the government any money.

Unfortunately, proponents of the 861 Position such as Larken Rose and those before him such as Thurston Bell fail to fully comprehend how they fit into this carefully crafted legal deception, fail to understand the nature of federal jurisdiction, and fail to fully understand that a "code" which only applies to those who volunteer to become engaged in a "trade or business" doesn't apply to them if they choose not to volunteer. They have spent so much time looking at the trees that they forgot... about the forest and are being maliciously persecuted by the IRS mainly because of this monumental oversight. They don't understand that the I.R.C. was not enacted into positive law and in fact constitutes essentially a voluntary contract. This is not intended as a personal criticism by any means, but simply a realistic observation intended to help keep you out of trouble. Those who choose not to "sign" or consent to the contract by submitting the W-4 or filing a 1040 form with a nonzero "income" can have no legal liabilities under the code and cannot be described as "taxpayers" who are subject to it. Larken Rose thinks the “code” is “law” or "public law" for everyone, but in fact it is "private law" that is only "law" for "taxpayers", all of whom have consented to it in one way or another at some point in time. See the following free memorandum of law which proves this point:

5.6.12.18 Why the IRS and the Courts WON’T Talk About what a “trade or business” or “Public office” is and Collude to Cover Up the Scam

"The 'Truth' about income taxes is so precious to the U.S. government that it must be surrounded by a bodyguard of lies."

[Family Guardian Fellowship]

The government perpetuates the “trade or business” FRAUD and scam by the following means:

1. Refusing to discuss the meaning of a “trade or business” in their publications or their phone support.
2. Refusing to discuss the meaning of a “public office” in their publications or their phone support.
3. Calling those who raise the issues documented here as “frivolous” or “preposterous” without citing any relevant legal authority justifying such a conclusion that is consistent with the following pamphlet:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Trying to cover up their fraud using the word “includes” scam documented below:

Meaning of the Words “includes” and “including”, Form #05.014
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

There are many very good reasons why they try to deflect attention away from the scam. Some of the reasons are as follows:

1. The IRS would have to admit that they aren’t part of the government and are a private corporation, which in fact they are. Remember: A “public officer” is someone who has no supervisor other than the law and the courts and who exercises a sovereign functions of the government INDEPENDENTLY of oversight other than the law and the courts:

   "Essential characteristics of a ‘public office’ are:
   (1) Authority conferred by law,
   (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
   (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.

   Key element of such test is that “officer is carrying out a sovereign function. Spring v. Constantino, 168 Conn. 563, 362 A.2d. 871, 875. Essential elements to establish public position as ‘public office’ are:
   Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
   Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position.
   Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
   Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and Position must have some permanency.”

If the IRS was an administrative part of the government and ESPECIALLY if it were in the Executive Branch as they want to deceive you into believing, then they couldn’t have any enforcement authority at all without admitting that the people they are enforcing against in fact ARE NOT “public officers” as legally defined because they are being supervised by other than ONLY the courts and the law alone. These considerations explain why:

1.1. No statute authorizes or ever has authorized the creation of the IRS. See:

1.2. Historical Treasury Organization Charts do not show the IRS as being in the Dept. of the Treasury. See:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax 5-736

1.3. Title 31 of the U.S. Code does not list the Internal Revenue Service as being within the Dept. of the Treasury, even though their letterhead FRAUDULENTLY says they are. See:

SEDM Exhibit #08.001
http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm

1.4. The Dept. of Justice has admitted under oath during legal discovery that the IRS is not an agency of the Federal Government. See:

SEDM Exhibit #08.004
http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm

For further details on the absolute FRAUD to cover up the above information, read the evidence for yourself:

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. All “public officers” have a fiduciary duty to the people they serve, which means they have a fiduciary duty to YOU to act in YOUR best interest as a human being protected by the Constitution. If you can prove your oppressors are “taxpayers” and therefore “public officers”, then their omissions that injure you would become actionable and a tort in court.

"As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves, and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy."

[63C Am.Jur.2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247]

3. Any officer of the state government, including a state judge, who is also a federal “taxpayer” would have to admit that he is violating the Constitution of his state by simultaneously being a “public officer” in the federal government and a public officer in the state government at the same time. Most state constitutions and/or state statutes forbid public officers within the state government from also being public officers in the federal government. This is done to prevent a violation of the separation of powers doctrine between the state and federal governments as well as to prevent conflicts of interest and allegiance by public servants. Why, then, do state courts have federal Employer Identification Numbers (EINs)? Shouldn’t they be exempt from such requirement to preserve the separation of powers? Here is an example within the California Constitution:

CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
ARTICLE 7  PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

SEC. 7. A person holding a lucrative office under the United States or other power may not hold a civil office of profit [within the state government]. A local officer or postmaster whose compensation does not

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. “Taxpayer” attorneys representing clients in state court would have to recuse themselves from the practice of law for violating the state constitutional prohibition against serving simultaneously in both a public office in the federal government and a public office in the state government. All attorneys are officers of the court they are licensed to practice in. If that court is a state court, they are public officers of the state government and therefore cannot also serve as public officers of the federal government called “taxpayers”:

Attorneys at Law
§3 Nature of Attorneys Office

An attorney is more than a mere agent or servant of his or her client; within the attorney's sphere, he or she is as independent as a judge, has duties and obligations to the court as well as to his or her client, and has powers entirely different from and superior to those of an ordinary agent. 106 In a limited sense an attorney is a public officer, 109 although an attorney is not generally considered a "public officer," "civil officer," or the like, as used in statutory or constitutional provisions. 108 The attorney occupies what may be termed a “quasi-judicial officer” 100 and is, in fact, an officer of the court.

[American Jurisprudence 2d, Attorneys At Law, §3 Nature of Office]

5. You as a “taxpayer” and a “public officer” could assert sovereign immunity against other agencies of the government on the basis that it violates the separation of powers doctrine for any agency of the federal government to interfere with the activities of any other agency or office. Taxation is a “legislative” and not a judicial function. 110 This situation is precisely the reason, for instance, why:

5.1. The Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421, prohibits courts from interfering with the LAWFUL assessment or collection of income taxes from “public officers” in the Legislative Branch who consent.

5.2. The Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) prohibits courts from making declaratory judgments in the case of federal “taxes”. This prohibition also precludes the courts from identifying anyone as a “taxpayer” who says under penalty of perjury that they aren’t.

For further details on this scam, see:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

6. It is ILLEGAL for an “alien” to be a “public officer” and you aren’t an alien if you were born in this country. The I.R.C. Subtitle A tax is an excise tax upon a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office.” All “taxpayers” in the I.R.C. are aliens engaged in a public office and it is ILLEGAL for 105 Curtis v. Richards, 4 Idaho 434, 40 P. 57; Herfurth v. Horine, 266 Ky. 19, 98 S.W.2d. 21; J. A. Utley Co. v. Borchard, 372 Mich. 367, 126 N.W.2d. 696 (superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Davis v. O'Brien, 152 Mich.App. 495, 393 N.W.2d. 914); Hoppe v. Klappperich, 224 Minn 224, 28 N.W.2d. 780, 173 A.L.R. 819.

The North Dakota Constitution specifically provides that the office of attorney-at-law is a public office. Menz v Coyle (ND) 117 N.W.2d. 290 (criticized on other grounds by Gange v Clerk of Burleigh County Dist. Court (ND) 429 N.W.2d. 429).

aliens to hold public office! See 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) and 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) for proof that all “individuals” and “taxpayers” are aliens engaged in a “trade or business”/public office.

4. Lack of Citizenship

§74. Aliens cannot hold Office - - It is a general principle that an alien can not hold a public office. In all independent popular governments, as is said by Chief Justice Dixon of Wisconsin, “it is an acknowledged principle, which lies at the very foundation, and the enforcement of which needs neither the aid of statutory nor constitutional enactments or restrictions, that the government is instituted by the citizens for their liberty and protection, and that it is to be administered, and its powers and functions exercised only by them and through their agency.”

In accordance with this principle it is held that an alien can not hold the office of sheriff.111

7. Courts would have to admit your evidence just as readily as that of any other government officer or employee involved in the action, or else they would be guilty of denying you equal protection of the law and all the “benefits” of the very office that they MUST impute to you in order to treat you as a “taxpayer”. This would make them look hypocritical and juries would throw the book at the government for doing this. The Federal Rules of Evidence permit those engaged in a “public office” to receive preferential treatment in getting their evidence admitted in federal court, including evidence without signature and without foundational testimony. The government doesn’t want to confer this advantage upon pro per litigants or those opposing the government tax scam. Fed.Rul.Ev. 803(8) permits a “public records” exception to the Hearsay Rule, which means that any tax record, any evidence you gathered in the course of complying with your alleged “duties” as a “public officer” would not be excludible by the judges of federal district courts, which would severely undermine the government’s civil or criminal tax case against you. The IRS and DOJ win in federal court primarily by getting federal judges to unlawfully exclude evidence of persons who are litigating against them in order to prejudice the case in favor of the government. Below is what the appropriate section of the Hearsay Rule, Fed.Rul.Ev. 803 says on this subject, noting that “activities of the office or agency”, such as a “public office” fall within the protections of this rule:

Rule 803. Hearsay Exceptions: Availability of Declarant Immaterial

The following are not excluded by the hearsay rule, even though the declarant is available as a witness:

(8) Public records and reports. Records, reports, statements, or data compilations, in any form, of public offices or agencies, setting forth (A) the activities of the office or agency, or (B) matters observed pursuant to duty imposed by law as to which matters there was a duty to report, excluding, however, in criminal cases matters observed by police officers and other law enforcement personnel, or (C) in civil actions and proceedings against the Government in criminal cases, factual findings resulting from an investigation made pursuant to authority granted by law, unless the sources of information or other circumstances indicate lack of trustworthiness.

8. Once the government truthfully admits that the income tax is an “excise tax” upon “public offices” within the United States government, those facing IRS enforcement actions would naturally introduce some very compromising questions that would put the IRS into a very tight spot that they could never get out of:

8.1. How can you force me to act as a “public officer” without my consent? Where is the evidence that I consented to act in this capacity?

8.2. Where is the constitutionally required oath of office for me to act as a “public officer”? This requirement is described earlier in section 5.6.12.12.

8.3. Where is the act of Congress that authorizes the specific “public office” that you allege that I am engaged in as required by 4 U.S.C. §72?

8.4. Where is the compensation to act as a “public officer”, because I don’t work for free and the Thirteenth Amendment prohibits involuntary servitude?

8.5. What if I don’t think the compensation to act as a “public office” offered by I.R.C. Sections 1, 32, and 162 is adequate? How can I quit this form of federal agency and/or employment? Show me the forms to do this permanently.

8.6. How can people who submit false information returns that connect me to a “public office” have any lawful authority at all to donate or convert my private labor and property to a “public use” and a “public office” without my express written consent? If disinterested third parties can do that, it never was my property to begin with, now was it?

“That property which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”

8.7. Shouldn’t my word as a “public officer” be taken over that of the private third parties who submit the false information returns that connect me to the alleged “office” to begin with, based on the Hearsay Rule, Fed.Rul.Ev. 803(8)? Why are you not granting to an alleged fellow “public officer” such as yourself this privilege or benefit of the office?

8.8. Are information returns filed against those not lawfully engaged in public offices being used as “federal election forms” to in effect “vote” people into public office, and is this a lawful use for such a form? Does withholding connected with these information returns then become bribery to procure an appointed or elected public office in the case of a person who was not otherwise lawfully engaged in such an office, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §201?

On the subject of the Hearsay Rule, Fed.Rul.Ev. 803(8) above, below is what the Rutter Group, Federal Civil Trials and Evidence says on the Public Records exception to the Hearsay Rule:

7. [8:2780] Public Records and Reports (FRE 803(8)): The following are not inadmissible under the hearsay rule:

“Records, reports, statements, or data compilations, in any form, of public offices or agencies, setting forth:

(A) the activities of the office or agency, or

(B) matters observed pursuant to duty to report, excluding, however, in criminal cases matters observed by police officers and other law enforcement personnel, or

(C) in civil actions and proceedings and against the Government in criminal cases, factual findings resulting from an investigation made pursuant to authority granted by law,

“unless the sources of information or other circumstances indicate lack of trustworthiness.” [FRE 803(8) (emphasis added)]

a. [8:2781] Compare—business records exception: The public records exception is much easier to invoke than the Rule 803(6) business records exception: the public records exception does not require the testimony of a custodian and often requires no foundation witness because the self-authentication provisions of FRE 902 will suffice (see ¶ 8:2905f).

b. [8:2782] Rationale: This hearsay exception is justified both by considerations of trustworthiness and necessity: Trustworthiness rests on the assumption that public officials perform their duties properly; necessity, on the assumption that they are unlikely to remember details independently of the record. [See Rule 803(8), Adv. Comm. Notes; Coleman v. Home Depot, Inc. (3d Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d. 1333, 1341; Espinoza v. INS (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d. 308, 310].

The special provision for self-authentication of public records (FRE 902, see ¶ 8:2907 ff.) also eliminates the disruptive effect of bringing public officials to court. [Williams v. Tri-County Growers, Inc. (3d Cir. 1984) 747 F.2d. 121, 133 (disapproved on another ground in Martin v. Cooper Elec. Supply Co. (3d Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d. 896, 908, fn. 11)].

c. [8:2783] Any form of record: The hearsay exception covers “[r]ecords, reports, statements or data compilations, in any form. . .” [FRE 803(8) (emphasis added)] d. [8:2784] Any government: The Rule applies to the records or reports of any “public office or agency” (FRE 803(*8)). No distinction is made between federal and nonfederal offices and agencies.

Thus, records of state or local government agencies may be admissible under this exception; likewise as to records of foreign governments. [See Hill v. Marshall (6th Cir. 1992) 962 F.2d. 1209, 1212—report by committee of state legislature; Matter of Oil Spill by Amoco Cadiz Off Coast of France on March 16, 1978 (7th Cir. 1992) 954 F.2d. 1279, 1308—records of French Court]
Conclusions and summary

This section summarizes everything we learned in this article and also ties this information in with everything else found on this website:

1. Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code describes an excise tax upon a privileged activity called a "trade or business". All excise taxes involve franchises of one form or another and all franchises make those who participate into officers, agents, and instrumentalities of the government that granted the franchise. See: Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. A "trade or business" is statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". A "public office" consists of employment or agency of the federal government in carrying out the sovereign and lawfully authorized functions of the government. Those engaged in a "trade or business" are acting in a representative capacity as "public officers", and as such, take on the legal character of the U.S. government, who they represent in accordance with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). All corporations are "citizens" under the laws they were created. The U.S. government is statutorily defined as a "federal corporation" in 28 U.S.C. §3002. All excise taxes involve franchises of one form or another and all franchises make those who participate into officers, agents, and instrumentalities of the government that granted the franchise.

3. All income taxes are based on domicile. Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954). Therefore, Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code may only lawfully be imposed or enforced against persons domiciled in the District of Columbia. See: Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/DomicileBasisForTaxation.htm

Since Congress has not created and cannot lawfully create "public offices" within any state of the Union, then it cannot impose or enforce Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code there.

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee. But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

7. All federal identifying numbers, such as SSN’s, TINs, and EINs, are government property. 20 CFR §422.103(d). As such, anything you connect them with, including your labor, becomes “private property donated to a public use” without your consent. The very nature of the word “property” implies exclusive use and control, which implies the right to exclude control over it by anyone but you. Therefore, any third party who files a false information return that connects your earnings or your labor to a “public office” or a “public use” without your explicit consent is violating the following laws and others not mentioned:

8. No one can lawfully connect your private property, such as your labor or financial assets, to a “public office” or a “public use” without your consent. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041(b)(2) says that all taxes imposed in section 1 are connected with a “trade or business”.

9. Everything that goes on an IRS Form 1040 represents government revenue in connection with a “trade or business” because:

9.1. The IRS Form 1040 is for the tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1.

9.2. Everything on the IRS Form 1040 is subject to deductions authorized under 26 U.S.C. §162 and the only income subject to such deductions, according to 26 U.S.C. §162 is “trade or business” income.

9.3. 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2) says that all taxes imposed in section 1 are connected with a “trade or business”.

10. Those not engaged in a “trade or business” cannot truthfully file an IRS Form 1040. The only proper form for them to file is the IRS Form 1040NR, because this is the only form that includes a block for earnings not connected with a “trade or business”.

11. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041, all information returns, such as IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, 1099, K-1, etc have the effect of connecting the revenue in question to a taxable activity and creating a "prima facie presumption" that the target of the information return is engaged in a "trade or business". Those who are not engaged in a "trade or business" need to rebut this false information return by filing corrected information returns so that they are not incorrectly compelled to associate with federal employment, agency, and contracts in violation of the First Amendment prohibition of compelled association.

12. A “public office” can only be created through the operation of private/special/contract law and your voluntary consent. If you don't consent to act as a public officer and do all the following, then you can't earn “gross income”. The process of refusing to consent to engage in contacts and "public office" with the government is effected by:

12.1. Not taking any deductions or credits on a tax return. Only those engaged in a "trade or business" may take deductions and credits, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §§1, 32, and 162.

12.2. Not signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4 to your private employer. Since the W-4 causes a W-2 to be filed and the W-2 is an information return, only those engaged in a "trade or business" can fill out and sign the W-4. Private employers cannot lawfully compel submitting of a W-4 for a person who is not engaged in a "trade or business" and if they do, they are engaged in theft and extortion. See:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers

12.4. Challenging and rebutting all false Currency Transaction Reports that connect you to a "trade or business". See:

Demand for Verified Evidence of "Trade or Business" Activity: Currency Transaction Report (CTR), Form #04.008

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12.5. Opening your financial accounts as a "nonresident alien" instead of a "U.S. Person", and do so without a Social Security Number or TIN. See:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202, Section 7

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12.6. Terminating Social Security participation. The Social Security Act of 1935, Title 8, section 801 says that you agree to participate in payroll withholding for the income tax if you also participate in Social Security. See the following for the process of doing this:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee

12.7. Properly declaring your citizenship status on government forms as a constitutional citizen but not a statutory citizen. This will ensure that your domicile is not presumed to be in the "United States" federal government. See:

12.7.1. Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12.7.2. Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

13. Even people who are domiciled in the District of Columbia, unless they work or have contracts with the national government and thereby are engaged in a "public office", do not earn "gross income" under I.R.C. Subtitle A. The only exception to this is found in 26 U.S.C. §871(a).

14. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), all earnings from within the "United States", which means "sources within the United States" are presumed to be connected with a "trade or business". Consequently, the term "United States" within the Internal Revenue Code section 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) really implies employment, agency, or contracts within the United States national government, and does not mean or imply a geographical area.

15. The use of a Taxpayer Identification Number creates a prima facie presumption that the person using it is engaged in a "trade or business". You can't use a TIN unless you are engaged in a "trade or business".

16. Pursuant to 31 CFR §103.30(d)(2), Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs), such as IRS Form 8300, Treasury form 8300, may only be filled out against persons engaged in a "trade or business". It is unlawful to fill out these forms against persons who are not engaged in a "trade or business". If you are not engaged in a "trade or business" and someone tries to incorrectly fill out this form against you, present the following form:

Demand for Verified Evidence of "Trade or Business" Activity: Information Return, Form #04.007

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

17. Nonresident aliens not engaged in a "trade or business" as defined in 26 CFR §1.871-1(b)(i) cannot earn:

17.3. "wages" in connection with any work performed outside the "United States" (government), in accordance with 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(6)-1.

17.4. "gross income" in connection with all compensation not paid in cash, in accordance with 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(11)-1. In other words, if you are paid in goods and not cash, such as gold or silver, you can't earn "gross income" even if you are engaged in a "trade or business".

18. The IRS wants to deceive you into thinking that Subtitle A of the I.R.C. describes a direct, unapportioned tax instead of an indirect excise tax upon avoidable privileges connected with a "public office". They willfully perpetuate this illusion in order to keep you from searching for ways to avoid the activity and the taxes associated with the privileged activity. That is why:

18.1. None of their publications precisely define what a "trade or business" is. The one that comes closest is Publication 54, but even it doesn't do the subject justice.

18.2. When you ask them about what a "trade or business" is, they won't tell you.

18.3. When you show them the definition of "trade or business" from 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), they will try to argue that the word doesn't mean what it says there and that the use of the word "includes" causes the word to mean not what the law says, but whatever they WANT it to mean. This is NOT how law works, folks! See:
19. The federal courts are helping the IRS in the above cover-up. We have been unable to locate a single court case that discusses the information contained in this article. The federal courts are making cases that bring it up "unpublished" so that slaves living on the federal plantation will not be able to remove their chains and go free. They are "accessories after the fact" to Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization crimes against humanity, in violation of Title 18, Part 1, Chapter 5 and 18 U.S.C. §3. See: http://nonpublication.com. In this regard, the courts have become "predators" rather than "protectors".

20. Most IRS Forms illegally create false presumptions about your status that compel you to associate with the “trade or business” activity and become a "taxpayer". See the following article about this SCAM:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

IRS very deliberately DOES NOT provide any forms or instructions that help “nontaxpayers” protect their status or prevent becoming the target of unlawful enforcement actions. The best way to avoid these false presumptions is to do the following, in descending order of preference:

20.1. Use standard IRS Forms and attach the following form to the IRS Form according to the instructions included with the form:

Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

20.2. Use AMENDED IRS Forms found on the following page.

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormsPubs.htm

20.3. Modify existing IRS Forms yourself either electronically or using a pen before you sign it, according to the instruction in the link above, section 1.

21. Anyone who presumes or assumes you are a "taxpayer" under Subtitle A of the I.R.C. absent authenticated, court-admissible evidence is:

21.1. Assuming you work for the government as an agent, officer, contractor, or employee engaged in a "public office".

21.2. Asserting "eminent domain" over your private labor and property, which is illegal unless you receive "just compensation" pursuant to the requirements of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

21.4. Depriving you of life, liberty, and property in the process of making the presumption, which is unconstitutional.

(1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party’s constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. 5.6.12.20 Further study

Understanding the "trade or business" scam fits together all the pieces of the puzzle scattered throughout this chapter and explains them in such a cohesive way that it is impossible to argue with. It is far more than simply a "theory", but a fact you can verify yourself by reading the IRS Publications, the code, the Constitution, and the Treasury Regulations. All of them agree with the content of this section. If you would like to learn more about the "trade of business" scam, a whole very interesting and well-researched book has been written on this subject that we highly recommend. It’s a short book being only 232 pages, so it is sure to keep your attention:

5.6.13 The Nonresident Alien Position

The nonresident alien position is easier and simpler to defend than the 861 source position. It revolves around the following simple concept:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. The “United States” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) to mean ONLY the District of Columbia. “U.S.” in all IRS publications therefore means the “District of Columbia”. We also say that this area, the District of Columbia, is part of the “federal United States” or the “federal zone” throughout this book.

2. States of the Union are “foreign” with respect to federal legislative jurisdiction for the vast majority of subject matters, including taxation.

3. The Internal Revenue Code describes actually two separate excise taxes for two mutually exclusive legislative jurisdictions (see section 5.1.11 earlier):
   3.1. A municipal tax upon citizens and residents (aliens) of the District of Columbia under Subtitles A, B, and C.
   3.2. An income tax upon foreign commerce within states of the Union under Subtitle D.

4. Anyone who is neither a statutory “U.S. citizen” (person born in the District of Columbia or a U.S. territory) or a resident (alien) domiciled in the District of Columbia is a “nonresident alien” under the I.R.C.

5. Those who are “nonresident aliens” are “nonresident” and therefore not within the legislative jurisdiction of most federal laws and are “nontaxpayers” under the I.R.C. in most cases. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §871, the only thing they have to pay income taxes on are earnings from the District of Columbia, such as:
   5.1. Social security benefits.
   5.2. Distributions from Foreign Sales Corporations (FSCs) registered within the District of Columbia.
   5.3. Earnings from investments and real property in the District of Columbia.

6. “Nonresident aliens” are not the equivalent of “aliens” because “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) are “nonresident aliens” but not “aliens”.

Americans domiciled in nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states meet the above requirements and are “nonresident aliens” with respect to the Internal Revenue Code and the [federal] “United States” and therefore have no “U.S.” source income unless they work for the U.S. government as public officers or have passive investments in the District of Columbia.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you disagree and think that “United States” includes places other than the District of Columbia, then please explain why 26 CFR §1.932-1(a)(1) says the following, which contradicts such a conclusion. Why would people who live in a “U.S. possession” be treated as nonresident aliens instead of residents, if they lived in the “United States”? Why would this section even be necessary because if you were right, they would be “residents” instead of “nonresident aliens”?

26 CFR §1.932-1 Status of citizens of U.S. possessions

“(a)(1) A citizen of a possession of the United States (except Puerto Rico and, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1972, Guam), who is not otherwise a citizen or resident of the United States, including only the States and the District of Columbia, is treated for the purpose of the taxes imposed by Subtitle A of the Code (relating to income taxes) as if he were a nonresident alien individual.”

Also explain why after we posted the above on our website in 2005, this regulation mysteriously disappeared from the Government Printing Office website and was replaced with a temporary regulation that didn’t tell the truth so plainly. The current version of the above regulation does not contain this language because the government wants to hide the truth from you about your true status.

The term “nonresident alien” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), which says:

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) Nonresident alien

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

We proved earlier in section 5.2.19 that Americans born in states of the Union and domiciled there are not “citizens” under the Internal Revenue Code or any federal law. We also showed earlier in sections 4.10 and 5.5.2 that they aren’t “residents” either, because the only “residents” are “aliens” in the Internal Revenue Code. Consequently, the only other status that most Americans can have is that of a “nonresident alien” under the Internal Revenue Code.

Within the Internal Revenue Code, the term “nonresident alien” is a “word of art”, which means a term that has a special use different from what common sense and common usage might dictate. This situation is similar to the definition of the term “employee” in the Internal Revenue Code, which means an elected or appointed political official of the U.S.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax government (see 26 U.S.C. 3401(c) and 26 CFR §31.3401(c)). The terms “alien” and “nonresident alien” are also defined in the regulations at 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c):

26 CFR 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c ) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013(g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

If you look at the above two definitions carefully, which incidentally are the only definitions of “individual”, “alien”, and “nonresident alien” found in 26 CFR, you will notice that a natural person who lives inside the 50 states of the Union and outside of the federal zone can be a “nonresident alien” without being an “alien”, which at first glance would appear to be a contradiction. How can a person be a “nonresident alien” without being an “alien”? Because “nonresident alien” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) as someone who is not a “U.S. citizen” or a “resident” (alien), which is exactly what a “national but not citizen” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) is!112 Because of the definition of “alien” found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) above, that same “national” can’t be a “alien”, because “aliens” cannot be “nationals” or “U.S. citizens”? The chart below reveals the relationship, which we introduced earlier in section 4.11.13:

112 NOTE: Throughout this book, the terms “U.S. National” and “non-citizen U.S. National” are equivalent and interchangeable.

An examination of IRS Form 1040NR confirms that “U.S. nationals” are indeed nonresident aliens. A “state national” and a “national” are the equivalent of a “U.S. national” in that context. Check the following page on our website for confirmation:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/IRSForm1040nr-USNational.pdf

Our deceitful federal government has once again tried to confuse sovereign Americans so they would discount being one based on a statement something like the following:

“A reasonable person would conclude that they can’t be an alien in their own country, and therefore I can’t be a nonresident alien. It’s ludicrous to even think that I could.”

The term “nonresident alien” is a contradiction deliberately designed by deceitful lawyers to confuse you. Recall from section 4.10 earlier that all “residents” can only be “aliens” under the Internal Revenue Code. When we call someone a “nonresident”, we are saying he is not an “alien”. “non” means “not”. Therefore, when we call someone a “nonresident alien”, we are calling them a “non-alien alien”. How’s that for cognitive dissonance! Since lawyers know that people will avoid cognitive dissonance, that is why they named the term the way they did. If Congress had been completely honest about their definitions, they would have used the term “nonresident national or foreign national” instead of “nonresident alien” in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) and explained that this status is the one that applies to people born in states of the Union under the Internal Revenue Code. However, then they would have given away their ruse and showed the average American that they aren’t liable for income tax unless they have gross income from sources within the federal United States that falls under 26 CFR §1.861-8(f), which most people don’t!

Pivotal to the nonresident alien position is the definition of the “income” (see section 5.6.5 earlier) and our identity as “human beings” and not privileged statutory franchisees called “persons”, “individuals”, corporations. The term “nonresident alien” in the context of federal income taxes can also encompass those persons who are state but not federal citizens or people who are foreigners domiciled in a state of the Union. However, one can be a “natural born sovereign state citizen” and still be a national of their country while not being a federal or “U.S. citizen” under “acts of Congress”. These people are correctly referred to as “nationals” or “state nationals”. Johnny Liberty (http://www.icresource.com) also calls them “American nationals” in his Global Sovereigns Handbook.
It might also surprise you that the Treasury Department has actually already admitted in its publications that people who are “state nationals” are indeed “nonresident aliens”. The famous Supreme Court Case called Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, 240 U.S. 1 (1916) involved a French immigrant who was a citizen of New York state but not a “citizen” under Federal Law. Therefore, he was a “national but not a citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) and 8 U.S.C. §1452. He bought stock in the Union Pacific Railroad, which was a federal corporation chartered in the District of Columbia and operating in a federal territory of the United States (Utah). He brought suit against the Union Pacific Railroad to enjoin them from paying income taxes to the federal government on the excuse that it was reducing the earnings of shareholders located in the states of the Union and therefore constituted a direct tax. The supreme Court said that it would not interfere with the decision by a corporation to pay income taxes, even if the law didn’t require it. Shortly after that finding by the Supreme Court, the Treasury department published Treasury Decision 2313, in which they identified Mr. Brushaber as a nonresident alien. You can read about this fascinating case at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CourtCases/BrushaberVUnionPacRR240US1.htm

We hear a lot of questions along the following lines:

“Well why does it matter whether I’m a ‘U.S. citizen’ or a ‘nonresident alien’ anyway? Either way I’m not liable for income tax because there is no liability statute or implementing regulations permitting enforcement of Subtitle A income taxes imposed in 26 U.S.C. Section 1.”

Very good question! We respond to this prudent observation by stating that there is absolutely no advantage to being a U.S. citizen and a BIG disadvantage because once we volunteer to become statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, we volunteer to be completely subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S. government and the federal courts! If you have read this far, you have realized that our federal government is corrupt and covetous of getting into our pocket and plundering as much of our assets as it can get its paws on using deceit and fraud. Why open the door wide enough to invite these criminals into our lives by giving them jurisdiction so they can destroy our lives and our liberties if we don’t have to? Prudence demands that we provide as many protections and safeguards as we possibly can for our liberties by staying as far away from federal and any kind of government jurisdiction or influence as we can! Any other approach is pure stupidity and a big mistake! Crosse v. Bd. of Supervisors, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966) says about this subject:

“Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state.” Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, supra.

A “national”, a “state national”, a Natural Born Sovereign, and a “nonresident alien” are therefore the best things we can be because this will give our liberties the most protections from the encroachments of greedy Congressmen, unscrupulous IRS agents, and corrupt federal judges, all of which are the “sinners” that Jesus came down to earth to call to repentance. This fits very nicely in with the scripture quoted in section 2.5.3 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 under “Making Yourself Judgment Proof”, which states:

“A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself, but the simple pass on and are punished. By humility and fear of the Lord are riches and honor and life. Thorns and snares are in the way of the perverse: he who guards his soul will be far from them.”

[Prov. 22:3]

NOTES:
1. A nonresident alien individual who has made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) to be treated as a resident alien is treated as a “nonresident alien” for the purposes of withholding under I.R.C. Subtitle C but retains their status as a “resident alien” under I.R.C. Subtitle A. See 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii).
2. What turns a “nonresident alien NON-individual” into a “nonresident alien individual” is:
   2.1. Being an an alien and NOT a “national” AND
   2.2. Meets one or more of the following two criteria found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii):
      2.2.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).
      2.2.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-1(d).
3. If you were born in a state of the Union and maintain a domicile there, then you are described in item 3.1 of the table.
4. All “taxpayers” are aliens or “nonresident aliens”. You cannot be a “citizen” and a taxpayer at same time. The definition of “individual” found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) does NOT include “citizens”. The only occasion where a “citizen” can also be an “individual” is when they are abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911 and interface to the I.R.C. under a tax treaty with a foreign country as an alien pursuant to 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).

And when he had come into the house, Jesus anticipated him, saying, "What do you think, Simon? From whom do the kings [governments] of the earth [lawfully] take customs or taxes from their sons [citizens and subjects] or from strangers ['aliens', which are synonymous with 'residents' in the tax code, and exclude 'citizens']?"

Peter said to Him, "From strangers ['aliens'/ 'residents' ONLY. See 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(ii) and 26 CFR §301.6109-1(d)(3)]."

Jesus said to him, "Then the sons ['citizens' of the Republic, who are all sovereign 'nationals' and 'nonresident aliens' under federal law] are free [sovereign over their own person and labor. e.g. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY]."

[Matt. 17:24-27, Bible, NKJV]
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Based on the above, a human being born anywhere in America and domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union is a “nonresident alien” and a “non-citizen national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452. This is also confirmed by 26 U.S.C. §877, which describes a person who abandons their “national” status as a “nonresident alien” both BEFORE and AFTER they abandon it. If the “nonresident alien” described below was NOT also a “nonresident alien” BEFORE he expatriated, then the statute would not make sense and would have to be rewritten.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER I > Subchapter N > PART II > Subpart A > § 877
§877. Expatriation to avoid tax

(a) Treatment of expatriates

(1) In general

Every nonresident alien individual to whom this section applies and who, within the 10-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year, lost United States citizenship shall be taxable for such taxable year in the manner provided in subsection (b) if the tax imposed pursuant to such subsection (after any reduction in such tax under the last sentence of such subsection) exceeds the tax which, without regard to this section, is imposed pursuant to section 871.

The term “expatriation” is then defined as “the abandonment of nationality and allegiance”, hence, “national” status.

"Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance."

The only way that a person could be both a “national” before expatriation and an “alien” afterward and still be a “nonresident alien” in both circumstances is if BOTH statuses are included within the definition of “nonresident alien”. Otherwise, they would have had to say the following, where the underlined values are added or changed:

“Every nonresident alien individual . . .who . . . BECAME a nonresident alien individual by losing United States citizenship.”

For more on the relationship between citizenship status and tax status, see:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The term “nonresident alien” is a combination of two words:

1. “nonresident”: Means that the entity has not nominated the specific government in question as their protector by choosing a domicile or residence within the territory protected by that government. Therefore, the entity is not protected by the civil laws of that place or government. For details on “domicile” and “residence”, see:

   Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. “alien”: Means “foreign” in relation to the jurisdiction in question. The term “alien” in the context of a human being can mean that the human being was not born within the country that encompasses the jurisdiction in question. The term “alien” in relation to an artificial entity such as a corporation or trust could mean that the entity was not created or registered under the laws of the jurisdiction in question.

The term “nonresident alien” is statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), which says:

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

The first thing we notice about the above definition is that the term “nonresident alien” is defined in the context of ONLY an “individual” as legally defined. Upon investigating this matter further, we find that:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

9. Nowhere other than in the above definition does the term “nonresident alien” appear without the term “individual”, and it appears only in the title of 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) above.

10. 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) defines what a “nonresident alien individual” is but not a “nonresident alien” as. Based on comparing the definition of “nonresident alien individual” in that section and the term “nonresident alien” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), we find that:

   11. You can be a “nonresident alien” without being a “nonresident alien individual”.

   12. The only difference between a “nonresident alien” and a “nonresident alien individual” is that the entity:

       13. Is an alien and NOT a “national” AND

       14. Meets one or more of the following two criteria found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii):

       15. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).

       16. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-1(d).

Therefore, a human being who is a non-citizen national cannot be a nonresident alien individual regardless of their domicile. Compare 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).

17. The above definition describes what a “nonresident alien” is NOT, but not what it IS. They are hiding something, aren’t they? They obviously don’t want you to know what it is because then they would have to admit that nearly everyone in states of the Union are nonresident alien NON-individuals for which there are NO tax forms they can sign unmodified without committing perjury under penalty of perjury.

18. The above definition tries to create the presumption that only human beings can be “individuals”, but this is in fact false. An artificial entity that is not a human being, for instance, can also satisfy the following criteria for being a “nonresident alien”:

   “neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States”

The reason they do this is that they don’t want you to know that businesses can ALSO be “nonresident aliens”. If every business out there declared itself to be a “nonresident alien”, the government wouldn’t have a way to regulate or tax them or accomplish its main goal of regulating commerce! Block 3 of the IRS W-8BEN form confirms that entities other than “individuals” listed in the definition of “nonresident alien” can also be “nonresident aliens”. The form in block 3 lists grantor trusts, complex corporations, estates, etc. as being also “nonresident aliens”, but all the entities listed are statutory “public” and not “private” entities domiciled on federal territory or doing business there, and engaged in a “public office” in the U.S. government. The government has no jurisdiction to regulate the affairs of entities neither domiciled nor resident outside its jurisdiction nor engaged in private and not public activities.

“Although the conduct of private parties lies beyond the Constitution’s scope in most instances, governmental authority may dominate an activity to such an extent that its participants must be deemed to act with the authority of the government and, as a result, be subject to constitutional constraints.”

[Edmonson v. Leesville Concrete Company, 500 U.S. 614 (1991)]

19. Nearly every place that the term “nonresident alien” is described in the Internal Revenue Code and the Treasury Regulations and in which a duty is prescribed, the phrase “individual” is added to the end so that it reads “nonresident alien individual”. See Section 5.6.13.4.4 later for details.

20. Nowhere do the I.R.C. or the Treasury Regulations impose a duty or obligation upon “nonresident aliens” who are NOT “individuals”. For instance, the obligation to file income tax returns is described in 26 CFR §1.6012-1(b) in the context of “nonresident alien individuals”, but nowhere in the context of those who are “nonresident aliens” but NOT “individuals”.

21. IRS Form 1040 is entitled “U.S. Individual Income Tax Return”. Those who are not “individuals” cannot have an obligation to file this form.

Based on the above, if you want to avoid being subject to the I.R.C. or having any sort of obligation under it, you must therefore describe yourself as a “nonresident alien” who is NOT a “nonresident alien individual”. This, in fact, is what the AMENDED version of the IRS Form W-8BEN that we provide does at the link below: It adds two new statuses to the IRS Form W-8BEN, which are “transient foreigner” and “Union State Citizen” and as an alternative to the word “individual”.

Those who describe themselves as “nonresident aliens” who are NOT “individuals” and who are not engaged in the “trade or business” excise taxable franchise sometimes erroneously identify themselves as the type of “individual” described in 26 CFR §1.871-1(b)(1)(i). This type of “nonresident alien” is also an “individual”, which means the entity described is actually a “nonresident alien” who made an election pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) to be treated as a “resident alien” and who is therefore subject to the I.R.C.. Don’t EVER make this huge mistake by invoking this regulation to identify yourself without also clarifying somewhere on the form or correspondence that you are not an “individual”. The AMENDED W-8BEN above takes this into account:

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE
CHAPTER I—INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
PART I INCOME TAXES—Table of Contents
Sec. 1.871-1 Classification and manner of taxing alien individuals.

(a) Classes of aliens.

For purposes of the income tax, alien individuals are divided generally into two classes, namely, resident aliens and nonresident aliens. Resident alien individuals are, in general, taxable the same as citizens of the United States; that is, a resident alien is taxable on income derived from all sources, including sources without the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(b). Nonresident alien individuals are taxable only on certain income from sources within the United States and on the income described in section 864(c)(4) from sources without the United States which is effectively connected with the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. However, nonresident alien individuals may elect, under section 6013 (g) or (h), to be treated as U.S. residents for purposes of determining their income tax liability under Chapters 1, 5, and 24 of the code. Accordingly, any reference in Sec. 1.1-1 through 1.1388-1 and Sec. Sec. 1.1491-1 through 1.1494-1 of this part to non-resident alien individuals does not include those with respect to whom an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) is in effect, unless otherwise specifically provided. Similarly, any reference to resident aliens or U.S. residents includes those with respect to whom an election is in effect, unless otherwise specifically provided.

(b) Classes of nonresident aliens—

(1) In general.

For purposes of the income tax, nonresident alien individuals are divided into the following three classes:

(i) Nonresident alien individuals who at no time during the taxable year are engaged in a trade or business [public office] in the United States,

(ii) Nonresident alien individuals who at any time during the taxable year are, or are deemed under Sec. 1.871-9 to be, engaged in a trade or business in the United States, and

(iii) Nonresident alien individuals who are bona fide residents of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year.

An individual described in subdivision (i) or (ii) of this subparagraph is subject to tax pursuant to the provisions of subpart A (section 871 and following), part II, subchapter N, chapter 1 of the Code, and the regulations thereunder. See Sec. Sec. 1.871-7 and 1.871-8. The provisions of subpart A do not apply to individuals described in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph, but such individuals, except as provided in section 933 with respect to Puerto Rican source income, are subject to the tax imposed by section 1 or section 1201(b). See Sec. 1.876-1.

The reasons you want to avoid being an “individual” are many, and include:

1. The term “individual” is not defined in the I.R.C. It is dangerous and presumptuous to describe yourself as anything that is not defined. It is defined in the regulations at 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c ) (3), but the regulation exceeds the scope of the statute and therefore is void, which leaves us guessing what the term really means.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

2. We allege that using the term “individual” can only mean that you are an officer or employee of the U.S. Government, as we will show later.

3. You cannot be “sovereign” and yet contradict yourself by describing yourself as anything defined in government statutes or codes, which we know can only regulate the conduct of their own employees and officers but not private individuals. See:

3.1. Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3.2. Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3.3. The following cite:

“Since in common usage, the term person does not include the sovereign, statutes not employing the phrase are ordinarily construed to exclude it.”
[United States v. Cooper Corporation, 312 U.S. 600 (1941)]

“Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law for it is the author and source of law;”
[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

“There is no such thing as a power of inherent Sovereignty in the government of the United States. In this country sovereignty resides in the People, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld.”
[Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

“The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty...”
[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

If you would like to know more about the “individual” scam, see the next section.

Within the Internal Revenue Code, the term “nonresident alien” is a “word of art”, which means a term that has a special use different from what common sense and common usage might dictate. The terms “alien” and “nonresident alien” are also defined in the regulations at 26 CFR § 1.1441-1(c)(3):

26 CFR 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.
Notice that based on the above, the term “individual” DOES NOT include “citizens” and that you can’t be a “nonresident alien individual” without first being an “alien individual”. Based on the above, only TWO things can change a “nonresident alien NON-individual” into a “nonresident alien individual”:

1. You are an alien and NOT a “national” AND
2. Meet one or more of the following two criteria found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )(3)(ii):
   2.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-(7)(a)(1).
   2.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-(1)(d).

If you look at the above two definitions carefully, which incidentally are the only definitions of “individual”, “alien”, and “nonresident alien” found in 26 CFR, you will notice that a human being domiciled inside the 50 states of the Union and outside of the federal zone can be a “nonresident alien” without being an “alien”, which at first glance would appear to be a contradiction. How can a person be a “nonresident alien” without being an “alien”? Because “nonresident alien” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) as someone who is not a “U.S. citizen” or a “resident” (alien), which is exactly what a “national but not citizen” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) is. Because of the definition of “alien” found in 26 CFR § 1.1441-1(c )(3)(i) above, that same “national” can’t be a “alien”, because “aliens” cannot be “nationals” or “U.S. citizens”! These conclusions are also consistent with the following maxim of law:

Talis non est eadem, nam nullum simile est idem.
What is like is not the same, for nothing similar is the same. 4 Co. 18.
[Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856; SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

5 U.S.C. §552a defines the term “individual” as a statutory but not constitutional “citizen of the United States” or a statutory but not constitutional “resident” (alien), both of whom have in common a domicile on federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union.

Consequently, we allege that the only time that a “nonresident alien” can ALSO be an “individual” is when they satisfy ALL of the following criteria:

1. They are an “alien” who was not born in the country.
2. They are NOT a “national” or “non-citizen national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452. You cannot be a statutory “U.S. citizen” and a “resident” (alien) at the same time. A “national” who changes his domicile to the “United States” (federal zone) becomes a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 but not a “resident” alien pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
3. They are married to a statutory but not constitutional “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401.
4. They have made an election to be treated as a “resident alien” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) and 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h).
5. No one forced them to make such an election and it was entirely voluntary. An example of forcing such an election would be an unlawful substitute for return filed using IRS Form 1040, which is only for use by “U.S. persons” with a domicile on federal territory and may not be used against “nonresident aliens” who do not consent to a voluntary election to be treated as resident aliens. See the following for details:

NOTE: Throughout this memorandum, the terms “national” and “state national” and “non-citizen national”, all of which are defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452, are equivalent and interchangeable.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t LIABLE to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Why the Government Can’t Lawfully Assess Human Beings With an Income Tax Liability Without Their Consent, Form #05.011
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

An examination of IRS Form 1040NR confirms that “U.S. nationals” are indeed “nonresident aliens”. A “state national” and a “national” are the equivalent of a “U.S. national” in that context. Check the following page on the following website for confirmation:

IRS Form 1040NR
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/IRSForm1040nr-USNational.pdf

Our deceitful federal government has once again tried to confuse sovereign Americans so they would discount being “nonresident aliens” based on a statement something like the following:

“A reasonable person would conclude that they can’t be an alien in their own country, and therefore I can’t be a nonresident alien. It’s ludicrous to even think that I could.”

The term “nonresident alien” is a contradiction deliberately designed by deceitful lawyers to confuse you. All “residents” can only be “aliens” under the Internal Revenue Code. When we call someone a “nonresident”, we are saying he is not an “alien”. “Non” means “not”. Therefore, when we call someone a “nonresident alien”, we are calling them a “non-alien alien”. How’s that for cognitive dissonance! Since lawyers know that people will avoid cognitive dissonance, that is why they named the term the way they did. If Congress had been completely honest about their definitions, they would have used the term “nonresident national or foreign national” instead of “nonresident alien” in 26 CFR § 1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) and explained that this status is the one that applies to people born in states of the Union under the Internal Revenue Code. However, then they would have given away their ruse and showed the average American that they aren’t liable for income tax unless they have gross income from sources within the federal United States that falls under 26 CFR § 1.861-8(f), which most people don’t!

Pivotal to the nonresident alien position is our status as “human beings” and not privileged statutory creations of Congress such as corporations, “persons”, or “individuals”. Congress can only tax what it creates and it didn’t create human beings. Therefore, the government cannot destroy human beings unless they consensually and voluntarily surrender their rights, their sovereignty, or their sovereign immunity by engaging in federal franchises such as the protection franchise called “domicile” or the public office franchise called a “trade or business”:

“The power to tax involves the power to destroy; the power to destroy may defeat and render useless the power to create; and there is a plain repugnance in conferring on one government [THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT] a power to control the constitutional measures of another [WE THE PEOPLE], which other, with respect to those very measures, is declared to be supreme over that which exerts the control.”
[Van Brocklin v. State of Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151 (1886)]

“The great principle is this: because the constitution will not permit a state to destroy, it will not permit a law [including a tax law] involving the power to destroy.”
[Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1836)]

“Having thus avowed my disapprobation of the purposes, for which the terms, State and sovereign, are frequently used, and of the object, to which the application of the last of them is almost universally made; it is now proper that I should disclose the meaning, which I assign to both, and the application, [2 U.S. 419, 455] which I make of the latter. In doing this, I shall have occasion incidentally to evince, how true it is, that States and Governments were made for (and BY) man; and, at the same time, how true it is, that his creatures and servants have first deceived, next vilified, and, at last, oppressed their master and maker.”
[Justice Wilson, Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (2 U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 (1793)]

The term “nonresident alien” in the context of federal income taxes can also encompass those persons who are not state but not statutory federal citizens or people who are foreigners living in a state of the Union. However, one can be a citizen of a state of the Union and still be a national of their country while not being a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or any other “act of Congress”. These people are correctly referred to as “nationals” or “state nationals”. Johnny Liberty (http://www.icresource.com) also calls them “American nationals” in his book available on our website below:

It might also surprise you that the Treasury Department has actually already admitted in its publications that people who are “state nationals” are indeed “nonresident aliens”. The famous Supreme Court Case called Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, 240 U.S. 1 (1916) involved a French immigrant who was a citizen of New York state but not a “citizen” under Federal Law. Therefore, he was a “national but not a citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452. He bought stock in the Union Pacific Railroad, which was a federal corporation chartered in the District of Columbia and operating in a federal territory of the United States (Utah). He brought suit against the Union Pacific Railroad to enjoin them from paying income taxes to the federal government on the excuse that it was reducing the earnings of shareholders located in the states of the Union and therefore constituted a direct tax. The supreme Court said that it would not interfere with the decision by a corporation to pay income taxes, even if the law didn’t require it. Shortly after that finding by the Supreme Court, the Treasury department published Treasury Decision 2313, in which they identified Mr. Brushaber as a nonresident alien. You can read about this fascinating case at:

   http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CourtCases/BrushaberVUnionPacRR240US1.htm
2. An Investigation Into The Meaning of the Term “United States” http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/ChallJurisdiction/Definitions/freemaninvestigation.htm

We hear a lot of questions along the following lines:

“Why does it matter whether I’m a statutory ‘U.S. citizen’ or a ‘nonresident alien’ anyway? Either way I’m not liable for income tax because there is no liability statute or implementing regulations permitting enforcement of Subtitle A income taxes imposed in 26 U.S.C. Section 1.”

Very good question! We respond to this prudent observation by stating that there is absolutely no advantage to being a U.S. citizen and a BIG disadvantage because once we volunteer to become statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, we volunteer to be completely subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S. government and the federal courts! If you have read this far, you have realized that our federal government is corrupt and covetous of getting into our pocket and plundering as much of our assets as it can get its paws on using deceit and fraud. Why open the door wide enough to invite these criminals into our lives by giving them jurisdiction so they can destroy our lives and our liberties if we don’t have to? Prudence demands that we provide as many protections and safeguards as we possibly can for our liberties by staying as far away from federal and any kind of government jurisdiction or influence as we can! Any other approach is pure stupidity and a big mistake! Crosse v. Bd. of Supervisors, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966) says about this subject:

“Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state.” Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, supra. [Crosse v. Bd. of Supervisors, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966)]

A “national”, a “state national”, a Natural Born Sovereign, and a “nonresident alien” are therefore the best things we can be because this will give our liberties the most protections from the encroachments of greedy Congressmen, unscrupulous IRS agents, and corrupt federal judges, all of which are the “sinners” that Jesus came down to earth to call to repentance. This fits very nicely in with the scripture quoted in section 3.5.3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 under “Making Yourself Judgment Proof”, which states:

“A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself, but the simple pass on and are punished. By humility and fear of the Lord are riches and honor and life. Thorns and snares are in the way of the perverse: he who guards his soul will be far from them.” [Prov. 22:3]

5.6.13.2 Why all people domiciled in states of the Union are “nonresident aliens” under I.R.C. Subtitle A

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
We explained earlier in section 4.11 that people born in states of the Union are “nationals” or “state nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). For tax purposes, “nationals” are classified as “nonresident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) Nonresident alien

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the [federal] United States nor a resident of the [federal] United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

The term “United States” as used above means the following:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]
Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a)(9) United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

(a)(10) State

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

A “nonresident alien” is “nonresident” to the “United States” as defined in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which simply means that they do not live in the District of Columbia. We call this area the “federal United States” or the “federal zone” for short, in this book. Some payroll people and accountants will try to tell you that it is nonsense to expect that the words mean what they say in the Internal Revenue Code, but you can see that there is no way to interpret the definition of “United States” any way other than meaning the District of Columbia for the purposes of Subtitle A federal income taxes. The reason why this also must be the case is that the Constitution and federal law both confine all persons holding public office to reside in the District of Columbia:

U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17

To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of Particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards and other needful Buildings;--And

TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > Sec. 72
Sec. 72. - Public offices; at seat of Government

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law

As you will learn in detail from next section, a “nonresident alien” who does not hold a public office in the United States government is not responsible for income tax withholding under Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code or for federal income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. People not holding public office also cannot be levied upon under 26 U.S.C. §6331(a).

To verify the conclusions of this section, we investigated a prominent payroll compliance education book and found the following comments in the book about “nonresident alien” tax withholding:

The above is true, but very misleading. The above advice says “unless excepted by regulations”, and doesn’t mention what those regulations might be. The facts below clarify the comments above and the applicable regulations so that their meaning is crystal clear to the reader:

1. There are regulations that DO exempt income of nonresident aliens. All income not “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” or earned from labor outside the federal zone or federal United States is exempt from inclusion as “gross income” by regulation and exempt from withholding, but of course the above book conveniently didn’t mention that:

26 CFR §31.3401(a)(6)-1 Remuneration for services of nonresident alien individuals.

(a) In general. All remuneration paid after December 31, 1966, for services performed by a nonresident alien individual, if such remuneration otherwise constitutes wages within the meaning of §31.3401(a)–1 and if such remuneration is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is subject to withholding under section 3402 unless excepted from wages under this section. In regard to wages paid under this section after February 28, 1979, the term “nonresident alien individual” does not include a nonresident alien individual treated as a resident under section 6013 (g) or (h).

(b) Remuneration for services performed outside the [federal] United States. Remuneration paid to a nonresident alien individual (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the [federal] United States is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.

A portion of the regulation above is also confirmed by the statutory rules for computing taxable income found in 26 U.S.C. §861:

Title 26 > Subtitle A > Chapter 1 > Subchapter N > Part I > Sec. 861.

Sec. 861. - Income from sources within the United States

(a) Gross income from sources within United States

The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:

(3) Personal services

Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States: except that compensation for labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if:

(A) the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year;

(B) such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate, and

(C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with:

(i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or

2. That word “trade or business” above is defined in the Internal Revenue Code as the “functions of a public office”. This public office is usually an elected or appointed office in the United States government but can also be a federal instrumentality. These observations confirm once again that the only proper subject of the income tax are government contractors, agencies, and public officers.

26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701(a)(26) : Definitions

"The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

3. 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-1 mentioned above also says that a person can only earn “wages” if they are an “employee”, which is an “elected or appointed officer of the United States government” under 26 CFR §31.3401(c)-1.

26 CFR §31.3401(c)-1

"...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a federal State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-1 Wages:

(a) In general. (1) The term “wages” means all remuneration for services performed by an employee for his employer unless specifically excepted under section 3401(a) or excepted under section 3402(e).

4. Absent a person literally being a public officer or instrumentality of the United States government, then the only other way they can earn “wages” is to have a voluntary withholding agreement in place called a W-4. If they never volunteered, then they don’t earn “wages”.

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general.

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3).

5. If the private employer coerces the employee to sign a W-4, that doesn’t count as “volunteering”, because in that instance, they had a choice of either starving to death or committing perjury under penalty of perjury on a W-4 form. They would be committing perjury because they would be submitting a W-4 that misrepresented their status as a federal “employee” and also misrepresented the fact that they “volunteered”, when in fact they were simply coerced under threat of being fired or not being hired by their employer. Here is what Alexander Hamilton said on this subject:

“In the general course of human nature, A POWER OVER A MAN’s SUBSISTENCE AMOUNTS TO A POWER OVER HIS WILL.”

[Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper No. 79]

The tendency of employers to coerce their employees essentially into becoming liars just so they can feed their face may explain the following comment by Will Rogers:

"Income tax has made more liars out of the American people than golf."

[Will Rogers]
6. The regulations for computing income from “sources within the United States” under 26 CFR §1.861-8(f) also confirm that the only taxable source of income for “nonresident aliens” is income “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”, which is identified below:

   Title 26: Internal Revenue
   PART I—INCOME TAXES
   Determination of Sources of Income
   § 1.861-8  Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities.
   (f)(1)(iv) Effectively connected taxable income.

Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, under sections 871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1), on taxable income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Such taxable income is determined in most instances by initially determining, under section 864(c), the amount of gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Pursuant to sections 873 and 882(c), this section is applicable for purposes of determining the deductions from such gross income (other than the deduction for interest expense allowed to foreign corporations (see §1.882-3)) which are to be taken into account in determining taxable income. See example 21 of paragraph (g) of this section.

Examining the above 2002 Quick Reference to Payroll Compliance book once again, we find the following comments:

   “In some cases, an Internal Revenue Code (IRC) section or a U.S. tax treaty provision will exclude payments to a nonresident alien from wages. Such payments are not subject to the regular income tax withholding, so a Form W-2 is not required. Instead, the payments are subject to withholding at a flat 30 percent or lower treaty rate, unless exempt from tax because of a Code or treaty provision.”

The above comment is based on the content of 26 U.S.C. §871(a), which “appears” to impose a 30% flat rate on the “taxable income” of nonresident aliens not “effectively connected with a trade or business” in the United States, which we said means that the person holds a public office in the United States government. As we said above, however, the underlying regulations at 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) used for computing taxable income does not include anything but income “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”, so in effect, such income is excluded by law from being included in taxable income from sources within the federal United States. The provisions of 26 U.S.C. §871(a) are in effect nullified and rendered inoperative by the implementing regulations found at 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv). Sources other than income “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” are therefore excluded by law, because they are not explicitly included in any implementing regulation. This is a requirement of statutory construction within the legal field, which says:

   “Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”

Furthermore, without a regulation to implement the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §871(a) that has been published in the federal register, then there is no basis to conclude that income not derived from sources “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” is taxable income for persons who are not federal “employees”. In fact, 44 U.S.C. §1505(a) confirms that anything that is not published in the Federal Register may not apply to anything but federal employees! Below are just a few examples of why no statute within the Internal Revenue Code is enforceable unless it also has implementing regulations. These provisions also explain why the above rather nebulous quote from the 2002 Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance manual said “unless excepted by regulations”.

Here the statute is not complete by itself, since it merely declares the range of its operation and leaves to its progeny the means to be utilized in the effectuation of its command. But it is the statute which creates the offense of the willful removal of the labels of origin and provides the punishment for violations. The regulations, on the other hand, prescribe the identifying language of the label itself, and assign the resulting tags to their respective geographical areas. Once promulgated, [361 U.S. 431, 438] these regulations, called for by the statute itself, have the force of law, and violations thereof incur criminal prosecutions; just as if all the details... had been incorporated into the congressional language. The result is that neither the statute nor the regulations are complete without the other, and only together do they have any force. In effect, therefore, the construction of one necessarily involves the construction of the other."

[U.S. v. Mersky, 361 U.S. 431 (1960)]

"...the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of the regulation promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone...The Government urges that since only those who violate these regulations [not the Code] may incur civil or criminal penalties, it is the actual regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the broad authorizing language of the statute, which are to be tested against the standards of the Fourth Amendment; and that when so tested they are valid."

[Calif. Bankers Assoc. v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 21, 44, 39 L.Ed.2d. 812, 94 S.Ct. 1494]

"Failure to adhere to agency regulations [by the IRS or other agency] may amount to denial of due process if regulations are required by constitution or statute..."

[Curley v. United States, 791 F.Supp. 52]

"Although the relevant statute authorized the Secretary to impose such a duty, his implementing regulations did not do so. Therefore we held that there was no duty to disclose..."

[United States v. Murphy, 809 F.2d. 142, 143]

Therefore, those nonresident aliens who do not hold public office in the United States government do not earn taxable income, need not withhold, and need not file any federal tax return. Some people hear the word “nonresident alien” and assume that it means only “foreigners”. But we must ask the question how a foreigner from another country can serve in a public office of the United States government when the Constitution requires that the President can only be a “Natural Born Citizen” and senators and representatives must be “Citizens of the United States”?

U.S. Constitution, Article II, Section 1, Clause 5

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States.

U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 3, Clause 3

No Person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty Years, and been nine Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 2, Clause 2

No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

The “Natural Born Citizens” and “Citizens of the United States” they are talking about above who are holding “public office” are people born in states of the Union! These people are “nonresident aliens” in Subtitle A of the tax code because it only has affect against federal payments and persons domiciled in the federal zone, which is limited to the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions of the United States, and the federal areas or enclaves within states of the Union. These, in fact, are the only natural people that the income tax really applies to, based on 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv)!

Based on the foregoing discussion, the income taxes collected under the authority of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code are simply a federal employee kickback program disguised to “look” like a tax. But in fact, the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment revealed by President Taft’s speech before Congress clearly shows the purpose of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code as simply a tax on federal government “employees” and nothing more. This federal employee kickback program disguised as a legitimate “income tax” on everyone was begin in 1862 during the exigencies of the Civil War and has continued with us since that day:
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD - SENATE - JUNE 16, 1909
[From Pages 3344 – 3345]

The Secretary read as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

[.. .]

Again, it is clear that by the enactment of the proposed law the Congress will not be bringing money into the Treasury to meet the present deficiency. The decision of the Supreme Court in the income-tax cases deprived the National Government of a power which, by reason of previous decisions of the court, it was generally supposed that government had. It is undoubtedly a power the National Government ought to have. It might be indispensable to the Nation’s life in great crises. Although I have not considered a constitutional amendment as necessary to the exercise of certain phases of this power, a mature consideration has satisfied me that an amendment is the only proper course for its establishment to its full extent.

I therefore recommend to the Congress that both Houses, by a two-thirds vote, shall propose an amendment to the Constitution conferring the power to levy an income tax upon the National Government without apportionment among the States in proportion to population.

[44 Cong.Rec. 3344-3345]

If you would like to learn more about the federal employee kickback program and exactly how it works, a whole book has been written just on this worthy subject, which you can obtain as follows:

IRS Humbug: IRS Weapons of Enslavement

The Pharisees who wrote the rather deceptive 2002 Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance manual above weren’t telling a lie, but they also certainly left the most important points about tax liability of nonresident aliens undisclosed, and did not explain that people born in states of the Union are nonresident aliens under the tax code. This results in a constructive fraud and leaves the average reader, who is a “nonresident alien” and who was born in a state of the Union, with the incorrect presumption that he has a legal obligation to “volunteer” to participate in a corrupt and usurious federal “employee” kickback program. I would also be willing to bet that if you called up the author of the above article and asked him why he didn’t mention all the other details in this section, he would tell you that if he told the truth, he would have his license to practice law or his CPA certification pulled by the IRS or by a federal judge whose retirement benefits depend on maintaining the fraudulent and oppressive tax system we live under.

5.6.13.3 Tax Liability and Responsibilities of Nonresident Aliens

We assembled the table below to succinctly summarize the tax situation of nonresident aliens to help you better understand the benefits of becoming a nonresident alien. It is important to point out that:

1. The duty to file returns is found in 26 CFR §1.6012-1(b) and is imposed on “nonresident alien individuals” but NOT upon “nonresidents” who are not “individuals” (aliens). Therefore, those who are “non-citizen nationals” but not aliens pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452, which includes Americans born within states of the Union and domiciled there, do not have a requirement to file a return.

2. ALL of these duties pertain ONLY to those who are “nonresident alien individuals”.

3. The term “nonresident alien” is used instead of “nonresident alien individual” when they are trying to exclude or exempt something.

4. Those places where “nonresident alien individuals” exclude “nonresident aliens” who re not “individuals”, meaning aliens as defined in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3):

"Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”

Congress used the term “gross income” instead of “taxable income” to make the situation even more difficult for the average person to figure out. Earlier versions of the code were much clearer and much more honest. |

Accordingly, where an individual resides outside of the [federal] United States (e.g., a nonresident alien), he or she may not bring a refund suit in a district court. Malajalian v. United States, 504 F.2d. 842 (1st Cir. 1974). These cases may be brought only in the Court of Claims. | Although this IRM Section only mentions refund lawsuits, technically, it applies to all other lawsuits relating to income taxes improperly enforced against nonresident aliens. |

5.6.13.4 How “Nonresident Alien Nontaxpayers” are deceived or compelled into becoming “Resident Alien Taxpayers”

5.6.13.4.1 Deliberately Confusing “Nonresident Aliens” with “Aliens”

A popular technique promoted and encouraged by the IRS is to:

1. Deliberately confuse “nonresident aliens” with “aliens”.
2. Falsely tell you or imply that “nonresident aliens” include only those aliens that are not resident within the jurisdiction of the United States.
3. Deceive you into believing that “nonresident aliens” and “nonresident alien individuals” are equivalent. They are not. It is a maxim of law that things that are similar are NOT the same:

> Talis non est eadem, nam nullum similis est idem.
> What is like is not the same, for nothing similar is the same. 4 Co. 18.

[Source: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

4. Refuse to define what a “nonresident alien” is and what is included in the definition within 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
5. Define what it ISN’T, and absolutely refuse to define what it IS.
6. Refuse to acknowledge that “nationals” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) are “nonresident aliens”.

All of the confusion and deception surrounding “nonresident alien” status is introduced and perpetuated mainly in the IRS publications and the Treasury Regulations. It is not found in the Internal Revenue Code. “Nonresident aliens” and “aliens” are not equivalent in law, and confusing them has the following direct injurious consequences against those who are “non-citizen nationals”:

1. Prejudicing their ability to claim “nonresident alien” status at financial institutions and employers. This occurs because without either a Treasury Regulation or IRS publication they can point to which proves that they are a “nonresident alien”, they will not have anything they can show these institutions in order that their status will be recognized when they open accounts or pursue employment. This compels them in violation of the law because of the ignorance of bank clerks and employers into declaring that they are “U.S. persons” and enumerating themselves just in order to obtain the services or employment that they seek.

2. Unlawfully preventing non-citizen nationals from being able to change their domicile if they mistakenly claim to be “residents” of the United States. 26 CFR §1.871-5 says that an intention of an “alien” to change his domicile/residence is insufficient to change it whereas a similar intention on the part of a “non-citizen national” is sufficient.

The above injuries to the rights of non-citizen nationals is very important, because we prove in the following document and elsewhere on our website that all persons born within and domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union are “non-citizen nationals” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), and so this injury is widespread and vast in its consequences:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Let’s show some of the IRS deception to disguise the availability of “nonresident alien” status to non-citizen nationals so that they don’t use it. Below is the definition of “Nonresident alien”

TITLE 26 > Subtitle E > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
§ 7701. Definitions

(b) Definition of resident alien and nonresident alien

(1) In general

(B) Nonresident alien
An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

Below are two consistent definitions of “alien”:

26 CFR §1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

Notice based on the above definitions that:

1. They define what “alien” and “nonresident alien” are NOT, but not what the ARE.
2. The definition of “nonresident alien” is NOT a equivalent to “alien”. The two overlap, but neither is a subset of the other.
3. There are two classes of entities that are “nonresident aliens”, which include:
   3.1. “Aliens” with no domicile or residence within the “United States”
   3.2. “nationals” with no domicile or residence within the “United States”. These include “nationals” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) domiciled in states of the Union and born there, and “nationals of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) who are domiciled in federal possessions and born there.

Item 3.2 above is corroborated by:

1. The content of IRS Publication 519, which obtusely mentions what it calls “U.S. nationals”, which it then defines as persons domiciled in American Samoa and Swains Island who do not elect to become statutory “U.S. citizens”.

"A U.S. national is an alien who, although not a U.S. citizen, owes his or her allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals include American Samoans, and Northern Mariana Islanders who choose to become U.S. nationals instead of U.S. citizens”

[IRS Publication 519: Tax Guide for Aliens, Year 2007, p. 43]

The above statement is partially false. A statutory “national of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) is NOT an “alien”, because aliens exclude “nationals of the United States” based on the definition of “alien” found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3). The “U.S. national” to which they refer also very deliberately is neither mentioned nor defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code or the Treasury Regulations as being “nonresident aliens”, even though they in fact are and Pub. 519 admits that they are. The only statutory definition of “U.S. national” is found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) and 8 U.S.C. §1408. However, the existence of this person is also found on IRS Form 1040NR itself, which mentions it as a status as being a “nonresident alien”. By the way, don’t let the government fool you by using the above as evidence in a legal proceeding because it ISN’T competent evidence and cannot form the basis for a reasonable belief or willfulness. The IRS itself says you cannot and should not rely on anything in any of their publications. The IRS, in fact, routinely deceives and lies in their publications and their forms and does so with the blessings and even protection of the federal district courts, even though they hypocritically sue the rest of us for “abusive tax shelters” if we offer the public equally misleading information. For details on this subject, see:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
2. 26 U.S.C. §877(a), which describes a “nonresident alien” who lost citizenship to avoid taxes and therefore is subject to a special assessment as a punishment for that act of political disassociation. Notice the statute doesn’t say a “citizen of the United States” losing citizenship, but a “nonresident alien”. The “citizenship” they are referring to is the “nationality” described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and NOT the statutory “U.S. citizen” status found in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

So let’s get this straight: 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) and 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) both say that you cannot be an “alien” if you are a “national of the United States*” and yet, the IRS publications such as IRS Pub 519 and the Treasury Regulations frequently identify these same statutory “U.S. nationals” as “aliens”. Earth calling IRS. Hello? Anybody home? The IRS knows that the key to being sovereign as an American National born in a state of the Union and domiciled there is being a nonresident alien not engaged in a trade or business. So what do they do to prevent people from achieving this status? They surround the status with cognitive dissonance, lies, falsehoods, and mis-directions. Hence one of our favorite sayings:

“The truth about the income tax is so precious to the government that it must be surrounded by a bodyguard of lies.”

[Unknown]

Nowhere within the Internal Revenue Code, the Treasury Regulations, or IRS Pub. 519 will you find a definition of the term “national” which is mentioned in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3), and which describes a person born within and domiciled within a state of the Union. However, these persons are treated the same as “U.S. nationals”, which means they are “nonresident aliens” and not “aliens”. Consequently, unlike aliens, those who are “nationals”:

1. Are not bound by any of the regulations pertaining to “aliens”, because they are NOT “aliens” as legally defined.
2. Do not have to file IRS Form 8840 in order to associate with the “foreign state” they are domiciled within in order to be automatically exempt from I.R.C. Subtitle A taxes.
3. Are forbidden to file a “Declaration of Intention” to become “U.S. residents” pursuant to 26 CFR §1.871-4 and IRS Form 1078.

Why does the IRS play this devious sleight of hand? Remember: everything happens for a reason, and here are the reasons:

1. IRS has a vested interest to maximize the number of “taxpayers” contributing to their scam. Taxation is based on legal domicile.

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the sites of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

Therefore, IRS has an interest in compelling persons domiciled in states of the Union into falsely declaring their domicile within the “United States”. The status that implies domicile is “U.S. persons” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). “U.S. persons” include either statutory “citizens of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “resident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and both have in common a legal domicile in the “United States”.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)   Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship   http://famguardian.org/
2. IRS does not want people born within and domiciled within states of the Union, who are “nationals” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) to know that “nationals” are included in the definition of “nonresident alien”. This would cause a mass exodus from the tax system and severely limit the number of “taxpayers” that they may collect from.

3. IRS wants to prevent non-citizen nationals from using the nonresident alien status so as to force them, via presumption, into falsely declaring their status to be that of a “U.S. person” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). This will create a false presumption that they maintain a domicile on federal territory and are therefore subject to federal jurisdiction and “taxpayers”.

4. By refusing to define EXACTLY what is included in the definition of “nonresident alien” in both Treasury Regulations and IRS publications or acknowledging that “nationals” are included in the definition, those opening bank accounts at financial institutions and starting employment will be deprived of evidence which they can affirmatively use to establish their status with these entities, which in effect compels presumption by financial institutions and employers within states of the Union that they are “U.S. persons” who MUST have an identify number, such as a Social Security Number or a Taxpayer Identification Number. This forces them to participate in a tax system that they can’t lawfully participate in without unknowingly making false statements about their legal status by mis-declaring themselves to be “U.S. persons”.

Below are several examples of this deliberate, malicious IRS confusion between “aliens” and “nonresident aliens” found within the Treasury Regulations, where “nonresident alien individuals” are referred to as “aliens” that we have found so far. All of these examples are the result of a false presumption that “nonresident aliens” are a subset of all “aliens”, which is NOT the case. We were able to find no such confusion within the I.R.C., but it is rampant within the Treasury Regulations.

1. IRS Publication 515: Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Corporations. This confusion is found throughout this IRS publication.

2. IRS Publication 519: Tax Guide for Aliens. This publication should not even be discussion “nonresident aliens”, because they aren’t a subset of “aliens” unless the word “nonresident alien” is followed with the word “individual”.

3. 26 CFR §1.864-7(b)(2):

(2) Fixed facilities--

A nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation shall not be considered to have an office or other fixed place of business merely because such alien individual or foreign corporation uses another person’s office or other fixed place of business, whether or not the office or place of business of a related person, through which to transact a trade or business, if the trade or business activities of the alien individual or foreign corporation in that office or other fixed place of business are relatively sporadic or infrequent, taking into account the overall needs and conduct of that trade or business.

4. 26 CFR §1.864-7(d)(1)(i)(b):

A nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation shall not be considered to have an office or other fixed place of business merely because such alien individual or foreign corporation uses another person’s office or other fixed place of business, whether or not the office or place of business of a related person, through which to transact a trade or business, if the trade or business activities of the alien individual or foreign corporation in that office or other fixed place of business are relatively sporadic or infrequent, taking into account the overall needs and conduct of that trade or business.
(d) Agent activity.

(1) Dependent agents.

(i) In general.

In determining whether a nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation has an office or other fixed place of business, the office or other fixed place of business of an agent who is not an independent agent, as defined in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, shall be disregarded unless such agent

(a) has the authority to negotiate and conclude contracts in the name of the nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation, and regularly exercises that authority, or

(b) has a stock of merchandise belonging to the nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation from which orders are regularly filed on behalf of such alien individual or foreign corporation.

A person who purchases goods from a nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation shall not be considered to be an agent for such alien individual or foreign corporation for purposes of this paragraph where such person is carrying on such purchasing activities in the ordinary course of its own business, even though such person is related in some manner to the nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation. For example, a wholly owned domestic subsidiary corporation of a foreign corporation shall not be treated as an agent of the foreign parent corporation merely because the subsidiary corporation purchases goods from the foreign parent corporation and resells them in its own name. However, if the domestic subsidiary corporation regularly negotiates and concludes contracts in the name of its foreign parent corporation or maintains a stock of merchandise from which it regularly files orders on behalf of the foreign parent corporation, the office or other fixed place of business of the domestic subsidiary corporation shall be treated as the office or other fixed place of business of the foreign parent corporation unless the domestic subsidiary corporation is an independent agent within the meaning of subparagraph (3) of this paragraph.

TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
CHAPTER I--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY (CONTINUED)
PART 1 INCOME TAXES--Table of Contents
Sec. 1.872-2 Exclusions from gross income of nonresident alien individuals.

(b) Compensation paid by foreign employer to participants in certain exchange or training programs.

(1) Exclusion from income.

Compensation paid to a nonresident alien individual for the period that the nonresident alien individual is temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under subparagraph (F) (relating to the admission of students into the United States) or subparagraph (J) (relating to the admission of teachers, trainees, specialists, etc., into the United States) of section 101(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15) (F) or (J)) shall be excluded from gross income if the compensation is paid to such alien individual by his foreign employer. Compensation paid to a nonresident alien individual by the U.S. office of a domestic bank which is acting as paymaster on behalf of a foreign employer constitutes compensation paid by a foreign employer for purposes of this paragraph if the domestic bank is reimbursed by the foreign employer for such payment. A nonresident alien individual who is temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under such subparagraph (J) includes a nonresident alien individual admitted to the United States as an "exchange visitor" under section 201 of the U.S. Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1446), which section was repealed by section 111 of the Mutual Education and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (73 Stat. 538).

7. 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(6)-1A(c).
8. 26 CFR §509.103(b)(3).
9. 26 CFR §509.108(a)(1)
7. “Aliens” or “alien individuals”: Those born in a foreign country and not within any state of the Union or within any federal territory.

   7.1. “Alien” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) as a person who is neither a citizen nor a national.

   7.2. “Alien individual” is defined in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i).

   7.4. An alien with no domicile in the “United States” is presumed to be a “nonresident alien” pursuant to 26 CFR §1.871-4(b).

8. “Residents” or “resident aliens”: An “alien” or “alien individual” with a legal domicile on federal territory.

   8.2. A “resident alien” is an alien as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) who has a legal domicile on federal territory that is no part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.

   8.3. An “alien” becomes a “resident alien” by filing IRS Form 1078 pursuant to 26 CFR §1.871-4(c)(ii) and thereby electing to have a domicile on federal territory.

9. “Nonresident aliens”: Those with no domicile on federal territory and who are born either in a foreign country, a state of the Union, or within the federal zone.

   9.2. Also called a “nonresident”, “stateless person”, or “transient foreigner”.

   9.3. A “nonresident alien” is defined as a person who is neither a statutory “citizen” pursuant to 26 CFR §1.1-1(c) nor a statutory “resident” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).

10. “Nonresident alien individuals”: Those who are aliens and who do not have a domicile on federal territory.

    10.2. Are a subset of all “aliens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3).

    10.3. Status is indicated in block 3 of the IRS Form W-8BEN under the term “Individual”.

    10.5. Excludes those born within the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union who are therefore “non-citizen nationals” under federal law.

11. Convertibility between “aliens”, “resident aliens”, and “nonresident aliens”, and “nonresident alien individuals”:

    11.1. A “nonresident alien” is not the legal equivalent of an “alien” in law.

    11.2. IRS Form W-8BEN, block 3 has no block to check for those who are “nonresident aliens” but not “nonresident alien individuals”. Thus, the submitter of this form who is a “nonresident alien” and a non-citizen national but not a “nonresident alien individual” is effectively compelled to make an illegal and fraudulent election to become an alien and an “individual” if they do not add a block for “transient foreigner” or “Union State Citizen” to the form. See section 5.3 of the following:

    11.3. 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) authorize a “nonresident alien” who is married to a statutory “U.S. citizen” as defined in 26 CFR §1.1-1(c) to make an “election” to become a “resident alien”.

    11.4. It is unlawful for an unmarried “non-citizen national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1452 and either 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) to become a “resident alien”. This can only happen by either fraud or mistake.

    11.5. An alien may overcome the presumption that he is a “nonresident alien” and change his status to that of a “resident alien” by filing IRS Form 1078 pursuant to 26 CFR §1.871-4(c)(ii) while he is in the “United States”.

    11.6. The term “residence” can only lawfully be used to describe the domicile of an “alien”. Nowhere is this term used to describe the domicile of a “non-citizen national” or a “nonresident alien”. See 26 CFR §1.871-2.

    11.7. The only way a statutory “alien” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) can become both a “non-citizen national” and a “nonresident alien” at the same time is to be naturalized pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1421 and to have a domicile in either a U.S. possession or a state of the Union.

12. Sources of confusion on these issues:

    12.1. One can be a “nonresident alien” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) without being an “individual” or a “nonresident alien individual”. An example would be a human being born within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union who is therefore a “non-citizen national” or “state national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452 who does not participate in Social Security or use a Taxpayer Identification Number.

12.2. The term “United States” is defined in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

12.3. The term “United States” for the purposes of citizenship is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).

12.4. Any “U.S. Person” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) who is not found in the “United States” (District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)) shall be treated as having an effective domicile within the District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d).

12.5. The term “United States” is equivalent for the purposes of statutory “citizens” pursuant to 26 CFR §1.1-1(c) and “citizens” as used in the Internal Revenue Code. See 26 CFR §1.1-1(c).

12.6. The term “United States” as used in the Constitution of the United States is NOT equivalent to the statutory definition of the term used in:

12.6.1. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

The “United States” as used in the Constitution means the states of the Union and excludes federal territory, while the term “United States” as used in federal statutory law means federal territory and excludes states of the Union.

12.7. A constitutional “citizen of the United States” as mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment is NOT equivalent to a statutory “citizen and national of the United States” as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401. See:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12.8. In the case of jurisdiction over aliens only, the term “United States” implies all 50 states and the federal zone, and is not restricted only to the federal zone. See:

12.8.1. Nonresident Alien Position, Form #05.020 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "plenary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden," Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over" the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909).

[408 U.S. 753, 766]

While under our constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, the United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens, are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the states, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations. As said by this court in the case of Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, speaking by the same great chief justice: "That the United States form, for many, and for most important purposes, a single nation, has not yet been denied. In war, we are one people. In making peace, we are one people. In all commercial regulations, we are one and the same people. In many other respects, the American people are one; and the government which is alone capable of controlling and managing their interests in all these respects is the government of the United States. It is their government, and in that character they have no other. America has chosen to [130 U.S. 581, 605] be in many respects, and to many purposes, a nation; and for all these purposes her government is complete; to all these objects, it is competent. The people have declared that in the exercise of all powers given for these objects it is supreme. It can, then, in effecting these objects, legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American territory."

[...]

"The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away or restrained on behalf of any one. The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and are incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their exercise be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise of these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract.”

[Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)]

A picture is worth a thousand words. Below is a picture that graphically demonstrates the relationship between citizenship status in Title 8 of the U.S. Code with tax status in Title 26 of the U.S. Code:

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

NOTES:
1. A nonresident alien individual who has made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) to be treated as a resident alien is treated as a “nonresident alien” for the purposes of withholding under I.R.C. Subtitle C but retains their status as a “resident alien” under I.R.C. Subtitle A. See 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii).
2. What turns a “nonresident alien NON-individual” into a “nonresident alien individual” is:
   2.1. Being an an alien and NOT a “national” AND
   2.2. Meets one or more of the following two criteria found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii):
      2.2.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).
      2.2.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-1(d).
3. If you were born in a state of the Union and maintain a domicile there, then you are described in item 3.1 of the table.
4. All “taxpayers” are aliens or “nonresident aliens”. You cannot be a “citizen” and a taxpayer at same time. The definition of “individual” found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) does NOT include “citizens”. The only occasion where a “citizen” can also be an “individual” is when they are abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911 and interface to the I.R.C. under a tax treaty with a foreign country as an alien pursuant to 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1)
It is a maxim of law that things with similar but not identical names are NOT the same in law:

Talis non est eadem, nam nullum simile est idem.

What is like is not the same, for nothing similar is the same. 4 Co. 18.

We prove extensively on this website that the only persons who are “taxpayers” within the Internal Revenue Code are “resident aliens”. Here is just one example:

NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES
DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY
Tax on Individuals

Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

(a)(2)(ii) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, the tax imposed by section 1(d), as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by a married alien individual who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year or by a foreign estate or trust. For such years the tax imposed by section 1(c), as amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by an unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8. [26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii)]

It is a self-serving, malicious attempt to STEAL from the average American for the IRS to confuse a “non-citizen national” who is a “nonresident alien” and a “nontaxpayer” with a “resident alien taxpayer”. This sort of abuse MUST be stopped IMMEDIATELY. These sort of underhanded and malicious tactics:

1. Are a violation of constitutional rights and due process of law because they cause an injury to rights based on false presumption. See:

   1.1. Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   1.2. Rutter Group Practice Guide-Federal Civil Trials and Evidence, paragraph 8.4993, page 8K-34:

   (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party’s constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party’s due process and equal protection rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 US 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2233; Cleveland Bed. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 US 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process] [Rutter Group Practice Guide-Federal Civil Trials and Evidence, paragraph 8.4993, page 8K-34]

   Statutes creating permanent irrebuttable presumptions have long been disfavored under the Due Process Clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. In [Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312, 52 S.Ct. 358, 76 L.Ed. 772 (1932)], the Court was faced with a constitutional challenge to a federal statute that created a conclusive presumption that gifts made within two years prior to the donor's death were made in contemplation of death, thus requiring payment by his estate of a higher tax. In holding that this irrebuttable assumption was so arbitrary and unreasonable as to deprive the taxpayer of his property without due process of law, the Court stated that it had 'held more than once that a statute creating a presumption which operates to deny a fair opportunity to rebut it violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.' Id., at 329, 52 S.Ct., at 362. See, e.g., Schlesinger v. Wisconsin, 270 U.S. 230, 46 S.Ct. 260, 70 L.Ed. 557 (1926); Hooper v. Tax Comm’n, 284 U.S. 206, 52 S.Ct. 120, 76 L.Ed. 245 (1931); See also Tot v. United States, 319 U.S. 66, 63 S.Ct. 1241, 87 L.Ed. 1519 (1943); Lears v. United States, 395 U.S. 20, 29-33, 89 S.Ct. 1332, 1544-1557, 23 L.Ed.2d. 37 (1969); cf. Turner v. United States, 396 U.S. 348, 416-419, 90 S.Ct. 1546, 25 L.Ed.2d. 570 (1970).

2. Destroy the separation of powers between the state and federal government. The states of the Union and the people domiciled therein are supposed to be foreign, sovereign, and separate from the Federal government in order to protect their constitutional rights:
“We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, “[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite.” The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

3. Destroy the sovereignty of persons born and domiciled within states of the Union who would otherwise be “stateless persons” and “foreign sovereigns” in relation to the federal government.

4. Cause a surrender of sovereign immunity pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(b)(3) by involuntarily connecting sovereign individuals with commerce with the federal government in the guise of illegally enforced taxation.

5. Causes Christians to have to serve TWO masters, being the state and federal government, by having to pay tribute to TWO sovereigns. This is a violation of the following scriptures.

"No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon."

[Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV]

5.6.13.4.2 Excluding “Not subject” from Government Forms and offering only “Exempt”

Another devious technique frequently used on government forms to trick “nonresident aliens” into making an unwitting election to become “resident aliens” is:

22. Omit the “not subject” option.
23. Present the “exempt” option as the only method for avoiding the liability described.
24. Define the term “exempt” to exclude persons who are “not subject”.

This form of abuse exploits the common false presumption among most Americans, which is the following: Government form presents ALL of the lawful options available to avoid the liability described. In fact, government is famous for limiting options in order to advantage or benefit them. In effect, they are constraining your options to compel you to select the lesser of evils and remove the ability to avoid all evil. This devious technique is also called an “adhesion contract”. In summary, they are violating the First Amendment by instituting compelled association in which you are coerced to engage in commercial activity with them and become subject to their pagan laws.

There are in fact two ways that one can use to describe oneself on government forms:

1. “Exempt”. This is a person who is otherwise subject to the provision of law administering the form because they are an “individual” or “person” and yet who is expressly made exempt by a particular provision of the statutes forming the franchise agreement. This option appears on most government forms.
2. “Not subject”. This would be equivalent to a “nontaxpayer” who is not a “person” or franchisee within the meaning of the statute in question. You almost never see this option on government forms.
There is a world of difference between these two statuses and we MUST understand the difference before we can know whether or how to fill out a specific government form describing our status. In this section we will show you how to choose the correct status above and all the affects that this status has on how we fill out government forms.

We will begin our explanation with an illustration. If you are domiciled in California, you would describe yourself as “subject” to the laws in California. However, in relation to the laws of every other civil jurisdiction outside of California, you would describe yourself as:

1. “Not subject” to the civil laws of that place unless you are physically visiting that place.
2. Not ANYTHING described in the civil law that the government has jurisdiction over under or may impose a “duty” upon, such as a “person”, “individual”, “taxpayer”, etc.
3. Not a “foreign person” because not a “person” under the civil law.
4. “foreign”.
5. A “nonresident”.
6. A “transient foreigner”.

A human being who is domiciled in California, for instance, would not be subject to the civil laws of China unless he was either visiting China or engaged in commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of China with people who were domiciled there and therefore protected by the civil laws there. He would not describe himself as being “exempt” from the laws of China, because one cannot be “exempt” without FIRST also being “subject” by having a domicile or residence within that foreign jurisdiction. Another way of stating this is that he would not be a “person” under the civil laws of China and would be “foreign” unless and until he either physically moved there or changed his domicile or residence to that place and thereby became a “protected person” subject to the civil jurisdiction of the Chinese government.

All income taxation within the United States of America takes the form of an excise tax upon an “activity” implemented by the civil law. In the case of the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, that activity is called a “trade or business”. This fact exhaustively proven in the following amazing article:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

A “trade or business” is then defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as follows:

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(26) “The term ’trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions [activities] of a public office.”

Those who therefore lawfully engage in a public office in the U.S. government BEFORE they sign or submit any tax form are then described as a “franchisee” called a “taxpayer” under the terms of the excise tax or franchise agreement codified in Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. Those who are not “public officers” also cannot lawfully “elect” themselves into “public office” by signing or submitting a tax form either, because this would constitute impersonating an officer or employee of the government in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912. This is confirmed by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), which describes all those who are nonresident within the “United States” (District of Columbia) and not engaged in the “trade or business”/“public office” activity as being a “foreign estate”, which simply means “not subject”, to the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A franchise or excise tax:
The term “foreign estate” means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

The entity or “person” described above would NOT be “exempt”, but rather simply “not subject”. The reason is that the term “exempt” has a specific legal definition that does not include the situation above. Notice that the term “exempt” is used along with the word “individual”, meaning that you must be a “person” and an “individual” BEFORE you can call yourself “exempt”:

Exempt individual defined

For purposes of this subsection -

(A) In general

An individual is an exempt individual for any day if, for such day, such individual is -

(i) a foreign government-related individual,

(ii) a teacher or trainee,

(iii) a student, or

(iv) a professional athlete who is temporarily in the United States to compete in a charitable sports event described in section 274(f)(1)(B).

(B) Foreign government-related individual

The term “foreign government-related individual” means any individual temporarily present in the United States by reason of -

(i) diplomatic status, or a visa which the Secretary (after consultation with the Secretary of State) determines represents full-time diplomatic or consular status for purposes of this subsection,

(ii) being a full-time employee of an international organization, or

(iii) being a member of the immediate family of an individual described in clause (i) or (ii).

(C) Teacher or trainee

The term “teacher or trainee” means any individual -

(i) who is temporarily present in the United States under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of section 101(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (other than as a student), and

(ii) who substantially complies with the requirements for being so present.

(D) Student

The term “student” means any individual -

(i) who is temporarily present in the United States -

(I) under subparagraph (F) or (M) of section 101(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, or

(II) as a student under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of such section 101(15), and (ii) who substantially complies with the requirements for being so present.

(E) Special rules for teachers, trainees, and students
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

(i) Limitation on teachers and trainees

An individual shall not be treated as an exempt individual by reason of clause (ii) of subparagraph (A) for the current year if, for any 2 calendar years during the preceding 6 calendar years, such person was an exempt person under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A). In the case of an individual all of whose compensation is described in section 872(b)(3), the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting "4 calendar years" for "2 calendar years".

(ii) Limitation on students

For any calendar year after the 5th calendar year for which an individual was an exempt individual under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A), such individual shall not be treated as an exempt individual by reason of clause (iii) of subparagraph (A), unless such individual establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such individual does not intend to permanently reside in the United States and that such individual meets the requirements of subparagraph (D)(ii).

The Internal Revenue Code itself does not and cannot regulate the conduct of those who are not “taxpayers”.

“Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws.”

[Based on Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

Consequently, all tax forms you fill out PRESUMPTIVE that the person filling it out is a franchisee called a “taxpayer” who occupies a public office within the U.S. government and who is therefore a “person” or an “individual”. Since the Internal Revenue Code is civil law, it also must presuppose that all “persons” or “individuals” described within it are domiciled on federal territory that is no part of a state of the Union. This is confirmed by the definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which is defined as the District of Columbia and no part of any state of the Union. If you do not lawfully occupy such a public office, it would therefore constitute fraud and impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912 to even fill such a form out. If a company hands a “nontaxpayer” a tax form to fill out, the only proper response is ALL of the following, and any other response will result in the commission of a crime:

1. To not complete or sign any provision of the form.
2. To line out the entire form.
3. To write above the line “Not Applicable”.
4. To NOT select the “exempt” option within the form or select any status at all on the form. If you aren’t subject to the Internal Revenue Code because you don’t have a domicile on federal territory and don’t engage in taxable activities, then you can’t be described as a “person”, “individual”, “taxpayer”, or anything else who might be subject to the I.R.C.

“The foregoing considerations would lead, in case of doubt, to a construction of any statute as intended to be confined in its operation and effect to the territorial limits over which the lawmaker has general and legitimate power. ‘All legislation is prima facie territorial.’ Ex parte Blain, L. R. 12 Ch. Div. 522, 528; State v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 499; People v. Merrill, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 590, 596; Words having universal scope, such as ‘every contract in restraint of trade,’ ‘every person who shall monopolize,’ etc., will be taken, as a matter of course, to mean only everyone subject to such legislation, not all that the legislator subsequently may be able to catch. In the case of the present statute, the improbability of the United States attempting to make acts done in Panama or Costa Rica criminal is obvious, yet the law begins by making criminal the acts for which it gives a right to sue. We think it entirely plain that what the defendant did in Panama or Costa Rica is not within the scope of the statute so far as the present suit is concerned. Other objections of a serious nature are urged, but need not be discussed.”

5. To either not return the form to the person who asked for it or to return it with the modifications above.
6. If you return the form to the person who asked for it, to clarify on the form why you are not “exempt”, but rather “not subject”.
7. To attach the following form to the tax form:

Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
Another alternative to all the above would be to simply add a “Not subject” option or to select “Exempt” and then redefine the word to add the “not subject” option to the definition. Then you could attach the Tax Form Attachment mentioned above, which also redefines words on the government form to immunize yourself from government jurisdiction.

If we had an honorable government that loved the people under its care and protection more than it loved deceiving you out of and stealing your money, then they would indicate at the top of the form in big bold letters EXACTLY what laws are being enforced and who the intended audience is so that those who are not required to fill it out would not do so. However, if they did that, hardly anyone would ever pay taxes again. Of this SCAM, the Bible and a famous bible commentary says the following:

> “Getting treasures by a lying tongue [or by deliberate omission intended to deceive] is the fleeting fantasy of those who seek death.”
> [Prov. 3:16, Bible, NKJV]

> “As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest, nor can he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for, 1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it: a blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren. 2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is pleased with those that are herein followers of him. A balance cheats, under pretence of doing right most exactly, and therefore is the greater abomination to God.”
> [Matthew Henry’s Commentary on the Whole Bible, Henry, M., 1996, c1991, under Prov. 11:1]

In the case of income tax forms, for instance, the warning described above would say the following:

This form is only intended for those who satisfy all the following conditions:

> “Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws.”
> [Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

1.2. Lawfully engaged in a “public office” in the U.S. government, which is called a “trade or business” in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

1.3. Exercising the public office ONLY within the District of Columbia as required by 4 U.S.C. §72, which is within the only remaining internal revenue district, as confirmed by Treasury Order 150-02.

If you do not satisfy all the requirements indicated above, then you DO NOT need to fill out this form, nor can you claim the status of “exempt”.

This form is ONLY for use by “taxpayers”. If you are a “nontaxpayer”, then we don’t have a form you can use to document your status. This is because our mission statement only allows us to help “taxpayers”. It is self-defeating to help “nontaxpayers” because it only undermines our revenue and importance. We are a business and we only focus our energies on things that make money for us, such as deceiving “nontaxpayers” into thinking they are “taxpayers”. That is why we don’t put a “nontaxpayer” or “not subject” option on our forms: Because we want to self-servingly and prejudicially presume that EVERYONE is engaged in our franchise and subject to our plunder and control.

IRM 1.1.1-1 (02-26-1999)
IRS Mission and Basic Organization

The IRS Mission: Provide America’s taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all.
We hope that you have learned from this section that:

1. He who makes the rules or the forms always wins the game. The power to create includes the power to define.
2. All government forms are snares or traps designed to trap the innocent and ignorant into servitude to the whims of corrupted politicians and lawyers.

   “The Lord is well pleased for His righteousness’ sake: He will exalt the law and make it honorable. But this is a people robbed and plundered! [by the IRS] All of them are snared in [legal] holes [by the sophistry of greedy IRS lawyers], and they are hidden in prison houses; they are for prey, and no one delivers: for plunder, and no one says, “Restore!”

   Who among you will give ear to this? Who will listen and hear for the time to come? Who gave Jacob for plunder, and Israel to the robbers? [IRS]. Was it not the Lord, He against whom we have sinned? For they would not walk in His ways, nor were they obedient to His law; therefore He has poured on him the fury of His anger and the strength of battle; it has set him on fire all around, yet he did not know; and it burned him, yet he did not take it to heart.”

   [Isaiah 42:21-25, Bible, NKJV]

3. The snare is the presumptions which they deliberately do not disclose on the forms and which are buried in the “words of art” contained in their void for vagueness codes. See:

   Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. The main reason for reading and learning the law is to reveal all the presumptions and deceptive “words of art” that are hidden on government forms so that you can avoid them.

   “My [God’s] people are destroyed [and enslaved] for lack of knowledge [of God’s Laws and the lack of education that produces it].”
   [Hosea 4:6, Bible, NKJV]

   “And thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws [of both God and man], and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the work [of obedience to God] that they must do.”
   [Exodus 18:20, Bible, NKJV]

   “This Book of the Law shall not depart from your mouth, but you shall meditate in it day and night, that you may observe to do according to all that is written in it. For then you will make your way prosperous, and then you will have good success. Have I not commanded you? Be strong and of good courage; do not be afraid, nor be dismayed, for the Lord your God is with you wherever you go.”
   [Joshua 1:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

5. Government forms deliberately do not disclose the presumptions that are being made about the proper audience for the form in order to maximize the possibility that they can exploit your legal ignorance to induce you to make a “tithe” to their state-sponsored civil religion and church of socialism. That religion is exhaustively described below:

   Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

6. All government forms are designed to encourage you to waive sovereignty and engage in commerce with the government. Government does not make forms for those who refuse to do business with them such as “nontaxpayers”, “nonresidents”, or “transient foreigners”. If you want a form that accurately describes your status as a “nontaxpayer” and which preserves your sovereignty and sovereign immunity, you will have to design your own. Government is never going to make it easy to reduce their own revenues, importance, power, or control over you. Everyone in the government is there because they have the largest possible audience of “customers” for their services. Another way of saying this is that they are going to do everything within their power to rig things so that it is impossible to avoid contracting with or doing business with them. This approach has the effect of compelling you to contract with them in violation of Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution, which is supposed to protect your right to NOT contract with the government.

7. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits involuntary servitude. Consequently, the government cannot lawfully impose any duty, including the duty to fill out or submit a government form. Therefore, you should view every opportunity that presents itself to fill out a government form as an act of contracting away your rights.

8. In the case of government tax forms, the purpose of all government tax forms is to ask the following presumptuous and prejudicial question:

   “What kind of ‘taxpayer’ are you?”
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

. . . rather than the question:

“Are you a ‘taxpayer’?”

The above approach results in what the legal profession refers to as a “leading question”, which is a question contaminated by a prejudicial presumption and therefore inadmissible as evidence. Federal Rule of Evidence 611(c) expressly forbids such leading questions to be used as evidence, which is also why no IRS form can really qualify as evidence that can be used against anyone: It doesn’t offer a “nontaxpayer” or a “foreigner” option. An example of such a question is the following:

“Have you always beat your wife?”

The presumption hidden within the above leading question is that you are a “wife beater”. Replace the word “wife beater” with “taxpayer” and you know the main method by which the IRS stays in business.

5.6.13.4.3 Not offering an option on the W-8BEN form to accurately describe the status of non-citizen nationals who are “nonresident aliens” but not “individuals”

“The foregoing considerations would lead, in case of doubt, to a construction of any statute as intended to be confined in its operation and effect to the territorial limits over which the lawmaker has general and legitimate power. ‘All legislation is prima facie territorial.’ Ex parte Blain, L. R. 12 Ch. Div. 522, 528; State v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 499; People v. Merrill, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 590, 596. Words having universal scope, such as ‘every contract in restraint of trade,’ ‘every person who shall monopolize,’ etc., will be taken, as a matter of course, to mean only everyone subject to such legislation [e.g. “individuals” with a domicile on federal territory who are therefore subject to the civil laws of Congress], not all that the legislator subsequently may be able to catch. In the case of the present statute, the improbability of the United States attempting to make acts done in Panama or Costa Rica criminal is obvious, yet the law begins by making criminal the acts for which it gives a right to sue. We think it entirely plain that what the defendant did in Panama or Costa Rica is not within the scope of the statute so far as the present suit is concerned. Other objections of a serious nature are urged, but need not be discussed.”

[American Banana Co. v. U.S. Fruit, 213 U.S. 347 at 357-358]

The term "individual" is provided in Block 3 of the Standard IRS Form W-8BEN. Like the "beneficial owner" scam above, it too has a malicious intent/aspect:

1. Like the term "beneficial owner", it is associated with statutory creations of Congress engaged in federal privileges, "public rights", and "public offices." The only way you can be subject to the code is to engage in a franchise. Those who are not privileged cannot refer to themselves as anything described in any government statute, which is reserved only for government officers, agencies, and instrumentalities and not private persons. See: Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndext.htm

2. The term "individual" appears in 26 CFR §1.6012-1(b), where "nonresident alien individuals" are made liable to file tax returns. However, "nonresident aliens" who are NOT "individuals" are nowhere mentioned as having any duty to do anything. Consequently, YOU DON’T WANT TO DESCRIBE YOURSELF AS AN "INDIVIDUAL" BECAUSE THEN THEY CAN PROSECUTE YOU FOR FAILURE TO FILE A RETURN! Some ways you can create a usually false presumption that you are an "individual" include:
   2.1. Filing IRS form 1040, which says "U.S. INDIVIDUAL Income Tax Return" in the upper left corner.
   2.2. Applying for a "INDIVIDUAL Taxpayer Identification Number" (ITIN) using IRS Forms W-7 or W-9. Only "aliens" can lawfully apply for such a number pursuant to 26 CFR §301.6109-1(d)(3). If you were born in a state of the Union or on federal territory, you AREN'T an "alien". See:
      Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a “Taxpayer Identification Number.”, Form #04.205
      http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndext.htm

2.3. Filling out the IRS Form W-8BEN and checking the box for "individual" in block 3.
2.4. Filling out any other government form and identifying yourself as an "Individual". If they don't have "Union state Citizen" or "transient foreigner" as an option, then ADD IT and CHECK IT!

Our Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201, prevents the presumption from being created that you are an "individual" with any form you use in any federal law, but instead refers ONLY to the common and NOT the legal definition. This, in effect, prevents what the courts call "compelled association". That is why our Member Agreement specifies that you MUST attach the Tax Form Attachment to any standard tax form you are compelled to submit: To protect you from being prosecuted for tax crimes under the I.R.C. by preventing you from being connected to any federal franchise or obligation.

3. The term "individual", like that of "beneficial owner", is nowhere defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code and it is EXTREMELY dangerous to describe yourself as anything that isn't defined statutorily, because you just invite people to make prejudicial presumptions about your status. The term "individual" is only defined in the treasury regulations. The definition in the regulations is found at 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i):

26 CFR 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.
(c) Definitions
(3) Individual
(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

Do you see statutory "U.S. citizens" (which are defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401) mentioned above under the definition of "individual" in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3)? They aren't there, which means the only way they can become "taxpayers" is to visit a foreign country and become an "alien" under the terms of a tax treaty with a foreign country under the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §911. When they do this, they attach IRS form 2555 to the IRS form 1040 that they file. Remember: The 1040 form is for "U.S. persons", which includes statutory "U.S. citizens" and "residents", both of whom have a domicile in the District of Columbia, which is what the term "United States" is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

In fact, the only place that the term "individual" is statutorily defined that we have found is in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2), which means:

TITLE 5 - GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION AND EMPLOYEES
PART I > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
552a. Records maintained on individuals.
(a) Definitions.— For purposes of this section—
(2) the term “individual” means a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence;

The above statute is the Privacy Act, which regulates IRS use and protection of your tax information. Notice that:

1. "nonresident aliens" don't appear there and therefore are implicitly excluded. Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.
2. The "individual" they are referring to must meet the definitions found in BOTH 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) and 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) because the Privacy Act is also the authority for protecting tax records, which means he or she or it can ONLY be a "resident", meaning an alien with a domicile in the District of Columbia. Therefore, those who claim to be "individuals" indirectly are making a usually invisible election to be treated as a "resident", which is an alien with a domicile in the District of Columbia. Nonresident aliens are nowhere mentioned in the Privacy Act.
3. The code section is under Title 5 of the U.S. Code, which is called "GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION AND EMPLOYEES". They are treating you as part of the government, even though you aren't. The reason is that unless you have a domicile in the District of Columbia (which is what "United States" is defined as under I.R.C. Subtitle A in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)) or have income connected with a "trade or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office", you can't be a "taxpayer" without at least volunteering by submitting an IRS form W-4, which effectively amounts to an "election" to become a "public officer" and a "Kelly Girl" on loan to your private employer from Uncle Sam.
What the IRS form W-8BEN is doing is fooling you into admitting that you are an “individual” as defined above, which means that you just made an election or choice to become a “resident alien” instead of a “nonresident alien”. They don't have any lawful authority to maintain records on "nonresident aliens" under the Privacy Act, so you have to become a "resident" by filling out one of their forms and lying about your status by calling yourself an "individual" so they have permission from you to do so. Instead, what you really are is a "transient foreigner"

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."

Our Amended IRS Form W-8BEN solves this problem by adding an additional option indicating "Union State Citizen" under Block 3 of the form and by putting the phrase "(public officer)" after the word "individual". As an alternative, you could make your own Substitute form as authorized by IRS Form W-8 Instructions for Requester of Forms W-8BEN, W-8ECI, W-8EXP, and W-8IMF, Catalog 26698G and add an option for Block 3 called "transient foreigner". Either way, you have deprived the IRS of the ability to keep records about you because you do not fit the definition of "individual", as required by the Privacy Act above. If you don't want to be subject to the code, you can't be submitting government paperwork and signing it under penalty of perjury that indicates that you fit the description of anyone or anything that they have jurisdiction over.

For more information about how they have to make you into a "resident" (alien) and an "individual" and a "public officer" within the government to tax you, see the following informative resources:

5.6.13.4.4 “Nonresident alien individuals” v. “Nonresident alien NONindividuals”

Another devious technique frequently used on government forms to trick “nonresident aliens” into become “resident aliens” subject to federal jurisdiction is add the word “individual” to the term “nonresident alien” and to define an “individual” as a person subject to federal jurisdiction and engaged in the “trade or business” franchise. There are two types of “nonresident aliens”:

1. “Nonresident alien individuals”. These persons are described as subject to federal law and having a requirement to file a tax return found in 26 CFR §1.6012-1(b).
2. “Nonresident aliens” who are NOT “individuals”. These entities are not “individuals” and therefore not “persons” subject to any provision of federal law.

One cannot be an “individual” without also being a “person”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(c ). One can also be a “nonresident alien” without being a “nonresident alien individual” and this is the only status that is truly sovereign and foreign in respect to federal jurisdiction. The only way you are going to be free and sovereign is to have a status that is not completely defined in the I.R.C., which is private law and a franchise agreement relating only to “taxpayers”. If you are not a franchisee called a “taxpayer” and are therefore not subject to the franchise agreement, then it cannot describe you or impose any duty upon you.

“Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws.”
[Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]
26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) defines a “nonresident alien individual” as a person who is neither a citizen or a resident. The title of the section, however, indicates “nonresident alien” and not “nonresident alien individual”.

They very conveniently don’t address those who are not “individuals” because they are “nontaxpayers” and yet who also meet the criteria of being neither a citizen nor resident of the United States.

This “individual” scam is also found on the IRS Form W-8BEN, which only offers “Individual” as an option for those who are human beings and does not offer simply “Transient foreigner”, or “Union State Citizen”, all of whom would NOT be subject to the I.R.C. We prove this in the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

If you want to avoid labeling yourself as a “individual” who is therefore a “person” subject to the I.R.C. and a “taxpayer”, you will need to use an AMENDED IRS Form W-8BEN or modify the form yourself. The AMENDED version of the form is available in the article above. The two options it adds are “Transient foreigner” and “Union State Citizen” to block 3 of the form.

This section also brings up a bigger issue that relates to domicile. If you are a “nonresident” because you do not have a domicile within a jurisdiction, then you aren’t subject to the civil laws of that jurisdiction unless you engage in commerce with that jurisdiction and therefore surrender sovereign immunity pursuant to the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1605.

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.'" Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)).

Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

(1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;
(2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and
(3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

[Yahoo! Inc. v. La Ligue Contre Le Racisme Et L'Antisemitisme, 433 F.3d. 1199 (9th Cir. 01/12/2006)]

A “nonresident alien” becomes a “nonresident alien individual” and thereby makes an “election” to be treated as a “person” and therefore an “individual” and a “resident alien” at the point that they engage in commerce with the United States government by participating in the “trade or business” franchise as a public officer in the U.S. government.

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.
A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

Without said participation, they are not an “individual” and retain their sovereign and “foreign” status. Only at that point when they waive sovereign immunity can they be subject to the laws of the sovereignty, a “resident” (alien), and a “person” subject to the civil law of that sovereign. If you refuse to engage in the commerce, which Blacks Law Dictionary defines as “intercourse”, with what the Bible refers to as “the Beast”, which is the government, you retain your sovereignty and sovereign immunity and cannot be described as an “Individual” or a person subject to the I.R.C.

“Commerce ... Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on...”

The specific “commerce” and fornication which causes the surrender of sovereign immunity to “the beast” is the “trade or business” franchise, which we also call the “socialism franchise”.

5.6.13.4.5 Illegally and FRAUDULENTLY Filing the WRONG return, the IRS 1040

Only persons with a domicile in the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia, may lawfully file IRS Form 1040. This is confirmed by IRS Document 7130, the IRS Published Products Catalog, which says the following:

1040A  11327A Each
U.S. Individual Income Tax Return

Annual income tax return filed by citizens and residents of the United States. There are separate instructions available for this item. The catalog number for the instructions is 12088U:

W:CAR:MP:FP:F:I Tax Form or Instructions
[2003 IRS Published Products Catalog, p. F-15]

The above is also confirmed by the IRS 1040 Instruction Booklet itself, which says at the top of the page describing the filing requirement the following:

Filing Requirements

These rules apply to all U.S. citizens, regardless of where they live, and resident aliens.

[IRS 1040 Instruction Booklet, Year 2001, p. 15;

What the above deceptive publication very conveniently and deliberately doesn’t tell you are the following very important facts:

1. The “U.S. citizen” they are referring to above is a statutory “U.S. citizen” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
2. You cannot be either a statutory “U.S. citizen” or a “resident” (alien) unless you have a domicile on federal territory within the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia and nowhere extended to include any other place.
3. Persons born within and domiciled within states of the Union do not have a domicile in the “United States” and therefore cannot lawfully be statutory “U.S. citizens” or “residents” (aliens), but rather are non-citizen nationals and nonresident aliens. If they claim to be a “U.S. citizen” on a federal form, they are committing a crime in violation of 18 U.S.C. §911.

4. The only way that the place where you physically live is irrelevant as mentioned above is under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17, which says that if you are acting in a representative capacity as a “public officer” within the federal corporation called the “United States”, the laws of the place of incorporation of the corporation apply, regardless of where you physically are. THE OFFICE has a domicile in the District of Columbia and while you fill it, your effective domicile is also there, regardless of where you live. ONLY in this condition is the place you live irrelevant. It is furthermore a criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912 for a private person not lawfully elected into public office consistent with federal law to serve in a public office or “pretend” to be a public officer engaged in the “trade or business” franchise.

The group of persons that includes statutory “U.S. citizens” and “residents” (aliens) who collectively are the only ones who can lawfully file IRS Form 1040 above are called “U.S. persons”, and they are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). A nonresident alien is NOT a “U.S. person” and may NOT lawfully elect to be treated as one if he is NOT married to one. The only authority for making an election as a nonresident alien to be treated as a “resident alien” is if he is married to one and wants to file jointly pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B). This option is discussed in the next section.

People born with and/or domiciled within states of the Union are nonresident aliens, and most of them are ILLEGALLY filing IRS Form 1040 and thereby:

1. Making an ILLEGAL election to be treated as “resident aliens” when no statute authorizes it.
4. Needlessly subjecting themselves to the jurisdiction of federal district courts that would otherwise be “foreign” in relation to them if they had properly described their status as nonresident aliens.

The above is a HUGE mistake on their part and a FRAUD on the IRS’ part. The IRS looks the other way and permits this, because this is how they ILLEGALLY manufacture nearly all of the “taxpayers” who they illegally terrorize, uhhh, I mean “service”. Any refunds paid out to nonresident aliens who filed IRS Form 1040 and who have not made a lawful election as a person married to a “U.S. person” are unauthorized and unlawful, and would be cognizable under the following I.R.C. provisions:

2. 26 U.S.C. §7206: Fraud and false statements

Those who would argue otherwise are asked to produce the statute AND implementing regulation specifically authorizing nonresident aliens who are NOT married to “U.S. persons” to make an election to be treated as “resident aliens”. It doesn’t exist!

5.6.13.4.6 Making an election on a government form to become a “resident”

The government has a vested interest to maximize the number of “taxpayers”. Their authority to impose an income tax has as a prerequisite a “domicile” within the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) to include only the District of Columbia and is not expanded elsewhere under I.R.C. Subtitle A to include states of the Union:

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocated duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."

[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

If you would like to learn more about the relationship of domicile to income taxation, please read sections 5.4.8 through 5.4.8.13.1 earlier.

As we pointed out in section 5.6.13, people born in and domiciled within states of the Union are “nationals” or “state nationals” and not statutory “U.S. citizens”. They are “Citizens” under the Fourteenth Amendment but NOT “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. We also showed in section 5.5.3 that the only real “taxpayers” on an IRS Form 1040 are “aliens” of one kind or another. IRS Publication 7130, in fact, says that the only people who can use IRS Form 1040 are “citizens and residents of the United States”, both of whom have in common a domicile within the District of Columbia. Collectively, “citizens and residents of the United States” having a domicile in the District of Columbia are called “U.S. persons” and are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). Therefore, the government has a vested interest in making “nonresident aliens” in states of the Union into “resident aliens”. They do this primarily by encouraging nonresident aliens to volunteer to engage in privileged, excise taxable activities. Under subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, the only such taxable activity is a “trade or business” or a public office.

In order to learn how the federal government manufactures “taxpayers” out of “nontaxpayers”, we therefore should be looking for ways in which “nonresident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) and domiciled in the states of the Union are turned into “resident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). From a high level view, it would appear simple, because the only way nonresident alien can become a resident is by changing his domicile and declaring that change on government forms. As our research reveals, this process is a lot more devious and indirect than that. It is so subtle that most people miss it. Once we found out how it was accomplished and identified it in our publications, they immediately hid the evidence!

This ingenious process our corrupted politicians invented to manufacture more “taxpayers” out of people in the states of the Union who started out as nonresident alien “nontaxpayers” is essentially the mechanism by which our public dis-servants destroy the separation of powers that is at the heart of the United States Constitution and thereby assault and destroy our rights and liberties. That separation of powers is insightfully described in the article below:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Articles/SeparationOfPowers Doctrine.htm

A breakdown of the separation of taxing authority can only occur by the voluntary consent of the people themselves. The states cannot facilitate that breakdown of the separation of powers:

“State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in the Constitution.”

[New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 142; 112 S.Ct. 2408; 120 L.Ed.2d. 120 (1992)]

That consent to allows federal income taxation within states of the Union requires a voluntary personal exercise of our private right to contract. Our right to contract is the most dangerous right we have, because the exercise of that right can destroy ALL of our other rights, folks! The most dangerous thing about this right is that if we use it unwisely, the government cannot come to our aid. The Purpose of the Constitution, in fact, is to protect its exercise and it forbids any state, in Article 1, Section 10, to pass any law that would impair the obligation of any contract we sign. The abuse or your right to contract is as dangerous as the abuse of your pecker can be to your marriage, your family, and the lives of generations of people yet unborn!

A person domiciled in a state of the Union, who starts out as a “nonresident alien”, can become a “resident”, a “taxpayer”, and an “individual” under the Internal Revenue Code by making the necessary “elections” in order to be treated as a “resident” engaged in a “trade or business” instead of a “nonresident alien” not engaged in a “trade or business”. That election is made as follows:

1. If the “nonresident alien” voluntarily signs and submits Social Security Form SS-5, he becomes a “resident alien”. 20 CFR §422.104 says that only “citizens and permanent residents” are eligible to join the program. “nonresident aliens are NOT eligible, so they must become a “resident” to join.

Title 20: Employees' Benefits
PART 422—ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURES
Subpart B—General Procedures
§ 422.104 Who can be assigned a social security number.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

5-798

(a) Persons eligible for SSN assignment. We can assign you a social security number if you meet the evidence requirements in §422.107 and you are:

(1) A United States citizen; or

(2) An alien lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence or under other authority of law permitting you to work in the United States (§422.105 describes how we determine if a nonimmigrant alien is permitted to work in the United States); or

Note also that the “nonresident alien” must ALSO become a federal “employee” or “public official” in order to join, because the above regulation appears in Title 20, which is entitled “Employee benefits”. Congress cannot legislate for private employees, but only its own “public employees” or “public officials”, and those officers must be engaged in a taxable “trade or business” in order to pay for the employment privileges that they are availing themselves of:

“The power to “legislate generally upon” life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the “power to provide modes of redress” against offensive state action, was “repugnant” to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 177, 189 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress’ §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned.”

[City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

By becoming a “public official”, you agree to act as a trustee and officer of the “U.S. Inc.” corporation defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A), which has a domicile in the District of Columbia. Therefore, your domicile assumes that of the corporation you represent pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). The exact mechanisms for how the Social Security System transforms a “nonresident alien” into a “resident alien federal employee” are described in detail in the following informative pamphlet:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Pursuant to 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a), a “nonresident alien” may submit an IRS Form W-4 to his private employer and thereby elect to call his earnings “wages”, which makes him “effectively connected with a trade or business”. This means, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) that he is engaged in a “public office”:

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

(a) In general. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3).

Once you begin earning “wages”, your compensation is documented and reported on a W-2 pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041, which says that only “trade or business” earnings can be reported on a W-2. This means, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) that the worker is engaged in a “public office”. 4 U.S.C. §72 says that all public offices exist ONLY in the District of Columbia, and therefore, you consented to be treated as a “resident” of the district of Columbia for the purposes of the income tax, because you are representing a federal corporation in the District of Columbia as a “public officer” and your effective domicile is the domicile of the corporation pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b):

TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
§ 72. Public offices; at seat of Government

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

3. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4) and 26 U.S.C. §6013(g), he can decide to file an IRS Form 1040, and thereby become a “resident alien”. IRS Publication 7130 identifies the IRS Form 1040 as being only suitable for use by “citizens and residents of the United States”. The “individual” in the title “U.S. Individual Income Tax Return” means a “resident alien” in that scenario. This is explained in the following sources:

3.1. Section 5.5.3: You’re Not a U.S. citizen if you file a 1040 form, You’re an alien

3.2. Section 5.5.4 entitled: “You’re not the U.S. citizen mentioned at the top of the 1040 form if you are a U.S. citizen domiciled in the federal United States”

4. After making the above elections, if the IRS then writes us some friendly “dear taxpayer” letters, and we respond and don’t deny that we are “taxpayers” or provide exculpatory proof that we are not, then we are admitting that:

4.1. We are subject to the IRC.

4.2. We are “taxpayers”.

The bottom line is that if you act like a duck and quack like one, then the IRS is going to think you are one! That deception usually occurs because we deceived the government about our true status by either filing out the wrong form, or filing the right form out incorrectly and in a way that does not represent our true status. This is covered in our article at: http://famguardianl.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/TaxpayerVNontaxpayer.htm

Through the elections made by the nonresident alien above, it contractually agreed to become a representative of a legal fiction that is a “resident” or “resident alien” or “permanent resident”, all of which are equivalent and are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). A “resident” is within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States”. A “domicile” or “residence” is what puts them within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States”. The “nonresident alien” therefore became a “resident alien” not because they have a physical presence there, but because the SS-5 federal employment contract they signed made them into “representatives” and “public officers” for the federal corporation called the “United States”. Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), their effective domicile or residence is that of the federal corporation they represent, which is the “United States”, as indicated in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). That corporation, like all corporations, is a “citizen” of the place of its incorporation, which in this case is the District of Columbia:

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886]

The above mechanisms for DESTROYING the sovereignty of We The People and breaking down the separation of Powers between the state and federal governments are consistent with the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1602 to 1611. 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) says that a foreign sovereign, such as a “nonresident alien”, surrenders their sovereign immunity by conducting “commerce” within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States”. A nonresident alien who has accomplished one or more of the above steps meets the criteria for the surrender of sovereign immunity because:

1. He is conducting “commerce” within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) as a public official or a representative of a Social Security Trust that is a “public official”.

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1603. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States.

Through the SSA Form SS-5 federal job or contract application, the nonresident alien contractually agreed to become a federal “employee” or “public official” engaged in a “trade or business” who is conducting “commerce” with the government. The Social Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are the “employment contract” or “franchise agreement” that they must observe while acting in a representative capacity as a “public official”. That “franchise agreement” governs choice of law should any of the terms of the contract need to be litigated. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) say that all litigation over the terms of the contract must occur in a federal court under the laws of the District of Columbia.
Another way of saying this is that you can’t become a federal “employee” or contractor unless you agree to obey what your new boss tells you to do, and the only way that boss, the government, can direct your activities is through “law”. This is what we call a “roach trap statute”, which is a statute whose benefits entice you into a trap that causes you to acquire the equivalent of a new landlord. Since kidnapping and identity theft are illegal, then they need your consent or permission to kidnap your legal identity or “res” and move it to the District of Columbia so that it can be “identified” there. See 18 U.S.C. §1201. This is how you become a “res” or “ident”, or a “resident” of the District of Columbia. Therefore, you must also agree to be subject to federal law as a “resident” before you can become a “public official”, federal benefit recipient, or contractor. Once you become any one of these three types of entities, 44 U.S.C. §1505(a) and 5 U.S.C. §555(a) say that you also agreed to obey all commands of your new boss, which is Congress, without the need for implementing regulations published in the federal register. The Legislative Branch is the boss, and the Executive Branch works for the Legislative Branch to implement and enforce the will of the sovereign people.

In the process of becoming a federal “employee” or “public official”, you also implicitly surrendered ALL of your constitutional rights in the context of your official duties:

“The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O’Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v. Broderick, [497 U.S. 62, 95] 392 U.S. 273, 277, 278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason. Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 101 (1947); Civil Service Comm’n v. Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548, 556 (1973); Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 616–617 (1973).”

2. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1332(c ) and (d), the nonresident alien, by making the necessary elections, has lost his sovereign immunity as a “foreign sovereign” because he became a “resident” or “citizen” of that foreign state for the purposes of federal law. This is what 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3) below says:

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1603

§ 1603. Definitions

For purposes of this chapter—

(a) A “foreign state”, except as used in section 1608 of this title, includes a political subdivision of a foreign state or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in subsection (b).

(b) An “agency or instrumentality of a foreign state” means any entity—

(1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and

(2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof; and

(3) which is neither a citizen of a State of the United States as defined in section 1332 (c) and (d) of this title, nor created under the laws of any third country.

Only AFTER the above “elections” or consent have been voluntarily procured completely absent any duress can the party become the object of involuntary IRS enforcement, and NOT before.
"Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."

The question of a waiver of a federally guaranteed constitutional right is, of course, a federal question controlled by federal law. There is a presumption against the waiver of constitutional rights, see, e.g. Glasser v. United States, 315 U.S. 60, 70-71, 66 S.Ct. 689, 62 S.Ct. 457, and for a waiver to be effective it must be clearly established that there was "an intentional relinquishment or abandonment of a known right or privilege." Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 464, 82 L.Ed. 1461, 1466; 58 S.Ct. 1019, 146 A.L.R. 357."
[Brookhart v. Janis, 384 U.S. 1; 86 S.Ct. 1245; 16 L.Ed.2d 314 (1966)]

If no consent was ever explicitly (in writing) or implicitly (by conduct) given or if consent was procured through deceit, fraud, or duress, the contract is voidable at the option of the person subject to the duress but not automatically void:

[American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, Section 21]

AFTER a nonresident alien domiciled in a state of the Union has made the elections necessary to be treated as though he is "effectively connected with a trade or business" by voluntarily signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4, the code says he becomes a "resident alien". In fact, we allege that the term "effectively connected" is a code word for "contracted" or "consented" to procure "social insurance" as a federal "employee". The act of engaging in a "trade or business" makes nonresident aliens subject to the code, and under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), their "effective domicile" shifts to the District of Columbia. Beyond that point, they become parties to federal law and whenever they walk into a federal district court, the courts are obligated to treat them as though they effectively reside in the District of Columbia. The older versions of the Treasury Regulations demonstrate EXACTLY how this election process works to transform "nonresident aliens" into "residents" who are then "taxpayers":

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

Shortly after we posted the information contained in this article on our website, the Treasury deleted the above regulation and replaced it on the Government Printing Office website with a temporary regulation that doesn’t tell the truth quite so plainly. They don’t want you to know how they made you into a “resident”. This is their secret weapon, folks. If you want to know how to undo the effects of this secret weapon, please read section 5.6.13.8.4.7 later, entitled “How to Correct Government Records to Reflect your True Status as a Nonresident Alien”.

The trouble and inherent corruption associated with this deceitful manufacturing process is that:

1. The government won’t admit on its website or its publications or its phone support that your voluntary consent is necessary as a nonresident alien nontaxpayer in order to become a resident alien taxpayer.
2. The IRS publications don’t contain either legal definitions that would help you understand the full extent of your tax obligation and they won’t talk with you about the law on the phone, because then you would instantly realize that they have no authority.
3. The courts refuse to hold the IRS responsible for telling the truth. See:

Federal Courts and the IRS’ own IRM Say the IRS is NOT RESPONSIBLE for Its Actions or its Words or for Following Its Own Procedures

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

4. The IRS won’t tell you how to “unvolunteer” or how your consent was procured, because they want everyone to be indentured government slaves in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.
5. The IRS deceives you on their website by omitting key truths contained in this pamphlet from their website and by refusing to address completely in their propaganda literature, such as the following:

Rebutted Version of the IRS “The Truth About Frivolous Tax Arguments”

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/ Govt/IRS/friv_tax_rebuts.pdf

6. If you confront them with the truth, they are silent and won’t respond, because if they did, their Ponzi scheme would cave in and people would leave the system in droves.
7. Those who expose these truths are often persecuted by the IRS for reminding people that you can unvolunteer using the techniques described in:

Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The sin and corruption that keeps our tax system going is therefore mainly a sin of “omission”, rather than “commission”. Silence by the IRS and failure to act properly or in the best interests of all Americans, in fulfillment of the fiduciary duty that public servants have, by informing Americans of exactly what the law says and requires is what allows the fraud to continue.

5.6.13.4.7 Jurat/Perjury statement on IRS Forms

Signing a perjury statement not only constitutes the taking of an oath, but also constitutes the conveying of consent to be held accountable for the accuracy and truthfulness of what appears on the form. It therefore constitutes an act of contracting that conveys consent and rights to the government to hold you accountable for the accuracy of what is on the form. Governments are created to protect your right to contract and the Constitution forbids them from interfering with or impairing the exercise of that inalienable right. Governments are created to ensure that every occasion you give consent or contract is not coerced.

"Independent of these views, there are many considerations which lead to the conclusion that the power to impair contracts, by direct action to that end, does not exist with the general [federal] government. In the first place, one of the objects of the Constitution, expressed in its preamble, was the establishment of justice, and what that meant in its relations to contracts is not left, as was justly said by the late Chief Justice, in Hepburn v. Griswold, to inference or conjecture. As he observes, at the time the Constitution was undergoing discussion in the convention, the Congress of the Confederation was engaged in framing the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern Territory, in which certain articles of compact were established between the people of the original States and the people of the Territory, for the purpose, as expressed in the instrument, of extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, upon which the States, their laws and constitutions, were erected. By that ordinance it was declared, that, in the just preservation of rights and property, 'no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said Territory, that shall, in any manner, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and without fraud previously formed.' The same provision, adds the Chief Justice, found more condensed expression in the prohibition upon the States [in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution] against impairing the obligation of contracts, which has ever been recognized as an efficient safeguard against injustice; and though the prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States, he expressed the opinion, speaking for himself and the majority of the court at the time, that it was clear that those who framed and those who adopted the Constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of legislation, and that the justice which the Constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them to be compatible with legislation for judicial
The presence of coercion, penalties, or duress of any kind in the process of giving consent renders the contract unenforceable and void.

"An agreement [consensual contract] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as the state of mind induced. 118 Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced, 119 and it is susceptible of ratification. Like other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to avoid it. 120 However, duress in the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent when he has no intention of doing so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void. 121"

[American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, Section 21]

Any instance where you are required to give consent cannot be coerced or subject to penalty and must therefore be voluntary. Any penalty or threat of penalty in specifying the terms under which you provide your consent is an interference or impairment with your right to contract. This sort of unlawful interference with your right to contract happens all the time when the IRS illegally penalizes people for specifying the terms under which they consent to be held accountable on a tax form.

The perjury statement found at the end of nearly every IRS Form is based on the content of 28 U.S.C. §1746:

TITLE 28 > PART V > CHAPTER 115 > § 1746
§1746. Unsworn declarations under penalty of perjury

Wherever, under any law of the United States or under any rule, regulation, order, or requirement made pursuant to law, any matter is required or permitted to be supported, evidenced, established, or proved by the sworn declaration, verification, certificate, statement, oath, or affidavit, in writing of the person making the same (other than a deposition, or an oath of office, or an oath required to be taken before a specified official other than a notary public), such matter may, with like force and effect, be supported, evidenced, established, or proved by the unsworn declaration, certificate, verification, or statement, in writing of such person which is subscribed by him, as true under penalty of perjury, and dated, in substantially the following form:

(1) If executed without the United States: “I declare (or certify, verify, or state) under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on (date). (Signature)”.

(2) If executed within the United States, its territories, possessions, or commonwealths: “I declare (or certify, verify, or state) under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on (date). (Signature)”.

The term “United States” as used above means the territories and possessions of the United States and the District of Columbia and excludes states of the Union mentioned in the Constitution. Below is the perjury statement found on the IRS Form 1040 and 1040NR:

"Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct, and complete. Declaration of preparer (other than taxpayer) is based on all information of which preparer has any knowledge."

[IRS Forms 1040 and 1040NR jurat/perjury statement]
Notice, based on the above perjury statement, that:

1. You are a “taxpayer”. Notice it uses the words “(other than taxpayer)”. The implication is that you can’t use any standard IRS Form WITHOUT being a “nontaxpayer”. As a consequence, signing any standard IRS Form makes you a “taxpayer” and a “resident alien”. See:

   Who are “Taxpayers” and Who Needs a “Taxpayer Identification Number”?, Form #05.013
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. The perjury statement indicated in 28 U.S.C. §1746(2) is assumed and established, which means that you are creating a presumption that you maintain a domicile on federal territory.

Those who want to avoid committing perjury under penalty of perjury by correcting the IRS form to reflect the fact that they are not a “taxpayer” and are not within the “United States” face an even bigger hurdle. If they try to modify the perjury statement to conform with 28 U.S.C. §1746(1), frequently the IRS or government entity receiving the form will try to penalize them for modifying the form. The penalty is usually $500 for modifying the jurat. This leaves them with the unpleasant prospect of choosing the lesser of the following two evils:

1. Committing perjury under penalty of perjury by misrepresenting themselves as a resident of the federal zone and destroying their sovereignty immunity in the process pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1603(b).

2. Changing the jurat statement, being the object of a $500 penalty, and then risking having them reject the form.

How do we work around the above perjury statement at the end of most IRS Forms in order to avoid either becoming a “resident” of the federal “United States” or a presumed “taxpayer”? Below are a few examples of how to do this:

1. You can write a statement above the signature stating “signature not valid without the attached signed STATEMENT and all enclosures” and then on the attachment, redefine the ENTIRE perjury statement:

   “IRS frequently and illegally penalizes parties not subject to their jurisdiction such as ‘nontaxpayers’ who attempt to physically modify language on their forms. They may only lawfully administer penalties to public officers and not private persons, because the U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate private conduct is ‘repugnant to the constitution’. I, as a private person and a ‘nontaxpayer’ not subject to IRS penalties, am forced to create this attachment because I would be committing perjury if I signed the form as it is without making the perjury statement consistent with my circumstances as indicated in 28 U.S.C. §1746. Therefore, regardless of what the perjury statement says on your form, here is what I define the words in your perjury statement paragraph to mean:

   "Under penalties of perjury from without the ‘United States’ pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1746(1), I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct, and complete. I declare that I am a ‘nontaxpayer’ not subject to the Internal Revenue Code, not domiciled in the ‘United States’, and not participating in a ‘trade or business’ and that it is a Constitutional tort to enforce the I.R.C. against me. I also declare that any attempt to use the content of this form to enforce any provision of the I.R.C. against me shall render everything on this form as religious and political statements and beliefs rather than facts which are not admissible as evidence pursuant to Fed.Rul.Ev. 610.

   If you attempt to penalize me, you will be penalizing a person for refusing to commit perjury and will become an accessory to a conspiracy to commit perjury."

2. You can write a statement above the signature stating “signature not valid without the attached signed STATEMENT and all enclosures” and then attach the following form:

   Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. You can make your own form or tax return and use whatever you want on the form. They can only penalize persons who use THEIR forms. If you make your own form, you can penalize THEM for misusing YOUR forms or the information on those forms. This is the approach taken by the following form. Pay particular attention to section 1 of the form:

   Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.4.8 Federal Courts Refusing to recognize sovereignty of litigant
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

A nonresident is an entity with no domicile within the venue or forum. This means that they are:

   “Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them [non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws.” [Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

2. Not a “person” or “individual” under the civil law of the forum. See our article on domicile:

   http://sedm.org/Litigation/Lit/Petition/Tool/#01.002

3. Protected by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court. See section 5.6.13.5.5 later.

4. Protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97. The government as the moving party asserting a liability has the burden of showing that you expressly waived sovereign immunity by either:

   a. Mistakenly declaring yourself a “citizen” or “resident” pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3) who therefore has domicile (nationals) or a residence (aliens) within federal territory.
   b. Consensually conducting commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the sovereign pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605.

5. “foreign” and a “foreigner” in relation to the forum.

6. NOT a “foreign person” because not a “person”.

In order to compel federal courts to recognize all the requirements of the above, we have prepared the following, which you should attach to all your pleadings in federal court:

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

Even after the above is attached and even after sovereign immunity is properly invoked by a “nonresident alien” who is NOT an “individual” or “person”, even then some federal courts will further interfere with the sovereign immunity of people litigating before them by creating a “presumption” that the litigants are domiciliaries of the forum through the following means:

1. Refusing to recognize that:

   1.1. You, the litigant are a “nontaxpayer”.
   1.2. “Nontaxpayers” even exist. The result is that EVERYONE is “presumed” to be a “taxpayer”, which means they are PRESUMED guilty until proven innocent. This turns the foundation of American Jurisprudence upside down, which is the presumption of innocent until proven guilty.

   “The presumption of innocence, although not articulated in the Constitution, is a basic component of a fair trial under our system of criminal justice. Long ago this Court stated:

   The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law, axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our criminal law.”
   [Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895).]

   "In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker], and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence [a "nontaxpayer"] into guilt [a "taxpayer", by presumption or otherwise], or punish innocence as a crime, or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments." 3 Dall. 388,"

1.3. The Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421 does not apply to “nontaxpayers”. See section 5.8 of the following for details:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004

1.4. That the Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) does not apply to “nontaxpayers”. See section 5.9 of the Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid document above for details.

2. Refusing to require your government opponent to justify why the Minimum Contacts Doctrine invoked by you is satisfied and why the court therefore has jurisdiction to hear the civil case.

3. Refusing to require your government opponent to justify why the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97, invoked by you is satisfied and why the court therefore has jurisdiction to hear the civil case.

4. Citing irrelevant cases litigated by “citizens” or “residents” against you. All such caselaw amounts to little more than political propaganda which is IRRELEVANT to the circumstances of a nonresident, who never consented to be protected by the laws of the forum and who shouldn’t have and hopefully didn’t invoke them in his defense.

5. Calling attempts to identify yourself as other than a “person” or an “individual” to be “frivolous” without explaining why. This tactic is described in section 6.15 of the document below:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004

5.6.13.4.9 Compelled Use of Taxpayer Identification Numbers (TINs)

The use of a Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) in connection with any financial transaction creates a legal presumption that the party using it is a person with a domicile on federal territory. This is confirmed by 26 CFR §301.6109-1(g)(1)(i), in which “nonresident aliens” are not listed:

26 CFR §301.6109-1(g)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—

(1) General rule—

(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

The only legal requirement to use taxpayer identification numbers is found in the following regulation at 26 CFR §301.6109-1(b)(1):

26 CFR §301.6109-1(b)

(b) Requirement to furnish one's own number—

(1) U.S. persons.

Every U.S. person who makes under this title a return, statement, or other document must furnish its own taxpayer identifying number as required by the forms and the accompanying instructions.

The above regulation only imposes such a requirement upon a “U.S. person”. That “person” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) as an entity with a domicile on federal territory. Note that “citizens” and “residents” and federal corporations and all other entities listed below have in common a domicile in the “United States”, which is federal territory:
(30) United States person

The term "United States person" means -
(A) a [corporate] citizen or resident [alien] of the [federal] United States,
(B) a domestic partnership,
(C) a domestic corporation,
(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and
(E) any trust if -
(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and
(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

If you look on the following:

IRS Form SS-4 Application for an Employer Identification Number (EIN)

... the form allows you to fill it out in such a way that you are NOT an “employer” or a “taxpayer”, but if you don’t do so, then the implication is that you are in fact a “U.S. person”.

Both SSNs and TINs are made equivalent by the following authorities: 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(41), 26 U.S.C. §6109(d), and 26 CFR §301.7701-1. The following statute makes it a crime to compel use of Social Security Numbers, and by implication, Taxpayer Identification Numbers.

TITLE 42 - THE PUBLIC HEALTH AND WELFARE
CHAPTER 7 - SOCIAL SECURITY
SUBCHAPTER II - FEDERAL OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS, AND DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS
Sec. 408. Penalties
(a) In general
Whoever...

(8) discloses, uses, or compels the disclosure of the social security number of any person in violation of the laws of the United States; shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be fined under title 18 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both.

Consequently, the use of a government identifying number is presumed to be voluntary and not compelled, unless you, the person being compelled, state otherwise in correspondence to them and the people you do business with. Therefore, providing such a number in the context of any transaction constitutes consent and a voluntary “election” to be treated as a “U.S. person” and a person with a domicile on federal territory. If you started out as a nonresident alien, that election is authorized by 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h), but ONLY if are an alien and NOT a national or non-citizen national.

Those who start out as “nonresident alien” NONindividuals and who open a financial account at banks as human beings by default:

1. Are required to provide a Social Security Number (SSN) or Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) when opening the account.
2. Open all such accounts as statutory “U.S. persons” with a domicile on federal territory because they provided a government identifying number.

Banks in implementing the above policies, are acting as agents of the national government in a quasi-governmental capacity and also become the equivalent of federal employment recruiters. 31 CFR §202.2 confirms that all banks who participate in FDIC insurance are agents of the national government. 12 U.S.C. §90 also makes all national banks into agents of the U.S. Government. It would be more advantageous to open an international bank account to avoid this issue. In their capacity as agents of the national government, you can be sure that banks subject to federal regulation are going to want to recruit more “employee” and “public officers” engaged in the “trade or business” franchise.

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Even for those people smart enough to know about the IRS form W-8BEN and how to properly fill it out, most banks opening business accounts even in the case of businesses that are “nonresident alien NONindividuates” refuse to open such accounts without an Employer Identification Number (EIN) as a matter of policy and not law.

1. If you ask them what law authorizes such a policy, typically they:
   1.1. Can’t produce the law and are operating on policy rather than law.
   1.2. May often say that the USA Patriot Act “requires it”, but this act doesn’t apply outside of federal territory and there is no such provision contained within it anyway. They are lying.
2. If you attempt to offer them forms that correctly describe your status as a “foreigner”, a “nonresident alien NONindividual”, but not a “foreign person” who therefore has no requirement to supply a number, they may just say that their policy is not to accept such forms and to refuse you an account. Therefore, you have to commit perjury to even get an account with them.
3. If they won’t accept your forms correctly describing your status and you modify their forms to correctly reflect your status, they may also tell you that they have a policy not to open an account for you and they may even refuse to explain why.

In practical terms than, the law doesn’t require businesses who properly identify themselves as “nonresident alien NONindividuals not engaged in a trade or business” to have or use identifying numbers but most are compelled by adhesion contracts of banking monopolies into having one anyway. As a matter of fact, 26 CFR §306.10, Footnote 2, as well as 31 CFR §103.34(a)(3)(x) both expressly exclude “nonresident aliens” who are not engaged in the “trade or business”/“public office” franchise from the requirement to furnish identifying numbers. In that sense, most banks are acting as the equivalent of federal employment recruiters and compelling their customers to commit perjury on their applications by stating indirectly that they are “resident aliens” with a domicile on federal territory who are lawfully engaged in a public office within the U.S. government. This is a huge scam that is the main source of jurisdiction of the IRS over otherwise private companies.

5.6.13.5 Advantages of Being a Nonresident Alien

Being a nonresident alien not engaged in any commercial activity with the government under 26 CFR §1.871-1(b)(1)(i) has distinct advantages over that of being a “U.S. person” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). It means that:

1. You are not subject to federal jurisdiction and are “nonresident” with respect to the forum or court.
2. May not be prosecuted for any tax crime. For instance, 26 CFR §1.6012-1 establishes who is liable to “file” a tax return and nonresident aliens are not listed there!
4. You have the option to pursue cases less than the $75,000 minimum amount in controversy under 28 U.S.C. §1332 if you waive your right to a jury trial.

The following subsections will describe all the nuances of these advantages so that they can be properly invoked to your advantage.
5.6.13.5.1 Nonresident aliens not engaged in a “trade or business” are not required to have an SSN or TIN

Nonresident aliens not engaged in a “trade or business” are not required to have or to provide any kind of federal identifying number on tax forms or to open financial accounts. These persons are defined in 26 CFR §1.871-1(b)(1)(i). The IRS knows this, which is why it positively refuses to provide any IRS Form that allows you to identify yourself as a nonresident alien not engaged in a “trade or business”. They obviously don’t want to hand the slaves the key to their chains of “privilege” in order to lawfully avoid the federal numbering and taxing requirement. Instead, they exploit the confusion created by the absence of such a field on their forms to create false presumptions that you instead are engaged in a “trade or business”, even when you are not, in order to manufacture more “taxpayer” slaves out of innocent “nontaxpayers”. For instance, IRS Form W-8BEN does not provide a check box allowing you to designate WHICH of the three types of nonresident aliens that you are as defined in 26 CFR §1.871-1(b). For more details on this SCAM, see the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

A “trade or business” is then defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”, which means a person who has contracts or employment with the federal government and is therefore partaking of federal “privileges” and/or benefits. Americans domiciled in states of the Union are not lawfully allowed to engage in a “trade or business” because 4 U.S.C. §72 says that all “public offices” may only lawfully be exercised in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere. For more details on this subject, see:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The only provision within the I.R.C. or Treasury Regulations that imposes a duty to provide an identifying number on federal forms relates to “U.S. persons”.

26 CFR § 301.6109-1(b)

(b) Requirement to furnish one’s own number—

(1) U.S. persons.

Every U.S. person who makes under this title a return, statement, or other document must furnish its own taxpayer identifying number as required by the forms and the accompanying instructions.

Notice the use of the word “its” instead of the word “his or her” in the above regulation. They are talking about a federal public office or instrumentality, which are creations of Congress. They are not talking about a human being, which is God’s creation. Congress can only lawfully tax what it creates, and it didn’t create humans. The above regulation also appears in 26 CFR Part 301, which means that it is published under the authority of 5 U.S.C. §301 instead of 26 U.S.C. §7805. Therefore, it pertains ONLY to IRS employees and not to the general public. If it pertained to the general public and to the income tax imposed in I.R.C. Section 1, it would be published under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §7805 and would appear under Part 1 of 26 CFR.

Nonresident aliens are NOT “U.S. persons” but rather “foreign persons”, and therefore they are NOT required to provide identifying numbers on any tax form. These people, in fact, are protected from the requirement to use Social Security Numbers by 42 U.S.C. §408(a)(8):
(8) discloses, uses, or compels the disclosure of the social security number of any person in violation of the laws of the United States; shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be fined under title 18 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both.

“U.S. person”, in turn, is then defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) as follows.

The term “United States person” means -

(A) a [corporate] citizen or resident [alien] of the United States,
(B) a domestic partnership,
(C) a domestic corporation,
(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and
(E) any trust (if -
(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and
(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

The “U.S. person” mentioned above is a public office within the government domiciled on federal territory and is NOT a human being or a “citizen” within the meaning of the Constitution, as is proven below:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Similarly, pursuant to 20 CFR §422.104, Social Security Numbers may only lawfully be issued to “U.S. persons”, who are persons domiciled on federal territory. “U.S. persons” include statutory “U.S. citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 as well as “residents” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) but exclude “citizens” and “residents” within the meaning of the Constitution:

Therefore, it is ILLEGAL for a nonresident alien to be issued a Social Security Number, because they are not indicated in the above regulation. The above is also confirmed by the Social Security Administration, Program Operations Manual System (POMS):

https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/partlist!OpenView

Citizenship requirements for issuing Social Security Numbers are found in section GN003, and the POMS system conveniently REMOVES and OMITS the citizenship requirements found in GN00303 from the table of contents so you can’t find them, but they are there if you search for them using the search function. They do this in order to HIDE the requirements from you. You can find this section at:

https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/lnx/02003030001?opendocument

The search function reveals that Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section GN 00303.700 establishes that residency on federal territory is a requirement to be eligible for SS benefits or the issuance of an SS Card or SSN:

GN 00303.700 U.S. Residency

CITATION

Social Security Act, Section 228, Section 1614, Section 1818, Section 1836; Regulations No. 16 - Sec. 416.1603; Immigration and Nationality Act, Sec. 101(a)(33)(36) and 101(a)(38)

A. POLICY

An individual must be a U.S. resident to be eligible for the following benefits:

- Special Age 72;
- Hospital Insurance (HI) and/or Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI) for uninsured individuals;
- SSI, except for certain children residing abroad with a parent in the U.S. Armed Forces (see GN 00303.740B) and effective 01/01/95, certain students who are temporarily residing abroad (see SI 00501.411 - SI 00501.413).

If you write the Social Security Administration about who they are authorized to issues SSN’s to, they will FLAT OUT LIE by telling you that ANYONE can get a number, in direct violation of 20 CFR §422.104(a) above. Therefore, you should not trust ANYTHING they say unless they back it up with a statute AND an implementing regulation and a court cite proving their point. We have never seen any correspondence from the government that offered any legitimate legal authority behind the proposition that the Social Security Administration can lawfully issue a Social Security Number to a nonresident alien because there isn’t any such authority.

In addition, the Treasury Regulations say that nonresident aliens not engaged in a “trade or business” are NOT required to have an identifying number. They are the ONLY entities, in fact, who are expressly exempted from the requirement for using governing identifying numbers:

Title 31: Money and Finance: Treasury
PART 306—GENERAL REGULATIONS GOVERNING U.S. SECURITIES Subpart B—Registration
306.10 General

The registration used must express the actual ownership of a security and may not include any restriction on the authority of the owner to dispose of it in any manner, except as otherwise specifically provided in these regulations. The Treasury Department reserves the right to treat the registration as conclusive of ownership. Requests for registration should be clear, accurate, and complete, conform with one of the forms set forth in this subpart, and include appropriate taxpayer identifying numbers. The registration of all bonds owned by the same person, organization, or fiduciary should be uniform with respect to the name of the owner and, in the case of a fiduciary, the description of the fiduciary capacity. Individual owners should be designated by the names by which they are ordinarily known or under which they do business, preferably including at least one full given name. The name of an individual may be preceded by any applicable title, as, for example, Mrs., Miss, Ms., Dr., or Rev., or followed by a designation such as M.D., D.D., Sr., or Jr. Any other similar suffix should be included when ordinarily used or when necessary to distinguish the owner from a member of his family. A married woman's own given name, not that of her husband, must be used, for example, Mrs. Mary A. Jones, not Mrs. Frank B. Jones. The address should include, where appropriate, the number and street, route, or any other local feature and the Zip Code.

Taxpayer identifying numbers are not required for foreign governments, nonresident aliens not engaged in trade or business within the United States, international organizations and foreign corporations not engaged in trade or business and not... having an office or place of business or a financial or paying agent within the United States, and other persons or organizations as may be exempted from furnishing such numbers under regulations of the Internal Revenue Service.

The above is again repeated on the IRS Form 1042-S Instructions, which say that nonresident aliens are only required to provide an identifying number if they are engaged in a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”.

Box 14, Recipient’s U.S. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN)

You must obtain and enter a U.S. taxpayer identification number (TIN) for:

- Any recipient whose income is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States.

[IRS Form 1042-S Instructions, p. 14]

Any way you look at it then, unless you are contractually bound to the U.S. government as a “public officer” in some form, and thereby have availed yourself of “privileges” offered by the U.S. Government, then you are not required to either have or to use either a Social Security Number or a Taxpayer Identification Number, and these numbers cannot lawfully even be issued to you.

For further details on the content of this section, see:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

5.6.13.5.2 Federal government cannot lawfully prosecute you for tax crimes

The Internal Revenue Code is primarily civil law that applies only to those with a legal domicile on federal territory. All of the government’s authority to impose income taxes, in fact, originates from the coincidence of one’s choice of legal domicile and the taxable activities they engage in:

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the sites of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."

[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

A person with a legal domicile on federal territory called the “United States” is called a “U.S. person” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30), an “inhabitant”, a “citizen”, or a “resident”. All civil jurisdiction, in fact, originates from one’s voluntary choice of legal domicile. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Nonresident persons, such as nonresident aliens, who are not engaged in a “trade or business” cannot lawfully be civilly prosecuted under the I.R.C. because:

2. They are not a “stateless person” pursuant to United States Constitution, Article 2, Section 2, because they are within one of the “States” mentioned in the Constitution, which are not the same as the federal “States” described in 28 U.S.C. §1332(d).
3. They do not reside in any United States judicial district, which is limited to federal territory within the exterior limits of the district. Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 4(k), service of process cannot be effected within the district and therefore the action cannot be commenced.

The above requirement is confirmed by the regulation that identifies WHO is liable to file tax returns. Here are the liable parties, and they include only “individuals”, all of whom have identifying numbers. Nonresident aliens are mentioned, but they are “nonresident alien individuals” described in 26 CFR §1.871-1(b), which is a person with a government identifying number. If you don’t have or don’t qualify to have a government identifying number or have rescinded the number, then you can’t lawfully be an “individual” who has a liability to file.
(iii) An alien bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year.

(b) Return of nonresident alien individual.

(1) Requirement of return.

(i) In general.

Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, every nonresident alien individual (other than one treated as a resident under section 6013 (g) or (h)) who is engaged in trade or business in the United States at any time during the taxable year or who has income which is subject to taxation under Subtitle A of the Code shall make a return on Form 1040NR. For this purpose it is immaterial that the gross income for the taxable year is less than the minimum amount specified in section 6012(a) for making a return. Thus, a nonresident alien individual who is engaged in a trade or business in the United States at any time during the taxable year is required to file a return on Form 1040 NR even though

(a) he has no income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States,

(b) he has no income from sources within the United States, or

(c) his income is exempt from income tax by reason of an income tax convention or any section of the Code.

However, if the nonresident alien individual has no gross income for the taxable year, he is not required to complete the return schedules but must attach a statement to the return indicating the nature of any exclusions claimed and the amount of such exclusions to the extent such amounts are readily determinable.

(ii) Treaty income.

If the gross income of a nonresident alien individual includes treaty income, as defined in paragraph (b)(1) of Sec. 1.871-12, a statement shall be attached to the return on Form 1040NR showing with respect to that income:

(a) The amounts of tax withheld,

(b) The names and post office addresses of withholding agents, and

(c) Such other information as may be required by the return form, or by the instructions issued with respect to the form, to show the taxpayer's entitlement to the reduced rate of tax under the tax convention.

(2) Exceptions.

(i) Return not required when tax is fully paid at source.

A nonresident alien individual (other than one treated as a resident under section 6013 (g) or (h)) who at no time during the taxable year is engaged in a trade or business in the United States is not required to make a return for the taxable year if his tax liability for the taxable year is fully satisfied by the withholding of tax at source under Chapter 3 of the Code. This subdivision does not apply to a nonresident alien individual who has income for the taxable year which is treated under section 871 (c) or (d) and Sec. 1.871-9 (relating to students or trainees) or Sec. 1.871-10 (relating to real property income) as income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual, or to a nonresident alien individual making a claim under Sec. 301.6402-3 of this chapter (Procedure and Administration Regulations) for the refund of an overpayment of tax for the taxable year. In addition, this subdivision does not apply to a nonresident alien individual who has income for the taxable year that is treated under section 871(b)(1) as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States by reason of the operation of section 897. For purposes of this subdivision, some of the items of income from sources within the United States upon which the tax liability will not have been fully satisfied by the withholding of tax at source under Chapter 3 of the Code are:

(a) Interest upon so-called tax-free covenant bonds upon which, in accordance with section 1451 and Sec. 1.1451-1, a tax of only 2 percent is required to be withheld at the source,

(b) In the case of bonds or other evidences of indebtedness issued after September 28, 1965, amounts described in section 871(a)(1)(C),
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

(c) Capital gains described in section 871(a)(2) and paragraph (d) of Sec. 1.871-7, and

(d) Accrued interest received in connection with the sale of bonds between interest dates, which, in accordance with paragraph (h) of Sec. 1.1441-4, is not subject to withholding of tax at the source.

(ii) Return of individual for taxable year of change of U.S. citizenship or residence.

(a) If an alien individual becomes a citizen or resident of the United States during the taxable year and is a citizen or resident of the United States on the last day of such year, he must make a return on Form 1040 for the taxable year. However, a separate schedule is required to be attached to this return to show the income tax computation for the part of the taxable year during which the alien was neither a citizen nor resident of the United States, unless an election under section 6013(g) or (h) is in effect for the alien. A Form 1040NR, clearly marked 'Statement' across the top, may be used as such a separate schedule.

(b) If an individual abandons his U.S. citizenship or residence during the taxable year and is not a citizen or resident of the United States on the last day of such year, he must make a return on Form 1040NR for the taxable year, even if an election under section 6013(g) was in effect for the taxable year preceding the year of abandonment. However, a separate schedule is required to be attached to this return to show the income tax computation for the part of the taxable year during which the individual was a citizen or resident of the United States. A Form 1040, clearly marked 'Statement' across the top, may be used as such a separate schedule.

(c) A return is required under this subdivision (ii) only if the individual is otherwise required to make a return for the taxable year.

(iii) Beneficiaries of estates or trusts.

A nonresident alien individual who is a beneficiary of an estate or trust which is engaged in trade or business in the United States is not required to make a return for the taxable year merely because he is deemed to be engaged in trade or business within the United States under section 875(2). However, such nonresident alien beneficiary will be required to make a return if he otherwise satisfies the conditions of subparagraph (1)(i) of this paragraph for making a return.

(iv) Certain alien residents of Puerto Rico.

This paragraph does not apply to a nonresident alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the taxable year. See section 876 and paragraph (a)(1)(iii) of this section.

(3) Representative or agent for nonresident alien individual.

(i) Cases where power of attorney is not required.

The responsible representative or agent within the United States of a nonresident alien individual shall make on behalf of his nonresident alien principal a return of, and shall pay the tax on, all income coming within his control as representative or agent which is subject to the income tax under Subtitle A of the Code. The agency appointment will determine how completely the agent is substituted for the principal for tax purposes. Any person who collects interest or dividends on deposited securities of a nonresident alien individual, executes ownership certificates in connection therewith, or sells such securities under special instructions shall not be deemed merely by reason of such acts to be the responsible representative or agent of the nonresident alien individual. If the responsible representative or agent does not have a specific power of attorney from the nonresident alien individual to file a return in his behalf, the return shall be accompanied by a statement to the effect that the representative or agent does not possess specific power of attorney to file a return for such individual but that the return is being filed in accordance with the provisions of this subdivision.

(ii) Cases where power of attorney is required.

Whenever a return of income of a nonresident alien individual is made by an agent acting under a duly authorized power of attorney for that purpose, the return shall be accompanied by the power of attorney in proper form, or a copy thereof, specifically authorizing him to represent his principal in making, executing, and filing the income tax return. Form 2848 may be used for this purpose. The agent, as well as the taxpayer, may incur liability for the penalties provided for erroneous, false, or fraudulent returns. For the requirements regarding signing of returns, see Sec. 1.6601-1. The rules of paragraph (e) of Sec. 601.504 of this chapter (Statement of Procedural Rules) shall apply under this subparagraph in determining whether a copy of a power of attorney must be certified.

(iii) Limitation.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

A return of income shall be required under this subparagraph only if the nonresident alien individual is otherwise required to make a return in accordance with this paragraph.

[SOURCE: SEDM Exhibit #05.041; http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm]

Notice in the above regulation that:

1. The above regulation only deals with various types of individuals.
2. You can be a “nonresident alien” without also being an “individual”, which is the status that our Members must claim. That person has NO liability because he/she is not mentioned anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code or the Treasury Regulations.
3. The standard IRS Form W-8BEN has an block to check which causes you to declare you are an “individual”.
4. Our AMENDED IRS Form W-8BEN has an additional block to check called “Union State Citizen” so that you don’t declare yourself to be an “individual”. See: About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. The nonresident alien individual only becomes liable to file a return if he/she meets one of the following:
   5.1. Engaged in the “trade or business” franchise.
   5.2. Had earnings described in 26 U.S.C. §871(c): Participants in certain exchange or training programs. See also 26 CFR §1.871-9.
   5.3. Had earnings described in 26 U.S.C. §871(d): Election to treat real property income as income connected with United States (District of Columbia) business.

The instructions for IRS Form 1040 also echo the above requirement and deliberately omit “nonresident aliens”. The implications is that you can’t be a “nonresident” by filing the form, which means that it must be a form for “residents” (aliens) ONLY:

Filing Requirements

These rules apply to all U.S. citizens, regardless of where they live, and resident aliens.
[IRS 1040 Booklet, Year 2001, p. 15;

If you would like to know more about the legal requirement to file income tax returns, see the following informative free pamphlet:

Legal Requirement to File Federal Income Tax Returns. Form #05.009
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Who is the “individual” they are talking about above? It is a government “employee”, public officer, agent, or contractor, because this is the same “individual” described in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) who:

1. Is identified as a “citizen” or “resident” with a domicile on federal territory called the “United States”.
2. Is a government employee because this section is in Title 5 of the U.S. code and regulates the conduct of only employees and agents of the government. This statute is also the authority used to protect the records of these “individuals” under the authority of the Privacy Act.

Since nonresident aliens who are NOT “individuals”, meaning government officers and agents and benefit recipients, are not listed as being liable to file in either the regulations or the IRS Form 1040 Instruction Booklet, they are purposefully excluded from the requirement, according to the rules of statutory construction:

“When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term’s ordinary meaning." Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 ("As a rule, a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated"); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary."
“Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 370 Or. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

Consequently, a nonresident alien who is not an “individual” is civilly immune from the jurisdiction of the federal courts. They also cannot be compelled to appear as a witness in federal court. See:

Internal Revenue Manual
9.13.1.5 (09-17-2002)
Witnesses In Foreign Countries

1. Nonresident aliens physically present in a foreign country cannot be compelled to appear as witnesses in a United States District Court since they are beyond jurisdiction of United States officials. Since the Constitution requires confrontation of adverse witnesses in criminal prosecutions, the testimony of such aliens may not be admissible until the witness appears at trial. However, certain testimony for the admissibility of documents may be obtained under 18 USC §3491 et seq. without a "personnel" appearance in the United States. Additionally, 28 USC §1783 et seq. provides limited powers to induce the appearance of United States citizens physically present in a foreign country.

18 U.S.C. §4001 and Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 54(c) before December 2002 also establish that the government enjoys no criminal jurisdiction against nonresident aliens either:

TITILE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

(a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of Congress.

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 54(c), prior to Dec. 2002

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

In conclusion, if you are an average American who doesn’t participate in public office in the government and is not an “alien”, then you can’t be the “individual” mentioned above. Furthermore, you can avoid criminal liability under the I.R.C. as a “nonresident alien” using the following strategy:

1. Do NOT claim to be an “individual” by:
   1.1. Filing IRS Form 1040. The form says “U.S. INDIVIDUAL Income Tax Return” in the upper left corner.
   1.2. Asking for an “INDIVIDUAL Taxpayer Identification Number” on IRS Form W-7 or W-9.
   1.3. Filling out any form in which you declare yourself to be an “individual”.
   All of the above implicitly make you a federal entity or instrumentality against whom the government has legislative power.

2. Claim to be an “individual” and don’t engage in any of the following activities:
   2.1. Engaged in the “trade or business” franchise pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).
   2.2. Had earnings described in 26 U.S.C. §871(e): Participants in certain exchange or training programs. See also 26 CFR §1.871-9.
   2.3. Had earnings described in 26 U.S.C. §871(d): Election to treat real property income as income connected with United States (District of Columbia) business.

5.6.13.5.3 IRS cannot file a lien against you
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The Federal Tax Lien Act requires that all federal tax liens must be filed in the county of the last known domicile of the “taxpayer”. See:

2. Senate Report 89-1708
3. Internal Revenue Manual, Section 5.17.2.3.2, which says:

   Internal Revenue Manual
   5.17.2.3.2 (10-31-2000)
   Place of Filing

   The filing of the notice of federal tax lien is governed by both federal and state law. It is important to determine the place of the filing of the NFTL in order to preserve the Service’s lien status with respect to certain types of property and with respect to certain types of taxpayers.

   Generally speaking, different filing rules apply for real property and personal property. IRC 6323(f) provides that states may designate the place for filing the NFTL. As against real property, the NFTL is filed in the one office designated by the State where the property is physically located. As against personal property, the situs of both tangible or intangible property is the residence of the taxpayer at the time the notice of lien is filed. A notice of federal tax lien is therefore to be filed in the one office designated by the State where the taxpayer resides at the time the notice of lien is filed. Most states require the NFTL be filed where other encumbrances on property are filed, e.g., in the real and/or personal property records in the office of the county recorder or the clerk of the county where the real property is located or where the taxpayer resides.

   The domicile, in turn, is described on IRS forms as “permanent address”. See IRS Form W-8BEN, block 4, for instance. See:

   About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   A person who is a “nonresident alien” and who provides to the IRS an address in a foreign country on an IRS Form 8822 Change of Address form has a distinct advantage over a “U.S. person”, in that the IRS cannot lawfully file the tax lien in the foreign country. For instance, if the IRS is provided a foreign address in Mexico or Canada on IRS Form 8822, these places do not accept, do not file, and will not enforce foreign liens of any kind against nonresident parties.

5.6.13.5.4 Minimum amount in controversy is eliminated under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)

Nonresident aliens file cases in federal court using Constitutional diversity of citizenship, as found in Article III of the Constitution. They do NOT file using statutory diversity found in 28 U.S.C. §1332 because the definition of “State found in 28 U.S.C. §1332(d) does not include states of the Union. Under statutory but not constitutional diversity of citizenship, the minimum amount in controversy must exceed the sum of $75,000. However:

1. Those filing with constitutional but not statutory diversity of citizenship are not subject to this minimum because they are not subject to federal jurisdiction on this subject.
2. Nonresident aliens who are an instrumentality of a “foreign state” are exempt from this minimum limit of $75,000 in the case of nonjury trials where they do not enjoy immunity under 28 U.S.C. §§1605-1607:

   TITLE 28 > PART W > CHAPTER 85 > § 1330
   § 1330. Actions against foreign states

   (a) The district courts shall have original jurisdiction without regard to amount in controversy of any nonjury civil action against a foreign state as defined in section 1603, (a) of this title as to any claim for relief in personam with respect to which the foreign state is not entitled to immunity either under sections 1605–1607 of this title or under any applicable international agreement.

   We’ll now spend the remainder of this section addressing item 2 above. A state of the Union is a “foreign state” with respect to federal jurisdiction. This is confirmed by the legal encyclopedia:
A person who has a domicile in a state of the Union and who participates as a citizen in the affairs of the state as a jurist or a voter is:

1. An instrumentality of a foreign state.

"It is again to antagonize Chief Justice Marshall, when he said: The government of the Union, then (whatever may be the influence of this fact on the case), is emphatically and truly a government of the people. In form and in substance it emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them, and are to be exercised directly on them and for their benefit. This government is acknowledged by all to be one of enumerated powers." 4 Wheat. 404, 4 L.Ed. 601."

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

"The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

Alternatively, a person who has formed his own “state”, such as a religious or social group that has its own territory, domicile, and court system, is also eligible under this requirement to be classified as a “foreign state”. The only problem with the above requirement is that you must forfeit sovereign immunity in order to take advantage of this benefit. In most cases, the reason you would go into a federal court to begin with is to defend your sovereign immunity, and you can’t protect it if you have to surrender it in order to litigate to defend it in a federal court. Another way of saying this is that the federal government will not respect your sovereignty as a “nonresident alien” by allowing you to defend it in a federal court.

5.6.13.5.5 Protected from federal jurisdiction by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine

A nonresident alien not engaged in a “trade or business”, as defined under 26 CFR §1.871-1(b)(1)(i) is exempt from the jurisdiction of federal courts for federal tax purposes. When a nonresident alien engages in a “trade or business”, which is a public office, he loses that exemption from federal jurisdiction and is treated effectively as a “resident”:

26 CFR §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership.
partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

[Amended by T.D. 8813, Federal Register: February 2, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 21), Page 4967-4975]

This surrender of sovereign immunity by engaging in privileged activities with the government, a “public office” in this case, is documented in the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2).

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

If you wish to invoke the protection of the minimum contacts doctrine, you cannot be a statutory “citizen of the United States”, as indicated by 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3). The “citizen of the United States” they are talking about is a statutory citizen of the United States under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and excludes a constitutional “citizen of the United States” mentioned in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment. The reason is because this is a statute and all statutes presume the term “United States” means the federal zone and exclude states of the Union:

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”

[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

You can use the above knowledge as a nonresident alien in your favor in any court to invoke the protection of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act and get your case dismissed. You would do this be demanding evidence from the government that you are engaged in commerce within the federal zone and by presenting as evidence a rebuttal of their evidence. This commerce would include Social Security Benefits or “trade or business” activity:

1. The techniques for rebutting false “trade or business” reports are found in the link below, in section 4.2:

2. The technique for quitting social security is found below as form #6.2:

   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Once all the evidence connecting you to a “trade or business” and all other “commercial activity” has been rebutted, then the government now has to meet all the criteria required by the minimum contacts doctrine. This criteria is described by the Ninth Circuit Appeals Court below:

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

(1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;

(2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and

(3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the “purposeful availment” prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

If the government doesn’t demonstrate “purposeful availment” by the defendant of forum related commerce that would produce a waiver of sovereign immunity, then they must dismiss the case against you. Furthermore, if they don’t honor the limitations imposed by the minimum contacts doctrine, then they have violated due process of law:

“A court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice."" Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)). Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim.”

A judgment rendered in violation of due process of law is a void judgment that you need not obey:

“A judgment rendered in violation of due process is void in the rendering State and is not entitled to full faith and credit elsewhere.”

If you want to avail yourself of the protections of the minimum contacts doctrine as a nonresident alien, then it is therefore important to:

1. Declare yourself as a “nonresident alien” or “nonresident” litigant in your affidavit of material facts submitted to the court.
2. Not engage in any commercial activity with the federal government that would cause a surrender of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) and to point this out to the court in your pleadings.
3. Not engage in a “trade or business”, which is a type of privileged activity related to a public office in the United States government. Instead, we must promptly rebut all information returns which might accomplish this using the information available in section 4.2 below:

4. To properly declare your status before the court as a nonresident alien not engaged in a trade or business who is not a statutory “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. This can be accomplished by submitting the Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status form below:

5. Change all government forms and documentation to ensure that it says you are not a statutory “citizen of the United States” under 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3). See:

Nonresident alien NON-individuals have no requirement of file tax returns

The requirement to file tax returns for nonresident aliens is found in 26 CFR §1.6012-1(b)(1)(i) below:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, every nonresident alien individual (other than one treated as a resident under section 6013 (g) or (h)) who is engaged in trade or business in the United States at any time during the taxable year or who has income which is subject to taxation under subtitle A of the Code shall make a return on Form 1040NR. For this purpose it is immaterial that the gross income for the taxable year is less than the minimum amount specified in section 6012(a) for making a return. Thus, a nonresident alien individual who is engaged in a trade or business in the United States at any time during the taxable year is required to file a return on Form 1040 NR even though (a) he has no income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, (b) he has no income from sources within the United States, or (c) his income is exempt from income tax by reason of an income tax convention or any section of the Code. However, if the nonresident alien individual has no gross income for the taxable year, he is not required to complete the return schedules but must attach a statement to the return indicating the nature of any exclusions claimed and the amount of such exclusions to the extent such amounts are readily determinable.

The only parties made liable are “nonresident alien individuals”. Those who are “nonresident aliens” but NOT “individuals” do not have a requirement. Recall from section 5.6.13.1 earlier that a “nonresident alien individual” is:

1. An alien individual AND.
2. Who meets one of the following:
   2.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-(a)(1).
   2.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 CFR §301.7701(b)-(1)(d).

Therefore, a “non-citizen national” human being born anywhere in America who has a domicile in a state of the Union:

1. Is a “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) because neither a statutory “citizen” nor “resident”.
2. Is a “nonresident alien NON-individual”.
3. Is NOT a “nonresident alien individual” because not an “alien”.
4. Has no block he or she can check in Block 3 of the IRS Form W-8BEN, because the only option that approximates a human being is “individual” and you can’t be an individual without being an alien. See: About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
5. Has no requirement to file an income tax return pursuant to the above or any other provision of the Internal Revenue Code.
6. Does not become an “individual” until they make an election under an income tax treaty as indicated above and interface to the IRS through the treaty as an “alien”. They are an alien in relation to the foreign country they are in and therefore an “alien” through the tax treaty under 26 U.S.C. §911.
7. As long as they avoid accepting tax treaty benefits, they can retain their status as a “nonresident alien NON-individual” who is a nontaxpayer with no requirement to file a tax return.

5.6.13.6 Tax Withholding and Reporting on Nonresident aliens

The following subsections deal with withholding or Nonresident Aliens, abbreviated NRAs. For further details, see the following additional resources:

5.6.13.6.1 General constraints upon all withholding and reporting

This section covers some general constraints upon withholding useful in educating private employers of their obligations:

1. The Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A and C only applies to federal government instrumentalities, agents, contractors, and benefit recipients. This is exhaustively described in the pamphlet below:

   Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. The I.R.C. Subtitle C, Employment Taxes, only addresses the conduct of “public employers” within the United States government. It cannot and does not regulate the conduct of private employers, and especially not those in states of the Union.

   IRM 5.14.10.2 (09-30-2004)
   Payroll Deduction Agreements

   2. Private employers, states, and political subdivisions are not required to enter into payroll deduction agreements. Taxpayers should determine whether their employers will accept and process executed agreements before agreements are submitted for approval or finalized.

   "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property [of PRIVATE citizens], as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state[PUBLIC] action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."

   [City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

If you want to prove this for yourself, rebut the questions at the end of the following, which we encourage you to take to your next IRS audit:

   IRS Due Process Meeting Handout, Form #03.008
   http://sedm.org/Forms/03-Discovery/IRSDueProcMtgHandout.pdf

3. Withholding and reporting only applies to earnings connected to a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office” in the United States government. See:

   The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. All IRS information returns, including IRS Forms W-2, 1042, 1098, 1099, and K-1 can ONLY lawfully be used to report earnings connected with a public office in the United States government pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041. They may NOT be used to report PRIVATE earnings. If they are completed against PRIVATE persons who are NOT engaged in a public office or the “trade or business” franchise, the filer of these false reports then assumes the following legal liabilities:

   4.1. They are civilly liable for damages under 26 U.S.C. §7434 for all the taxes that are illegally withheld or collected plus attorneys fees.

   4.2. They are criminally liable for false or fraudulent reports under 26 U.S.C. §7206 and 7207 for up to ten years in jail.

5. A nonresident alien not engaged in a “trade or business” as defined in 26 CFR §1.871-1(b)(1)(i) who does not work for the U.S. government and receives no payments from the U.S. government under 26 U.S.C. §871 can have no tax liability and need not withhold. This is confirmed by:

   5.1. 26 CFR §1.872-2(f)
   5.2. 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(6)-1(b)
   5.4. 26 U.S.C. §83401(a)(6)
   5.5. 26 U.S.C. §8402(b)
   5.6. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31)

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t LIABLE to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Nonresident alien tax withholding is described in IRS Publication 515, entitled Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Corporations, available at:

The IRS website contains propaganda intended to deceive private employers in the states of the Union into withholding earnings of nonresident aliens who have “income from sources within the United States” at:

http://www.irs.gov/businesses/small/international/article/0,,id=104997,00.html

This propaganda advises “withholding agents” to withhold 30% of the payments made to nonresident aliens from “sources within the United States” and to file an IRS Form 1042 documenting the amount of earnings and withholding. The information provided is deceptive and constructively fraudulent, because:

1. The term “U.S.” is deliberately not defined in the article and in fact is NOWHERE defined on the IRS website! It is defined ONLY as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and nowhere are the states mentioned in the Constitution expressly included in the definition. Therefore, what is not expressly included is excluded under the rules of statutory construction

   “Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”

   This is the only logical conclusion one can reach after reading the rulings of the Supreme Court on the issue of federal jurisdiction within states of the Union such as the following:

   “It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 231, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.
   [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

   "The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadily adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."
   [Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

2. There are no “employers” as legally defined outside the “United States” (defined as the District of Columbia). This is confirmed by the regulation below:

   Title 26: Internal Revenue
   PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
   Subpart B—Federal Insurance Contributions Act (Chapter 21, Internal Revenue Code of 1954)
   General Provisions
   §31.3121(b)-3 Employment; services performed after 1954.

   (a) In general. Whether services performed after 1954 constitute employment is determined in accordance with the provisions of section 3121(b).

   (b) Services performed within the United States [District of Columbia]. Services performed after 1954 within the United States (see §31.3121(e)–1) by an employee for his employer, unless specifically excepted by section 3121(b), constitute employment. With respect to services performed within the United States, the place where the contract of service is entered into is immaterial. The citizenship or residence of the employee or of the employer also is immaterial except to the extent provided in any specific exception from employment. Thus, the employee and the employer may be citizens and residents of a foreign country and the contract of service may be entered into in a foreign country, and yet, if the employee under such contract performs services within the United States, there may be to that extent employment.
"(c) Services performed outside the United States—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraphs (c)(2) and (3) of this section, services performed outside the United States (see §31.3121(e)–1) do not constitute employment."

Note from the above that services performed outside the District of Columbia do not constitute “employment”. This is also consistent with:

2.1. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i), which says that “nonresident aliens” not engaged in a “trade or business” [public office in the U.S. government], even if they work in the “United States”, do not earn taxable income. You will note that 4 U.S.C. §72 says that all public offices shall be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere.

2.2. 26 U.S.C. §3401(a)(6) says that services of a nonresident alien individual (a person domiciled in a state of the Union) do not constitute “wages” that can be included on a W-2 form.

2.3. 26 CFR §1.872-2(f) says that earnings from outside the “United States” (District of Columbia) does not constitute “gross income”.

3. The Internal Revenue Code is NOT positive law, but private law and religion which obligates no one in a state of the Union to do anything who doesn’t first volunteer to be subject to its provisions by signing a contract called a W-4 or an SS-5. See our memorandum of law on this subject:

   Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Even if the Internal Revenue Code was positive law or public law, private employers in states of the Union are not subject to federal jurisdiction and applying for an Employer Identification Number doesn’t make them subject either.

   IRM 5.14.10.2 (09-30-2004)
   Payroll Deduction Agreements

   2. Private employers, states, and political subdivisions are not required to enter into payroll deduction agreements. Taxpayers should determine whether their employers will accept and process executed agreements before agreements are submitted for approval or finalized.

5. Private employers exclusively within states of the Union are NOT the subject of the article, because they do not qualify as “withholding agents” as was pointed out in:

   Federal Tax Withholding, Form #04.102, Section 1
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

6. Only “public officers” can act as federal “employers” in the I.R.C., who are all instrumentalities of the federal government. The government can only lawfully impose “duties” upon “public employers”, not “private employers” because doing otherwise would constitute involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. 4 U.S.C. §72 says all “public offices” shall be conducted within the District of Columbia and NOT elsewhere except as expressly provided by law. Well, Congress has never extended the “public offices” that are the subject of the tax upon a “trade or business” or the public offices that are needed to conduct enforcement under 26 U.S.C. §7601 to any state of the Union. Therefore, the tax is limited to the District of Columbia “and not elsewhere”.

7. The federal income tax described under I.R.C. Subtitle A is measured by the receipt of “income” in connection with a “trade or business”. This is the privileged activity being “taxed”, and it is an avoidable activity that few private employees are engaged in, because they do not in deed and in fact hold a privileged “public office” as required by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

The IRS website admits some of the truths above, but you really have to dig for it. In the International Taxpayer Glossary, it says the following about withholding of those who have no income from the District of Columbia:

   Services performed outside the U.S

   Compensation paid to a nonresident alien (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the United States [District of Columbia] is not considered wages and is not subject to graduated withholding or 30% withholding.
   [SOURCE: http://www.irs.gov/businesses/small/international/article/0,,id~96594,00.html]

IRS Publication 519, Year 2000 agrees with the above, by saying the following:
Income Subject to Tax

Income from sources outside the United States that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States is not taxable if you receive it while you are a nonresident alien. The income is not taxable even if you earned it while you were a resident alien or if you became a resident alien or a U.S. citizen after receiving it and before the end of the year.

[IRS Publication 519, Year 2000, p. 26]

A person who meets the requirement above of being a nonresident alien with no income from the District of Columbia, whether connected to a trade or business or not under 26 U.S.C. §871, is described in the regulations as follows, under 26 CFR §871-1(b)(i):

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART I—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.871-1 Classification and manner of taxing alien individuals.

(a) Classes of aliens. For purposes of the income tax, alien individuals are divided generally into two classes, namely, resident aliens and nonresident aliens. Resident alien individuals are, in general, taxable the same as citizens of the United States; that is, a resident alien is taxable on income derived from all sources, including sources without the United States. See §1.1–1(b). Nonresident alien individuals are taxable only on certain income from sources within the United States and on the income described in section 864(c)(4) from sources without the United States which is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. However, nonresident alien individuals may elect, under section 6013 (g) or (h), to be treated as U.S. residents for purposes of determining their income tax liability under Chapters 1, 5, and 24 of the code. Accordingly, any reference in §§1.1–1 through 1.1388–1 and §§1.1491–1 through 1.1494–1 of this part to non-resident alien individuals does not include those with respect to whom an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) is in effect, unless otherwise specifically provided. Similarly, any reference to resident aliens or U.S. residents includes those with respect to whom an election is in effect, unless otherwise specifically provided.

(b) Classes of nonresident aliens—(1) In general. For purposes of the income tax, nonresident alien individuals are divided into the following three classes:

(i) Nonresident alien individuals who at no time during the taxable year are engaged in a trade or business in the United States.

(ii) Nonresident alien individuals who at any time during the taxable year are, or are deemed under §1.871–9 to be, engaged in a trade or business in the United States, and

(iii) Nonresident alien individuals who are bona fide residents of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year.

An individual described in subdivision (i) or (ii) of this subparagraph is subject to tax pursuant to the provisions of subpart A (section 871 and following), part II, subchapter N, chapter 1 of the Code, and the regulations thereunder. See §§1.871–7 and 1.871–8. The provisions of subpart A do not apply to individuals described in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph, but such individuals, except as provided in section 933 with respect to Puerto Rican source income, are subject to the tax imposed by section 1 or section 1201(b). See §1.876–1.

Some important things to note at this point are:

1. The only IRS Form that American Nationals who are nonresident aliens can use to stop withholding is the W-8BEN.
2. The standard IRS Form W-8BEN provides no way to avoid disclosing the Beneficial Owner, even though there is no requirement in the I.R.C. itself to do so. Older versions of the W-8 form did not require disclosing the Beneficial Owner.
3. The standard IRS Form W-8BEN does not provide a block to indicate which of the above three types of nonresident aliens the submitter is, and this determination is very important because it affects whether withholding is or is not necessary. Those who are not “effectively connected to a trade or business” mentioned in paragraph (b)(1) above and all of whose earnings originate outside of the District of Columbia would not need withholding. The IRS doesn’t want to provide a form for nonresident aliens that shows how they can avoid the requirement for withholding. This forces employers to have to read the publications to find out, which few will do, or call up the IRS to ask, in which case they are sure to get LIES. The reason they will get LIES is because the courts refuse to hold the IRS responsible for anything they say, print, or do. This is discussed at:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Federal Courts and the IRS’ Own IRM Say IRS is NOT RESPONSIBLE for Its Actions or its Words or For Following Its Own Written Procedures
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

The combination of all the above factors combine to introduce just enough ambiguity and uncertainty for private employers that they just roll over and screw their workers rather than obey what the law actually says. This also explains why, if you use the W-8BEN form to stop withholding, you should use the amended form we provide in order to avoid this trap. The article with explains how to lawfully and truthfully and properly complete the IRS Form W-8BEN is:

5.6.13.6.3 Specific withholding requirements in the I.R.C.

Below are the withholding requirements applicable to nonresident aliens, right from the I.R.C. and implementing regulations:

1. 26 CFR §31.3401(a)(6)-1(b) says that nonresident aliens whose earnings originate from outside the District of Columbia or which are not connected with a "trade or business" are not subject to withholding:

   Title 26
   PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
   Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source
   § 31.3401(a)(6)-1 Remuneration for services of nonresident alien individuals.

   (a) In general. All remuneration paid after December 31, 1966, for services performed by a nonresident alien individual, if such remuneration otherwise constitutes wages within the meaning of §31.3401(a)—1 and if such remuneration is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is subject to withholding under section 3402 unless excepted from wages under this section. In regard to wages paid under this section after February 28, 1979, the term “nonresident alien individual” does not include a nonresident alien individual treated as a resident under section 6013(g) or (h).

   (b) Remuneration for services performed outside the United States. Remuneration paid to a nonresident alien individual (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the United States is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.

   TITLE 26 > Subtitle C > CHAPTER 24 > § 3401
   § 3401. Definitions

   (a) Wages

   For purposes of this chapter, the term “wages” means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer, including the cash value of all remuneration (including benefits) paid in any medium other than cash; except that such term shall not include remuneration paid—

   (6) for such services, performed by a nonresident alien individual, as may be designated by regulations prescribed by the Secretary; or

3. 26 U.S.C. §3406(g) and 26 CFR §31.3406(g)-1(c) both say that foreign persons (which includes "nonresident aliens") are not subject to backup withholding or information reporting.

   TITLE 26 > Subtitle C > CHAPTER 24 > § 3406
   § 3406. Backup withholding

   (g) Exceptions

   (1) Payments to certain payees Subsection (a) shall not apply to any payment made to— (A) any organization or governmental unit described in subparagraph (B), (C), (D), (E), or (F) of section 6049(b)(4), or (B) any other person specified in regulations.
(2) Amounts for which withholding otherwise required Subsection (a) shall not apply to any amount for which withholding is otherwise required by this title.

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
§ 31.3406(g)-1 Exception for payments to certain payees and certain other payments.

(e) Certain reportable payments made outside the United States by foreign persons, foreign offices of United States banks and brokers, and others.

For reportable payments made after December 31, 2000, a payor is not required to backup withhold under section 3406 on a reportable payment that qualifies for the documentary evidence rule described in §1.6049–5(c)(1) or (4) of this chapter, whether or not documentary evidence is actually provided to the payor, unless the payor has actual knowledge that the payee is a United States person. Further, no backup withholding is required for payments upon which a 30-percent amount was withheld by another payor in accordance with the withholding provisions under chapter 3 of the Internal Revenue Code and the regulations under that chapter. For rules applicable to notional principal contracts, see §1.6041–1(d)(5) of this chapter.

4. 26 CFR §1.872-2(f): Exclusions from gross income of nonresident alien individuals

(f) Other exclusions.

Income which is from sources without [outside] the United States [District of Columbia, see 26 USC 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)], as determined under the provisions of sections 861 through 863, and the regulations thereunder, is not included in the gross income of a nonresident alien individual unless such income is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual. To determine specific exclusions in the case of other items which are from sources within the United States, see the applicable sections of the Code. For special rules under a tax convention for determining the sources of income and for excluding, from gross income, income from sources without the United States which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see the applicable tax convention. For determining which income from sources without the United States is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see section 864(c)(4) and §1.864–5.

5. 26 CFR §1.871-7(a)(4): Taxation of nonresident alien individuals not engaged in U.S. business

(a) Imposition of tax

(4) Except as provided in §§1.871–9 and 1.871–10, a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business in the United States during the taxable year has no income, gain, or loss for the taxable year which is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. See section 864(c)(1)(B) and §1.864–3.

(31) Foreign estate or trust

(A) Foreign estate

The term “foreign estate” means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.
7. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i) says that "nonresident aliens", even if they work in the District of Columbia, do not earn income from sources within the "United States", if they are not engaged in a "trade or business"

(a) Gross income from sources within United States

The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:

(3) Personal services

Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States; except that compensation for labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if—

(C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with—

(i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or

(ii) an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States, a domestic partnership, or a domestic corporation, if such labor or services are performed for an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by such individual, partnership, or corporation.

8. 26 U.S.C. §3401(a) says that "nonresident aliens" don't earn "wages" and are therefore not subject to W-2 reporting:

(a) For the purposes of this chapter, the term "wages" means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee [an elected or appointed public official] to his employer...except that such term shall not include remuneration for:

(6) such services, performed by a nonresident alien individual.

9. 26 U.S.C. §1402(b) says that "nonresident aliens" don't earn "self employment income":

(b) Self-employment income

The term “self-employment income” means the net earnings from self-employment derived by an individual (other than a nonresident alien individual, except as provided by an agreement under section 233 of the Social Security Act) during any taxable year; except that such term shall not include—

10. IRS Publication 515, entitled "Withholding of tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities", year 2000, says on p. 3 the following:

"Foreign persons who provide Form W–8BEN, Form W–8ECI, or Form W–8EXP (or applicable documentary evidence) are exempt from backup withholding and Form 1099 reporting."

11. Federal Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) retirement system pamphlet OC-96-21 says:

3. How much tax will be withheld on payments from the TSP?

The amount withheld depends upon your status, as described below. Participant. If you are a nonresident alien, your payment will not be subject to withholding for U.S. income taxes. (See Question 2.) If you are a U.S. citizen or resident alien when you separate, you will receive from your employing agency the tax notice "Important Tax Information About Payments From Your TSP Account,” which explains the withholding rules that apply to your various withdrawal options.

Tax Treatment of TSP Payments:

The deception that scares people away from claiming nonresident alien status

How does the government trick us into losing our true nonresident alien status? Because the U.S. government knows that all Americans born in the 50 Union states living on nonfederal land are nonresident aliens with respect to the Internal Revenue Code over which they have no jurisdiction to assess Subtitles A, B, and C income taxes, they have devised an ingenious scheme to scare all these sheep, I mean people, into their jurisdiction so they can be abused if they don’t pay income taxes they otherwise wouldn’t owe. Here’s their trick:

1. They define a flat 30 percent for income from “within the United States” (the federal zone). See 26 U.S.C. §871(a) for the place where this 30 percent tax is defined.
2. They fool everyone into thinking that they are domiciled in the “United States” by never defining the term on their website or in any of their publications, and denying the proper definition when people question them about it.
3. They define a lower, graduated tax rate for people who file an IRS Form 1040 which is less than the flat 30% you would pay if you continued claiming your true status as a nonresident alien and filing the form 1040NR. See 26 U.S.C. § 1(b) for the definition of this graduated tax rate.
4. They then fill the post office with 1040 forms and don’t provide the more correct 1040NR forms and booklets, which is the correct form for most Americans.

5. They then go around, hand in hand with the American Bar Association, to all the public schools, waving their fists with a lawyer by their side and telling innocent teenagers who are just starting in the workforce that they MUST pay taxes and that they HAVE to file a form 1040 like everyone else. See section 1.11.3 for a description of how they do this, right off the IRS website. They don’t tell these innocent kids what filing this form means, which is that once they file this form and get a Socialist Security Number, they are transformed into SLAVES of their own government because they are making an election to treat their income as “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”, which is a code word for saying that they are a U.S. Congressman who lives in the District of Columbia! Once the kids achieve that substandard status, there is no way to deny that the federal courts have jurisdiction over these formerly private citizens, and they are trapped until they revoke their election. Cleverly, the IRS and no one in the government tells them in the 1040 booklet or in anything else they would be likely to read how to revoke that election. Does this sound like the pied piper? Sure does to us!

6. Because people want to save money and pay the lowest tax rate, they file the wrong tax form (the 1040 form instead of the 1040NR) and thereby volunteer into the jurisdiction of the federal government by filing their first 1040 form. The top of the form says they are a “U.S. Individual”, which implies that they are a resident of the District of Columbia or any other federal property. This means their goose is cooked because now they come under the territorial jurisdiction of the federal courts. Once you sign that 1040 form under penalty of perjury, you become a witness against yourself in violation of your Fifth Amendment rights. You also become a substandard statutory “U.S. citizen” and ward of the federal government, which is a status reserved for SLAVES following the civil war, but not something anyone else wants to be or needs to be. To make things worse, in the process of writing off your children as tax deductions for a tax you don’t owe, you also in effect have to sell your children into slavery too by giving them Social Security Numbers and claiming they are U.S. citizens! Look at the 1040, and you will find that you can’t write off your children unless they have SSN’s and you claim them as “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

7. Since the Fifth Amendment allows us to not be compelled to incriminate ourselves by filling out things we don’t want to put on a tax return, the IRS sets the withholding rate so that most people will get refunds at the end of the year. This provides an incentive for people to file returns and complete them when they otherwise would not. In effect, they have made it into a “privilege” to get our money back which requires us to surrender our privacy and waive our Fifth Amendment rights to get the money owed to us in the refund.

8. After these people are transformed into federal serfs by becoming unwitting “U.S. citizens” (in what we refer to as a conspiracy against rights), if they get out of line, IRS computers harass and intimidate them, treating them in most cases as businesses (look in your IMF file to verify this for yourself) and making up bogus liabilities to fill their IMF file. The IRS also keeps them in line by threatening penalties that only corporations and partnerships, technically, are liable to pay, but they don’t tell you that (see 26 CFR §301.6671-1(b) if you don’t believe us) at:

http://squid.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/get-cfr.cgi?TITLE=26&PART=301&SECTION=6671-1&TYPE=TEXT

Doesn’t this make you mad? It’s a fraud and it’s downright EVIL! It’s all done because the government loves your money more than they respect your constitutional rights. It amounts to a “conspiracy against rights”, which is a crime under 18 U.S.C. §241. We believe it is this very scheme that explains why Congress has put the IRS at arm’s length by not having any federal statute or documented legal delegated authority that traces the activities of the IRS directly back to them. We assert that they do this to evade liability or being prosecuted if the lid ever blows on this organized crime and extortion (RICO) ring. You will learn in section 2.1.4 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 that the IRS is actually headquartered out of Puerto Rico. Now do you understand why they call it RICO: The IRS were the first ones to implement this and they became the model for the laws against such extortion.

5.6.13.7.2 Tricks Congress Pulled to Undermine the Nonresident Alien Position

The Nonresident Alien position can be a losing position in federal court if you don’t know what you are doing. Congress knows that the nonresident alien position is a good and legal way to avoid Subtitle A income taxes, so they put two statutory roadblocks in front of patriots who try to use it. We’ll now discuss each of these two roadblocks individually.

26 U.S.C. §871(a) imposes a tax of 30% on income from within the federal United States that is not connected with United States business, which means connected with a “trade or business” in the United States. Most people don’t look any further than that in reading this law. But the more astute readers will look up the definition of “trade or business” in 26 U.S.C. §7791(a)(26) and find out that it means “public office”, which means the tax only applies to Congressmen! Throughout section 871, it is emphasized that the 30% tax is imposed on identified activities associated with “sources within the United States” (see 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(1) and (a)(2), which use the term “sources within the United States”, for example). The place we must go in the code to find out about “sources within the United States” is 26 U.S.C. §861. We look there and find the following about income of nonresident aliens from “sources within the United States”:

(a) Gross income from sources within United States

The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:

(3) Personal services

Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States; except that compensation for labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if:

(A) the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year;

(B) such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate, and

(C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with:

(i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or

(ii) an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States, a domestic partnership, or a domestic corporation, if such labor or services are performed for an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by such individual, partnership, or corporation.

In addition, compensation for labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual in connection with the individual's temporary presence in the United States as a regular member of the crew of a foreign vessel engaged in transportation between the United States and a foreign country or a possession of the United States.

So if you are a nonresident alien American national working in the federal United States for another nonresident alien, then you don’t earn “gross income” from “sources within the United States”, which means you can’t earn “taxable income”. You see how Congress twists things in the code to deceive or mislead so as to maximize their revenues? On the one hand they say in section 871 that nonresident aliens owe 30% tax if they are not associated with a “trade or business in the United States” but on the other hand, they say in section 861 that this same person doesn’t owe the tax if they are working for another nonresident alien or are not engaged in a “trade or business in the United States”. Most of the tricks are hidden in section 861, which is why we covered that section earlier. This is yet one more trick played by that section, and they use this trick hoping you won’t know the proper source rules for allocating income and will just assume that “everything” you make is “gross income” and “taxable income”. Most of your earnings as a “national of the United States” and a “nonresident alien”, however, won’t in fact be “gross income” if you really analyze things using the law.

The second roadblock that Congress put in the way of nonresident aliens guarantees that those who don’t know what they are doing will lose in federal court. That roadblock is 28 U.S.C. §2201 as follows, and it prevents federal courts from deciding on state and federal citizenship, rights, or status related to these in regards to taxes when cases are heard in federal courts!:

United States Code
TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy
So in other words, courts can’t declare your status or rights in the context of federal taxes. That means that if you claim to be a “nonresident alien” for the purposes of the income tax, then the judge can’t argue with you and they have to accept what is on your (hopefully “1040NR” and not “1040”!) tax return, even if the IRS challenges that status! It also means that claims based constitutional rights cannot be claimed in federal court if they are done in the context of “taxes” only! We know from reading the case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) that there is only one place where Congress can by legislation suspend the enforcement of the Bill of Rights or the Constitution, and that is only within the federal zone. This provides a clue to us where the Internal Revenue Code applies, and it isn’t inside states of the Union if the land isn’t owned by the federal government!

So how do we get a court to rule on our status as a “nonresident alien” in such a way that the federal court has to accept this status? It must be done preferably in a state court or in a federal court but not in the context of taxes. For instance, if we petition the court for a declaratory judgment regarding our citizenship status and don’t mention taxes in the pleading and do it before and separate from the tax trial, then the judge hearing your tax trial has to accept the findings. Don’t be discouraged, however. There is a way around this statutory trap. Below is the way around the roadblock:

While income tax arguments are barred under this rule - actions proving lack of citizenship, domicile, and residence are specifically allowed. The issue is not income tax but jurisdiction over the person. Lack of jurisdiction is proved by FRCP Rule 44 and Rule 44.1 - You go to the proper jurisdiction to resolve the matter by taking the following steps:

1. Acquire domicile and residence in a common law jurisdiction.
2. File notice in the clerks office in state and federal courts.
3. Argue this in Federal court using as evidence the filings filed at common law, state court and federal courts.
4. Appeal common law under FRCP Rule 60 last line "by independent action". You are then not arguing jurisdiction in front of that court - you are using evidence to prove that jurisdiction already exists in another court. Read 28 U.S.C. §2201 and it states that it must be argued in the proper manner - and that is by not letting the US court decide that issue - go to common law and plead condition precedent under FRCP rule 8. (The citizenship was already decided before the action began).

This argument is in agreement with all of the cites herein and the argument that dual citizenship can exist. State law tells you the procedure for noticing the state courts that you have acquired a new residence and domicile.

5.6.13.7.3 How to Avoid Jeopardizing Your Nonresident Citizen or Nonresident Alien Status

If you are going to claim “nonresident alien” status, then you must do the following to ensure that you NEVER jeopardize that status, or you could incur unwanted additional income tax liability:

1. If you live in the United States (the “federal zone”), you should always vote by absentee ballot in all national elections. IRS Publication 54 for the year 2000 states on page 13 that:

   "Effect of voting by absentee ballot.

   If you are a U.S. citizen living abroad, you can vote by absentee ballot in any election held in the United States without risking your status as a bona fide resident of a foreign country. However, if you give information to the local election officials about the nature and length of your stay abroad that does not match the information you give for the bona fide residence test, the information given in connection with absentee voting will be considered in determining your status, but will not necessarily be conclusive.”
2. When or if you register to vote, you must be VERY careful not to sacrifice or confuse your citizenship status. Some states make it mandatory on the voter registration form that you claim to be a “U.S. citizen”. They want to pull you into the federal zone so they can tax you and if they litigate against you for income tax evasion, they will use your voter registration form as proof that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 born in the federal zone. California does this (see the Revenue and Taxation Code section 6017 for a definition of the term “This State” and “State of” for further details). Therefore, when you register to vote and must claim to be a statutory “U.S. citizen” to get the “privilege” to vote (this is a scandal, if you ask me!), clarify which of the three “United States” you are claiming to be a citizen of as follows:

2.1. Change the term “United States” to add the word “of America” throughout the voter registration form.

2.2. Mention in an area on the form the supreme Court case of Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), and the three definitions of “United States”.

2.3. Mention that of the three definitions, when you say you are a “U.S. citizen”, it means that you are a constitutional but not a statutory “citizen of United States” the country or the “50 several states” and not the federal zone area of the United States.

2.4. If they won’t accept your changes above, then withdraw your voter registration. You should do all three of the above immediately after or preferably before you file your W-8 form to become a nonresident alien so that you have legal certified proof that you put the state on notice that you were NOT a federal U.S. citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

2.5. If you have to defend yourself in court because you claimed to be a “U.S. citizen” on your voter registration and there is confusion or misinterpretation over the use of the term “United States”, explain which of the three definitions you meant (i.e. U.S.* or U.S. but NOT U.S. citizen) and quote the case of Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904) as proof that the dispute should be resolved in your favor:

“Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”
[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

3. While you are living abroad, or outside the federal United States (the “federal zone”), you must be consistent in stating to the foreign country, or state of the 50 states of the Union that you are domiciled in that foreign state but are not a “resident” under the Internal Revenue Code. Remember from section 4.10 earlier that the only people who are residents are aliens under the Internal Revenue Code! If you claim not to be domiciled in that “foreign state” and if the authorities of that non federal zone entity exclude you from their income taxes, then you will lose your tax-exempt status. IRS Publication 54 says the following in that regard on page 13 of the year 2000 version:

“Statement to foreign authorities.

You are not considered a bona fide resident of a foreign country if you make a statement to the authorities of that country that you are not a resident of that country and the authorities hold that you are not subject to their income tax laws as a resident.

If you have made such a statement and the authorities have not made a final decision on your status, you are not considered to be a bona fide resident of that foreign country. To keep your status as a bona fide resident of a foreign country, you must have a clear intention of returning from such trips, without unreasonable delay, to your foreign residence or to a new bona fide residence in another foreign country.”

5.6.13.7.4 “Will I Lose My Military Security Clearance or Passport or Social Security Benefits by Becoming a Nonresident Alien or a ‘national’?”

The answer to this question is emphatically no to all three. The term “nonresident alien” on the IRS Form W-8BEN (called a “Certificate of Foreign Status”) is a “word of art” that only has meaning within the context of the Internal Revenue Code and nowhere else. You can still get a U.S.A. passport, maintain your military security clearance, serve in the military, and collect social security benefits based on what you paid in because you were born in the United States of America and are constitutional but not statutory Citizens and a “non-citizen national” under federal law. Your birth certificate proves that. The only thing that filing a W-8 or W-8BEN and amended SSA Form SS-5 and becoming a “nonresident alien” do in the eyes of the IRS is notify the IRS that you don’t live in the federal zone, aren’t a statutory federal or U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, and aren’t liable for federal income taxes under 26 U.S.C. §1 (and the implementing regulations in 26 CFR §1.1-1).
To further investigate this matter, we looked at the U.S. Navy’s directives on this subject. SECNAVINST 5510.30A (Secretary of the Navy Instruction 5510.30A) entitled Department of the Navy Personnel Security Program, talks about the citizenship requirements for getting a U.S. government security clearance. Here is what it says on page I-1 of Appendix I:

1. Only United States citizens are eligible for a security clearance, assignment to sensitive duties or access to classified information. When compelling reasons exist, in furtherance of the DON mission, including special expertise, a non-U.S. citizen may be assigned to sensitive duties (see chapter 5) or granted a Limited Access Authorization (see chapter 9) under special procedures.

When this instruction refers to U.S. citizens, it makes no distinction between those who are U.S. citizens by birth, those who are U.S. nationals, those who have derived U.S. citizenship or those who acquired it through naturalization. For the purpose of issuance of a security clearance, citizens of the Federated States of Micronesia (FSM) and the Republic of the Marshall Islands are considered U.S. citizens.

You can view the above instruction yourself at the following web address:

http://neds.nebt.daps.mil/551030.htm

We also searched the Social Security Administration (SSA) website (http://www.ssa.gov) for information about whether a distinction is made between the treatment of “U.S. nationals” and “U.S. citizens”. The Program Operation Manual System (POMS) maintained by the SSA contains the following on this subject, in section GN 00303.001 entitled “Requirement of U.S. Citizenship or Appropriate Alien Status”:

GN 00303.001 Requirement of U.S. Citizenship or Appropriate Alien Status

A. Policy Principle

An individual must be a U.S. citizen or have the appropriate alien status to be eligible for the following benefits:

- Benefits at age 72 for uninsured individuals;
- Supplemental Security Income; and
- Health Insurance or Supplemental Medical Insurance for uninsured individuals.

...

C. Operating Policy - Citizenship

“U.S. Nationals are treated as U.S. citizens for SSA purposes”
(see http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/lnx/0200303001)

The IRS W-7 form, “Application for IRS Individual Taxpayer Identification Number” confirms the above conclusions. If you examine this form at:

you will see that the top of the form says:

“For use by individuals who are not U.S. citizens or nationals”.

The only way you can therefore get a Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) to replace a Social Security Number is if you don’t otherwise qualify for Social Security as a statutory “U.S. citizen” or “national”. This form, however, could be used for artificial entities, like businesses or corporations. For instance, if your children didn’t want SSN’s, then when they reach age 18, they could apply for a fictitious business name with the name of the business being their real name but in all caps, and then apply for a TIN for the business and use that instead of a real SSN. They could then discontinue the business after they get what they want by giving the number, or they could terminate the business and the number, and renew the next year with a different number. This is a sneaky way to avoid getting permanently branded or “dog-tagged” by our dishonest and covetous government.
The SSA website also defines “U.S. nationals” incorrectly in section RS 02001.010 as follows:

“RS 02001.010 United States Nationals

B. DEFINITION

[emphasis added]

Before you get carried away with the above contradiction, consider the following facts:

1. We show in section 4.11.6 earlier that there are actually two types of “nationals”: “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408, and another we call a “state national”/“national” defined under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Only one of these two types of “nationals of the United States” are subject to federal jurisdiction. The other one, the person born in a state of the Union, is not subject to federal jurisdiction but is formally recognized in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). The “national” or “state national” can’t be subject to federal law, because the Constitution doesn’t confer to the federal government the authority to determine the citizenship status of persons born in states of the Union, which are outside its jurisdiction and “foreign” with respect to federal jurisdiction.

2. The IRS code supersedes the SSA manual as it pertains to the collection of taxes, as confirmed in POMS section entitled “RS 01801.020 Responsibilities of IRS and SSA” located at:

http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/36f3b2ee954f0075852568c100630558/e7fe4ff1331e2cbe85256a5c004e6120?OpenDocument

3. The Social Security Administration’s POMS manual above is NOT LAW, but only guidance which cannot be enforced in court. The SSA can lie through their teeth on this manual and never be held accountable for that lie, because the manual is only directory in nature. The same is true of the IRS regarding their publications, including their Internal Revenue Manual. Here is the way one court put it:

“Rules contained in the Internal Revenue Manual, even if they were codified in Code of Federal Regulations, did not have the force and effect of law, and therefore, district court, in Government’s action to collect assessment, correctly precluded defendant from introducing evidence concerned these provisions.”

4. The only thing you can or should rely on is the actual law itself (the statutes and their implementing regulations) and the rulings of the Supreme Court, which we exhaustively explain throughout this document.

It is very important to update your “U.S. citizenship” status as outlined in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 before you begin your administrative battle with the IRS, because this will significantly bolster your legal position and provide important and irrefutable evidence of your position by establishing evidence to prove their lack of jurisdiction over you. We also advise getting a notarized copy of your birth certificate from the county recorder or area where you were born. If the IRS wants to challenge you on your nonresident alien or citizenship status, you will need proof of that status. Examine your birth certificate, security clearance, etc carefully to ensure that they don’t say you were born in the federal zone. If you were born in a military hospital, a federal base, or a federal territory or possession, or in the District of Columbia (because, for instance, you were in a military family), and your birth certificate says so, you may need to abandon ties to the federal zone by renounce 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizenship to become a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). We emphasize here as we did earlier in section 4.11.10: You DON’T need to expatriate your constitutional citizenship or “nationality” in order to become a “nonresident alien”. You already are one. Please don’t expatriate your nationality in order to achieve “nonresident alien” status because the government will slander you and make you look like a traitor against your country in front of a jury! For further information on expatriation, we refer you to the following:
5.6.13.8 Rebutted Objections to the Nonresident Alien Position

5.6.13.8.1 IRS Objections

5.6.13.8.1.1 Word “includes”

The most frequent objection to the content of this document relates to the employment of the word “includes” within the Internal Revenue Code. Proponents of this objection often state arguments like the following:

"Your interpretation of the term 'United States' as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) is incorrect. The definition uses the word 'includes'. 26 U.S.C. §7701(c) identifies the word 'includes' as a term of enlargement and not limitation. This means that it is being used as the equivalent of 'in addition to'. The thing that it is adding to is the commonly understood meaning of the term, which interprets its meaning as including the 50 states of the Union."

The definition of "includes" they are referring to in the above is the following:

26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701(c) INCLUDES AND INCLUDING.

The terms 'include' and 'including' when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined."

What the above devious approach is trying to do is to abuse the rules of statutory construction in order to encourage or promote false presumption about the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code. They are trying to hoodwink you into believing that the IRS has more jurisdiction than they actually have. The rules of statutory construction state that the purpose for defining a term in a law is to supersede, not enlarge, the common definition of the term. The purpose of law is to eliminate, not introduce, uncertainty, confusion, or presumption about what is required. If it adds to confusion or presumption, the due process is violated. Such a malicious approach is also the equivalent of "false commercial speech" which can and should be subject to injunction by the federal courts, but seldom is. In effect, whoever makes this false claim is trying to imply that I.R.C. §7701(c) gives them carte blanche authority to include whatever they subjectively want to add into the definition of the term being controverted. This approach obviously:

1. Violates the whole purpose behind why law exists to begin with, explained earlier, which is to define and limit government power so as to protect the citizen from abuse by his government.
2. Gives arbitrary authority to a single individual to determine what the law “includes” and what it does not.

"When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles on which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power. Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power. It is, indeed, quite true that there must always be lodged somewhere, and in some person or body, the authority of final decision; and in many cases of mere administration, the responsibility is purely political, no appeal lying except to the ultimate tribunal of the public judgment, exercised either in the pressure of opinion, or by means of the suffrage. But the fundamental rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, considered as individual possessions, are secured by those maxims of constitutional law which are the monuments showing the victorious progress of the race in securing to men the blessings of civilization under the reign of just and equal laws, so that, in the famous language of the Massachusetts bill of rights, the government of the commonwealth 'may be a government of laws and not of men.' For the very idea that one man may be compelled to hold his life, or the means of living, or any material right essential to the enjoyment of life, at the mere will of another, seems to be intolerable in any country where freedom prevails, as being the essence of slavery itself."

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

4. Is a recipe for tyranny and oppression.
5. Creates slavery and involuntary servitude of citizens toward their government, in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.
6. Creates a “dulocracy”, where our public servants unjustly domineer over their sovereign American masters:
   "Dulocracy. A government where servants and slaves have so much license and privilege that they domineer.”
7. Compels “presumption” and therefore violates due process of law.
8. Injures the Constitutional rights of the interested party.

Black’s Law Dictionary provides two possible definitions for the word “includes”. It can be used as a term of limitation or enlargement:

"Include. (Lat. Inclaudere, to shut in, keep within.) To confine within, hold as an inclosure. Take in, attain, shut up, contain, inclose, comprise, comprehend, embrace, involve. Term may, according to context, express an enlargement and have the meaning of and or in addition to, or merely specify a particular thing already included within general words theretofore used. “Including” within statute is interpreted as a word of enlargement or of illustrative application as well as a word of limitation. Premier Products Co. v. Cameron, 240 Or. 123, 400 P.2d. 227, 228.”

Based on the above, the only reasonable interpretation of any statute or code is to include only that which is explicitly spelled out. There are only three ways to define a term in a law:

1. To define every use and application of a term within a single section of a code or statute. Such a definition could be relied upon as a universal rule for interpreting the word defined, to the exclusion, even, of the common definition of the word. Remember that according to the Rules of Statutory Construction, the purpose for defining a word in a statute is to exclude all other uses, and even the common use, from being used by the reader. This is the case with the word “includes” within the Internal Revenue Code, which is only defined in one place in the entire Title 26, which is found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c). For this type of definition, the word “includes” would be used ONLY as a term of “limitation”.
2. To break the definition across multiple sections of code, where each additional section is a regional definition that is limited to a specific range of sections within the code. For this context, the term “includes” is used mainly as a word of “limitation” and it means “is limited to”. For instance, the term “United States” is defined in three places within the Internal Revenue Code, and each definition is different:
   2.1. 26 U.S.C. §3121
   2.2. 26 U.S.C. §4612
   2.3. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
3. To break the definition across multiple sections of code, where each additional section ADDS to the definition. For this context, the term “includes” is used mainly as a word of “enlargement”, and functions essentially as meaning “in addition to”. For instance:
   3.1. Code section 1 provides the following definition:

       Chapter 1 Definitions
       Section 1: Definition of “fruit”

       For the purposes of this chapter, the term “fruit” shall include apples, oranges and bananas.

   3.2. Code section 10 expands the definition of “fruit” as follows. Watch how the “includes” word adds and expands the original definition, and therefore is used as a term of “enlargement” and “extension”:

       Chapter 2 Definitions
       Section 10 Definition of “fruit”

       For the purposes of this Chapter, the term “fruit” shall include, in addition to those items identified in section 1, the following: Tangerines and watermelons.

The U.S. Supreme Court elucidated the application of the last rule above in the case of American Surety Co. of New York v. Marotta, 287 U.S. 513 (1933):

Subject to the effect properly to be given to context, section 1 (11 USCA I) prescribes the constructions to be put upon various words and phrases used in the act. Some of the definitive clauses commence with 'shall include,' others with 'shall mean.' The former is used in eighteen instances and the latter in nine instances, and in two both are used. When the section as a whole is regarded, it is evident that these verbs are not used synonymously or loosely, but with discrimination and a purpose to give to each a meaning not attributable to the other. It is obvious that, in some instances at least, 'shall include' is used without implication that any exclusion is intended. Subsections (6) and (7), in each of which both verbs are employed, illustrate the use of 'shall mean' to enumerate and restrict and of 'shall include' to enlarge and extend. Subsection (17) declares 'oath' shall include affirmation, Subsection (19) declares 'persons' shall include corporations, officers, partnerships, and women. Men are not mentioned. In these instances the verb is used to expand, not to restrict. It is plain that 'shall include,' as used in subsection (9) when taken in connection with other parts of the section, cannot reasonably be read to be the equivalent of 'shall mean' or 'shall include only.' [287 U.S. 513, 518]

There being nothing to indicate any other purpose, Congress must be deemed to have intended that in section 3a(1) 'creditors' should be given the meaning usually attributed to it when used in the common-law definition of fraudulent conveyances. See Coder v. Arts, 213 U.S. 223, 242, 29 S.Ct. 436, 16 Ann.Cas. 1008; Lansing Boiler & Engine Works v. Joseph T. Ryerson & Son (C.C.A.) 128 F. 701, 703; Githens v. Shffler (D.C.) 112 F. 505.

Under the common-law rule a creditor having only a contingent claim, such as was that of the petitioner at the time respondent made the transfer in question, is protected against fraudulent conveyance. And petitioner, from the time that it became surety on Mogliani's bond, was entitled as a creditor under the agreement to invoke that rule. Yeend v. Weeks, 104 Ala. 331, 341, 16 So. 165, 53 Am.St.Rep. 50; Whitehouse v. Bolster, 95 Me. 458, 50 A. 240; Mowry v. Reed, 187 Mass. 174, 177, 72 N.E. 936; Stone v. Myers, 9 Minn. 303 (Gil. 287, 294), 86 Am.Dec. 104; Cook v. Johnson, 12 N.J.Eq. 51, 72 Am.Dec. 381; American Surety Co. v. Hattrem, 138 Or. 358, 364, 3 P.(2d) 1109, 6 P.(2d) 1087; U.S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Centropolis Bank (C.C.A.) 17 F.(2d) 913, 916, 53 A.L.R. 295; Thomson v. Crane (C.C.) 73 F. 327, 331."

[American Surety Co. of New York v. Marotta, 287 U.S. 513 (1933)]

The only way to eliminate the above types of abuses in the interpretation of law and to oppose such an abuse of authority by a public servant is to demand that the misbehaving "servant" produce a definition of the word somewhere within the code that clearly establishes the thing which he is attempting to "include". If what is included isn’t explicitly and unambiguously included in an enacted positive law, then it violates the exclusio rule and due process: To wit:

"Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”

Meaning of the Words “includes” and “including”

5.6.13.8.1.2 Deception in IRS Publication 519 relating to definition of “United States”

IRS Publication 519, Year 2005, uses the following language to infer that the term “United States” as used in the Internal Revenue Code, includes the 50 states of the Union for the purposes of jurisdiction to tax under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code:

Substantial Presence Test

Example. You were physically present in the United States on 120 days in each of the years 2003, 2004, and 2005. To determine if you meet the substantial presence test for 2005, count the full 120 days of presence in 2006, 40 days in 2004 (1/3 of 130), and 20 days in 2003 (1/6 of 120). Because the total for the 3-year period is 180 days, you are not considered a resident under the substantial presence test for 2005.

"The term United States includes the following areas.

• "All 50 states and the District of Columbia."
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

- "The territorial waters of the United States"

"The term does not include U.S. possessions and territories or U.S. airspace."
[IRS Publication 519, Year 2005, p. 4

We have several points to make about the above reference:

1. The above cite was added to the publication in about 2004 in an apparent response to the content of this book, as a way to deceive the readers and stop the spread of the nonresident alien position.
2. The definition comes from an IRS Publication, which the IRS Internal Revenue Manual admits is UNTRUSTWORTHY and not guaranteed to be accurate:

   "IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."
   [IRM 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

3. The text above is an EXAMPLE which does not infer or imply or specify the context in which it may suitably be used. There are actually THREE and not ONE context in which the term “United States” could be referring to or implied and only one of them is used in the above example, which is the third one listed below:

3.1. The meaning of the term “United States” within the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A.
3.2. The meaning of the term “United States” within ordinary speech, which most people associate with the COUNTRY to include states of the Union.
3.3. The meaning of “United States” in the context of jurisdiction over aliens (not “citizens” or “nationals”) temporarily present in the country “United States”, which in this context includes all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

In the context of item 3.3 above, the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly affirmed the plenary power of Congress over aliens in this country, wherever they are located to include areas within the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union:

In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "primary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden." Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909)." [Klein denst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)]

While under our constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, the United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens, are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the states, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations. As said by this court in the case of Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, speaking by the same great chief justice: 'That the United States form, for many, and for most important purposes, a single nation, has not yet been denied. In war, we are one people. In making peace, we are one people. In all commercial regulations, we are one and the same people. In many other respects, the American people are one; and the government which is alone capable of controlling and managing their interests in all these respects is the government of the Union. It is their government, and in that character they have no other. America has chosen to [130 U.S. 581, 605] be in many respects, and to many purposes, a nation; and for all these purposes her government is complete; to all these objects, it is competent. The people have declared that in the exercise of all powers given for these objects it is supreme. It can, then, in effecting these objects, legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American territory."

"The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away or restrained on behalf of any one. The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and are incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their exercise be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise of these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract."

[Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)]

Therefore, in regard to control over aliens present anywhere within the American confederation, the general government legislates over all the territory of the American Union, including those of the states. Consequently, for the purposes of determining “permanent residence” of aliens ONLY, the term “United States” as used in item 3 above must be interpreted to include the 50 states of the Union as the IRS indicates above. HOWEVER:

1. The Presence Test indicated does not refer to “citizens” or “nationals”. The Presence Test is found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(3) and references ONLY “aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and not “nonresident aliens” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) or “citizens” defined in 26 CFR §1.1-1(c ). Therefore, an alien domiciled in a state of the Union could be a resident within the meaning of the presence test while neither a “citizen” nor a “national” would be considered a resident under the same test when located in the SAME place. Under the I.R.C., one cannot be a resident (which is an alien with a domicile) and either a “citizen” or a “national” at the same time. This is confirmed by the Law of Nations, which the Founding Fathers used to write the Constitution:

“Residents, as distinguished form citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its law so long as they remain there, and being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizens of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.”

[Law of Nations, Vattel, p. 87]

2. Remember that the only context in which “residence” is defined or described anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code is in the context of “aliens”, and not in the context of either “citizens” or “nationals”. See 26 CFR §1.871-2 and section 4 of the article below:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Therefore, a person who is a “national” but not a “citizen” and a “nonresident alien” can NOT have a “residence” as defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code.

3. For the purposes of determining tax liability and not residency of all persons, we must refer to the definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which is limited to the District of Columbia and nowhere expanded in the I.R.C. Subtitle A to include any other place.

Based on the foregoing, we must conclude that the IRS’ statement above is a deception and a ruse intended to compel false presumption under the influence of CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD that will maximize the illegal flow of PLUNDER (OFFSITE LINK) to the federal government. It is provided as an example and cannot mean the legal definition of “United States” used in the Internal Revenue Code. If they wish to imply that ALL THREE of the contexts in which the term “United States” could be used are the same, then they should say so and provide statutory and regulatory authority for saying so. Until then, we must defer to the definition of “United States” found within 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

This is a consequence of the following doctrine of the Supreme Court:

“Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”

[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]
5.6.13.8.2 Tax, Accounting, and Legal Profession Objections

“A government which robs Peter to pay Paul can always depend on the support of Paul.”

The tax preparation, accounting, financial planning, payroll, government, and legal professions absolutely HATE the Nonresident Alien Position with a vengeance and will try to steer you away from it. They will also try to make sure you don’t know why they don’t like it and will go out of their way not to admit why they don’t like it. There are many reasons for this that have absolutely nothing with the validity of the position and have far more to do with “bringing home the bacon” and avoiding “cognitive dissonance” for these so-called “professionals”. As you have already learned, those who use the Nonresident Alien Position:

1. May not claim ANY deductions or include a Schedule C with their return.
2. May not file a 1040 form and instead must file the 1040NR form.
3. Do not file at an IRS service center in their District Office, but instead file at the International Branch in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
4. May not apply for Earned Income Credit.
5. May not apply a graduated rate of tax to their earnings.
6. Must pay a flat 30% tax upon earnings originating from within the District of Columbia if they have passive income.
7. Do not have to file W-4 or W-4 Exempt forms, but instead file W-8BEN forms to prevent payroll withholding.
8. Do not and should not get W-2 forms at the end of the year, because they earn no reportable “wages” or “trade or business” earnings.
9. Should not receive 1099 forms at the end of the year, unless they work for the federal government within exclusive federal jurisdiction and are engaged in a “trade or business”.

The thing that tax, accounting, and legal professionals absolutely hate about the Nonresident Alien Position is that:

1. Since there is no payroll withholding, then payroll clerks feel useless and we need far fewer of them.
2. Since there are no deductions or creative ways to reduce “taxable income”, then tax and financial planners feel useless and we need far fewer of them.
3. Since it is VERY simple, then you don’t need a lawyer to figure it out. Therefore, all those smart people who make a living trying to outsmart the lawyers in Washington would have to find more productive things to do.
4. It would cause both state and federal government revenues to go down, so employees in the government, and especially judges whose retirement would be adversely affected, don’t like it. Who wants their federal pension reduced?
5. Implementing it fully would drastically reduce the number of “taxpayers”. Therefore the IRS isn’t going to buy off on it because most Revenue Officers would be laid off if it was fully implemented.

What the above list clearly shows is that there are a lot of people in the financial, tax, accounting, payroll, and government arenas who benefit HUGELY from keeping things the way they are and expanding the operation of the de facto unjust and fraudulent system we have now. Just the government alone collects hundreds of billions of dollars a year from “donations” that it deceitfully calls “taxes” through this fraud. That’s called a conflict of interest and its against the law. 18 U.S.C. §208 makes such a conflict of interest a crime in the case of a federal employee, and 18 U.S.C. §201(b)(3) makes it a federal crime to bribe a witness or testify as a bribed witness in a federal court. Anyone who is called as a witness in a federal trial who is involved in any one of these professions and is asked to comment on the Nonresident Alien Position in court would therefore have to recuse themselves because of severe conflict of interest. The only people who would make suitable witnesses are those who don’t benefit from the fraudulent system we have now. We would venture to say that it is precisely this kind of conflict of interest that has not only protected, but expanded the illegal operation of the Internal Revenue Code within our society.

In short, if the Nonresident Alien Position were widely understood and implemented, then most of the people who presently work as payroll clerks, tax preparers, accounting professionals, financial planners, tax lawyers, or do financial services would simply find themselves out of work! In effect, they would be punishing themselves for being honest and honorable by telling the truth about the fraud or by recognizing or helping those who spread the truth. Who in their right mind who has one of these jobs would want to encourage employees, investors, clients, or loyal but ignorant “taxpayers” to help them get fired or laid off?

We have spoken with several people who work in the financial services and legal professions and who stumbled on our website and this free book. Many of them have spent their whole life learning how to teach “taxpayers” to reduce their presumed “liability”, never once questioning whether there really was a legal “liability” or whether the Internal Revenue Code was even a “law” they had to follow! After they have read and studied our research and learned the truth for themselves, they find themselves in a very conflicted position. People who work in these professions frequently must maintain a fiduciary relationship with their clients which causes them to feel a strong sense of moral duty to do what is best for their clients. This leads them to want to share the truths in this book with their clients, coworkers, friends, and family, as we recommend that they should do. The result is a serious mental conflict, summarized with the questions below:

1. How can I admit to all my clients that I have been doing something illegal and morally wrong for my whole life that has seriously hurt ALL of my clients?
2. How can I claim to be an “expert” to my clients after having just learned that I have overlooked something so simple and obvious for so many years?
3. How can I educate my clients about the truth and not look like a psycho who is off his rocker? Will my boss ask me to see a psychologist?
4. How can I continue to pretend that my clients are “taxpayers” who need my help when I know they aren’t? I can’t sleep at night telling them they are “taxpayers” who need my help while knowing full well that it isn’t true.
5. Will I lose my CPA license, or my Certified Financial Planner certificate, or my license to practice law by implementing these truths in my profession on a large scale?
6. Would my income or employability be adversely affected if I decided to tell the truth to my clients about this fraud? How can I pay my bills and support my family and still earn an honest living?
7. Would my friends and professional colleagues think less of me because I have different opinions and ideas about important matters?
8. Will the knowledge that I have cause conflicts in the office with my coworkers and eventually cause me to have to be terminated?
9. What are the appropriate circumstances in which I can discuss this with my coworkers and friends while still avoiding conflict and controversy?

Frequently, when loyal readers of our materials have learned the truths in this book and attempted to fully implement them in their personal lives, they are often treated with skepticism and mistrust by friends, family, coworkers, government, and clients, all of whom have been so brainwashed by the public schools, the government, and a government-controlled media to believe what amounts to a monumental LIE. In some cases, their whole world is turned upside down, because they realize they have been part of a lie for the better part of their whole life. No doubt, this prospect can be quite disturbing. Nevertheless, we have a great commission from God as His followers and servants to love our neighbor, and those who love want to educate and share the truth with those they love, as we do here. Education is how we protect and empower both our children, our friends, family, and business associates, and it MUST be done, no matter the consequences or cost.

In the above passage, “rejoice in truth” means to share it with everyone. Jesus confirmed this by His example, when he said:

“Love suffers long and is kind; love does not envy; love does not parade itself, is not puffed up; does not behave rudely, does not seek its own, is not provoked, thinks no evil; does not rejoice in iniquity, but rejoices in the truth; bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.”

[1 Cor. 13:4-7, Bible, NKJV]

Along these lines, someone sent us the following very pertinent joke that we repeat here:

One Sunday morning during service, a 2,000 member congregation was surprised to see two men enter, both covered from head to toe in black and carrying submachine guns. One of the men proclaimed, "Anyone willing to take a bullet for Christ remain where you are."
While reading newspaper editorials urging the elimination of the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT), we were struck by the ease with which many Americans, including financial planners and editors of newspapers, embrace the idea that the country has become utterly corrupt as a consequence of the way our income tax system is administered by the IRS. The regimen of the AMT-- which requires some to use harsher rules than others when calculating their 'contribution'-- would obviously be unconstitutional if it were imposed as part of a compulsory tax system. Still, it is clear that a majority of the population still falsely believe that it is so imposed. A diligently cultivated fear of the IRS has successfully torn the fabric of reason in many minds, allowing these two contradictory concepts-- a compulsory legal duty imposing unequal legal obligations-- to co-exist.

Clearly, one or the other of these two things-- the Constitutional requirement of equal treatment by the law; or that the progressive rate tax system (of which the AMT is a part) is compulsory-- must be untrue. Just as clearly, the one that must be untrue is that the tax ‘scheme’ of which the AMT is a part is compulsory. There can be no question about the unconstitutionality of unequal treatment by the law. Little, if anything, could be more offensive to our most fundamental principles than unequal treatment.

In fact-- despite the apparent willingness of the general public to entertain the contradiction without objection-- what must be so, is indeed so. The U.S. Supreme Court has routinely and definitively declared the income tax to apply solely to the receipts from a very limited list of wholly optional activities, all of which involve either a “trade or business” or foreign commerce. It is only those who choose to engage in those avoidable taxable activities-- all connected with, and involving payments by the federal government-- who are potentially subject to what would otherwise be an illegal tax scheme. The words of the tax code themselves acknowledge this limited scope.

Nonetheless, this conformity to reality is carefully concealed from casual view by tax, accounting, financial, payroll, legal professionals, and the IRS. The relevant rulings by the high court were issued long ago. In the meantime, there has been a dedicated campaign conducted by the beneficiaries of ignorance-- such as CPA’s, tax attorneys, IRS agents, and politicians-- to consign those rulings to the memory hole and to discourage open-eyed public consideration of the subject in general. Despite the natural American skepticism toward assertions issuing from such clearly self-interested parties, it has been a successful campaign. The fear factor alluded to above, whereby any contemplation of the income tax is compromised with irrationality and an instinctive urge to move on, is an important contributor to that success.

Another is the fragmenting of the actual taxing statutes in the Internal Revenue Code into near incoherence in the ‘code’ by which they are now exclusively presented to the public. While those statutes plainly acknowledge the limitations of their scope, they have been cleverly disassembled, scattered, and intermingled in that code-- even to the point of extracting individual sentences from certain sections and placing them thousands of words away into the company of language from other sections. As a consequence, portions of the code-- when carefully excerpted and presented out of context-- appear to claim for the law a scope which it clearly cannot have. In fact, the I.R.C. DOES NOT have such a scope because the code itself not only is not law, but cannot be law precisely because of the unequal treatment that it produces. These excerpts are waved under the noses of the rare souls who overcome the fear to the point of questioning the beneficiaries of the misunderstanding. They serve to provide some inquirers (who are really looking for no more) with an excuse to claim satisfaction and scamper away with relief. More purposeful doubters are also often dissuaded thereby: Faced with the labyrinth of baffling nonsense which such I.R.C. excerpts reflect, many conclude that to sort through to the truth would be more expensive than simple surrender.

It can be hoped that the errors defended by such dolus and cheap tricks-- and the depressing loss of civic self-respect to which they lead-- will not long survive the American predisposition to straight talk and simple truth now that we have entered the information age. However, the newspaper editorials which stimulated this commentary appeared in one of the nation’s major daily newspapers, and, though critical of the unfairness of the AMT, clearly took for granted that it is compulsory. Thus, even though the road back might be a digital superhighway, it will be climbing a hill.

The absurd argument used to defend the AMT-- and progressivity in general, for that matter-- reveals the illegitimacy of its client concept. In a nutshell, that argument is: Since the same unequal treatment is applied to every target who reaches the same special circumstances, the treatment actually IS equal. This is like declaring that if a law dictates that EVERY 45-year-old redhead named Joe Smith in Cheyenne, Wyoming, is to be taxed at a 99% rate (unlike everyone else, who will simply be subsidized thereby), red-headed 45-year-old Mr. Smith of Cheyenne is thus afforded equal treatment under the law. After all, any other red-headed 45-year-old of the same name who moves to Cheyenne will also be so taxed. Mr. Smith simply loses 'life's lottery', so to speak. At least it will only be one year of outrage for Mr. Smith, because next year he will be 46. Unless the "law" is changed, of course...

The reality of the AMT-- or any other form of progressivity including that associated with a "trade or business"-- is that citizen 'A' is taxed $15 per $100 taken in, while citizen 'B' is charged $20 (to pick numbers solely for purposes of illustration). All the nonsense about the first, as opposed to the second, increment of earnings; margins; rates-on-the-next-dollar-earned, etc.; is nothing but an effort by the beneficiaries of the status quo to obscure this raw reality, and what would otherwise be the obvious fact that the tax thus imposed is not, and cannot be, compulsory because unequal. That is, while the tax IS compulsory in regard to the highly specialized activities upon which it is actually imposed, those highly specialized activities are entirely optional to any American. Unequal imposition of a tax on optional, voluntary activities is perfectly lawful-- if you don't like it, you don't have to participate in the activities. But such a tax cannot be (and is not) imposed on the routine-- and unavoidable-- exercise of the (untaxable-in-any-case) right to earn money, engage in contracts, etc..

It is by taking advantage of nuances of this sort that beneficiaries of the "income" tax scheme in the government, tax, accounting, payroll, and legal professions are able to innocently but disingenuously declare that,

"Of course the income tax is compulsory!"

…while still concealing the truth by failing to explain words of art legal definitions of the term "income" and "United States" within federal revenue law. An example will serve to illustrate: If Congress were to pass legislation which included sections specifying that,

"For purposes of this act, "breathing" means selling hot-dogs from the steps of the capital building", and,

"There is hereby imposed a $10 annual tax on breathing"

…it could then be said with a straight face that there is a compulsory tax on breathing, but it still wouldn't mean that every American is thus involuntarily obliged to pony up $10 every year for the taking in of air. The construction and the presentation of the "income" tax is of precisely this character. The square peg actually has a square hole to match, and the law as written is not in irreconcilable conflict with the Constitution. But don't rely on the beneficiaries of misunderstanding in the government, tax, legal, payroll, or financial industries to make this clear.

5.6.13.8.3 Objections of friends and family

"Prejudices, it is well known, are most difficult to eradicate from the heart whose soil has never been loosened or fertilized by education; they grow there, firm as weeds among stones."

[Charlotte Bronte]

Friends or family members may, in their legal ignorance, try to convince you that the nonresident alien position described in this pamphlet is simply wrong. This reaction will usually be the result of

1. The “cognitive dissonance” created by describing yourself as a type of “alien” in your own country.
2. Their ignorance about the Separation of Powers Doctrine, or the fact that the states of the Union are “foreign” and the equivalent of foreign countries for the purposes of most federal jurisdiction.
3. The lack of Constitutional training in the public schools system.
4. The complete lack of any teaching about law in the public schools.

This knee-jerk argument comes up quite a bit in reference to the Nonresident Alien Position as a way to discourage people from using it. It has a lot of variations and is usually based on a simplistic and inadequate understanding of the applicable law relating to nonresident aliens. For instance, some people will say that filing as a nonresident alien carries more potential for “liabilities”, as shown in 26 U.S.C. §1461, which makes persons who are deducting and withholding on nonresident aliens liable as follows:

26 U.S.C. §1461 Liability for withheld tax
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Every person required to deduct and withhold any tax under this chapter is hereby made liable for such tax...

But the fact of the matter is, the persons who are paying, and therefore withholding, such income in most cases under Subtitle A of the I.R.C. work for the U.S. government, and of course the federal government can make its own employees liable for not following federal law! Not only that, but under the provisions of 44 U.S.C. §1501(a)(1), the federal government doesn’t even need implementing regulations to govern its own employees. No one who works for a private employer outside of the federal zone would ever be in the position of paying “U.S. source income” (a code word for government payments) to a nonresident alien so no one else would need to worry about liability for deducting and withholding of such income.

Just like any other activity in life, ignorance will hurt you, and this is especially true of Internal Revenue Code. The Nonresident Alien Position (NAP), like virtually anything, can and probably will mean trouble if you don’t know what you are doing or you haven’t taken the time to do your homework, and there is more homework to do with this position because it is more unfamiliar to most people and because most people don’t like to study the law. That’s why we took the time to include section 5.6.13.3, which describes the legal responsibilities of nonresident aliens. The underlying legal issues of the nonresident alien position as we describe them in section 5.6.13 et seq, however, are very simple. A fairly small amount of legal research is necessary to understand the nonresident alien position, but most people never conquer their fear of the law or the IRS publications long enough to learn that it’s actually the better position.

Criticism of the nonresident alien position usually falls into the following three categories:

1. There is a knee jerk reaction to the use of the word “alien” to describe them, because they incorrectly think they are “U.S. citizens” who couldn’t possibly be “aliens”. As we explained in section 5.6.13, you can be a “nonresident alien” and not an “alien” as the terms are defined in the tax code, and this circumstance was created deliberately by the Congress who wrote our tax code to steer people away from using the “nonresident alien” position, since in most cases it completely eliminates their federal tax liability. A more correct and accurate name for “nonresident alien” in the tax code would have been “Nonresident foreigner” and then to describe “nationals” as foreigners in the tax code. This use of terms, however, would have required the government to define the meaning of “foreign”, which would have exposed the fraud that perpetuates the whole system and keeps people paying, so they must have decided not to name it honestly. That is why nowhere in the Internal Revenue Code is the term “foreign” defined: they simply don’t want you to know what it means. The closest thing we have to a definition of “foreign” is found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(5), which defines a “foreign corporation”, but not the word “foreign”.

2. If they are low income, people think that by filing as nonresident aliens, they will end up paying a higher tax rate as a percentage, and they don’t like that. Nonresident aliens use the 1040NR form and IRS publications falsely say to pay a flat rate of 30% for income from without the United States as defined in 26 U.S.C. §871(a), while those who file a 1040 form as “U.S. citizens” and/or residents pay a graduated rate that is usually lower than 30% unless they are high income earners and which is described in 26 U.S.C. §871(b). They overlook the fact that 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) limits federal income taxes to only commerce “effectively connected with a trade or business”, which is to say that it is income from a public office. Therefore, because people have not taken the time to research what the law says it means to be a nonresident alien and rely on the misleading (at best, fraudulent at worst) IRS publications, they never learn that being a nonresident alien means they non longer owe any tax in most cases! Isn’t that the result everyone wants?

3. Confusion over the definition of the term “United States” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and “employee” in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c). Since most people never take the time to understand that "United States" means the federal zone in the context of the Internal Revenue Code, they don't realize that being a nonresident alien is actually a good thing, because it only taxes "U.S." (federal zone) source income connected with a “trade or business”, which means income from federal government public office ONLY that falls under 26 CFR §1.861-8(f), and most people don't have any income from sources in this regulation, but they think they do because they never take the time to understand the 861 position. Since most people do not realize that 26 U.S.C. §3401(c ) and 26 CFR §31.3401(c ) define "employee" to mean an elected or appointed officer of the United States government, then they don’t realize that the only employer is Uncle Sam in the Internal Revenue Code, so they mistakenly reach the conclusion that they are federal employers who are liable to withhold taxes on nonresident aliens under 26 U.S.C. §1461!

Quite to the contrary, the nonresident alien position is the best position to be in, and is far better than being a “U.S. Individual” indicated in the upper left corner of the 1040 form because:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

1. You are not a U.S. citizen, so you are no longer subject to the territorial or subject matter jurisdiction of the federal courts under the Internal Revenue Code. This immunizes you against legal actions by the IRS to extort, levy, lien, or seize taxes out of you that you aren’t liable for.

2. Although the tax rate looks like it is supposed to be a flat 30% as indicated in 26 U.S.C. §871(a), most people do not hold public office (“trade or business”) and therefore have no taxable [federal] U.S. source income.

3. The Form W-8 or W-8BEN allows you to get away without using SSN’s. You therefore don’t need to use social security numbers on any of your financial accounts, which improves your privacy and financial security and also makes it harder for the IRS and creditors to locate your assets. There is no lawful way for Congress to require nonresident aliens who are domiciled outside of their jurisdiction to have federal ID numbers, because federal law does not reach outside of the federal zone.

4. You can file a W-8 or W-8BEN form to stop employment tax withholding instead of a W-4 form, and because there are no penalties for false W-8’s like there are for W-4 ($500), then the IRS can’t do a damn thing to fine or punish you if they find out you stopped withholding because you are outside of their territorial jurisdiction.

5. The W-8 and W-8BEN form, as well as the 1040NR forms that you file as a nonresident alien violate the Paperwork Reduction Act and the Privacy Act, as we pointed out in section 5.5.9, which provides a strong argument and defense against even being obligated to complete these forms and submit them to the IRS. These forms violate the Privacy Act because they do not tell whether they are “voluntary” or “mandatory” and they don’t say so because the IRS doesn’t want you to know they are “voluntary” so they don’t tell you anything!

6. The clerks who process the 1040NR forms are far more familiar with the taxable source rules under 26 U.S.C. §861 and 26 CFR §1.861-8(f) than those who process the 1040 forms, and are therefore far more likely to believe you when you say you have no taxable “U.S. source” income on your 1040NR form.

WARNING: Use of the new IRS W-8BEN form is hazardous to your financial health if you aren’t very careful about how you fill it out! IRS has made this new form, which replaces the W-8, very tricky to fill out without creating false presumptions that might incriminate you. We therefore have included detailed warnings and instructions for filling it out in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 that will hopefully keep you out of trouble.

5.6.13.8.4 Federal Court Objections

Below is how one U.S. Attorney tried to attack the Nonresident Alien Position in an actual legal brief filed in Federal District Court, along with an analysis of the caselaw he cited which disproves his arguments.

The power of Congress to impose a federal income tax system on citizens and residents of the United States derives from the Sixteenth Amendment.122 The Fourteenth Amendment controls the definition of citizenship. The Amendment states that "all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the States wherein they reside." Defendant's statements that federal income taxes do not apply to his "nonresident alien" customers, who are actually American citizens, are not supported by law. Federal income tax law applies not only to all citizens of this country, but also to residents of this country. I.R.C. §7701(a)(14) defines "taxpayer" as any person subject to any internal revenue tax. As courts have stated, "All individuals, natural or unnatural, must pay federal income tax on their wages."123 The Internal Revenue Code imposes a duty on individuals to file tax returns and pay the appropriate amount of tax. I.R.C. § 6012 states that an individual shall file a tax return if taxable income exceeds a given amount.124

In addition, Defendant's representation that the internal revenue laws have no application outside the District of Columbia and other federal property is wrong. As the Supreme Court stated long ago, "The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National. ..."125 In fact, the Internal Revenue Code's definition of "United States" includes "the States and the District of

The I.R.C. was enacted by Congress pursuant to the Sixteenth Amendment and imposes an income tax on citizens and residents of the 50 states and the District of Columbia. Taxation is not limited to just the District of Columbia, but extends to "United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves," such as post offices and Indian reservations.126

In the following subsections, we have broken the assertions above into sentences and organized them to facilitate detailed rebuttal. For our treatment, we will follow the same format as the IRS’ own “The Truth About Frivolous Tax Arguments” rebuttal available at:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/friv_tax_rebuts.pdf

Please therefore read the following subsections for the rebuttal of each point in the above quote.

5.6.13.8.4.1 Power to tax derives from Sixteenth Amendment

Contention: The power of Congress to impose a federal income tax system on citizens and residents of the United States derives from the Sixteenth Amendment.

Rebuttal: There is no question that the authority to impose any kind of income tax derives from the “domicile” of the persons taxed. This was confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland:

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located." [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

What both “citizens” and “residents” have in common is a legal domicile within the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) to be the District of Columbia and is nowhere extended in the I.R.C. Subtitle A to include any other place.

The “citizens” he is talking about are statutory “U.S. citizens” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. This type of citizen includes those born or naturalized in the federal zone and who maintain a domicile there. The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that such a statutory “U.S. citizen” subject to federal law is mutually exclusive from the constitutional “Citizen” mentioned in U.S. Constitution or the Fourteenth Amendment.

“The 1st section of the 14th article, to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[] except as he was a citizen of one of the state comprising the Union. Those, therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[], were not citizens.”

[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

The “residents” they are talking about are statutory “residents aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). Both the “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. residents” they are talking about, which collectively are called “U.S. persons” and defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701, are subject to the legislative jurisdiction of the United States by virtue of a domicile. Those without a domicile within the “United States” are “nonresident aliens”, which are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) as follows:

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) Nonresident alien

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

These distinctions originate from the differences in meaning of the term “United States” between the two distinct contexts in which it is frequently used:

1. The U.S. Constitution.

The “United States” as used in the Constitution can have one of two possible meanings, depending on the context: 1. The states of the Union; 2. The “national”/“federal” government. In the context of “citizens” defined in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, it means the states of the Union and excludes federal territories and possessions. The “United States” as used in most “Acts of Congress” or federal statutes means exactly the opposite in most cases, which is the states of the Union and excludes territories and possessions of the United States and the District of Columbia and excluding states of the Union.

“The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word 'state,' in that connection, was used simply to denote a distinct political society. 'But,' said the Chief Justice, 'as the act of Congress obviously used the word 'state' in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution, . . . and excludes from the term the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations.' This case was followed in Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hoole v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049, 17 Sup.Ct.Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it was said that 'neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution.' In Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 2 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners' Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within the contemplation of Congress.”

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]
The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

The distinctions in meaning of the term “United States” between that used in the term “citizen of the United States” in the Fourteenth Amendment, on the one hand, and Acts of Congress, on the other, is an important by-product, in fact, of the Separation of Powers Doctrine, which the U.S. Supreme Court said exists primarily to protect individual liberties:

We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties."

Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 455, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid. "

We further alluded to this separation of powers earlier in section 5.1.11, where we showed the exact breakdown of the I.R.C between each of the two distinct and completely separate taxing jurisdictions: National v. Federal. What the U.S. attorney is trying to do is exploit legal ignorance of the reader and confusion in order to break down the distinct separation of powers between the states and the federal government in order to trample on your rights. This is a crime, and its called "conspiracy against rights", in violation of 18 U.S.C. §242. Do you want your public servants wasting your tax dollars in this manner?

The Sixteenth Amendment, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, “does not extend the taxing power [of Congress] to new or excepted subjects”, so it’s irrelevant and a red herring. See the following:

“The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real bearing and may be put out of view. As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects, but merely removes all occasion, which otherwise might exist, for an apportionment among the states of taxes [247 U.S. 165, 173] laid on income, whether it be derived from one source or another. Brushaber v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 240 U.S. 103, 113, 36 Sup.Ct. 236, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 713, L.R.A. 1917D, 414; Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 112-113, 36 Sup.Ct. 278. [Peck v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]

"But, aside from the obvious error of the proposition, intrinsically considered, it manifestly disregards the fact that by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the 16th Amendment conferred no new power of taxation, but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged, and being placed [240 U.S. 103, 113] in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is, by testing the tax not by what it was, a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed.”

[Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

5.6.13.8.4.2 Fourteenth Amendment controls

Contention:

The Fourteenth Amendment controls the definition of citizenship. The Amendment states that "all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the States wherein they reside." Defendant's statements that federal income taxes do not apply to his "nonresident alien" customers, who are actually American citizens, are not supported by law. Federal income tax law applies not only to all citizens of this country, but also to residents of this country. I.R.C. §7701(a)(14) defines "taxpayer" as any person subject to any internal revenue tax. As courts have stated, "All individuals, natural or unnatural, must pay federal income tax on their wages.”

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Rebuttal:

The U.S. attorney is trying to confuse statutory “citizens of the United States” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 with constitutional “citizens of the United States” mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment. These are two completely different contexts that use mutually exclusive definitions of the term “United States” and therefore reference two completely different and separate political communities:

1. The federal zone, consisting of the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States;
2. The states of the Union, who are party to the Constitution.

These two mutually exclusive political and legal communities created by the Constitution and the two types of citizens are exhaustively analyzed in the free pamphlet below, and the U.S. attorney is demanded to rebut the evidence and admissions at the end:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The U.S. Attorney does not define exactly what he means by “American citizens”, but his meaning is clear: statutory “citizens of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and excluding Fourteenth Amendment “citizens of the United States”. The U.S. attorney also fails to recognize that there are TWO and not ONE type of jurisdictions that a person can be subject to. This was alluded to by the U.S. Supreme Court in U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark:

“...This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only—birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States[], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States[], but completely subject to their political jurisdiction, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [109 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[] at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”

A person can be subject to the “political jurisdiction” of the federal government without also being subject to the “legislative jurisdiction”. This would happen, for instance, when his domicile is outside of the “United States”. “Political jurisdiction” is NOT the same as “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” was defined by the Supreme Court in Minor v. Happersett:

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words 'subject,' 'inhabitant,' and 'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States[]. When used in this sense it [the word ‘citizen’] is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]
Notice how the Supreme court used the phrase “and nothing more”, as if to emphasize that citizenship doesn’t imply legislative jurisdiction, but simply political membership. We described in detail the two political jurisdictions within section 5.1.11. “Political jurisdiction” implies only the following:

1. Membership in a community (see Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874))
2. Right to vote.
3. Right to serve on jury duty.

“Legislative jurisdiction”, on the other hand, implies being “completely subject” and subservient to federal laws and all “Acts of Congress”, which only people in the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States can be. You can be “completely subject to the political jurisdiction” of the United States without being subject in any degree to a specific “Act of Congress” or the Internal Revenue Code, for instance. The final nail is put in the coffin on the subject of what “subject to the jurisdiction” means in the Fourteenth Amendment, when the Supreme Court further said in the above case:

“It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[]'”

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

So “subject to the jurisdiction” in the context of citizenship within the Fourteenth Amendment means “subject to the [political] jurisdiction” of the United States and not legislative jurisdiction, and the Fourteenth Amendment definitely includes people born in states of the Union.

A picture is worth a thousand words. We’ll now summarize the results of the preceding analysis to make it crystal clear for visually-minded readers:

The table below describes the affect that changes in domicile have on citizenship status in the case of both “foreign nationals” and “domestic nationals”. A “domestic national” is anyone born anywhere within any one of the 50 states on nonfederal land or who was born in any territory or possession of the United States[]. A “foreign national” is someone who was born anywhere outside of these areas. The jurisdiction mentioned in the right three columns is the “federal zone”.

NOTES:
1. “United States” is defined as the “District of Columbia” and no part of any state of the Union within 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 7701(a)(39), and 7408(d).
2. The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.
3. American nationals who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). See sections 4.11.2 earlier for details.

4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.

5. “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table

6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All “taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )(3), 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory “U.S. citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals” unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax treaty.

NOTES:
1. American nationals who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). See section 4.11.2 for details.
2. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.
3. “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and the territories of the United States[], excluding states of the Union.

When a federal officer asks you if you are a “citizen”, consider the context! The only basis for him asking this is federal law, because he isn’t bound by state law. If you tell him you are a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen”, then indirectly, you are admitting that you are subject to federal law, because that’s what it means to be a “citizen” under federal law! Everything they put on federal forms will always be in a statutory and not constitutional sense. Watch out! Therefore, as people born in and domiciled within a state of the union on land that is not owned by the federal government, we need to be very careful how we describe ourselves on government forms. Below is what we should say in each of the various contexts to avoid misleading those asking the questions on the forms. In this context, let’s assume you were born in California and are domiciled there. This guidance also applies to questions that officers of the government might ask you in each of the two contexts as well:

Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship

http://famguardian.org/
Now that we understand the distinctions between “citizens” and “nationals” within federal law, we are ready to tackle the citizenship issue head on.

Moving on, the statement is made: “Federal income tax law applies not only to all citizens of this country, but also to residents of this country.” The question then becomes: Which “country” are they talking about? What most Americans think of as one homogenous “country” actually consists of 51 independent “nations” or “sovereignties”:

1. The U.S. Supreme Court said that states of the Union are “nations”.

   “The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute.” [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

2. Definitions from Black’s Law Dictionary:

   Foreign States: “Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term ‘foreign nations’, ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

   Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

3. The U.S. code says that states of the Union are “nations”.

   TITLE 28 > PART I > CHAPTER 13 > Sec. 297.

   Sec. 297. - Assignment of judges to courts of the freely associated compact states

   (a) The Chief Justice or the chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit may assign any circuit or district judge of the Ninth Circuit, with the consent of the judge so assigned, to serve temporarily as a judge of any duly constituted court of the freely associated compact states whenever an official duly authorized by the laws of the respective compact state requests such assignment and such assignment is necessary for the proper dispatch of the business of the respective court.

   (b) The Congress consents to the acceptance and retention by any judge so authorized of reimbursement from the countries referred to in subsection (a) of all necessary travel expenses, including transportation, and of subsistence, or of a reasonable per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence. The judge shall report to the Administrative Office of the United States Courts any amount received pursuant to this subsection.

4. Legal encyclopedia Corpus Juris Secundum:

   "Generally, the states of the Union sustain toward each other the relationship of independent sovereigns or independent foreign states, except in so far as the United States is paramount as the dominating government, and in so far as the states are bound to recognize the fraternity among sovereignties established by the federal Constitution, as by the provision requiring each state to give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of the other states...”

   [81A Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), United States, §29, legal encyclopedia]

Third, the statement is made: “As courts have stated, ‘All individuals, natural or unnatural, must pay federal income tax on their wages.’” No argument there. The term “wages” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(a) and it includes just about anything.
However, those not subject to federal jurisdiction because they are “nonresident aliens” not engaged in a “trade or business”, such as American Nationals domiciled in states of the Union, are not “taxpayers”:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.872-2 Exclusions from gross income of nonresident alien individuals.

(f) Other exclusions.

Income which is from sources without [outside] the United States [District of Columbia, see 26 USC 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)], as determined under the provisions of sections 861 through 863, and the regulations thereunder, is not included in the gross income of a nonresident alien individual unless such income is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual. To determine specific exclusions in the case of other items which are from sources within the United States, see the applicable sections of the Code. For special rules under a tax convention for determining the sources of income and for excluding, from gross income, income from sources without the United States which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see the applicable tax convention. For determining which income from sources without the United States is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see section 864(c)(4) and §1.864–5.

These “nontaxpayers” cannot earn “wages” as legally defined within the Internal Revenue Code unless they volunteer by signing a voluntary contract agreement called a W-4 that requires them to call their earnings “wages” in the sense used in the Internal Revenue Code. Only by agreeing to call them “wages” through the operation of one’s private right to contract can the earnings be subject to tax and therefore “gross income” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §61:

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

(a) In general. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)–3).

§ 31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general. An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)–3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)–1, Q&A–3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

5.6.13.8.4.3 I.R.C. Imposes a Duty on Individuals to File on Earnings Above the Exemption Amount

Contention:

The Internal Revenue Code imposes a duty on individuals to file tax returns and pay the appropriate amount of tax. I.R.C. § 6012 states that an individual shall file a tax return if taxable income exceeds a given amount.

Authorities:

United States v. Drefke, 707 F.2d. 978, 981 (8th Cir. 1983).

Rebuttal:

More deliberately ambiguous language. Nowhere is the term “individual” even defined in the Internal Revenue Code. The only place it is defined is in the context of the Privacy Act, which defines “individual” as a government employee:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

5-857

Note the above definition is within Title 5, which is entitled “Government Organization and Employees”. This is the real “individual” that the U.S. attorney means: someone engaged in a “public office”, which is what a “trade or business” is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). After all, if he weren't engaged in a “trade or business” and he is a “nonresident alien” domiciled in a state of the Union, then 26 CFR §1.872-2 says he earns no “gross income” and is a nontaxpayer!

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.872-2 Exclusions from gross income of nonresident alien individuals.

(f) Other exclusions.

Income which is from sources without [outside] the United States [federal territory subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction per 26 USC 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d)], as determined under the provisions of sections 861 through 863, and the regulations thereunder, is not included in the gross income of a nonresident alien individual unless such income is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual. To determine specific exclusions in the case of other items which are from sources within the United States, see the applicable sections of the Code. For special rules under a tax convention for determining the sources of income and for excluding, from gross income, income from sources without the United States which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see the applicable tax convention. For determining which income from sources without the United States is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see sections 864(c)(4) and §1.864–5.

Most laws passed by the government can only regulate the “public conduct” of “public employees”. The notion of allowing Congress to legislate generally upon the life, liberty, and property of private citizens, in fact, is “repugnant to the Constitution”, according to the U.S. Supreme Court:

“The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned.”

[City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

5.6.13.8.4.4 I.R.C. Has No Application Outside the District of Columbia

Contention:

In addition, Defendant's representation that the internal revenue laws have no application outside the District of Columbia and other federal property is wrong. As the Supreme Court stated long ago, "The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National. ..."

Authorities:

Rebuttal:
There is no question that persons domiciled within a state are subject to two governments and two sets of law. There is, however a division of authority between the two and the power to tax internal to a state of the Union is exclusive and plenary to the state, meaning that it excludes the federal government:

It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation. The question in respect of the inherent power of that government as to the external affairs of the Nation and in the field of international law is a wholly different matter which it is not necessary now to consider. See, however, Jones v. United States, 137 U.S. 202, 212, 11 S.Ct. 80; Nishimar Eku v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 659, 12 S.Ct. 336; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698, 705 et seq., 13 S.Ct. 1016; Burnet v. Brooks, 288 U.S. 378, 399, 53 S.Ct. 457, 86 A.L.R. 747.

[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

A breakdown of that separation of taxing authority can only occur by the voluntary consent of the people themselves. The states cannot facilitate that breakdown of the separation of powers:

"State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in the Constitution."

[New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 142; 112 S.Ct. 2408; 120 L.Ed.2d. 120 (1992)]

That consent to allows federal income taxation within states of the Union requires a voluntary personal exercise of our private right to contract. A person domiciled in a state of the Union, who starts out as a “nonresident alien”, can become a “resident”, a “taxpayer”, and an “individual” under the Internal Revenue Code by making the necessary “elections” in order to be treated as a “resident” engaged in a “trade or business” instead of a “nonresident alien” not engaged in a “trade or business”. That election is made as follows:

1. Pursuant to 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a), a “nonresident alien” may submit an IRS Form W-4 to his private employer and thereby elect to call his earnings “wages”, which makes him “effectively connected with a trade or business”. This means, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) that he is engaged in a “public office”.

   26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

(a) In general. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p).

References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3).

2. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4) and 26 U.S.C. §6013(g), he can decide to file an IRS Form 1040, and thereby become a “resident alien”. IRS Publication 7130 identifies the IRS Form 1040 as being only suitable for use by “citizens and residents of the United States”. The “individual” in the title “U.S. Individual Income Tax Return” means a “resident alien” in that scenario. This is explained in the following sources:

2.1. Section 5.5.3: You’re Not a U.S. citizen if you file a 1040 form, You’re an alien
2.2. Section 5.5.4 entitled: “You’re not the U.S. citizen mentioned at the top of the 1040 form if you are a U.S. citizen domiciled in the federal United States”

Only AFTER the above “elections” or consent have been voluntarily procured completely absent any duress can the party become the object of involuntary IRS enforcement, and NOT before.

"Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."

If no consent was ever explicitly (in writing) or implicitly (by conduct) given or if consent was procured through deceit, fraud, or duress, the contract is voidable at the option of the person subject to the duress:

"An agreement [consent] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as the state of mind induced.\textsuperscript{129}\textsuperscript{129} Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced,\textsuperscript{129} and it is susceptible of ratification. Like other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to avoid it.\textsuperscript{129} However, duress in the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent when he has no intention of doing so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void.\textsuperscript{130}\textsuperscript{130}"\textsuperscript{130}

\textsuperscript{130} (American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, Section 21)

AFTER a nonresident alien domiciled in a state has made the elections necessary to be treated as though he is "effectively connected with a trade or business" by voluntarily signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4, the code says he becomes a "resident alien". In fact, we allege that the term "effectively connected" is a code word for "contracted" or "consented". The act of engaging in a "trade or business" makes nonresident aliens subject to the code, and under 26 U.S.C. \textsuperscript{130} 7701\textsuperscript{a}(39) and 26 U.S.C. \textsuperscript{130} §7408\textsuperscript{d}, their "effective domicile" shifts to the District of Columbia. Beyond that point, they become parties to federal law and whenever they walk into a federal district court, the courts are obligated to treat them as though they effectively reside in the District of Columbia. The older versions of the Treasury Regulations demonstrate EXACTLY how this election process works to transform "nonresident aliens" into "residents" who are then "taxpayers":

No question that their statement is accurate, but does it clearly state the truth? Which “State” are they talking about:

1. The ones in the Constitution.

"The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word 'state.' in that connection, was used simply to denote a distinct political society. ’But,’ said the Chief Justice, ’as the act of Congress obviously used the word 'state' in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution , . . . and excludes from the term the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations.’ This case was followed in Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hooe v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049, 17 Sup.Ct.Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it was said that ’neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution,’ In Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners' Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within the contemplation of Congress.”

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

Remember, the term “United States” as used in the Constitution and as used in Acts of Congress are two mutually exclusive places, in most acts of Congress. This was described earlier. The U.S. attorney is again trying to exploit the legal ignorance of the reader to create enough confusion to destroy the separation of powers doctrine and thereby trample on your rights and destroy the protections that it affords. This is a conspiracy against rights in violation of 18 U.S.C. §241, and it is being done with what we call “word smithing”, false presumption, and the abuse of law as “political propaganda” against an audience of people who went through twelve years of public (e.g. GOVERNMENT) schools and not once were taught the slightest thing about law. This is no accident, but an attempt to make government and the legal profession into the equivalent of a priesthood and an elite ruling class for the ignorant masses.

5.6.13.8.4.6 I.R.C. was enacted pursuant to the Sixteenth Amendment

Contention:

The I.R.C. was enacted by Congress pursuant to the Sixteenth Amendment and imposes an income tax on citizens and residents of the 50 states and the District of Columbia. Taxation is not limited to just the District of Columbia, but extends to "'United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves,' such as post offices and Indian reservations."

Authorities:

Sloan, 939 F.2d. at 501 (quoting United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, 629 (10th Cir. 1990); Betz, 40 Fed.Cl. at 295; see also In re Becraft, 885 F.2d. at 549-50 ("no semblance of merit" to claim that federal laws only apply to territories and District of Columbia); Ward, 833 F.2d. at 1539 (contention that United States has jurisdiction only over D.C. and other federal enclaves is rejected as a "twisted conclusion").

Rebuttal:

This statement by the U.S. attorney is true if the “United States citizens” he is talking about are statutory “citizens” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and which exclude constitutional citizens as used in the Fourteenth Amendment. As pointed out earlier, “citizens of the United States” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment include persons born or naturalized in a state of the Union and exclude those born in federal territories and possessions.

Yes, the tax is imposed upon statutory (but NOT constitutional) “citizens of the United States” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 26 CFR §1.1-1(c) and “resident aliens of the United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii). However, these persons have in common a domicile within the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) to include the District of Columbia and not expanded elsewhere within Subtitle A of the I.R.C. to include any other place. Consequently, pursuant to the rules of statutory construction, the states of the Union are excluded.

“Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another.” Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

“It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term,” [Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484 (1987)]

A person domiciled in a state of the Union, who starts out as a “nonresident alien”, can become a “resident”, a “taxpayer”, and an “individual” by making the necessary “elections” in order to be treated as a “resident” engaged in a “trade or business” instead of a “nonresident alien” not engaged in a “trade or business”. That election is made as follows:

1. Pursuant to 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a), a “nonresident alien” may elect to call his earnings “wages”, which makes him “effectively connected with a trade or business”. This means, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) that he is engaged in a “public office”.

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

(a) In general.

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3.

2. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4) and 26 U.S.C. §6013(g), he can decide to file an IRS Form 1040, and thereby become a “resident alien”. IRS Publication 7130 identifies the IRS Form 1040 as being only suitable for use by “citizens and residents of the United States”. The “individual” in the title “U.S. Individual Income Tax Return” means a “resident alien” in that scenario. This is explained in the following sources:

2.1. Section 5.5.3: You’re Not a U.S. citizen if you file a 1040 form, You’re an alien

2.2. Section 5.5.4 entitled: “You’re not the U.S. citizen mentioned at the top of the 1040 form if you are a U.S. citizen domiciled in the federal United States”

When a “nonresident alien” makes that election by, for instance, submitted a 1040 form instead of the correct 1040NR form, and signs a W-4, they are treated the same as any other “resident alien” domiciled within the United States. It is perfectly legal, because it was consensual and done through the private right to contract. Since the Constitution protects the private right to contract, no law or Constitutional mandate has been violated.

5.6.13.8.4.7 Taxing power of Congress extends to all the people of all the States

Contention:

Although the concept of federalism recognizes the dual sovereignty of the State of North Carolina and the United States of America, North Carolina is indeed one of the fifty states constituting the United States of America. "See, e.g., Testa v. United States, 330 U.S. 386 (1947)."

To paraphrase Justice Willis Van Devanter, when Congress, in the exertion of the power confided to it by the Sixteenth amendment, 133 adopted by the Code, it spoke for all the people and all the States, and thereby established a policy for all. That policy is as much the policy of North Carolina as if the Code had emanated from the North Carolina General Assembly, and should be respected accordingly by the citizens and courts of the State of North Carolina. Second Employers’ Liability Cases, 223 U.S. 1, 57 (1912). See also, Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876) (“The laws of the United States are laws in the several States, and just as much binding on the citizens and courts thereof as the State laws are.”) Respondent’s “foreign state of North Carolina” argument is patently frivolous, 134 and is hereby rejected as a basis for quashing the Collection Summonses in question.

Rebuttal:

The Court in the ruling above is trying to “cash in” on the confusion between the “States” mentioned in the Constitution and the “States” defined in the Internal Revenue Code, which are two mutually exclusive places. The “States” in the Constitution are the states of the Union, whereas those in the Internal Revenue Code include the District of Columbia, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) and exclude states of the Union. Nowhere in Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A is the term “States” defined to include anything other than federal areas within the external limits of a state of the Union. The “State” that the Court refers to is the same “State” mentioned in the Buck Act, which is defined in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) as a “territory or possession” of the “United States” federal government. The states of the Union are not territories or possessions of the United States, but “foreign states” within the U.S. Code. To wit:

"§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

"The word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under act of congress."

"While the term 'territory' is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of a territory, and 'territories of the' United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the United States exercises dominion, the word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization, has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and the term 'territory' or 'territories' does not necessarily include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under acts of congress. The term 'territories' has been defined to be political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term 'territory' is not a

The proposed Constitution, so far from implying an abolition of the State Governments, makes them constituent parts of the national sovereignty by allowing them a direct representation in the Senate, and leaves in their possession certain exclusive and very important portions of sovereign power. This fully corresponds, in every rational import of the terms, with the idea of a Federal Government.

“The Federalist No.9, at 55 (A. Hamilton) (J. Cooke ed.1961) (emphasis added) See also, “The Federalist” No.33, at 208 (A. may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution and in ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

"As used in this title, the term 'territories' generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states."

[Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories, §1]

Based on the judge’s comments, the legal encyclopedia is “patently frivolous”, which is absurd!

The part of the states of the Union that are “possessions of the United States”, such as federal enclaves or areas within the states, are the place where the Internal Revenue Code applies pursuant to the Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §106, and its implementing provisions found in 5 U.S.C. §5517. These areas are collectively referred to as the “federal zone”. This is the “nation” that the court is referring to, which is “the federal zone”. You will note that the U.S. Supreme Court said that the United States of America is NOT a “nation”, but a society.

“By that law the several States and Governments spread over our globe, are considered as forming a society, not a NATION. It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the important question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable instrument. ”
[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

The Court is trying to use “words of art” to destroy the separation of powers between the state and federal governments and thereby undermine the rights of the litigant, which is a conspiracy against rights. This conspiracy to destroy the separation of powers and thereby undermine our Constitutional rights is exhaustively described below:

[Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We agree with the judge that the taxing power of the “United States of America”, which are the states United under the Constitution and mentioned in the Articles of Confederation and which excludes the federal “States” (territories and possessions defined in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A, extends to every “individual” who is a “citizen” or “resident” of the federal zone. Dennis v. U.S., 660 F.Supp. 870, 875 n.2 (C.D.Ill. 1987) (“[T]he taxing power of the United States of America extends to every individual who is a citizen or resident of this nation.”). However, those domiciled within a state of the Union are not statutory “citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401, nor “residents”, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). Congress enjoys no legislative authority within a state of the Union because of the separation of powers.

It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247
U.S. 251, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation. The question in respect of the inherent power of that government as to the external affairs of the Nation and in the field of international law is a wholly different matter which it is not necessary now to consider. See, however, Jones v. United States, 127
U.S. 202, 12 S.Ct. 80; Nishimur Ekiu v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 12 S.Ct. 336; Fong Yue Ting v.
[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 295 U.S. 338 (1936)]

Consequently, no “act of Congress” can lawfully prescribe the citizenship status of a person born in a state of the Union or confer citizenship upon a person born in a state of the Union. State law, which is “plenary” and “exclusive” within its INTERNAL borders, is the only thing that can lawfully prescribe this under the Constitution. This is exhaustively proven in the paper below:
The judge also doesn’t define what he means by “individual” and the Internal Revenue Code very deliberately doesn’t define it. However, as we showed earlier in section 5.5.4, all “Individuals” within the Internal Revenue Code are federal “employees”, officers, agencies, and instrumentalities and exclude private Americans domiciled in the states. The only thing Congress has authority to legislate for are their own “employees”, officers, and instrumentalities. This is further exhaustively analyzed in the following memorandum of law:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The fox, which is the government, cannot be in charge of protecting the rights of the chickens, who are “private citizens” who are not “public officers” engaged in a “trade or business”, and simultaneously also have the authority to take those rights away through its legislation. This is an absurdity and on this subject, the judge contradicts himself.

Yes, the Secretary may issue summonses to inquire about liability. Sloan v. U.S., 621 F.Supp. 1072, 1073-74 (N.D. Ind. 1985) (Secretary may issue summonses to obtain information about ANY potential tax liability), aff’d. in part, dismissed in part, 812 F.2d. 1410 (7th Circuit 1987), aff’d. 939 F.2d. 499 (7th Cir. 1991), cert.den. ___ U.S. ___, 112 S.Ct. 940 (1992).

However, the summonses can only be issued to address activity within “internal revenue districts” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7601 and the only remaining internal revenue district is found in the District of Columbia pursuant to Treasury Order 150-02. 26 U.S.C. §7621 confers upon the President the authority to establish “internal revenue districts” within the “United States” (federal zone). By virtue of 3 U.S.C. §301, the President can delegate authority vested in him via Executive Order.

A former president delegated authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to establish internal revenue districts via Executive Order #10289, as amended. You will find E.O. #10289 published pursuant to 3 U.S.C. §301. If we refer to 26 CFR §301.7601-1, we find that E.O. #10289 is in fact the authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to establish internal revenue districts. The original authority for internal revenue districts was found in Treasury Order 150-01. The effect in law of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 was that the Secretary of the Treasury, in Treasury Order 150-02, abolished all then existing internal revenue districts and IRS offices outside of the District of Columbia or in states of the Union.

Consequently, the only place the IRS has summons authority is within the District of Columbia and certainly not within states of the Union that are not exclusive federal territory. If the esteemed judge disagrees, he is demanded to prove the existence of internal revenue districts within any state of the Union. We have been looking for several years for this information and have not found it, nor has any IRS employee we have ever met been able to produce it. Happy hunting!

We agree with the judge that “dual sovereignty” is shared between the federal government and the states. Second Employers’ Liability Cases, 223 U.S. 1, 57 (1912). See also, Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876) (“The laws of the United States are laws in the several States, and just as much binding on the citizens and courts thereof as the State laws are.”) However, the constitution delegates to the federal government authority primarily over affairs EXTERNAL to states of the Union while the states of the Union enjoy plenary power and exclusive legislative jurisdiction within their own INTERNAL borders. This is exhaustively explained in the case of United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, 299 U.S. 304 (1936).

Yes, the exertion of the plenary lawmaking powers of Congress over EXTERNAL affairs is binding upon citizens of the states of the Union, but only indirectly and not directly. Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936). Persons domiciled in states of the Union are affected by tariffs on imports imposed by Congress, but are not bound to directly pay them or to directly observe the laws that pay them. These tariffs instead are paid by companies importing the goods and those costs are added by the importer to the price of the merchandise sold once it enters the states.

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given..." in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

As far as the last item above goes, which is that of taxation, however, the U.S. Supreme Court has stated:

"The States, after they formed the Union, continued to have the same range of taxing power which they had before, barring only duties affecting exports, imports, and on tonnage. 2 Congress, on the other hand, to lay taxes in order 'to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States', Art. 1, Sec. 8, U.S.C.A.Const., can reach every person and every dollar in the land with due regard to Constitutional limitations as to the method of laying taxes."

Graves v. People of State of New York, 306 U.S. 466 (1939)

"The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."

Ashston v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513; 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)

"The grant of the power to lay and collect taxes is, like the power to regulate commerce, made in general terms, and has never been understood to interfere with the exercise of the same power by the State; and hence has been viewed as an extension which has been applied to the question under consideration. But the two grants are not, it is conceived, similar in their terms or their nature. Although many of the powers formerly [22 U.S. 1, 199] exercised by the States, are transferred to the government of the Union, yet the State governments remain, and constitute a most important part of our system. The power of taxation is indispensable to their existence, and is a power which, in its own nature, is capable of residing in, and being exercised by, different authorities at the same time. We are accustomed to see it placed, for different purposes, in different hands. Taxation is the simple operation of taking small portions from a perpetually accumulating mass, susceptible of almost infinite division; and a power in one to take what is necessary for certain purposes, is not, in its nature, incompatible with a power in another to take what is necessary for other purposes. Congress is authorized to lay and collect taxes, and to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax [internally] for the support of their own governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States [to tax INTERNALLY], an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States [to tax EXTERNALLY]. In imposing taxes for State purposes, they are not doing what Congress is empowered to do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within the exclusive province of the States. When, then, each government exercises the power of taxation, neither is exercising the power of the other. But, when a State proceeds to regulate commerce with foreign nations, or among the several States, it is exercising the very power that is granted to Congress, [22 U.S. 1, 200] and is doing the very thing which Congress is authorized to do. There is no analogy, then, between the power of taxation and the power of regulating commerce."

Gibbons v. Opgen, 22 U.S. 1 (1824)

"In Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 62, it was said that the police power is, from its nature, incapable of any exact definition or limitation; and in Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 818, that it is 'easier to determine whether particular cases come within the general scope of the power than to give an abstract definition of the power itself, which will be in all respects accurate.' That there is a power, sometimes called the police power, which has never been surrendered by the states, in virtue of which they may, within certain limits, control everything within their respective territories, and upon the proper exercise of which, under some circumstances, may depend the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, is conceded in all the cases. Gibbons v. Opgen, 9 Wheat. 203. In its broadest sense, as sometimes defined, it includes all legislation and almost every function of civil government. Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U.S. 317; S. C. 5 Sup.Ct.Rep. 357. [ . . . ] Definitions of the police power must, however, be taken subject to the condition that the state cannot, in its exercise, for any purpose whatever, encroach upon the powers of the general [federal] government, or rights granted or secured by the supreme law of the land.

Illustrations of interference with the rightful authority of the general government by state legislation—which was defended upon the ground that it was enacted under the police power—are found in cases where enactments concerning the introduction of foreign paupers, convicts, and diseased persons were held to be unconstitutional as conflicting, by their necessary operation and effect, with the paramount authority of congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states. In Henderson v. Mayor of New York, 92 U.S. 263, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice MILLER, while declining to decide whether in the absence of congressional action the states can, or how far they may, by appropriate legislation protect themselves against actual paupers, vagrants, criminals, [115 U.S. 650, 662] and diseased persons, arriving from foreign countries, said, that no definition of the police power, and 'no urgency for its use, can authorize a state to exercise it in regard to a subject-matter which has been confided exclusively to the discretion of congress by the constitution.' Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U.S. 276. And in Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U.S. 474, Mr. Justice STRONG, delivering the opinion of the court, said that 'the police power of a state cannot obstruct foreign commerce or interstate commerce beyond the necessity for its exercise; and, under color of it, objects not within its scope cannot be secured at the expense of the protection afforded by the federal constitution.'

And the Federalist Paper # 45 confirms this view in regards to taxation:

"It is true, that the Confederacy is to possess, and may exercise, the power of collecting internal as well as external taxes throughout the States; but it is probable that this power will not be resorted to, except for supplemental purposes of revenue; that an option will then be given to the States to supply their quotas by previous collections of their own; and that the eventual collection, under the immediate authority of the Union, will generally be made by the officers, and according to the rules, appointed by the several States. Indeed it is extremely probable, that in other instances, particularly in the organization of the judicial power, the officers of the States will be clothed with the correspondent authority of the Union.

"Should it happen, however, that separate collectors of internal revenue should be appointed under the federal government, the influence of the whole number would not bear a comparison with that of the multitude of State officers in the opposite scale."

"Within every district to which a federal collector would be allotted, there would not be less than thirty or forty, or even more, officers of different descriptions, and many of them persons of character and weight, whose influence would lie on the side of the State. The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite. The former will be exercised principally on external objects, as war, peace, negotiation, and foreign commerce, in which last the power of taxation will, for the most part, be connected. The powers reserved to the several States will extend to all the objects which, in the ordinary course of affairs, concern the lives, liberties, and properties of the people, and the internal order, improvement, and prosperity of the State. The operations of the federal government will be most extensive and important in times of war and danger; those of the State governments, in times of peace and security. As the former periods will probably bear a small proportion to the latter, the State governments will here enjoy another advantage over the federal government. The more adequate, indeed, the federal powers may be rendered to the national defense, the less frequent will be those scenes of danger which might favor their ascendancy over the governments of the particular States."

[Federalist Paper No 45 (Jan. 1788), James Madison]

The introduction of the Sixteenth Amendment did not change any of the above, because Subtitle A income taxes only apply within the federal United States, or federal zone. Even the Supreme Court agreed in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining that the Sixteenth Amendment "conferred no new powers of taxation", and they wouldn't have said it and repeated it if they didn't mean it. Whether or not the Sixteenth Amendment was properly ratified is inconsequential and a nullity, because of the limited applicability of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code to the federal zone. The Sixteenth Amendment authorized that:

Sixteenth Amendment

The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration.
And in fact, the above described amendment is exactly what an income tax under Subtitle A that only operates inside the federal zone does: collect taxes on incomes without apportionment within federal territory against those engaging in voluntary excise taxable federal franchises such as “domicile” and a “trade or business” (public office). It operates extraterritorially in the case of “public officers” abroad who continue to maintain a domicile in the “United States” (federal zone) pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 but has no authority to operate within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union. Furthermore, because the federal zone is not protected by the Constitution or the Bill of Rights (see Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)), then there can be no violation of constitutional rights from the enforcement of the I.R.C. there. As a matter of fact, since due process of law is a requirement only of the Bill of Rights, and the Bill of Rights doesn’t apply in the federal zone, then technically, Congress doesn’t even need a law to legitimately collect taxes in these areas! The federal zone, recall, is a totalitarian socialist democracy, not a republic, and the legislature and the courts can do anything they like there without violating the Bill of Rights or our Constitutional rights.

With all the above in mind, let’s return to the following cites to further analyze them

"The laws of the United States are laws in the several States, and just as much binding on the citizens and courts thereof as the State laws are. The United States is not a foreign sovereignty as regards the several States, but is a concurrent, and, within its jurisdiction, paramount sovereignty. Every citizen of a State is a subject of two distinct sovereignties, having concurrent jurisdiction in the State, concurrent as to place and persons, though distinct as to subject-matter."

[Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876)]

"And the powers of the General Government, and of the State, although both exist and are exercised within the same territorial limits, are yet separate and distinct sovereignties, acting separately and independently of each other, within their respective spheres."

[Ableman v. Booth, 62 U.S. 506, 516 (1858)]

The Constitution and the Bill of Rights, which are the “laws” of the United States, apply equally to both the union states AND the federal government, as the cites explain. That is why either state or federal officers both have to take an oath to support and defend the Constitution before they take office. However, the statutes or legislation passed by Congress, which are called “Acts of Congress” have much more limited jurisdiction inside the Union states, and in most cases, do not apply at all. For example:

TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
Sec. 4001 - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

(a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of Congress.

The reason for the above is because the federal government has no police powers inside the states because these are reserved by the Tenth Amendment to the state governments. Likewise, the feds have no territorial jurisdiction for most subject matters inside the states either. See U.S. v. Bevans, 16 U.S. 336 (1818).

Now if we look at the meaning of “Act of Congress”, we find such a definition in Rule 54(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure prior to Dec. 2002, wherein is defined "Act of Congress." Rule 54(c) states:

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(c), prior to Dec. 2002

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

Keep in mind, the Internal Revenue Code is an “Act of Congress.” The reason such “Acts of Congress” cannot apply within the sovereign states is because the federal government lacks what is called “police powers” inside the union states, and the Internal Revenue Code requires police powers to implement and enforce. THEREFORE, THE QUESTION IS, ON WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN RULE 54(c) IS THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS IN COURT ON AN INCOME TAX CRIME? Hint, everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 United States Code, happy hunting!

The preceding discussion within this section is also confirmed by the content of 4 U.S.C. §72. Subtitle A is primarily a “privilege” tax upon a “trade or business”. See and rebut the following if you disagree:
A “trade or business” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”:

"The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

Title 4 of the U.S. Code then says that all “public offices” MUST exist ONLY in the District of Columbia and no place else, except as expressly provided by law:

If we then search all the titles of the U.S. Code electronically, we find only one instance where “public offices” are “expressly provided” by law to a place other than the seat of government in connection with the Internal Revenue Code. That reference is found in 48 U.S.C. §1612, which expressly provides that public offices for the U.S. Attorney are extended to the Virgin Islands to enforce the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

Consequently, the judge’s arguments against the idea that a person domiciled in a state of the Union on other than federal territory is not a “nonresident alien” is “patently frivolous”.

5.6.13.9 Tax Returns of Nonresident Alien NONtaxpayers

5.6.13.9.1 Options for filling out return forms

Nonresident alien nontaxpayers who are NOT “individuals” have to be very careful how they file their tax returns. IRS tax forms are a deliberate trap because:

1. IRS only makes “taxpayer” forms. The IRS Mission Statement in IRM 1.1.1.1 says they only help “taxpayers”. If you are a “nontaxpayer”, they:
   1.1. Don’t have any forms to use for your status.
   1.2. Deliberately ignore and terrorize you, not help you.
2. If you send them a tax return, they will assume that you are an “individual” and therefore an “alien individual”. We now know after reading this memorandum of law that this presumption is FALSE in your case if you are a non-citizen national, because you are neither a “nonresident alien individual” nor an “alien individual”, but simply a “nonresident alien”, meaning simply that you are neither:
   2.1. A statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 nor
3. The only return form IRS has for human beings who are non-citizen national is the 1040NR.
4. The current version of the 1040NR form indicates that it is for use by “U.S. nationals” in blocks 1 and 3, BUT:
   4.2. If you are domiciled in a state of the Union, you are not a statutory “U.S. national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22), but rather simply a “national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
   4.3. The “U.S. national” status appears in the exemption block of the form, but nonresident alien who are NOT “individuals” and who have no “trade or business” earnings can’t take any exemptions or reductions in their liability because they aren’t subject to the code and therefore can’t accept privileges. See:
4.4. There is no way to describe your citizenship, domicile, and tax status on these forms WITHOUT taking an exemption. This is deliberate, so that:
   4.4.1. They can force you into a privileged state.
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

4.4.2. Cause you to engage in commerce with the government by accepting a “benefit” and thereby surrender sovereign immunity pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(a).

4.4.3. Help the IRS perpetuate false presumptions about you and illegally enforce the Internal Revenue Code against those who are not subject.

5. The perjury statement in the signature block on the 1040NR form, like all other IRS forms, places you in the federal zone, as we explained in section 5.6.13.4.7 earlier. To make things worse, if you try to physically modify the perjury statement to correct it, you place yourself outside the federal zone so that you DON’T commit perjury, the IRS tries to penalize you.

Members of this ministry are constrained by our Member Agreement in how to fill out tax return forms. To both conform with our Member Agreement and also avoid all the pitfalls of the standard IRS tax return forms, we suggest the following techniques that we use for preparing tax return forms for ourselves:

1. Use the standard IRS form to file the return.
2. Answer the questions on the form consistent with the content of the next section.
3. Attach the following form so that all the words on the form are defined to place you outside their jurisdiction and to prevent false presumptions about the meaning of “words of art”. This is also required by our Member Agreement:

   Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Attach the following form to ensure all the words on the form are defined to place you outside their jurisdiction and to prevent false presumptions about the meaning of “words of art”:

   Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. You may not avail yourself of any commercial “privileges” of the I.R.C. because this causes a surrender of sovereign immunity pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(a) and causes you to become subject to their jurisdiction:

   5.1. You may not indicate “trade or business” earnings in blocks 8 through 23. All these blocks must be ZERO. A “trade or business” is an excise taxable privilege. See:

   The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   5.2. You may not take any “exemptions” by checking any of the exemption blocks, blocks 1 through 7.

   5.3. Attach corrected information returns to the return zeroing out the false “trade or business” reports so that you are not connected to a “public office” in the government. See the following on how to correct erroneous information returns:

   Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

6. At the bottom of every page of the standard IRS 1040NR form write “Not valid without all enclosures attached and signed, quantity _____”. This will prevent them from excluding any of the enclosures as evidence if your tax return ever becomes the subject of litigation.

7. In the signature block on the signature line, put “See attached Tax Form Attachment for signature”. Then sign the Tax Form Attachment, which contains a redefinition of the perjury statement.

8. You should emphasize that:

   8.1. This is not a request for a refund pursuant to any provision of the I.R.C.
   8.2. You are not subject to the I.R.C. and do not claim any of the benefits or protections of the I.R.C.
   8.3. If you are asking for a refund, emphasize that this is a NON-STATUTORY refund request not pursuant to the I.R.C. Subtitle A franchise agreement, but rather subject to equity and not law:

   “A claim against the United States is a right to demand money from the United States. 135 Such claims are sometimes spoken of as gratuitous in that they cannot be enforced by suit without statutory consent. 136 The general rule of non-liability of the United States does not mean that a citizen cannot be protected against the wrongful governmental acts that affect the citizen or his or her property.” 137 property of an innocent person goes into the federal treasury by fraud to which a government agent was a party, the United States cannot [lawfully] hold the money or property against the claim of the injured party."

[American Jurisprudence 2d, United States, §45]

“When the Government has illegally received money which is the property of an innocent citizen and when this money has gone into the Treasury of the United States, there arises an implied contract on the part of the Government to make restitution to the rightful owner under the Tucker Act and this court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

90 Ct.Cl. at 613, 31 F.Supp. at 769.”

“The United States, we have held, cannot, as against the claim of an innocent party, hold his money which has gone into its treasury by means of the fraud of its agent. While here the money was taken through mistake without element of fraud, the unjust retention is immoral and amounts in law to a fraud of the taxpayer's rights. What was said in the State Bank Case applies with equal force to this situation. 'An action will lie whenever the defendant has received money which is the property of the plaintiff, and which the defendant is obligated by natural justice and equity to refund. The form of the indebtedness or the mode in which it was incurred is immaterial.'

[Bull v. United States, 295 U.S. 247, 261, 55 S.Ct. 695, 700, 79 L.Ed. 1421]"

8.4. As a person who is not subject to their jurisdiction and a “nontaxpayer”, you may not lawfully be penalized for any aspect of the submission. The Tax Form Attachment above already has this language to save you time.

9. REMEMBER: The shorter your submission is, the better off you are and the more likely you are to have the return processed rather than ignored.

If you want an example of how to do the above, we have a form that implements it all on our website:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.9.2 Joint Returns of Nonresident Alien NON-individuals married to “U.S. person” spouses

Nonresident aliens who are not “aliens” or “individuals” because they are non-citizen nationals cannot file a joint return unless both spouses are “U.S. persons”, meaning the nonresident spouse makes an “election” under 26 U.S.C. §6031(g) and (h) to be treated as a resident alien. IRS Publication 504, 2007, p. 3 says the following on this subject:

Married Filing Jointly

“Nonresident alien. To file a joint return, at least one of you must be a U.S. citizen or resident alien at the end of the tax year. If either of you was a nonresident alien at any time during the tax year, you can file a joint return only if you agree to treat the nonresident spouse as a resident of the United States. This means that your combined worldwide incomes are subject to U.S. income tax. These rules are explained in Publication 519, US. Tax Guide for Aliens.”

[IRS Publication 504, 2007, p. 3]

A “nonresident alien” who is a non-citizen national but not an “alien” and therefore not a “individual” cannot lawfully make an election to become a “resident alien” under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (a). A non-citizen national who declares a residence on federal territory becomes a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 rather than a resident alien pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). This is clarified by 26 CFR §1.871-2(b)(1), which is the only definition of “residence” and which associates it with an “alien” but not a “non-citizen national” or “national”:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART I—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.871-2 Determining residence of alien individuals.

(b) Residence defined.

An alien actually present in the United States who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the United States for purposes of the income tax. Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with regard to the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another country is not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite intention as to his stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in its nature may be promptly accomplished is a transient; but, if his purpose is of such a nature that an extended stay may be necessary for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily in the United States, he becomes a resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile abroad when the purpose for which he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the United States is limited to a definite period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within the meaning of this section, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

Therefore:

1. It is legally impossible and fraudulent for a “non-citizen national” to make an election to become a “resident alien” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) so that they can file jointly with a “taxpayer” spouse.
2. It is equally fraudulent for the “taxpayer” spouse to file a Form 1040, since they are not an alien and are not domiciled on federal territory, which are the two prerequisites for filing Form 1040.
3. For the same reason, it is unlawful and fraudulent for the IRS to do a Substitute For Return (SFR) or involuntary assessment on a nonresident alien who is a non-citizen national and not an alien or an “individual”. SFR’s are done on IRS Form 1040 rather than 1040NR. No one but the subject of the return can consent to make an election to become a “resident” and thereby use Form 1040. The IRS cannot compel you to make an election to be a resident and it is fraudulent to do so if you are not an alien. See:

Answers to Questions on IRS Form 1040NR Consistent with this pamphlet

Several people have asked us how to answer the questionnaire at the end of IRS Form 1040NR consistent with their status as described in this document. The form to which we refer is that indicated below:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSForm1040nr.pdf

The questions at the end of the above STANDARD IRS Form are designed to create an opportunity for the IRS to create a controversy that will open an opportunity for them to involuntarily or unlawfully assess you with a liability that you in fact DO NOT have or to penalize you unlawfully. Therefore, you must be very careful how you answer these questions. We also attach corrected information returns for all the years in question from the links below, along with a letter of detailed explanation to avoid any confusion or controversy:

1. Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001: Incorporates the following four documents into one PDR with added information.

2. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1042’s, Form #04.003

3. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1098’s, Form #04.004

4. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1099’s, Form #04.005

5. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2’s, Form #04.006

If you want to investigate these matters beyond that described in this section, see the following authorities:

1. Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001. Preferred over the standard IRS Form 1040NR.

2. Example Letter to Attach to your IRS Form 1040NR or Substitute 1040NR:
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We caution that it is a BAD idea to use STANDARD IRS Forms off the IRS website without attaching the following form because they create opportunities for false presumptions by ignorant clerks that are unwarranted and also invite the IRS to get into a pissing contest with you because they leave so many things unexplained.

Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Because of this, we send in the Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001, Item 1 above instead of the standard IRS Form 1040NR, and it completely avoids any disputes with the IRS or involuntary assessments that might result from them. All we get back is silence in response, because there is no “wiggle room” to create a controversy and anything they say will incriminate them beyond that point so they just shut up.

Below are the answers we use on our own standard IRS Form 1040NR, along with a detailed explanation of the answers. This description does NOT constitute legal advice and is not intended for use by anything but the author. Tailoring these answers to your specific situation is your choice and exclusive responsibility. These answers assume that the person filling out the form is born or naturalized in the United States OF AMERICA and therefore is a citizen under the Constitution of the United States, but does not maintain a domicile anywhere on federal territory and therefore is not a statutory “U.S. citizen” as described in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

A. What country issued your passport?

   ANSWER: United States OF AMERICA, NOT the “United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

B. Were you ever a “U.S. citizen”? □ Yes □ No

   ANSWER: The answer is NO, because this is a tax question and I’m not a citizen of the “United States” defined geographically in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) to include the District of Columbia and no other place. See the following and rebut the questions at the end within 30 days if you disagree. I am a “non-citizen national” as described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452. I am a constitutional “citizen” as described in the Fourteenth Amendment but not a statutory “citizen of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

C. Give the purpose of your visit to the United States:

   ANSWER: That depends on which of the three “United States” you mean as described by the Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945). The only “United States” you can legislate for in the context of a non- alien is federal territory and I’m not visiting that “United States”, which is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and nowhere expressly extended to include States of the Union.

"When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term's ordinary meaning," Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 ("As a rule, 'a definition which declares what a term "means"... excludes any meaning that is not stated"); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction §47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General’s restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary.

[Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]
D. Type of entry visa.

ANSWER: None.

E. Date you entered the United States.

ANSWER: Never entered the “United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

F. Did you give up your permanent residence as an immigrant in the United States this year?  □ Yes □ No

ANSWER: Not an “resident alien” in relation to the “United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). Rather, I am a constitutional citizen but not the statutory citizen described in 8 U.S.C. §1401. See and rebut the following within 30 days or you agree:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

G. Dates you entered and left the United States during the year. Residents of Canada or Mexico entering and leaving the United States at frequent intervals, give name of country only.

ANSWER: Never entered the federal “United States” during the year.

H. Give number of days (including vacation and non workdays) you were present in the United States.

ANSWER: Never physically present or domiciled anywhere within the “United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

I. If you are a resident of Canada, Mexico, the Republic of Korea (South Korea), or Japan ( and you elect to have the old U.S.-Japan income tax treaty apply in its entirety for ____) or a U.S. national, did your spouse contribute to the support of any child claimed on Form 1040NR, line 7c?

ANSWER: Not a resident alien of Canada, Mexico, Republic of Korea, or Japan. All “residents” are aliens, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).

J. Did you file a U.S. income tax return for any year before ____?

[Skip question. Only you know the answer to that question]

K. To which Internal Revenue office did you pay any amounts claimed on Form 1040NR, lines 60, 63, and 65?

ANSWER: The branch which handles nonresident tax returns, which is the International Branch in Texas.

L. Have you excluded any gross income other than foreign source income not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business?  □ Yes □ No

M. If you are claiming the benefits of a U.S. income tax treaty with a foreign country, give the following information:

ANSWER: Not claiming benefits of a tax treaty. Don’t need treaty benefits or deductions if no “gross income” and no earnings from the “United States”.

- Country:
• Type and amount of effectively connected income exempt from tax. Also identify the applicable tax treaty article.
  Do not enter exempt income on lines 8, 9a, 10a, 11-15, 16b, or 17b-21 of form 1040NR
• Type and amount of income not effectively connected that is exempt from or subject to a reduced rate of tax.
  Also, identify the applicable tax treaty article.
• Were you subject to tax in that country on any of the income you claim is entitled to the treaty benefits? □ Yes □ No
• Did you have a permanent establishment or fixed base (as defined by the tax treaty) in the United States at any time during ____?

N. If you file this return to report community income, give your spouse’s name, address, and identifying number.

ANSWER: First Amendment (right to NOT communicate) and Fifth Amendment. No “gross income” so none of your business.

O. If you file this return for a trust, does the trust have a U.S. business? □ Yes □ No

ANSWER: Neither submitter nor any business entities he is connected to have a domicile in the “United States” nor are engaged in excise taxable activities such as a “trade or business” that might create a duty to withhold or pay income taxes.

P. Is this an “expatriation return”

ANSWER: No. I never voluntarily surrendered my nationality, but remain a non-citizen national as described in 8 or 8 U.S.C. §1452.

Q. During ____, did you apply for, or take other affirmative steps to apply for, lawful permanent resident status in the United States or have an application pending to adjust your status to that of a lawful permanent resident of the United States? □ Yes □ No

ANSWER: No.

5.6.13.10  How To Correct Government Records to Reflect Your True Status as a Nonresident Alien

We, as natural persons, declare ourselves to be nonresident aliens for the purposes of federal income taxes by:

1. Reading and carefully studying our article on “domicile”, so we know all the ins and outs of what makes a person a “resident”. You will need this information later when filling out government forms that ask you about your “permanent address” and “residence address”. If you haven’t read this article, you won’t understand what they are asking for. See:
   Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Correcting government records to remove false presumptions about our citizenship status. This is done by:
   2.1. Filling out and resubmitting any form that indicated a citizenship status, such as the SS-5 Social Security application, Jury Summons, Voter registration, etc. On these forms we fill out and resubmit, we must.
   2.1.2. If we checked “U.S. person” (as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)), then we uncheck it.
   2.1.3. If we checked “U.S. resident” or simply “resident”, unchecking it.
   2.1.4. Indicate that we are “national” or a “state national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C.
   §1101(a)(22)(B) and 8 U.S.C. §1452.
   2.2. Applying for a new passport using form DS-11 and indicating we are a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not a statutory “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. See:
   http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/ApplyingForAPassport.htm
   2.3. Submitting our form below:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren't Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

3. Requesting certified copies of our passport records, including those developed in step 1.2 above, pursuant to the article below, for use as legal proof of our status to the appropriate financial institutions:

   Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Closing all financial accounts we have that have Social Security Numbers attached to them and reopening them with IRS Form W-8BEN’s and without Social Security Numbers. 26 CFR §301.6109-1 says that the use of a Social Security Number creates a prima facie presumption that we are a “U.S. person” with a domicile in the District of Columbia who is “effectively connected with a trade or business”. For instructions on how to open financial accounts without SSNs and using the W-8, see:

   About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. Changing our employment withholding forms by replacing any W-4 forms with AMENDED IRS Form W-8 or W-8BEN as follows:

   5.1. Do NOT use the original, because you are NOT a “Beneficial Owner”.

   5.2. As an alternative, you can use the form below as an even better substitute, if the recipient will accept it:

   Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.3. Use the instructions below to fill out the AMENDED IRS Form W-8BEN found at:

   http://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/W-8BEN/AboutIRSFormW-8BEN.htm

5.4. Provide the AMENDED W-8BEN form or our Form 02.001 above to:

   5.4.1. Financial institutions when opening accounts.

   5.4.2. Our private employer to stop illegal withholding of all donations (fraudulently disguised as “taxes”) from our pay. Guidance on how to do this is contained in the following free resource:

   Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers

   5.4.3. The IRS and state revenue agencies with every correspondence we send to them. It might also be helpful to attach the following form:

   Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

6. Not deducting or withholding Subtitle A federal donations on any of our earnings, as permitted by the applicable regulations. See the following free book:

   Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers

7. Educating financial institutions and private employers, as necessary, about the laws on withholding and reporting so that they do not submit false reports connecting us to a “trade or business”. Sue them under 26 U.S.C. §7434 for filing of false information returns if they refuse to obey the laws. See:

   7.1. Income Tax Withholding and Reporting Course, Form #12.004
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   7.3. Tax Withholding and Reporting: What the Law Says, Form #04.103
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

8. Regularly and repeatedly rebutting all false information returns, such as W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099, that might have been filed on us at any point in the past, and which are filed at any point in future from that point on. See:

http://famguardian.org/

9. If we file income tax returns, using the AMENDED 1040NR form instead of the 1040 form. IRS Document 7130 reveals that the IRS 1040 form is only for “resident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), or statutory “citizens” when abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911, who are ALSO resident aliens coming under a tax treaty with a foreign country. “Nonresident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) cannot use the IRS Form 1040 without making an “election” to become a “resident” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6103(g) or (h) or 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B). On this form, we must:

9.1. Not take any deductions. “Nonresident aliens cannot take deductions against earnings not connected with a “trade or business” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §162 because only those connected with a “trade or business” can take deductions. A person with no “trade or business” income needs no deductions anyway.

9.2. Indicate zero for “trade or business” income because we don’t hold “public office” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

9.3. Indicate zero for earnings not connected with a “trade or business” unless we receive payments from the U.S. government, such as Social Security. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(9) and 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(3) say that Social Security payments must be included as earnings from within the District of Columbia, which is what “United States” is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

9.4. Use the AMENDED 1040NR tax return indicated below, which removes false presumptions about your status:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

10. Rebutting all Currency Transaction Reports (CTR’s), IRS Form 8300, that might be filed against us falsely and illegally by financial institutions when we withdraw 10,000 or more in cash from a financial institution. The statutes at 31 U.S.C. §5331 and the regulation at 31 CFR §103.30(d)(2) only require these reports to be filed in connection with a “trade or business”, and this “trade or business” is the same “trade or business” referenced in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) and 26 U.S.C. §162. If you are not a “public official” or if you do not consent to be treated as one in order to procure “social insurance”, then banks and financial institutions are violating the law to file these forms against you. See:

Demand for Verified Evidence of “Trade or Business” Activity: Currency Transaction Report (CTR), Form #04.008
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

11. Rescinding our Social Security application, SSA form SS-5. This is an agreement that imposes the “duty” or “fiduciary duty” upon the natural person and makes him into a “trustee” and an officer of the federal corporation called the “United States”. The definition of “person” for the purposes of the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, codified in 26 U.S.C. §7343, incidentally is EXACTLY the same as the above. Therefore, all tax crimes require that the violator must be acting in a fiduciary capacity as a Trustee of some kind or another, whether it be as an Executor over the estate of a deceased “taxpayer”, or over the Social Security Trust maintained for the benefit of a living trustee/employee of the federal corporation called the “United States Government”. To rescind your Social Security application/contract, see the following for details:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Nonresident aliens pay on a graduated scale for income derived from a “trade or business” within the [federal] United States (U.S.* public office) in accordance with 26 U.S.C. §871(b). They pay a flat 30% on earnings from within the District of Columbia and nothing on earnings from within states of the Union under 26 U.S.C. §871(a). When we declare ourselves as nonresident aliens, we should be very careful to properly change our citizenship status as indicated in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

For more information on the nonresident alien position, refer to section 5.6.13 and following. Below are a few quotes that help explain succinctly the basis for the nonresident alien position. These quotes appear, for instance, in the Revocation of Election letter found in Section 3.5.5 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005:

“The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state.”

“State: The term “State” shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.”
[26 U.S.C. §7701]
"United States: The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes [is limited to] only the States [the District of Columbia and other federal territories within the borders of the states] and the District of Columbia."

[26 U.S.C. §7701]

“A canon of construction which teaches that of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.”

[U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949)]

“The term 'United States' may be used in any one of several senses. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations. It may designate the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States ex- [324 U.S. 652, 672] tends, or it may be the collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution.”

[Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)]

Foreign States: “Nations outside of the United States…Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term ‘foreign nations’, …should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”

Foreign Laws: “The laws of a foreign country or sister state.”

Treasury Decision 3980, Vol. 29, January-December, 1927, pgs. 64 and 65 defines the words includes and including as: "(1) To comprise, comprehend, or embrace…(2) To enclose within; contain; confine…But granting that the word ‘including’ is a term of enlargement, it is clear that it only performs that office by introducing the specific elements constituting the enlargement. It thus, and thus only, enlarges the otherwise more limited, preceding general language. The word ‘including’ is obviously used in the sense of its synonyms, comprising; comprehending; embracing.”

[Treasury Decision 3980, Vol. 29, January-December, 1927, pgs. 64 and 65]

"Includes is a word of limitation. Where a general term in Statute is followed by the word, ‘including’ the primary import of the specific words following the quoted words is to indicate restriction rather than enlargement. Powers ex re. Covon v. Charron R.L., 135 A. 2nd 829, 832

[Definitions-words and Phrases pages 156-156, Words and Phrases under ‘Limitations”: “]

"In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes, it is the established rule not to extend their provisions by implication beyond the clear import of the language used, or to enlarge their operations so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government and in favor of the citizen.”

"Almost a century ago, Congress declared that "the right of expatriation [including expatriation from the District of Columbia or "U.S. Inc", the corporation] is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government," 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868). R.S. § 1999, 8 U.S.C. § 800 (1940). Although designed to apply especially to the rights of immigrants to shed their foreign nationalities, that Act of Congress "is also broad enough to cover, and does cover, the corresponding natural and inherent right of American citizens to expatriate themselves." Savorgnan v. United States, 1950, 338 U.S. 491, 498 note 11, 70 S.Ct. 292, 296, 94 L.Ed. 287. The Supreme Court has held that the Citizenship Act of 1907 and the Nationality Act of 1940 "are to be read in the light of the declaration of policy favoring freedom of expatriation which stands unrepealed." Id., 338 U.S. at pages 490-499, 70 S.Ct. at page 296. That same light, I think, illuminates 22 U.S.C.A. § 211a and 8 U.S.C.A. § 1185."

[Walter Briehl v. John Foster Dulles, 248 F.2d. 561, 583 (1957).]

The hardest part for most people is completing the IRS Form W-8 or W-8BEN, which is the form you have to submit to a bank, employer, or financial institution declaring yourself to be a nonresident alien and thereby eliminating the need to withhold on your income. The problem they have is with the definition of the term “nonresident alien” on the W-8BEN form, which is:

---

IRS Publication 519, Tax Guide for Aliens says the following, which clarifies this:

> "If you are an alien (not a U.S. citizen), you are considered a nonresident alien unless you meet one of the two tests described next under Resident Aliens."

[IRS Publication 519]

If you want information on how to fill out the IRS Form W-8BEN, help is available at:

http://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/W-8BEN/AboutIRSFormW-8BEN.htm

We also have a free pamphlet for private employers that helps them understand all the options entitled “Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers” at:

What you need to remember is that if you follow the procedures we give to correct erroneous government records describing your citizenship and domicile status found in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005, then you become an “national” and a “nonresident alien” for the purposes of the tax code. Once you become a “nonresident alien”, you regain your constitutional rights and simultaneously deprive the federal government of jurisdiction over you. That is why we say that this step is VERY IMPORTANT!

IRS Publication 519, after the above clarification of the definition of “alien”, then talks about the two tests, which include the “Green Card Test” and the “Substantial Presence Test”. People look at the Substantial Presence Test and erroneously conclude that they pass the test and thereby qualify as resident aliens. They point to IRS Pub 519, which states that the term “United States” includes the 50 Union states. This is true, but misleading. The term “United States includes federal enclaves” or “areas” within the 50 Union states but NOT nonfederal areas! Furthermore, one is a federal statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 if they were born or naturalized in the District of Columbia or a territory of the U.S. but NOT the nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states. The Fourteenth Amendment section 1 states the following:

> “Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. “

The U.S. Supreme Court has clearly defined the meaning of the phrase “and subject to the jurisdiction thereof” in Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884):

> "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY SUBJECT [e.g., under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution] to their political jurisdiction, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts; or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired. Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States, members of, and owing immediate allegiance to, one of the Indiana tribes, (an alien though dependent power,) although in a geographical sense born in the United States, are no more 'born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' within the meaning of the first section of the fourteenth amendment, than the children of subjects of any foreign government born within the domain of that government, or the children born within the United States, of ambassadors or other public ministers of foreign nations. ."
The important phrase in the above Supreme Court ruling is “political jurisdiction”, which is NOT the same as “legislative jurisdiction”. “their political jurisdiction” in the above simply means the exercise of political rights, which include voting and jury service within states of the Union and nothing more. It doesn’t mean that they are “completely subject” to the legislative jurisdiction of any act of Congress or to federal statutes under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution.

You must be a “citizen” or “resident” under an “act of Congress” or federal statute in order to be subject to the general or exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Congress. Now the above considerations do not preclude “nationals” from electing to be federal “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which the federal government loves to do because that is how they manufacture “taxpayers” out of formerly sovereign Americans! Technically, and by law, however, a person born in a state of the Union isn’t a federal “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Natural persons born in states of the Union, however, are “citizens of the United States” under the 14th Amendment because the term “United States” in the Constitution means the collective states of the Union. Quite clearly, most people have never been statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but instead are “nationals” and “state nationals” under the following statutes:

- 8 U.S.C. §1452

Because of these considerations, it’s clear that there is IRS deception going on with IRS Form W-8BEN. "United States", in the context of natural persons, cannot include nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states because of Constitutional prohibitions against direct taxes found in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution. Remember!:

You should NOT and CANNOT rely on fraudulent IRS publications, including the W-8 for W-8BEN, to sustain a position or a good-faith belief, or even a fact, and therefore you should not assume that "United States" includes non-federal areas within the 50 Union states. This is covered extensively in section 3.19 of this book. Because you can't rely on IRS Publications or forms to sustain a position, then you have no choice but to rely on the law, which includes the Internal Revenue Code and the Treasury Regulations found in 26 CFR. The law is so ambiguous that it is “Void for Vagueness” (as section 5.9 of this book concludes) and there is no way for you to determine your liability or even if you are truthfully answering the questions on forms that don’t even define the terms they are using. And even if they defined the terms, you couldn’t trust them! This is described in our pamphlet: Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007

Another interesting fact to consider when you fill out your W-8 or W-8BEN form is that the entire Internal Revenue Code does not define the term "individual" to mean “natural person”! The closest it comes is in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1), where it defines “person” to include “an individual” but not a natural person, which is the proper legal term. Note the phrase “an individual” instead of “all individuals”. They are talking about a specific type of individual and not all natural persons generally. These conclusions are confirmed by the content of section 3.12.1.10 earlier. 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) confirms that the specific person who is the only type of “individual” in the Internal Code is a “public officers” or federal instrumentality, in fact, because this is the only person against whom distraint (force) is authorized. The word “individual” is also then never defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code, so we have to use the legal definition. If we look up the definition of “individual” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 773, we find:

"Individual. As a noun, this term denotes a single person as distinguished from a group or class, and also, very commonly, a private or natural person as distinguished from a partnership, corporation, or association; but it is said that this restrictive signification is not necessarily inherent in the word, and that it may, in proper cases, include artificial persons."

So naming “an individual” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1) as a “person” upon whom a tax is “imposed” in 26 U.S.C. §1 still doesn’t imply natural persons like you and me. As a matter of fact, according to the above definition from the legal dictionary, “individual” most commonly refers to artificial persons, which in this case are corporations and partnerships involved in foreign commerce as we said earlier in this chapter. These corporations, by the way, are the only entities involved in taxable activities under the 861 source position we cited in section 5.6.10 and following. The only thing Congress has done by using the word “individual” in the definition of “person” is create a circular definition. Such a circular definition is also called a “tautology”: a word which is defined using itself, which we would argue doesn’t define anything! If Congress wants to include natural persons as those liable for the income tax, then they must explicitly say so or an Internal Revenue Code is void for vagueness. At least the California Revenue and Taxation Code defines it correctly:
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t Liable to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

Since we can’t find the definition of “individual” in the Internal Revenue Code, we concluded that it must be buried somewhere in the regulations in order to hide the truth. After searching all 17,000 pages of the regulations (26 CFR) electronically, we found that definition and it confirmed our suspicions. Below is the only definition of “individual” we could find anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) or the Treasury Regulations (26 CFR), which also appeared earlier in section 5.5.1:

26 CFR 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c ) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

Did you notice that the definition of “individual” did not include “U.S. citizens”? Did you also notice that the definitions were not qualified to only apply to a specific chapter or section? That means that they apply generally throughout the Internal Revenue Code and implementing regulations! Therefore, we must conclude that the REAL “individual” in the phrase “U. S. Individual Income Tax Return” (1040 form) that Congress and the IRS are referring to can only mean “nonresident aliens” and “aliens”. That is why they don’t just come out and say “U.S. Citizen Tax Return” on the form.

So there you have it: if you were born in one of the 50 Union states outside of the federal zone and therefore are a “national of the United States of America”, then you aren’t a statutory “U. S. citizen” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or an “resident alien” defined 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). The only other thing you can be at that point is a “nonresident alien” and still be the “individual” mentioned in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1) who is the subject of the income tax in Subtitle A! If the Internal Revenue Code was written unambiguously, then it would define “Individual” to mean only corporations or partnerships involved in foreign commerce, which is why they chose to define it ambiguously in the first place! For everyone else who aren’t corporations, the money they pay to the IRS is a donation and not a tax! Are you blown away yet? Are you MAD yet?

Investigating this matter of the definition of “person” further, we find that there is a dead pointer in 4 U.S.C. §110(a) which points to a repealed 26 U.S.C. §3797 definition of the term "person". You can't know whether you , as a “natural person” fit the description of "person" found in the tax code unless and until it is clearly and unambiguously defined to mean “natural person”, which it is not anywhere in subtitles A and C. The closest realistic thing we have to a definition of the term "person" is in 26 CFR §301.6671-1(b), which defines who penalties may be levied against under Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code:

[Code of Federal Regulations]
[Title 26, Volume 17, Parts 300 to 499]

[Page 402]
TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
Additions to the Tax and Additional Amounts--Table of Contents
Sec. 301.6671-1 Rules for application of assessable penalties.

...
(b) Person defined. For purposes of subchapter B of chapter 68, the term "person" includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

The reason the government won't define the term "person" is because the U.S. Supreme Court in Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) ruled the following, which defines clearly that the true meaning of "person" in the tax code is "corporation":

"In order, therefore, that the [apportionment] clauses cited from article I [§2, cl. 3 and §9, cl. 4] of the Constitution may have proper force and effect ...[I]t becomes essential to distinguish between what is an what is not 'income,'... according to truth and substance, without regard to form. Congress cannot by any definition it may adopt conclude the matter, since it cannot by legislation alter the Constitution, from which alone, it derives its power to legislate, and within those limitations alone that power can be lawfully exercised ... [pg. 207]...After examining dictionaries in common use we find little to add to the succinct definition adopted in two cases arising under the Corporation Tax Act of 1909, Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 415, 34 S.Sup.Ct. 136, 140 [58 L.Ed. 285] and Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467, 469, 62 L.Ed. 1054...”

[emphasis added]

Among the cases referred to above in Eisner in the definition of "income" included the case of Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918), which further helps us define the term “income” and who the “person” is that is liable for tax on that income.

"...Whatever difficulty there may be about a precise scientific definition of ‘income,’ it imports, as used here, something entirely distinct from principal or capital either as a subject of taxation or as a measure of the tax; conveying rather the idea of gain or increase arising from corporate activities.

Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918), emphasis added]

And to put the nail in the coffin, here is the final case cited in Eisner, that of Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 414, 58 L.Ed. 285, 34 Sup.Ct. 136 (1913):

"This court had decided in the Pollock Case that the income tax law of 1894 amounted in effect to a direct tax upon property, and was invalid because not apportioned according to populations, as prescribed by the Constitution. The act of 1909 avoided this difficulty by imposing not an income tax, but an excise tax upon the conduct of business in a corporate capacity, measuring, however, the amount of tax by the income of the corporation... Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107, 55 L.Ed. 389, 31 Sup.Ct.Rep. 342, Ann. Cas."

So the real “person” to which Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code applies is a “corporation”, and corporations can be “citizens” and “residents” just as readily as natural persons.

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886]

When the Supreme Court says above that "income" means corporate profit, it means corporate profit from corporations involved in foreign commerce that comes under federal jurisdiction. Intrastate or interstate commerce of state-chartered corporations are exempt of the prohibition against taxes on exports from any state found in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of the U.S. Constitution. To tax a government privilege requires receipt of the privilege, and state corporations do not receive privileges, including the privilege of existing, from the federal government. Furthermore, even though the income tax is an indirect excise tax on privileges, it becomes a direct tax if it is levied upon natural persons, even if these persons are in receipt of privileges! A tax cannot be indirect unless it is levied on businesses and other artificial entities other than natural persons. Such artificial entities, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, can only be corporations involved in foreign commerce.
After studying the nonresident alien issue exhaustively, we reiterate the very important table found in section 5.2.1, which clearly establishes jurisdiction of the Federal government.

EXAMPLE: 1:9:4 = Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution.

NOTE: The federal government may only reach inside the borders of a sovereign state for the sake of enforcing areas over which the government has subject matter jurisdiction, because it cannot have territorial jurisdiction and cannot be sovereign there. Sovereignty is only exercised when the type of jurisdiction is exclusively territorial. This point is very important to remember when you read the Constitution.

Items #6 and 7 above clearly establish the lack of jurisdiction of the federal government to tax natural persons outside of the federal zone. The feds only have jurisdiction to tax profits of corporations located outside of the federal zone that are involved in foreign commerce but they can do so only under Subtitles D and E of the Internal Revenue Code and not under Subtitles A and C. They can’t tax natural persons because natural (biological) persons don’t make “profit” as it is legally defined. That is why the term “United States” found on the W-8BEN form coming under Subtitle A cannot mean nonfederal areas inside the 50 Union states if the person completing the form is other than a corporation resident in the federal zone. Sneaky, huh?

5.6.14 The Information Return Scam

As we said in the preceding section, the income tax described by Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is a franchise and excise tax upon “public offices” within the U.S. government, which the code defines as a “trade or business”. Before an income tax can lawfully be enforced or collected, the subject of the tax must be connected to the activity with court-admissible evidence. Information returns are the method by which the activity is connected to the subject of the tax under
Chapter 5: The Evidence: Why We Aren’t LIABLE to File Returns or Pay Income Tax

The authority of 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). When this connection is made, the person engaging in the excise taxable activity is called “effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States”.

The government cannot lawfully regulate private conduct. The ability to regulate private conduct is, in fact, “repugnant to the constitution” as held by the U.S. Supreme Court. The only thing the government can regulate is “public conduct” and the “public rights” and franchises that enforce or implement it. Consequently, the government must deceive private parties into submitting false reports connecting their private labor and private property to such a public use, public purpose, and public office in order that they can usurp jurisdiction over it and thereby tax and plunder it.

In a sense, the function of an information return therefore is to:

1. Provide evidence that the owner is consensually and lawfully engaged in the “trade or business” and public office, franchise. These reports cannot lawfully be filed if this is not the case. 26 U.S.C. §7206 and 7207 make it a crime to file a false report.
2. Donate formerly private property described on the report to a public use, a public purpose, and a public office with the consent of the owner without any immediate or monetary compensation in order to procure the “benefits” incident to participation in the franchise.
3. Subject the property to excise taxation upon the “trade or business” activity.
4. Subject the property to use and control by the government:

   “Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,—life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;—and to secure these rights, governments are instituted. That property for income which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit [e.g. SOCIAL SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public “benefit”]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”
   [Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

On the other hand, if the information return:

1. Was filed against an owner of the property described who is not lawfully engaged in a public office or a “trade or business” in the U.S. government. . .OR
2. Was filed in a case where the owner of the private property did not consent to donate the property described to a public use and a public office by signing a contract or agreement authorizing such as an IRS Form W-4. . .OR
3. Was filed mistakenly or fraudulently.

. . .then the following crimes have occurred:

1. A violation of the Fifth Amendment Takings Clause has occurred:

   U.S. Constitution, Fifth Amendment

   No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

2. A violation of due process has occurred. Any taking of property without the consent of the owner is a violation of due process of law.

3. The subject of the information return is being compelled to impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 43 > § 912

§ 912. Officer or employee of the United States

Whoever falsely assumes or pretends to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States or any department, agency or officer thereof, and acts as such, or in such pretended character demands or obtains any money, paper, document, or thing of value, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

4. An unlawful conversion of private property to public property has occurred in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §654.
   Only officers of the government called “withholding agents” appointed under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16) and the I.R.C. can lawfully file these information returns or withhold upon the proceeds of the transaction. All withholding and reporting agents are public officers, not private parties, whether they receive direct compensation for acting in that capacity or not.

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 31 > § 654

§ 654. Officer or employee of United States converting property of another

Whoever, being an officer or employee of the United States or of any department or agency thereof, embezzles or wrongfully converts to his own use the money or property of another which comes into his possession or under his control in the execution of such office or employment, or under color or claim of authority as such officer or employee, shall be fined under this title or not more than the value of the money and property thus embezzled or converted, whichever is greater, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; but if the sum embezzled is $1,000 or less, he shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001, Section 2
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Nearly all private Americans are not in fact and in deed lawfully engaged in a “public office” and cannot therefore serve within such an office without committing the crime of impersonating a public officer. This is exhaustively proven in the following:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001, Section 11
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

What makes someone a “private American” is, in fact, that they are not lawfully engaged in a public office or any other government franchise. All franchises, in fact, make those engaged into public officers of one kind or another and cause them to forfeit their status as a private person and give up all their constitutional rights in the process. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
IRS therefore mis-represents and mis-enforces the Internal Revenue Code by abusing their tax forms and their untrustworthy printed propaganda as a method:

1. To unlawfully create public offices in the government in places they are forbidden to even exist pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.
2. To “elect” the average American unlawfully into such an office.
3. To cause those involuntarily serving in the office to unlawfully impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
4. To enforce the obligations of the office upon those who are not lawfully occupying said office.
5. Of election fraud, whereby the contributions collected cause those who contribute them to bribe a public official to procure the office that they occupy with unlawfully collected monies, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §210. IRS Document 6209 identifies all IRS Form W-2 contributions as “gifts” to the U.S. government, which is a polite way of describing what actually amounts to a bribe.

For instance, innocent Americans ignorant of the law are deceived into volunteering to unlawfully accept the obligations of a public office by filing an IRS Form W-4 “agreement” to withhold pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §3402(p), 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a), and 26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1. To wit:

26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3

(a) In general.

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3).

26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general.

An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)-3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

Those who have not voluntarily signed and submitted the IRS Form W-4 contract/agreement and who are were not lawfully engaged in a “public office” within the U.S. government BEFORE they signed any tax form cannot truthfully or lawfully earn reportable “wages” as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3402. Therefore, even if the IRS sends a “lock-down” letter telling the private employer to withhold at a rate of “single with no exemptions”, he must withhold ONLY on the amount of “wages” earned, which is still zero. If a W-2 is filed against a person who does not voluntarily sign and submit the W-4 or who is not lawfully engaged in a public office:

1. The amount reported must be ZERO for everything on the form, and especially for “wages”.
2. If any amount reported is other than zero, then the payroll clerk submitting the W-2 is criminally liable for filing a false return under 26 U.S.C. §7206, punishable as a felony for up to a $100,000 fine and three years in jail.
3. If you also warned the payroll clerk that they were doing it improperly in writing and have a proof you served them with it, their actions also become fraudulent and they additionally liable under 26 U.S.C. §7207, punishable as a felony for up to $10,000 and up to one year in jail.

The heart of the tax fraud and SCAM perpetrated on a massive scale by our government then is:

1. To publish IRS forms and publications which contain untrustworthy information that deceives the public into believing that they have a legal obligation to file false information returns against their neighbor.

   "IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors...While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."

   /Internal Revenue Manual, Section 4.10.7.2.3 (05-14-1999)/

2. To reinforce the deliberate deception and omissions in their publications with verbal advice that is equally damaging and untrustworthy:

   p. 21: "As discussed in §2.3.3, the IRS is not bound by its statements or positions in unofficial pamphlets and publications."

   p. 34: "6. IRS Pamphlets and Booklets. The IRS is not bound by statements or positions in its unofficial publications, such as handbooks and pamphlets."

   p. 34: "7. Other Written and Oral Advice. Most taxpayers' requests for advice from the IRS are made orally. Unfortunately, the IRS is not bound by answers or positions stated by its employees orally, whether in person or by telephone. According to the procedural regulations, "oral advice is advisory only and the Service is not bound to recognize it in the examination of the taxpayer's return." 26 CFR §601.201(k)(2). In rare cases, however, the IRS has been held to be equitably estopped to take a position different from that stated orally to, and justifiably relied on by, the taxpayer. The Omnibus Taxpayer Bill of Rights Act, enacted as part of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988, gives taxpayers some comfort, however. It amended section 6404 to require the Service to abate any penalty or addition to tax that is attributable to advice furnished in writing by any IRS agent or employee acting within the scope of his official capacity.

4. For the IRS to be protected by a judicial “protection racket” implemented by judges who have a conflict of interest as “taxpayers” in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208, 28 U.S.C. §144, and 28 U.S.C. §455. This protection racket was instituted permanently upon federal judges with the Revenue Act of 1932 as documented in:

4.1. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)
4.2. O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939)

5. To receive what they know in nearly all cases are false information returns against private parties.

6. To protect the filers of these false reports.

   6.1. IRS Forms W-2, 1042-s, 1098, and 1099 do not contain the individual identity of the person who prepared the form.
   6.2. Only IRS forms 1096 and W-3 contain the identity and statement under penalty of perjury signed by the specific individual person who filed the false information return.
   6.3. If you send a FOIA to the Social Security Administration asking for the IRS Forms 1096 and W-3 connected to the specific information returns filed against you, they very conveniently will tell you that they don’t have the documents, even though they are the ONLY ones who receive them in the government! They instead tell you to send a FOIA to the IRS to obtain them. For example, see the following:

6.4. The IRS then comes back and says they don’t keep the original Forms 1096 and W-3 either! Consequently, there is no way to identify the specific individual who filed the original false reports or to prosecute them criminally under 26 U.S.C. §§7206 and 7207 or civilly under 26 U.S.C. §7434. In that sense, IRS FOIA offices act as “witness protection programs” for those communist informants for the government willfully engaged in criminal activity.

Information Returns Transcripts - 1099 Information

1. Generally, information returns are destroyed upon processing. Therefore, original returns cannot be retrieved. In addition, the IRS may not have record of all information returns filed by payers. The Information Returns Master File (IRMF), accessed by CC IRPTR, contains records of many information returns. The master files are not complete until October of the year following the issuance of the information document, and contain the most current year and five (5) previous years. Taxpayers should be advised to first seek copies of information documents from the payer. However, upon request, taxpayers or their authorized designee may receive “information return” information.

2. Follow guidelines IRM 3.5.20.1 through 3.5.20.11, to ensure requests are complete and valid.

3. This information can be requested on TDS.

4. This information is also available using IRPTR with definer W.

5. If IRPTR is used without definer W, the following items must be sanitized before the information is released:
   - CASINO CTR
   - CMIR Form 4790
   - CTR

6. Form 1099 information is not available through Latham.

7. To deliberately interfere with efforts to correct these false reports by those who are the wrongful subject of them:

7.1. By penalizing filers of corrected information returns up to $5,000 for each Form 4852 filed pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6702.

7.2. By not providing forms to correct the false reports for ALL THOSE who could be the subject of them. IRS Form 4852, for instance, says at the top “Attach to Form 1040, 1040A, 1040-EZ, or 1040X.” There is no equivalent form for use by nonresident aliens who are victims of false IRS Form W-2 or 1099-R and who file a 1040NR.

7.3. To refuse to accept W-2C forms filed by those other than “employers”.

7.4. To refuse to accept custom, substitute, or modified forms that would correct the original reports.

7.5. To not help those submitting the corrections by saying that they were not accepted, why they were not accepted, or how to make them acceptable.

8. To ignore correspondence directed at remedying all the above abuses and thereby obstruct justice and condone and encourage further unlawful activity.

So what we have folks is a deliberate, systematic plan that:

1. Turns innocent parties called “nontaxpayers” into guilty parties called “taxpayers”, which the U.S. Supreme Court said they cannot do.

"In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker] and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence into guilt, or punish [being a "nontaxpayer"] as a crime [being a "taxpayer"], or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a
2. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy equal protection and equal treatment that is the foundation of the Constitution, assigning all sovereignty to the government, and compelling everyone to worship and serve it without compensation.

3. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy all Constitutional rights by compelling Americans through false reports to service the obligations of an office they cannot lawfully occupy and derive no benefit from:

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied," Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence; Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345.

[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

5. Encourages Americans on a massive scale to file false reports against their neighbor that compel them into economic servitude and slavery without compensation:

"You shall not circulate a false report [information return]. Do not put your hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness."

[Exodus, 23:1, Bible, NKJV]

"You shall not bear false witness [or file a FALSE REPORT or information return] against your neighbor."

[Exodus 10:16, Bible, NKJV]

"A false witness will not go unpunished, And he who speaks lies shall perish."

[Prov. 19:9, Bible, NKJV]

"If a false witness rises against any man to testify against him of wrongdoing, then both men in the controversy shall stand before the LORD, before the priests and the judges who serve in those days. And the judges shall make careful inquiry, and indeed, if the witness is a false witness, who has testified falsely against his brother, then you shall do to him as he thought to have done to his brother; enticement into slavery (pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §1994) to the demands of others without compensation] so you shall put away the evil from among you. And those who remain shall hear and fear, and hereafter they shall not again commit such evil among you. Your eye shall not pity: life shall be for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot."

[Deut. 19:16-21, Bible, NKJV]

6. Constitutes a plan to implement communism in America. The Second Plank of the Communist Manifesto is a heavy, progressive income tax that punishes the rich and abuses the taxation powers of the government to redistribute wealth.

7. Constitutes a conspiracy to replace a de jure Constitutional Republic into nothing but a big for-profit private corporation and business in which:

7.1. Government becomes a virtual or political entity rather than physical entity tied to a specific territory. All the “States” after the Civil War rewrote their Constitutions to remove references to their physical boundaries. Formerly “sovereign” and independent states have become federal territories and federal corporations by signing up for federal franchises:

At common law, a "corporation" was an "artificial perso[n] endowed with the legal capacity of perpetual succession" consisting either of a single individual (termed a "corporation sole") or of a collection of several individuals (a "corporation aggregate"). 3 H. Stephen, Commentaries on the Laws of England 166, 168 (1st Am. ed. 1845) . The sovereign was considered a corporation. See id., at 170; see also 1 W. Blackstone, Commentaries *467. Under the definitions supplied by contemporary law dictionaries, Territories would have been classified as "corporations" (and hence as "persons") at the time that 1983 was enacted and the Dictionary Act recodified. See W. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 261 (1893) ("All corporations were originally modeled upon a state or nation"); 1 J. Bouvier, A Law Dictionary Adapted to the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America 318-319 (11th ed. 1866) ("In this extensive sense the United States may be termed a corporation"); Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151, 154 (1886) ("The United States is a . . . great corporation . . . ordained and established by the American people") (quoting United [195 U.S. 182, 202] States v. Maurice, 26 F.Cas. 1211, 1216 (No. 15,747) (CC Va. 1823) (Marshall, C. J.)); Canton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 231 (1851) (United States is "a corporation"); See generally Trustees of Dartmouth College v. 5.6.15 All compensation for your personal labor is deductible from “gross income” on your tax return

It may surprise you to learn that the Internal Revenue Code allows for anyone to deduct the full market value and compensation received in exchange for their personal labor. This section will summarize why this is, and is based on a free pamphlet available below:

How the Government Defrauds You Out of Legitimate Deductions for the Market Value of Your Labor, Form #05.026
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The following subsections do not advocate the position that all the costs of producing one’s own labor (i.e. food, shelter, clothing, health maintenance expenses) should be deducted from the earnings arising therefrom in computing “profit”. Instead, this document establishes that no part of one’s own labor constitutes “profit” under Natural Law or within the context of the United States Constitution or the legislative intent of Congress. Others have attempted to deduct the cost of keeping one’s body whole (e.g. food, shelter, clothing, medicine) as a deduction for the production of their own labor. This is a complete misunderstanding of the value of one’s own labor as their own exclusive property, as further established herein with cogent legal authorities. The primary reason why one cannot deduct the costs for producing their own labor is because then the government could tell you what size house you could live in, what car you drive, and what food you eat as reasonable deductions for the production of said labor. We certainly don’t want the government meddling in or dictating any of these choices that only we have a protected right to make. If you want an example of how NOT to approach the issues raised in this pamphlet, it may be instructive to read a book by former U.S. Attorney John C. Garrison entitled The New Income Tax Scandal. In that book, he wrongfully tries to establish that we should be allowed deductions associated with the cost of producing our labor, rather than the approach established herein of saying that there is no such thing as “profit” in the context of one’s own labor on one’s own tax return.

5.6.15.1 Why One’s Own Labor is not an article of Commerce and cannot Produce “profit” in the Context of Oneself

The Constitution. Unlike political parties, which evolve their policies and programs through public means, by the reconciliation of a wide variety of individual views, and submit those policies and programs to the electorate at large for approval or disapproval, the policies and programs of the Communist Party are secretly [by corrupt judges and the IRS in complete disregard of the tax laws] prescribed for it by the foreign leaders of the world Communist movement [the IRS and Federal Reserve]. Its members [the Congress, which was terrorized to do IRS bidding recently by the framing of Congressman Traficant] have no part in determining its goals, and are not permitted to voice dissent to party objectives. Unlike members of political parties, members of the Communist Party are recruited for indoctrination in the public schools by homosexuals, liberals, and socialists with respect to its objectives and methods, and are organized, instructed, and disciplined [by the IRS and a corrupted judiciary] to carry into action slavishly the assignments given them by their hierarchical chiefs. Unlike political parties, the Communist Party [thanks to a corrupted federal judiciary] acknowledges no constitutional or statutory limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members. The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available means, including resort to force and violence [for using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States. It is the means whereby individuals are seduced into the service of the world Communist movement, trained to do its bidding, and directed and controlled in the conspiratorial performance of their revolutionary services. Therefore, the Communist Party should be outlawed

Information Return FOIA: "Trade or Business", Form #03.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

http://famguardian.org/
The following question naturally arises from the preceding sections relating to “profit”:

QUESTION: What is “profit” in the context not of a business, but a private individual who offers his valuable labor in exchange for some other valuable commodity?

ANSWER: In the context of private individuals who sell their labor in exchange for money, there cannot lawfully be any such thing as “profit”. The exchange of valuable labor for some other valuable commodity is an EQUAL exchange which does not have any profit involved, and therefore cannot be the subject of any kind of tax upon profits. If labor has no value in the exchange, then no one would be willing to pay anything for it! Anyone who argues with this premise can do nothing but contradict themselves.

The above conclusions are confirmed by the U.S. Code, which says that “the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce”:

---

TITLE 15 > CHAPTER 1 > § 17

§ 17. Antitrust laws not applicable to labor organizations

The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. Nothing contained in the antitrust laws shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations, instituted for the purposes of mutual help, and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations from lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof; nor shall such organizations, or the members thereof, be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade, under the antitrust laws.

If “the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce”, then at least in the context of oneself, it cannot produce “profit” in the context of oneself as a natural person. Consequently, there can be neither “profit” NOR its inverse, which is “loss”, in connection with one’s own labor. The full market value of the labor, which is the full amount we received as payment for it and not more, may lawfully be deducted from the compensation received in EQUAL exchange for it pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §83, thus rendering neither profit nor loss. We cannot lawfully take deductions in connection with the expenses needed to produce our own labor, because these expenses might exceed the compensation and thereby produce a loss which compels the government to in effect subsidize people who work for less than the full Fair Market Value or Cost of Producing their labor by giving them a tax break.

The debates on the Sixteenth Amendment, which the government frequently identifies as the source of their authority to tax the labor of a human being, also abundantly confirm that the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment never included the goal of taxing the labor of a human being. Instead, the main purpose of that amendment was to tax passive, unearned profits large corporations and trusts that had grown to gargantuan proportions at that time. You can read the entire Sixteenth Amendment Congressional debates below, and it is electronically searchable for your convenience:

Congressional Debates on the Sixteenth Amendment

Among the statements during those debates were the following, which confirm the findings of this section:

“Mr. Brandegee. Mr. President, what I said was that the amendment exempts absolutely everything that a man makes for himself. Of course it would not exempt a legacy which somebody else made for him and gave to him. If a man’s occupation or vocation—for vocation means nothing but a calling—if his calling or occupation were that of a financier it would exempt everything he made by underwriting and by financial operations in the course of a year that would be the product of his effort [LABOR]. Nothing can be imagined that a man can busy himself about with a view of profit which the amendment as drawn would not utterly exempt.”

[50 Cong.Rec. p. 3839, 1913]

The U.S. Supreme Court has also admitted that labor is not taxable, when it said:

“Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will ...”

[The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66, 10 Wheat 66, 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

“There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual

The power to tax the exercise of a privilege is the power to control or suppress its enjoyment. Magnano v. Hamilton, 292 U.S. 40, 44, 45 S.Ct. 599, 601, and cases cited. Those who can tax the exercise of this religious practice can make its exercise so costly as to deprive it of the resources necessary for its maintenance. Those who can tax the privilege of engaging in this form of missionary evangelism can close its doors to all those who do not have a full purse. Spreading religious beliefs in this ancient and honorable manner would thus be denied the needy. Those who can deprive religious groups of their colporteurs can take from them a part of the vital power of the press which has survived from the Reformation.

It is contended, however, that the fact that the license tax can suppress or control this activity is unimportant if it does not do so. But that is to disregard the nature of this tax. It is a license tax—a flat tax imposed on the exercise of a privilege granted by the Bill of Rights. A state may not impose a charge for the enjoyment of a right granted by the federal constitution. Thus, it may not exact a license tax for the privilege of carrying on interstate commerce (McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Co., 309 U.S. 33, 56-58, 60 S.Ct. 388, 397, 398, 128 A.L.R. 876), although it may tax the property used in, or the income derived from, that commerce, so long as those taxes are not discriminatory. Id., 309 U.S. at page 47, 60 S.Ct. at page 392, 128 A.L.R. 876 and cases cited. A license tax applied to activities guaranteed by the First Amendment would have the same destructive effect. It is true that the First Amendment, like the commerce clause, draws no distinction between license taxes, fixed sum taxes, and other kinds of taxes. But that is no reason why we should shut our eyes to the nature of the tax and its destructive influence. The power to impose a license tax on the exercise of these freedoms is indeed as potent as the power of censorship which this Court has repeatedly struck down. Lovell v. Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S.Ct. 666; Schneider v. State, supra; Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 306, 60 S.Ct. 900, 904, 128 A.L.R. 1352; Largent v. Texas, 318 U.S. 418, 63 S.Ct. 667, 87 L.Ed. --; Jamison v. Texas, supra. It was for that reason that the dissenting opinions in Jones v. Opelika, supra, stressed the nature of this type of tax. 316 U.S. at pages 607-609, 620, 623, 62 S.Ct. at pages 1243, 1244, 1250, 1251, 141 A.L.R. 514. In that case, as in the present ones, we have something very different from a registration system under which those going from house to house are required to give their names, addresses and other marks of identification to the authorities. In all of these cases the issuance of the permit or license is dependent on the payment of a license tax. And the license tax is fixed in amount and unrelated to the scope of the activities of petitioners or to their realized revenues. It is not a nominal fee [319 U.S. 105, 114] imposed as a regulatory measure to defray the expenses of policing the activities in question. It is in no way apportioned. It is a flat tax levied and collected as a condition to the pursuit of activities whose enjoyment is guaranteed by the First Amendment. Accordingly, it restrains in advance those constitutional liberties of press and religion and inevitably tends to suppress their exercise. That is almost uniformly recognized as the inherent vice and evil of this flat license tax. As stated by the Supreme Court of Illinois in a case involving this same sect and an ordinance similar to the present one, a person cannot be compelled 'to purchase, through a license fee or a license tax, the privilege freely granted by the constitution.' Blue Island v. Kozul, 379 Ill. 511, 519, 41 N.E.2d. 515, 519. So it may not be said that proof is lacking that these license taxes either separately or cumulatively have restricted or are likely to restrict petitioners' religious activities. On their face they are a restriction of the free exercise of those freedoms which are protected by the First Amendment.

The ability to exchange your labor, which has an intrinsic and definable value, for some other valuable commodity is a right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States of America. This is the reason for the existence of 26 U.S.C. §83 and the reason why no part of your own personal labor, including that connected with privileged activities such as “trade or business”, can be the subject of any tax. There is no such thing as “profit” in the context of your own personal labor, because they can’t tax or regulate the enjoyment of a right guaranteed by the Constitution. The state may tax profits... associated with other people you hire in the context of your business\(^{141}\), but not your OWN personal labor in the context of your OWN personal income tax return. You have a RIGHT to enjoy property, and you are your own property! Lynch v. Household Finance Corp., 405 U.S. 538 (1972). You own, govern, and control the exclusive and enjoyment of yourself.\(^{142}\) Anyone who interferes with the enjoyment of that right is instituting involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. Philosophy of Liberty

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Articles/PhilosophyOfLiberty.htm

5.6.15.2 Why Labor is Property

“Property” is legally defined as follows:

> “Property. That which is peculiar or proper to any person; that which belongs exclusively to one. In the strict legal sense, an aggregate of rights which are guaranteed and protected by the government,” Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. v. State, 65 Misc. Rep. 263, 121 N.Y.S. 536. The term is said to extend to every species of valuable right and interest. More specifically, ownership, the unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to dispose of a thing in every legal way, to possess it, to use it, and to exclude every one else from interfering with it. That dominion or indefinite right of particular things or subjects. The exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing. The highest right a man can have to anything; being used to refer to that right which one has to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depends on another man’s courtesy.

The word is also commonly used to denote everything which is the subject of ownership; corporeal or incorporeal, tangible or intangible, visible or invisible, real or personal; everything that has an exchangeable value or which goes to make up wealth or estate. It extends to every species of valuable right and interest, and includes real and personal property, easements, franchises, and incorporeal hereditaments, and includes every invasion of one’s property rights by actionable wrong. Labberton v. General Gas. Co. of America, 53 Wash. 2d. 180, 332 P.2d. 250, 252, 254.

Property within constitutional protection, denotes group of rights inhering in citizen’s relation to physical thing, as right to possess, use and dispose of it. Cereghino v. State By and Through State Highway Commission, 230 Or. 439, 370 P.2d. 694. 697.”

The U.S. Supreme Court defined "labor" as property

> “Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment...It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOLABLE... to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property.”

[Butcher’s Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884), Concurring opinion of Justice Field]

There is ample case law to support the principle of statutory construction which makes the term “any property” all inclusive; meaning that nothing is to be excluded by the word “any”. This is confirmed by the following cases where the United States contends successfully that "any property" is all inclusive and means all property (see U.S. v. Monsanto, 491 U.S. 600, 607-611 and (syllabus) (1989); United States v. Alvarez-Sanchez, 511 U.S. 350, 357 (1994); U.S. v. Gonzales, \(^{141}\) If in fact Congress has expressly extended the authority of the Secretary of the United States Treasury to operate outside the District of Columbia and within the several 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72 As of the time of this writing, no officer of the United States has been able to produce even one statute or law which so extends the authority of the Secretary to the 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.

\(^{142}\) You have an exclusive right to decide whether you go to work today, how much you want to work for, or whether you want to give away your labor for free. You don’t have to ask the government’s permission to make ANY one of these decisions. Therefore, your labor is completely and exclusively your own property, and no one can dictate what one can do with that property or the fruits of that property in a truly free society.
As used in statutes and regulations, the terms “any” or “any property” are to be construed as all inclusive until Congress expressly provides an exception to support the notion that such terms are not all inclusive. Since the 1989 Monsanto decision regarding “any property,” three very recent decisions supra deal directly with the same question as to how to interpret the term “any”; as all inclusive and not subject to derogation.

The U.S. Supreme Court has also affirmed the RIGHT of everyone to exchange their labor, which is property, for something of equal value. When any third party, including the government, interferes with such an exchange, for instance by involuntarily withholding a portion of that exchange and thereby depriving either party to the contract of liberty and property, then that party is violating rights. Such interference, we might add, also includes levying involuntary taxes upon one’s labor. To wit:

“Included in the right of personal liberty and the right of private property—partaking of the nature of each—is the right to make contracts for the acquisition of property. Chief among such contracts is that of personal employment, by which labor and other services are exchanged for money or other forms of property. If this right be struck down or arbitrarily interfered with, there is a substantial impairment of liberty in the long-established constitutional sense. The right is as essential to the laborer as to the capitalist, to the poor as to the rich; for the vast majority of persons have no other honest way to begin to acquire property, save by working for money.

An interference with this liberty so serious as that now under consideration, and so disturbing of equality of right, must be deemed to be arbitrary, unless it be supportable as a reasonable exercise of the police power of the state. But, notwithstanding the strong general presumption in favor of the validity of state laws, we do not think the statute in question, as construed and applied in this case, can be sustained as a legitimate exercise of that power. To avoid possible misunderstanding, we should here emphasize, what has been said before, that so far as its title or enacting clause expresses a purpose to deal with coercion, compulsion, duress, or other undue influence, we have no present concern with it, because nothing of that sort is involved in this case. As has [236 U.S. 1, 15] been many times stated, this court deals not with moot cases or abstract questions, but with the concrete case before it. California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U.S. 308, 314; 37 S. L.Ed. 747, 748, 13 Sup.Ct.Rep. 876; Richardson v. McChesney, 218 U.S. 487, 492; 54 S. L.Ed. 1121, 1122, 31 Sup.Ct.Rep. 43; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade, 193 U.S. 642, 648; 34 S. L.Ed. 1135, 1137, 34 Sup.Ct.Rep. 678. We do not mean to say, therefore, that a state may not properly exert its police power to prevent coercion on the part of employers towards employees, or vice versa.

As to the interest of the employed, it is said by the Kansas supreme court to be a matter of common knowledge that ‘employees, as a rule, are not financially able to be as independent in making contracts for the sale of their labor as are employers in making a contract of purchase thereof.’ No doubt, wherever the right of private property exists, there must and will be inequalities of fortune; and thus it naturally happens that parties negotiating about a contract are not equally unhindered by circumstances. This applies to all contracts, and not merely to that between employer and employee. Indeed, a little reflection will show that wherever the right of private property exists, the right of free contract coexist, each party when contracting is inevitably more or less influenced by the question whether he has much property, or little, or none; for the contract is made to the very end that each may gain something that he needs or desires more urgently than that which he proposes to give in exchange. And, since it is self-evident that, unless all things are held in common, some persons must have more property than others, it is from the nature of things impossible to uphold freedom of contract and the right of private property without at the same time recognizing as legitimate those inequalities of fortune that are the necessary result of the exercise of those rights. But the 14th Amendment, in declaring that a state shall not ‘deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law’; ‘gives to each of these an equal sanction; it recognizes ‘liberty’ and ‘property’ as coexistent human rights, and debars the states from any unwarranted interference with either.

And since a state may not strike them down directly, it is clear that it may not do so indirectly, as by declaring in effect that the public good requires the removal of those [236 U.S. 1, 18] inequalities that are but the normal and inevitable result of their exercise, and then invoking the police power in order to remove the inequalities, without other object in view. The police power is broad, and not easily defined, but it cannot be given the wide scope that is here asserted for it, without in effect nullifying the constitutional guaranty.”
In short, an interference with the normal exercise of personal liberty and property rights is the primary object of the statute (or tax), and not an incident to the advancement of the general welfare. But, in our opinion, the 14th Amendment debars the states from striking down personal liberty or property rights, or materially restricting their normal exercise, excepting so far as may be incidentally necessary for the accomplishment of some other and paramount object, and one that concerns the public welfare. The mere restriction of liberty or of property rights cannot of itself be denominated 'public welfare,' and treated as a legitimate object of the police power; for such restriction is the very thing that is inhibited by the Amendment.

5.6.15.3 Why the Cost of Labor is Deductible from Gross Receipts In Computing Profit

The conversion they are talking about is the conversion of "labor" and "capital" into finished goods. The code reflects the requirement for "profit" in 26 U.S.C. §83, which says that profit in the context of labor is any amount collected in excess of the value of the labor collected. Below is an enumerated analysis of how this works:

1. Because labor is property and has a basis of its own that is deductible from the cost of procuring it, then it is a violation of 26 U.S.C. §§83, 212, 1001, 1011, and 1012 to report the entirety of "compensation for services" as described in 26 U.S.C. §61(a)(1) as "gross income".

2. Moreover, the law and the regulations govern what the Secretary or his alleged Delegates can do with regard to the calculation of "Gross Income" as previously cited in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 212, 1001, 1011, and 1012 above.

"The regulations...now govern, and will continue to govern, the abbreviated application process. See Fort Stewart Schools v. FLRA, 495 U.S. 641, 654, 110 S.Ct. 2043, 2051, 110 L.Ed.2d. 659 (1990). No matter what an agency said in the past, or what it did not say, after an agency issues regulations it must abide by them."

[Schering Corp. v. Shalala, 995 F.2d. 1103 (D.C.Cir. 1993)]

3. The plain language of 26 U.S.C. §83 states that when compensation is received in [exchange] for services rendered, ONLY the “excess” of the “property” [compensation] over the “amount paid” [labor] in costs is to be included in gross income:

§ 83. Property transferred in connection with performance of services

(a) General rule

If, in connection with the performance of services [labor], property is transferred [compensation] to any person [employee] other than the person for whom such services are performed [employer], the excess of—

(1) the fair market value of such property [compensation] (determined without regard to any restriction other than a restriction which by its terms will never lapse) at the first time the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever occurs earlier, over

(2) the amount (if any) paid [labor] for such property [compensation], shall be included in the gross income of the person who performed such services [employee] in the first taxable year in which the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever is applicable. The preceding sentence shall not apply if such person sells or otherwise disposes of such property in an arm’s length transaction before his rights in such property become transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture.

4. Here is the formula for 26 U.S.C. §83:

4.1. “Gross Income” = “Excess”;

4.2. “Excess” = (“property”)—(the “amount paid”)… or

4.3. “Excess” = (“compensation”)---(value of labor)...

5. The “amount paid” is defined in 26 CFR §1.83-3(g) as: definition of cost:

26 CFR §1.83-3(g)

(g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term “amount paid” refers to the value of any money or property [labor is property] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which section 83 applies...
6. The value of the “amount paid” [labor] is determined by what the employer paid for the services [labor] rendered. 26 CFR §1.83-3(g) is all inclusive and includes “any money or property.”

7. The fair market value (“FMV”) of property (“amount paid” or “labor”) is established through the terms of an “arm’s length transaction.”[143]

8. To confirm that this understanding is correct, we can come to the same conclusion by reviewing other sections of the IRC and the regulations thereunder.

9. To properly calculate what constitutes “Gross Income”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §83, one needs to know “the amount paid” (cost of labor) so it can be deducted from the “property” (compensation) in order to calculate the “excess” [profit] which is to be included in the “Gross Income”. To determine these factors, one must turn to the regulations:

> “[If property [compensation] to which 1.83-1 applies is transferred [from employer to employee] at an arm’s length [Blacks law pg. 109], the basis [cost of labor] of the property [compensation] in the hands of the transferee [recipient or employee] shall be determined under section 1012 and the regulations thereunder”
> [26 CFR § 1.83-4(b)(2)]

10. Before one can determine the “excess”, one must identify the “amount paid.”

11. As property, labor has a value with regard to the related compensation transaction and 26 U.S.C. §1012 will either include or exclude said cost for labor.

> § 1012. Basis of property—cost

> The basis of property [labor] shall be the cost [compensation] of such property...

12. The regulations confirm the basis of property:

> 26 CFR §1.1012-1 Basis of property.

> (a) General rule. In general, the basis of property [compensation] is the cost thereof. The cost is the amount paid [labor] for such property [compensation] in cash or other property [labor]...

13. Congress has cited what it considers to be a “cost”. The “amount paid for such property in cash or other property”. The Secretary will take note that nothing is excluded from that which is considered by Congress to be a cost. If Congress intended to exclude labor from that which is a cost, 26 U.S.C. §1012 would reflect such an exclusion. Since it is not excluded, it is to be considered as a cost in the calculation of the “excess” which is included in “Gross Income” and in the determination as to whether one has enough “gross income” to make it necessary to even file a return.

14. The “amount paid” [labor] is the value of the cost [labor] and is also known as the “adjusted basis”. Regulations require that this amount be “withdrawn” from the amount realized in the [payment for services] transaction and that it be “restored to the taxpayer.”

> 26 CFR §1.1011-1 Adjusted basis.

The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property is the cost or other basis prescribed in section 1012 or other applicable provisions of subtitle A of the code, adjusted to the extent provided in sections 1016, 1017, and 1018 or as otherwise specifically provided for under applicable provisions of internal revenue laws.

> 26 CFR § 1.1001-1(a)

(a) ...from the amount realized upon the sale or exchange there shall be withdrawn a sum sufficient to restore the adjusted basis prescribed by section 1011 and the regulations thereunder. The amount which remains [excess] after the adjusted basis [cost of labor] has been restored to the taxpayer constitutes the realized gain [profit].

15. After determining the value of property (labor) that is a cost, as defined by United States law (see 26 CFR § 1.1012-1(a), and 26 CFR § 1.1001-1(a)), the value of the “amount paid,” or the “adjusted basis” (labor), must be subtracted from the amount realized (compensation) BEFORE including ONLY the “excess” balance which remains (if any) in “Gross Income”. The Federal 1040 type returns do not accommodate § 83 in any way and therefore it is not possible for any Citizen to complete a 1040 return and claim the right as articulated by Congress in § 83.

16. Again, the conclusion reached by reviewing additional sections of the IRC and the regulations thereunder, as cited above, is the same conclusion articulated by Congress in 26 CFR §1.83-3(g) where the “amount paid” is defined as “any money or property” (labor is not excluded):

26 CFR §1.83-3(g)

(g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term “amount paid” [labor] refers to the value of any money or property [labor] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which section 83 applies...

17. The sections of the IRC which embraces intangible personal property as a cost (see 26 U.S.C. §1012) is calculated as one’s cost when having only sold one’s labor, and 26 CFR §1.83-3(g) does the same. In fact, in order to impose amounts which are not to be included in “Gross Income” upon those who may be “taxpayers”, the Secretary must deny even “taxpayers” their rights as identified by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 1011, and 1012.

18. The law does not exclude any property for which there is no basis from cost. The cost equals the value of any and all property (labor) disposed to obtain other property (compensation), unless it is expressly excluded under 26 U.S.C. §1012.

19. The difference between cost and income is further articulated by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §212 as follows:

§ 212. Expenses for production of income
